Sookram says he's gotten support on "a personal level," but that students "have not acted to fight the administration."

Still, he believes the assertion of faculty control over content will intimidate his successors and keep the paper focused on bland, inconsequential issues.

"When it (the paper) starts up again, what kind of paper will it be?" Sookram asks.

Maybe there is a substitute for experience.

NATIONAL COLLEGE NEWS

IN AN UNPRECEDENTED CRACKDOWN on underage drinkers, a Lawrence, Kan., bar owner sued a U. of Kansas student who entered his private club with false identification. The small claims court awarded the bar owner $500 in damages — the amount he was fined by the Kansas Alcohol Beverage Control Board for violating the age requirement.

A $3 MILLION LAWSUIT has been filed by a Saint Mary's College nursing student against the U. of Notre Dame. The student was raped last May on the road between the college and university. The suit charges that Notre Dame did not provide adequate security.

EXPELLED FOR BEING TOO FAT, a former Salve Regina College nursing student is suing the school for $2 million. In August, administrators sent her a letter saying she could not return for her final year of the nursing program because she had failed to live up to her promise to lose two pounds per week. The student had maintained a grade-point-average of 3.6.

"INAPPROPRIATE BEHAVIOR" is what West Virginia U. labeled the incident that led a 17-year-old freshman to charge five of the school's basketball players with sexual assault. Critics, calling for a formal investigation by the Board of Regents and the state legislature, say the school erred in treating the charges as an internal disciplinary matter, and that sexual assault "is automatically a criminal charge that belongs in a court system." The university refuses to reveal the names of the students disciplined or the sanctions imposed.

SUBCOMMITTEE APPROVES TYING STUDENT AID TO GRADES: The Sentate Subcommittee on Education has approved a measure to require juniors and seniors to maintain a "C" average to get federal student aid.

The measure is part of the Senate version of the Higher Education Act of 1985, which probably won't reach full Senate debate until February.

MUSIC MAJORS THINK MUSIC MORE EXCITING THAN SEX: Music majors ranked music, a good movie, natural beauty, art, physical contact with other people, and opera as more thrilling than sex, according to a Stanford U. study published in the December issue of Psychology Today magazine.

BOSTON U. DISPLAYS MARTIN LUTHER KING'S TRANSCRIPTS: BU archivists said they recently found the grade transcripts for King, who got a philosophy doctorate from BU in 1955, while they were transferring past records to microfilm.

SURVEY: MOST FACULTY WOULD ADVISE STUDENTS AGAINST TEACHING: Forty-five percent of the nation's college teachers think this is a bad time to start an academic career, a national survey by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching has found.

And, in a separate survey by the Educational Testing Service, 51 percent of the teachers from kindergarten through college would "hesitate" before advising a student to choose a teaching career.

About a quarter of the nation's teachers, moreover, are "very" or "fairly" likely to leave the teaching profession by 1990, a poll released by Metropolitan Life Insurance over the holidays said.

Most teachers — at all levels — say they are disheartened by low salaries, shoddy academic standards, badly-prepared students and limited chances for career advancement.

CITY COLLEGE OF NEW YORK PUTS A THIRD OF ITS STUDENTS ON ACADEMIC PROBATION: Dean Alan Fiellin says the mass disciplining is part of CCNY's effort to raise its academic standards.

MOST U. MICHIGAN STUDENTS HAVEN'T HEARD OF APARTHEID: A recent campus poll in Ann Arbor found 51 percent of the students responding hadn't even heard of the South African government's segregationist laws.

SAN DIEGO STATE VETOES BANS ON CAMPUS SMOKING, CYCLING, SKATEBOARDING: SDSU President Thomas Day vetoed a University Senate measure that would have banned smoking on most part of campus, reasoning prohibiting smoking in private offices was "too intrusive.'

Day also vetoed senate measures restricting bicycles to roadways and completely banning skateboarding on campus, citing technical problems with the proposals.

MANY AG GRADS ARE AVOIDING WORKING ON FARMS: Only about five percent of the students who graduated from U. West Virginia's College of Agriculture from 1975 to 1984 took jobs on farms, Prof. K. D. McIntosh of WVU's recruiting committee reports.

McIntosh wouldn't blame the farm economy depression for the students' career choices, saying instead the choice of non-farm work was a tribute to how broadly the university prepares its students for all kinds of jobs.

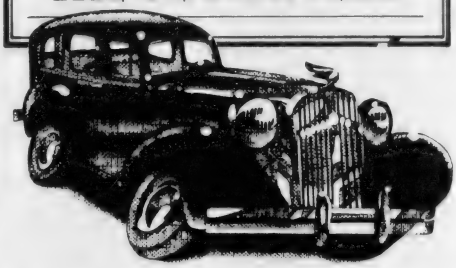
INSURANCE COMPANIES DROP NORTHWESTERN'S FRATS AND SORORITIES: NU's risk manager could not find any firms willing to sell liability insurance to the greek houses, citing big insurance claims involving greeks at Texas and the U. of Denver.

NCAA MAKES DRUG TESTING MANDATORY FOR SOME ATHLETES: At its annual convention in New Orleans, the National Collegiate Athletic Association voted to require all athletes in the NCAA's 78 championship events to be tested for drugs, starting August 1.



U. Michigan Athletic Director Don Canham says the vote effectively means all schools will test all athletes to avoid being "embarrassed" if and when they get to championships.

WOMEN DROP SCIENCE BECAUSE OF MARRIAGE CONCERNS, RADCLIFFE STUDY FINDS: Female students tend not to consider science and engineering careers because they believe they're not compatible with marriage and family life, a study by Radcliffe College and the Educational Testing Service has found.

Wrestling

Stung by three loses in dual match competition last week, Longwood's wrestling team is preparing for a dual meet with Ferrum Tuesday night at home and the third Tiger-Lancer Duals Friday and Saturday at Hampden-Sydney.

Coach Steve Nelson's team will seek to end a four-match losing streak when Ferrum visits Tuesday for a 7:00 bout. In addition to Longwood and Hampden-Sydney, Virginia Tech, Virginia Military, Pembroke State, Gallaudet, Newport News Apprentice and Ferrum will take part in the Tiger-Lancer Duals. The Lancers have finished second in the team competition the past two years.

To have a shot at making it to the finals this season Longwood will have to beat Newport News in the first round. The Shipbuilders pinned a 33-28 defeat on Longwood last Tuesday as Pete Whitman, 142-pounds, Billy Howard, 177-pounds, and Jesus Strauss, heavyweight, got wins for the Lancers.

Longwood and Newport News will square-off in first round action Friday. Rounds will begin at 6:00, 7:30 and 9:00 Friday night. The competition will resume at 9:30 Saturday morning and the finals are tentatively scheduled for 2:00 Saturday afternoon.

Last Saturday the Lancers ran into some rugged competition at Liberty University, falling to the Flames 51-3 and to Division I George Washington 52-3. Longwood's record dropped to 3-5 with the defeats. Howard won a 5-2 decision at 167 pounds against Liberty and Whitman won by a 6-3 count at 177 against George Washington to account for the Lancer point totals.

Longwood soccer All-American Mark McArdle has joined the wrestling team and plans to compete at 118 pounds in matches this week. McArdle wrestled for three years in high school, but will be seeing his first college level action.

Gymnasts Fall

The Longwood gymnastics team received its top score of the year, but fell short of William & Mary, losing 173.0-164.5 Friday night at Williamsburg. The loss dropped the Lancers to 2-4.

One highlight for Longwood was Lisa Zuraw's record breaking 9.05 in vaulting. The score topped Longwood's previous high (Sharon Pillow, 9.0) and placed her second in the meet.

Freshman Lynda Chenoweth led the Lancers in All-Around scoring 33.4 and finishing 5th. She also finished 5th on bars (8.3), tied for second on beam (8.4) and turned in the best Longwood score on floor (8.65).

Junior Debbe Malin also performed well for Longwood. The junior placed 3rd in vaulting (8.9) and finished 6th on bars (8.15) and all-around (32.35).

Longwood Head Coach Ruth Budd was pleased with the way her team performed. "Our scores were improved from last week and everyone looked better," said the Longwood coach. "William & Mary has a good gymnastics team and the score was closer than I anticipated."

The Lancers travel to Radford Friday before hosting UMBC February 7. Longwood will see Radford, William & Mary and James Madison again this season when the State Meet will be held in Farmville (Lancer Hall) March 1 at 2:00. The Lancers have one other home meet slated, Georgia College and Trenton, February 15 at 2:00.

Men's B-Ball Wins Two, Tied For Second

FARMVILLE, VA. — A pair of two-point wins over Mason-Dixon foes Liberty and Pittsburgh-Johnstown last week have pushed Longwood's men's basketball team into a tie for second place in the Mason-Dixon Conference. This week the Lancers will find out how they stack up with league leader Mount St. Mary's, the third-ranked team in NCAA Division II.

The Mount, 14-2 after a win over Division I Loyola Saturday night, was ranked third in last week's Division II poll. The ranking came out before The Mount's 69-49 pasting of Randolph-Macon Wednesday night. Fourth in last year's Division II Tournament, Coach Jim Phelan's team is 2-0 in the Mason-Dixon and on top of the league standings.

A last second shot by Kenneth Fields enabled Longwood to edge Pittsburgh-Johnstown 74-72 Saturday. With their third straight win, the Lancers, 3-1 in the MDAC and 7-10 overall, are tied with Randolph-Macon for second place in the conference standings.

Only once before has a team more highly ranked than Mount St. Mary's journeyed to Lancer Hall. In 1982-83 then number-one-ranked District of Columbia escaped with a 65-64 victory. Longwood hosts Winthrop, which beat the Lancers 80-68 earlier this month, Monday night before taking on The Mount.

KENNETH FIELDS

Fields' Shot Propels Victory

With the clock ticking toward the end of Saturday's game in Johnstown, Pennsylvania and the score tied 72-72, Lancer Lonnie Lewis retrieved the ball from backcourt and put up a desperation shot from outside the circle. The ball bounced high off the rim and ended up in the hands of senior co-captain Kenneth Fields. Fields put up a shot from about 10-feet away on the baseline and it went through the goal as time expired.

After numerous narrow misses over the past two seasons, Longwood got the ball to bounce its way Saturday and the result was a 74-72 win at Pittsburgh-Johnstown. Coming on the heels of a 54-52 win over Liberty Wednesday night, the victory at UPJ gave the Lancers some badly needed momentum.

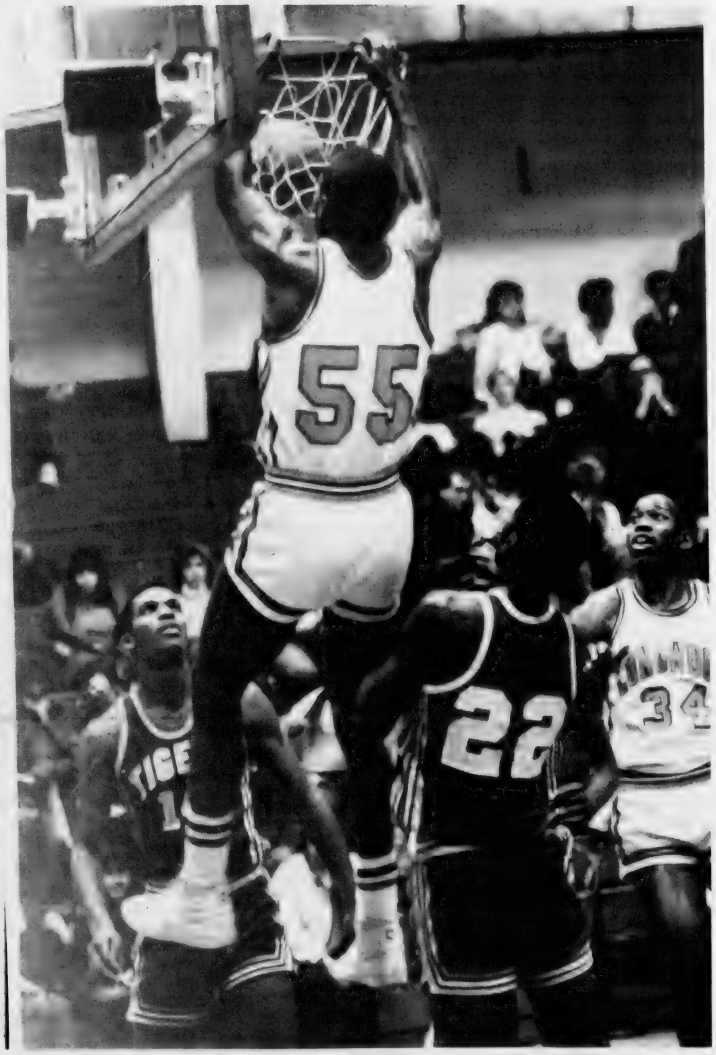
"We played super to come from behind and beat them, but we almost let the game get away from us," said Longwood coach Cal Luther. "We fell behind 9-2 early and trailed 43-39 at the half. Then in the second half we played super defensively and went ahead."

Mason-Dixon Conference Standings

Team	Con.	Overall
Mt. St. Mary's	2-0	14-2
Ran.-Macon	3-1	10-7
LC	3-1	7-10
Pitt-Johnstown	1-3	5-11
Liberty	0-2	12-9
Md. Balt. Co.	0-2	2-12

Longwood actually led 72-64 with 4:58 to go, but didn't score again until Fields came through at the buzzer. The Lancers had three turnovers, a missed free throw and a missed layup during the last five minutes, according to Luther.

"It took some luck for us to win at the end, but that shouldn't detract from how well we played earlier," said the coach.



Lewis led the victory with 22 points, 15 coming in the first half. The senior co-captain hit two of four three-pointers and 9-13 from the floor. He stretched his consecutive free throw string to 18 in a row with a 2-2 showing at the charity stripe. In addition to hitting the winning basket, Fields scored 10 of his 13 points in the second half and grabbed six rebounds. He has hit double figures in all 17 of Longwood's games this season.

Center Quintin Kearney had 16 points and a game-high nine rebounds, but perhaps the biggest story of the game was senior Lionell Ogburn. In his first start of the year, Ogburn scored 19 points on 8-11 shooting from the floor and grabbed five rebounds.

"Lionell did a good job for us," said Luther. "He has been working and hustling in practice and we decided he deserved a shot at starting. He really got down the floor and finished off the break several times."

Ogburn had a career-high 22 points in Longwood's 89-68 win over UMBC January 18.

Looming on the horizon is a game in Lancer Hall Wednesday, February 5 with Randolph-Macon which belted Liberty 95-75 Saturday night in Lynchburg.

Lady Lancers

Longwood's women's basketball team got excellent play from guard Caren Forbes, center Melanie Lee and several of their teammates Thursday through Saturday as the Lady Lancers notched two wins after an opening loss and took fifth place in the Foxy Lady Tournament at Francis Marion College in Florence, South Carolina.

After a 94-81 loss to a tall St. Augustine's team Thursday in the opening round, Longwood battled back in the loser's bracket. Friday the Lady Lancers beat Coastal Carolina 74-61 and Saturday topped USC-Spartanburg 78-70. Saturday's win was good for fifth place in the eight-team tournament. Longwood stands 5-9 overall and 0-3 in the Mason-Dixon Conference.

This week, following a Monday night trip to St. Paul's, the Lady Lancers will get a few days off before traveling to Mason-Dixon leader Mount St. Mary's Saturday to take on the nationally, ranked Mounties. Three straight road games are on tap next week before Liberty visits February 11.

Forbes and Lee paced Longwood in the Foxy Lady Tournament. Forbes scored 40 points in the three games, handed off 22 assists and made nine steals while upping her scoring average to 12.1. Lee scored 47 points and pulled off 32 rebounds in the three games. She's averaging 13.7 points and 8.3 rebounds.

Forbes and guard Angie Hill scored 16 points each in Saturday's victory over USC-Spartanburg. Sophomore Barbie Burton added a career-high 12 points and Lee scored 11. Longwood pulled away from a 37-37 halftime tie to take the win. Burton and freshman Kita Chambers hit key free throws down the stretch.

In Friday's 74-61 win over Coastal Carolina, Lee scored 18 points, Karen Boska 15, Beth Ralph 13 and Forbes 12. Ralph, who regained the starting position she had earned before an injury, added 10 rebounds.

It was Ralph with 19 points (7-7 free throws) and Lee with 18 points and 17 rebounds who paced Longwood's showing against St. Augustine's Thursday in the tournament opener. Forbes chipped in with 12 points and Boska with 11. The Lady Lancers led 43-41 at the half, but turnovers killed any hopes of victory in the second half.

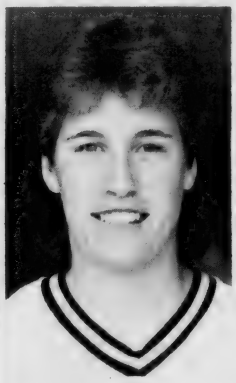
Longwood suffered on 84-78 loss at Liberty University Tuesday, despite 23 points from Forbes. 14 from Boska, 11 from Hill and 10 from Sandy Rawdon.

LADY LANCERS DEFENSE

Player Of The Week: Lisa Zuraw

Senior Lisa Zuraw broke the existing Longwood vaulting record with a 9.05 score in a gymnastics meet at William & Mary Friday night, and for her performance, Zuraw has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period January 19-26. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood Sports Information Office.

Zuraw's 9.05 beat the 9.0 mark which former Lancer standout Sharon Pillow recorded in 1980 and helped Longwood run up a 164.5, the third highest team score in Longwood history. Zuraw also holds the Longwood record for floor exercise, a 9.4 which she was awarded last year.



LISA ZURAW

"I'm excited for Lisa that she got her best score on vaulting in her senior year," said coach Ruth Budd. "She's a good vaulter. She comes off the horse well and gets good height. She did a hand-spring with a full twist on the record-breaking vault. Her 9.05 is not far from the maximum for that vault, a 9.4."

A four-year performer on the Lancer gymnastics team, Zuraw was a State Champion in beam, floor and all-around at Park View High School. She is majoring in business at Longwood.

LSD On Campus

By REX MAZDA

Curry residents Alfred Gary and Joseph Parker were arrested on Wednesday of last week on drug charges. Joe Parker was the Residence Assistant for the eighth floor.

The Virginia State Police have said that during an undercover investigation, Gary sold LSD to a trooper on two occasions, one time in Cumberland County and another in Farmville.

Police officials contacted would not say whether the investigation was conducted on the Longwood Campus. Vice President for Student Affairs, Phyllis Mable, said that the administration knew nothing about the investigation until the arrest was made.

Parker, a chemistry and physics major from Asbury Park, New Jersey, was charged with one count of conspiracy to distribute LSD. Parker apparently has been released; "I do not know if he is attending classes," Mable said.

Acid, a powerful hallucinogen and a favorite of the more hard-core drug users, has seen its popularity among students drop since the 1970's due to a fear of dangerous side-effects.

Longwood College Founded...Brick By Brick

By KIM DEANER

Over Christmas break, the retaining wall on the corner of Venable and High Street went under construction. Dr. James W. Jordan upon discovering the dig began his investigative work.

What happeared to be a dirt hill contained several artifacts from the past. Clarence White, owner of Pierson and White Construction, assisted Dr. Jordan in salvaging some bottles from the early 18 or 1900's, buttons dating back to 1790's, horse and pig teeth and assorted bones.

A brick wall was also found. These 120 bricks were handmade of clay, sand and crushed quartz. With further research it was discovered that the wall was one of the Thackston dwelling dating back to at least Nov. 25, 1858.

Foundation of Thackston Home

Dr. William W.H. Thackston. practiced dentistry in Farmville. Dr. Thackston was a graduate from the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery in 1842. He was a member of the second class to graduate in dentistry in the United States. It was thought that he practiced in Farmville as early as 1839 because a professional card has been found. He was one of the organizers of the Virginia Society of Surgeon Dentists in 1842 and of the Virginia State Dental Society in 1870.

Dr. Thackston contributed a great deal to Longwood College as well as the practice of dentistry.

Dr. Thackston was in Farmville in 1839 and witnessed the placement of the silver plate bearing the inscription: "Farm-

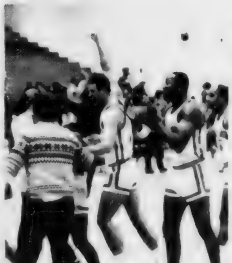
Lancers Leap Into First Place

Following Longwood's 74-69 overtime win over third ranked Mount St. Mary's Friday night, a Lancer fan called radio station WFLO in Farmville and requested DJ Tom Jenkins to play "I'm So Excited" by the Pointer Sisters.



"I want to hear that song because I'm so excited about Longwood's basketball game tonight," the caller told Jenkins. It was an EXCITING night for the Lancers and the thousand or so fans who were on hand.

Lancer Hall was jumping like never before after Frank Tennyson canned a 3-point shot at the buzzer to bring on overtime. And when the dust had settled and the victory was in hand, the Lancer cagers were engulfed by their fans and fellow students.

The victory over a team ranked third in the nation was a BIG one.

"Without question it's one of our best wins," said Longwood coach Cal luther. "The last time a team that highly ranked played here was when UDC beat us 65-64 in 1982. It was all the more satisfying because it came against a league team and it gives us a shot at the Mason-Dixon championship."

With its fifth straight win, Longwood is now 9-10 overall and 4-1 in the MDAC. The Lancers are in first place in the league.

HAPPINESS IS ...

Senior forward Kenneth Fields had the top game of his career with 29 points and seven rebounds. The 6-2 co-captain was guarded for much of the night by The Mount's 6-10 center Mike Grimes. Fields was 11-17 from the floor and 7-9 from the line before fouling out with four minutes to go in regulation.

"I told everybody I saw before the game that they could count on us winning," said the confident Fields. "I was feeling pretty good tonight."

Tennyson got the idea for his heroics Wednesday night on television when he saw Kentucky's Roger Harden drive down court and hit a long shot at the buzzer to beat LSU 54-52.

"I saw this guy do the same thing on TV Wednesday night," said Tennyson. "I heard Lonnie (senior Lonnie Lewis, LC's top outside threat) asking for the ball, but he was on the other side of the court and there was three defenders between us. So, I just put it up."

Tennyson had six points, four assists and no turnovers in 19 minutes of action Friday night.

Lewis had a phenomenal shooting night from long range,

Rotunda Needs Staff

After an ad and one hundred ninety-nine copies of a letter asking the faculty to help The Rotunda recruit staff, our meeting last week resulted in two new staff members. OH BOY!

I sure hope they use big words and repeat themselves 'cause two more just don't cut it when we want to average 13 pages per week.

Let's try a new approach . . . The Rotunda needs staff, but you don't want to do it, it takes around 90 hours per week, even to be a peon. It's no fun, often painful and sometimes even causes illness, festering blisters or double amputations.

You get no recognition, 'cause nobody reads the rag. You can't put it on your resume or make your relatives proud.

Even if you wanted to join the staff, you couldn't 'cause we're prejudice against everybody, just about. You are probably grossly underskilled as well, too.

The dictionary in the office weighs about sixty pounds and you probably couldn't lift it.

I would highly recommend just sitting on your butt like the veggie you are, because if you did join the staff and wrote just one story, you'd smell bad for a week. Nobody knows why but everytime a story is written you kinda stink for about seven days — no more, no less. That's how we know when another story is due, when you start smellin' good again.

Even after all this, if you still want to join our pitiful group, just come by The Rotunda office in Lankford, left of the Post Office. Thursday night at 8:00, we'll all be there, probably in a big fight or something. Or contact Smelly Loser, Box 1133, 392-4012.

Rough Week For Campus Cops

To The Editor:

I found out today that the Campus Police are not just a bunch of ticket-giving bums; the boys in blue are also in charge of breaking up football games.

This Friday, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Delta Sigma Phi played a football game on Barlow Field. There were around one-hundred students watching the game. With fifteen minutes left in the match, a meter-maid Campus Police officer walked on the field and tried taking the ball away. The officer was invited to play running back for a while, but refused.

The game moved over to Iler Field. Surely we would have been booted off that field too if the cop had time to get permission from whoever.

Sure the fields were wet and got torn up a bit, but Field Hockey season is over, and you could spread grass seed over the entire campus with comprehensive fees from just one student.

We pay out the nose for the existence of these fields. Why cant' we use them?

Longwood loves to tell us not to drink so much and when the two best partying fraternities decide to do something wholesome, the Campus Dicks usher them off the field. Are you trying to tell us something? Would you prefer us to have wild alcohol — and drug-induced orgies with little or no clothes on?

Name withheld to avoid tickets

To the Editor:

The other night, a situation arose that I would like to bring out in the open. It has come to my attention that the campus police will not go off campus to pick up Longwood students who need escorts back to their dorms. This might not sound so ridiculous until you consider that we live right across the street from the campus.

I realize that we were being lazy by not walking these people back ourselves, as we were still entertaining no other guests at the time. But it also seems silly that we had to promise the campus cops that we would walk the ten feet that separated us from school boundaries and wait for them there, especially since these same people have been seen giving on-campus students rides to the hospital (which is understandable) and to the drug store and other places in town (which is not).

I know that I am an off-campus student, but I still pay my comprehensive fees just like on-campus students. Suppose somebody tells me what those fees are going towards.

Managing Editor's Reply

This letter is in response to the January 28 letter to the Editor by Assistant Professor of Philosophy, David N. James. I write this letter, partially to try and clear up exactly what Dr. James was saying, and partly to save my own skin because the person he attacks, Mr. James Caleb, was quoted in an article that I, myself, wrote.

Dr. James writes of "psychological egoism," a term used to describe a person's general tendency to promote only their own self-interest. I tend to agree that people can show characteristics of being non-egoistic, but only on a small scale — people don't seem to care much about anything these days.

I know that sounds harsh, but upon further investigation into the subject, one may find that being an egoist is not so bad, and even further, that to be classified as an egoist is only a matter of opinion and therefore should not be taken too seriously.

For example, I have already admitted that I am an egoist because I am writing this letter to "save my own skin." However, wouldn't be an egoist if I did not write this letter because I thought the best way to promote my own self-interest is to avoid the situation and not bother getting in it. Which alternative is the worse of the two egoisms?

As another example, I submit that I am an egoist because I am currently going to college at some sacrifice to my mother. You may then say that my mother is not an egoist because she is sacrificing both companionship and money in order to promote my education. Again, the tables can be turned by understanding that this plan may be an investment in her future, as I would be able to support her in her older age with a higher paying job because of my continued studies.

The point that I am trying to make is that people are not egoistic unless someone else wants to make them that way. I, for one, do not intend to sit around and pick out people's ulterior motives for the purpose of showing just how evil people can be. My mother loves me and wants me to get an education; I love my mother and probably would support her in the future — if she needed it. Whether those are egoistic attitudes or not will not cause me to lose any sleep tonight.

In conclusion, Mr. Caleb was viewed by Dr. James as an egoist because Caleb said that he did not believe that people in the marketing business were "not in it for something. They must have some goal in mind or else they wouldn't be doing it in the first place," a statement that says people are in the marketing business to either make some money or to use a project as a learning experience — something that could possibly enhance their well being now or in future prospects. My feelings are that if a person going into marketing is not going to be "egoistic," then maybe they should consider a less competitive occupation — such as professing philosophy.

Not A Pretty Sight

None-the-less it is a common sight for the South Cunningham residents Teri Acors, Stacy Hicks, Julie Anne Powell and Denise Rast — and it could start to be a problem for other residents, as well.

"The whole ordeal started back in October," recalls Hicks, "when the ceiling started to leak. At the time, we had to take our showers with the lights out because the water was coming through the light fixture and we were all afraid of getting electrocuted!"

"Aside from taking showers in the dark, you also have a steady stream of cold, rusty water dripping on you," stated Powell. "It's not a very pleasant experience."

When a work order was issued to solve the issue, a crew discovered that the problem was water dripping through a crack in the shower on the second floor of South and tore a hole in the ceiling on first floor. "We thought that the problem would be solved over Thanksgiving break," said Rast, "and that when we got back we'd have a new shower. Unfortunately, that didn't happen and now we have to live with that iron work hanging down in there."

Finally, the Director of Housing, Ric Weibl came in to check out the problem, jotted down some notes and came to the conclusion that the problem was not as small as it might seem.

"The basic problem," said Weibl, "is that the entire bathroom system in the Cunninghams needs to be replaced. We have a proposal into the state for a funding project that would rebuild those bathrooms — all of them. South Cunningham has deteriorated to the point where there's nothing we can do short of ripping those showers out and rebuilding them."

In the meantime, the housing office is checking into a temporary fixture that involves spraying a silicon liner over the tiles of problem showers, but this solution also has its drawbacks. "In order to get that liner on," said Weibl, "you've got to get the walls and floors of the showers so clean that it adds additional costs to the project. You have to strip the soap scum off because the liner will not bond to soap scum — and that's not the kind of thing you could do during occupation. That means the only time that we could do it would be during the summer. Even then, everything we know tells us that that would be a temporary measure — it might last a year."

So, all things considered, it looks like the only alternative is to tolerate the situation for the

To the Editor:

Inconsideration, yet another trait of most Longwood students. It seems that these students do not care about fellow students or their property. Have you ever noticed that big brown thing that is against the wall in Lancer Gym? That "thing" is the floor exercise mat used by the gymnastics classes and intercollegiate gymnastics team. It has a life expectancy, if taken care of properly, of 3-4 years. As far as I know we have been using it for at least 9 years. So why don't we buy a new one? We will, as soon as we can afford to spend $10,000 for one. My point is that the mat is old and falling apart yet students still insist on putting things on it and sitting on it. We even have signs asking people to stay off of it. This leads me to believe that these people may not be inconsiderate, rather illiterate.

How to live with someone who's living with cancer.

Learning to live with cancer is no easy task. Learning to live with someone else's cancer can be even more difficult.

Nobody knows better than we do how much help and understanding is needed. That's why our service and rehabilitation programs emphasize the whole family, not just the cancer patient.

We run local programs with volunteers who are recovered cancer patients, or whose lives have been touched by family members or friends with cancer. That's what makes us one of the largest, best-motivated and most caring of any health organization in the country.

Among our regular services we provide information and guidance to patients and families, transport patients to and from treatment, supply home care items and assist patients in their return to everyday life.

Life is what concerns us. The life of cancer patients. The lives of their families. So you can see we are even more than the research organization we are so well known to be.

No one faces cancer alone.

Faculty From Finland

Under an exchange program, Dr. Nelson Neal, assistant professor of physical education, has gone to teach at the University of Jyvaskyla in Finland. Risto Nieminen and his wife, Pirkko, both members of Jyvaskyla's faculty, have come to Longwood for the spring semester.

The Neals and the Nieminens are occupying each other's house and using their host's automobile.

Risto, nicknamed "Roope," is teaching volleyball and orienteering, a popular Scandinavian sport in which competitors use a map and compass to find geographic points and complete a course. Pirkko, who is called "Pipsa," teaches dance. Both are members of the university's faculty of Physical and Health Education, one of five "faculties" (academic departments). Roope has been Faculty Secretary — an administrative position — since 1974.

Roope, 42, and Pipsa, 39, brought along their two young sons and Roope's 25-year-old niece, Maaria, from Helsinki. They arrived in the United States in early January and lived in Longwood's Alumni House until the Neals left for Finland Jan. 22.

The couple has enjoyed the friendliness of Americans and the warm weather. "People here are so friendly and nice," said Roope. "In general, people are more polite than in Finland, at least the ones I've met."

Pipsa said she likes the "small talk" at stores between cashiers and customers. In Finland, she said, such conversation is rare, and Finns seldom exchange greetings when passing strangers on the street.

When they left Finland, it was minus 15 Celsius, or 5 degrees Fahrenheit, so the weather has seemed especially warm to them.

"And there may be one meter (slightly more than 3 feet) of snow on the ground at home," said Roope. "So, we don't miss the weather."

They have been surprised by the formality with which American students address them; Finnish students call their professors by their first name. "I was shocked when the students first called me 'Professor Nieminen.' I said 'Please, call me Pipsa.'" Even Roope, an administrator, is called by his first name by Jyvaskyla students.

Before coming here, they had been worried about crime in the U.S. "Some people told us about all the kidnappings in America," Pipsa said. "But it's much safer than we expected. And people are so nice."

They also were surprised by the size of their host community. "We thought that Farmville would be smaller than it is," said Roope. "Ilkka (Keskinen) had said that it is a small village. But it is not so small."

Keskinen, a swimming instructor from Jyvaskyla, was the first faculty member involved in the program. Erkki Tervo (gymnastics) taught at Longwood last year, and Dr. Ossi Ahvenaninen (special education) is teaching at Longwood for the entire 1985-86 year.

Dr. Neal, a dance instructor, is the sixth Longwood professor to teach in Finland. Three others — Dr. Nancy Andrews, Ruth Budd and Dr. Bette Harris — also have been from the Health, Physical Education and Recreation department, and two — Dr. Nancy Vick and Phyllis Wacker — have been from the Education and Psychology department. Dr. Neal is accompanied by his wife and daughter.

The University of Jyvaskyla has approximately 7,000 students. They pay only $55 a year in tuition, but have to finance their room and board (many live off-campus), books, and other living expenses, said Roope. The city of Jyvaskyla, located roughly in central Finland, has 65,000 people.

Jyvaskyla is the only Finnish university that offers degree programs in health and physical education. Only 40 to 50 of the 1,000 students who apply annually to those programs are accepted, Pipsa said. Applicants have to take a battery of written and skills tests.

Roope, a native of Jyvaskyla, likes to cross-country ski and go hiking in Lappland. "Cross-country skiing is my favorite hobby and my favorite class to teach. Unfortunately, I can't teach it over here," he said. He also has taught track and field, swimming, and statistics.

Pipsa, whose hometown is Lammi, a small village 105 miles south of Jyvaskyla, is an avid dancer. "I like all kinds of dance — modern, jazz, folk, and ballroom dancing." She will work with Longwood's Dance Company.

They play to travel in the U.S., "as much as we have money to," said Pipsa. They want to visit Roope's niece (a high school exchange student) in Georgia, go sightseeing in New York and Washington, and go to Florida over spring break. They will return to Finland May 30, which will give them four weeks to travel after the end of classes.

So far, said Roope and Pipsa, they haven't been homesick. "Everybody said that we would miss all the things from home, like dark bread," Pipsa said. "But we haven't missed anything so far. We want to live over here just as you do."

rest of the semester, regardless of the fact that state money for renovations may or may not come in, since summer looks to be the only time anything can be done about this problem.

Even though Weibl is relatively confident that the funding project will go through the state, he still is looking at trying to remedy the problem showers as soon as possible. "If we couldn't get the money this year, then we would go through with the temporary measures. The money would have to come out of operating funds, which is the same money that buys furniture."

As for offering a discount to the people who have to put up with this particular situation, Weibl is pessimistic. "There is no vehicle for that in the current way we do business and I probably would be reluctant to propose such a thing. The way the student room agreement reads, we've provided the basics and will continue to do so because it is an inconvenience. As soon as I have some sense, which I anticipate should be very shortly, about the temporary fix for some of the problem locations, I will be responding to particular rooms and suites like this one and say, "if this makes you uncomfortable, let me know and I'll move you," and I will relocate them. It might not necessarily be in South Cunningham, but I would offer them housing in other locations before I would give them a discount. I can do that."

Send In The Crowds

If you mentioned the Marketing Intern Program to someone, you'd probably get a quizzical look. That is partly due to the fact that it isn't listed on any master schedule and partly because not just anyone can take it — it is a specialized "course" for selected students.

The program, which was started by Mr. Burt Brooks who teaches marketing here at Longwood, was first implemented last semester in an internship for two marketing students, Sherri Clemmons, President of the Longwood Chapter of the American Marketing Association and Sherry Massey, Vice President of the Longwood A.M.A.

"This program started because several departments around campus had contacted me to do research for them," said Brooks. "I really didn't have a formal way of doing the research, other than the marketing research class, and since a large class is not conducive to a project like this, I decided to start the internship with one or two people along with myself."

"I think the program is good," continues Brooks, "because it gives the students an opportunity to get hands on experience and it gives them a chance to work with the administration and other departments. They have to coordinate the whole thing with the people that initiate the project. They have to do the research. They have to formally present the project at the end. I think that kind of experience is invaluable."

So what about the program, itself?

A report, entitled "Student and Faculty Awareness of and Attendance at Longwood Atheltic Events" shows the results and recommendations of the information compiled by Clemmons and Massey. The initial objectives of the project were to determine the level of awareness among students and faculty at Longwood about athletic events, and to determine the effectiveness of communication between sports information sources and the students and faculty. The primary goal was to discover whether increased awareness of athletic events would increase attendance.

In order to determine these objectives, 75 faculty surveys and 125 student surveys were randomly distributed throughout the Longwood population. The Freshmen class was purposely avoided in these surveys due to the fact that they had not had the opportunity to attend events at the time the research was being done. The findings are as follows:

A. A major contributing factor to lack of attendance at sports events is lack of awareness.

1. Student surveys showed 69.5 percent are unaware of times and dates of games.

2. Faculty surveys found that 25 percent of the professors think that they and the students are less than somewhat aware of times and dates of events and 52.3 percent are only somewhat aware.

B. Although Longwood has been characterized as a "suit case college", the surveys found that actually 88.5 percent of the students remain on campus 1 to 4 weekends a month, 51.6 percent of these staying 3 to 4 weekends.

C. In communicating information to students and faculty, the following methods have been found to be most effective:

1. Word-of-mouth (77.9 percent by friends).

2. Rotunda (76.8 percent regularly read).

3. S-UN calendar (70.0 percent having poster).

4. Message board (63.2 percent regularly read).

5. Campus Bulletin (58.9 percent regularly read).

In other words, the report found that the students are here — many just don't know about the games — some students do not even realize that admission is free to atheltic events! With so many sporting events going on, how can students say there is nothing to do?

Several recommendations have been made to the Athletic Department, but as to whether any of those recommendations have been taken into account remains to be seen. One visible acknowledgement of this project is the blue sports schedule posters that are very similar to the S-UN calendar of events schedules that can be found throughout the campus. Other various sources of media to attract attention, put posters up attract attention, put posters up in classrooms, have players announce games in their classes, have players preview the games on WUTA, have pep rallies, and sponsored rivalries between various campus organizations such as sororities and fraternities.

Mr. Brooks hopes to continue offering programs like this in the future — first, because it is a good experience for the student involved and, second, it helps Longwood College as a whole. In fact, you may be asked to fill out a survey sooner than you think, considering that another marketing internship project has already been started for the spring semester. It's your campus people — get out there and get involved with it.

Drugs Make Comeback

By SUSAN SKORUPA

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. (CPS) — A new recreational drug seems to be appearing on college campuses, researchers say.

Use of "magic" mushrooms — natural hallucinogenics with effects similar to but milder than LSD — is rising on West Coast, New York City and even on British campuses, say researchers at UCLA and Cal State-Northridge.

But national drug surveys are missing what could be the beginning of a trend by asking the wrong questions and misinterpreting data, the researchers add.

The study, prepared by UCLA student John Thompson, Cal State ethnobotanist William Emboden and UCLA psychologists M. Douglas Anglin and Dennis Fisher, says nearly 15 percent of 1,507 students surveyed at UCLA and Cal State-Northridge admitted to using mushrooms at least once.

A state Substance Abuse Services study showed New York City high school students who had tried hallucinogenics, including mushrooms, increased from six percent in 1978 to 10 percent in 1983.

"Our survey proved two things," Fisher notes. "First, mushrooms are the major hallucinogenic being used in our sample, not LSD. And second, national drug surveys are asking questions in the wrong way and misreporting the data."

When mushroom users are asked if they have used LSD or anything similar, "yes" respondents are labeled LSD users in other surveys, he says. Those who don't consider mushrooms similar to LSD answer "no" and are recorded as non-users.

"Either way, the answers are misreported," Fisher says.

Most studies, he claims, show hallucinogenics use is stable, but don't show use variations for different kinds of hallucinogens.

The California study, which asked specific questions about mushrooms, LSD and other hallucinogenics, shows most users have tried mushrooms, but few have taken just LSD, he claims.

In 1983, Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Franz Hirzy said falling prices were increasing LSD's popularity.

A recent Arizona State study found LSD use had risen at four or five campuses surveyed: North Carolina, Arizona State, SUNY and Penn.

But the National Institute of Drug Abuse (NIDA) is skeptical.

"I haven't heard about increased mushroom use at least on this side of the country," says NIDA Washington, D.C. spokeswoman Dorin Czechowitz. "And I can't say (the California) study is supported by any data in our surveys."

But, so far, mushroom use seems to be confined to small areas on both coasts, Anglin says.

"The mushroom center seems to be established in Washington state," Fisher agrees. "The Pacific Northwest has an ideal wet, humid climate for growth. It's quite likely they grow well there."

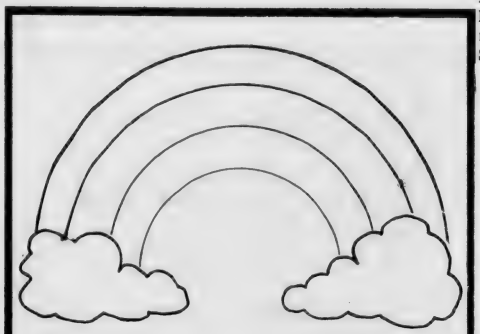
"Don't ask me why, but about every 20 years is a cycle for drugs," he says. "It's like we had nostalgia for the '50s and now the '60s. People who didn't live through those times find them interesting."

Anglin blames "media hype" for generating interest in various drugs, and predicts the extent of mushroom use "depends on the media attention."

"These things have a kind of word-of-mouth attribution that makes them attractive to people who use them," he says. "Usually the experimentors are bright, alert people."

While it's illegal to possess or use mushrooms, the non-hallucinogenic reproductive spores are legal.



If mushrooms' availability enhances their popularity, "it will be interesting to see how fast the trend moves," Anglin says.

But mushrooms probably won't affect use of other drugs like marijuana, cocaine and alcohol, he says. "Coke is in for the rest of the decade."

What is a parable? Is it merely a clever story or a moral tale? Hardly. A parable is a veiled self-testimony that calls for a decision from the hearer or reader. The parables of Jesus have an uncanny ability to expose and explain human existence. You are invited to participate in a ten-session Bible Study. Each participant will be given a copy of THE PARABLES OF JESUS by Dr. Peter Rhea Jones. The studies will be held in the BSU Center each Tuesday at 12:10 followed by the study of the Parables.

ROTC Commissions Four

Four Longwood College graduates received commissions as Second Lieutenants through the Reserve Officers' Training Corps program here at the end of the fall semester. Three are serving on active duty in the Army and one cadet was commissioned into the Air Force. Garth F. Wentzel, a former History and Government major, proceeds to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, where he will attend the Personnel and Administrative Officers' Basic Course prior to reporting for duty at Fort Hood, Texas. Joe F. Damico, a Math major, attends the Medical Service Corps Officers' Basic Course in Fort Sam Houston, Texas before serving at Fort Stewart, Georgia. Steve Harmon, a History and Government major, reports to Fort Benning, Georgia to attend the Infantry Officers' Basic Course. Chris Wright, the Air Force appointee and a Business graduate, is currently serving on active duty in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

ville Female Academy. Built by Joint Stock Company, 1839" the corner stone was placed on a building that stood where the Rotunda building stands now. When the building was torn down the plate was lost until 1897. It is now in the Lancaster Library and a model of the plate is on the front of the Rotunda building.

Dr. Thackston was Farmville's first mayor in 1872. As mayor, Dr. Thackston and the Rev. James Nelson, the pastor of the Baptist Church, led a movement in 1884 to have a teacher training institution supported by the state located in Farmville.

On March 7, 1884, the Virginia General Assembly passed a law establishing a "normal school expressly for the training and education of white female teachers for public schools" at Farmville, on the condition that the town would convey to the state the property known as the Farmville Female College. The legislative appropriated $5,000 to establish and continue the school and $10,000 annually toward the operating expenses and salaries of the staff.

The board of trustees consisted of such trustees as Ruffner and Curry. Dr. Curry was chosen president of the board and Dr. Ruffner was chosen first president of Virginia's first normal school.

What seemed at most to be an organized pile of bricks turned out to be a part of the foundation of Longwood College. Dr. Thackston died in 1899 at the age of 79. The Thackston dwelling was torn down in about 1922 to yield way to the new student building to be named French.

Special thanks to Dr. Jordan who saw that wall as more than just bricks. Also thanks to all those who helped Dr. Jordan do his research.

"In the very act of rushing on to the future we are reminded in the most physical way of our past. It is one thing to read about the past, but to touch the bricks convinces us it really happened."

Intership 'Invaluable'

Sherry Massey, a Senior here at Longwood who is studying Business Administration with a concentration in Marketing, returned this week from a week long internship with the Martin Agency. Martin is an advertising agency with branches in Virginia Beach and Florida — the headquarters being located in Richmond.

Massey was first introduced to the Martin Agency by the Office of Career Planning and Placement last year when they sponsored a field trip to Richmond to tour the various marketing agencies. "They had applications for the internship at the agency when we went for the field trip," said Massey, "so I just picked one up and filled it out."

Unfortunately, she was turned down because of the large number of applicants that apply for the very few internship openings. She did not reapply but got a letter over Christmas break stating that she was not accepted and should report to work at 9:00 a.m. January 27. "I really didn't want to miss that much school," interjected Massey, "but the Agency said they preferred to get students into the program before they graduate."

Once getting permission from the school and her instructors to take time away from school, Massey took off to enter the boundaries of life after college. "The first two days were lectures by people from the various different departments involved in the agency," she said, "one right after the other with a one hour break for lunch in between."

Day one included the Agency tour and introduction and then lecturers from the media department, the account management department, the marketing research department, the print production department and the broadcast production department. Day two took right up with lectureres from the traffic department, accounting and data processing, sales by design, creative copywriting and public relations. "They told us what the function of the department was — at least as much as they could in an hour — and we could feel free to stop them at any time to ask questions."

The last three days went into something called concentrated study where the interns pick one of the eleven departments to work strictly with. Massey chose account management because she would like to become an account executive — the person who is basically in charge and responsible for the completion of specific campaigns. "It was overwhelming at times," she said. "I've never been hit with that much information in my life. I think I learned more in the past week than I have in four years of college — it's just so much to comprehend that you go home and you're just exhausted."

"However," Massey finishes, "everybody was just so nice and they were always willing to take time out any time to help you. I thought it was an exceptional program and an experience that I'm not likely to forget for a long time."

Ambassadors

Sixty-five members of the Longwood College Ambassadors are providing the volunteer person-power for the 1986 Channel 23, WCVE, Great TV Auction "Farmville Night."

Every area business will be visited by a volunteer Longwood Ambassador. They will ask each business to consider the value of TV exposure and make a donation of an item or service to be auctioned during Farmville Night.

Working as volunteer captains are Don Lemish, Longwood's vice president for Institutional Advancement; Marci Weinberg, manager of the Esther May Store and Village Shop; and John Austin, general manager of WPAK radio. Kirk Vetter, a Longwood senior, is the project chairman for the Ambassadors.

"The Ambassadors" are required to do one community service project each year and this seemed to be a very appropriate project for them," said Ambassador co-advisor Barbara Stonikinis. "The main function of the Ambassadors is to assist the college with public relations, fund-raising, and recruitment. A community service project fits well into the prupose of the organization."

Past community service projects have included assisting the Sheltered Workshop with its fund-raising kick-off dinner and providing the leadership for LIVE '84, a Longwood-sponsored work day for students, faculty and staff.

Bob Jones, Channel 23 Auction coordinator, gave the Ambassadors a volunteer-training workshop during the group's Jan. 21 meeting. "In my more than 20 years of working with Channel 23's Great TV Auction, I have never before had a group as enthusiastic and as well-organized as the Ambassadors," he said. "Usually, it takes a great deal of time to find and train sufficient volunteers for our solicitation calls."

Channel 23's Great TV Auction, an annual event, will be held from May 30 through June 7, from 7 p.m. to sign-off (around midnight) each evening. The goal is $200,000; last year $143,000 was raised.

Project Asset

Project Asset, in the opinions of those who participated, was a total success. Project Asset is a special program in which students interact with alumni. The goal of the program is to allow the student experience a job which is related to his or her field. Some students requested specific alumni in which to work with. The students who participated learned what is involved in a job in their particular field of study. This way, they can form an opinion, good or bad, of the field they are interested in. Project Asset was held in the last couple of weeks of Christmas break. The students may have gone to the job from one to five days.

Before entering the job field, the students participated in a session on "being a professional." This session was conducted by Ms. Niki Fallis. Ms. Fallis gave tips on how to dress, react with other employers and the employer, how to respect confidentiality, and other on-the-job relations in general. The students' majors include: Home Economics, Psychology, English, Business, Chemistry and Medical Technology.

Darcie Brackett, an English major, participated in Project Asset. For two days, January 6 and 7, Darcie visited Virginia Power Company in Richmond. Her duties included talking to people in communications and public affairs. This was to see if she would be interested in this line of work. Darcie states, "This is a definitely positive thing to shoot for. The experience would be helpful to anyone who takes part in it."

Another student, Deb Amos, a junior business major, worked at Dominion Banksharers' Corporation in Roanoke. Deb was introduced to the company and was under the guidance of Joe Donnely, the vice president and manager, who is known for working with interns. She said of her duties, "I got to use computers and gained software practice. I got to work with a word processor and typed up my resume." Deb will be taking her Certified Public Accounting exam and will be working in the administrative part of accounting. She states, "Project Asset is something that I think everyone should do so they can learn and understand what they will be doing in a job related to their field."

Other students worked for such companies as the School of Allied Health in Norfolk, Whittaker General Medical in Richmond, Sovran Bank in Richmond and even an Interior Decorator. The program will continue next fall and applications will be accepted. "Project Asset will definitely help alumni and student relations," states Ms. Fallis.

Longwood To Host Debate

Longwood College will host its annual forensic and debate meets for high school students on Friday, February 7, and Saturday, February 8. Over 500 students will be on the campus for the two day event. On Friday the competition in the forensic areas will begin at one and end at four. Awards will be given in Jarman Auditorium at 4:45 p.m. Competition will be in extemporaneous speaking, oratory, after dinner speaking, impromptu storytelling, serious and humorous prose, serious and humorous poetry, broadcasting, dramatic and humorous interpretation, and multi-reading.

On Saturday three levels of debate, switchman, varsity, and novice, will start competition at nine and finish at two. Awards will be presented at 3:00 p.m. The topic for this year's debate is the establishing of a comprehensive policy for the quality of water in the United States.

This will mark the 20th year that Longwood College has hosted this meet. Dr. Nancy Anderson will serve as the tournament director with Mrs. Jan Evans assisting her. Longwood students in the forensic class will be in charge of each of the events. Dr. James Adams and Mr. Don Lemish will present the awards.

Schools that will be on our campus this weekend are: Monacan, Clover Hill, Mills Godwin, Varina, Hampton, Prince Edward County, Appomattox, Nottoway, Douglas Freeman, J.R. Tucker, Drewry Mason, Manchester, Prince Edward Academy, Fork Union Military Academy, Brookville, Bassett, Great Bridge, Lloyd Bird, Nelson, Blacksburg, E.C. Glass, Heritage, Staunton River, Orange, and Turner Ashby High School.

Judges are needed for both days. If any Longwood student or staff member would like to judge, please contact Mrs. Evans in the Speech and Theatre Department, 392-9361.

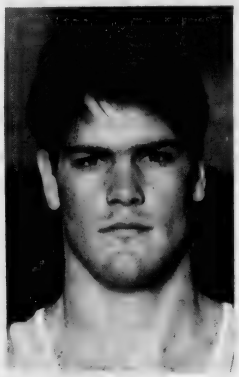
Wrestling



After snapping a four-game losing streak with an impressive win over Ferrum College, 45-18 last Tuesday, Longwood's grapplers were stunned in the third annual Tiger-Lancer Duals with a sixth place finish and a 1-3 record for the tournament over the weekend. Longwood is now 5-8 overall.

Longwood's victory came in their first match Friday against Newport News Apprentice, 27-26, on a pin by sophomore heavyweight Jesus Strauss in the final match. Despite the three losses there were bright-spots in the lineup. Picking up three wins with only one loss were Pete Whitman — 142, David Taylor — 190, and Strauss. Junior Billy Howard — 167 and 177, chalked up 3 wins with one tie.

"Howard had a great tournament," said coach Steve Nelson. "He just had a super weekend." Howard now stands at 14-7-1 and Whitman at 23-9 for the year.

This week Longwood plays at Washington & Lee Wednesday night and competes in the Old Dominion Duals Saturday in Norfolk.

In last Tuesday's match, Longwood pulled a decisive win over Ferrum to head into the weekend tournament. Strauss had an excellent match by defeating the 1984 AAA heavyweight state champion by a score of 4-2. "Strauss wrestled a very good match, probably his best of the year," said Nelson.

Lady's B-Ball

Longwood's women's basketball team will try to bounce back on the road this week with games at District of Columbia Tuesday, at Bridgewater Thursday and at Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturdy. The Lady Lancers return home to play Liberty University Tuesday, February 11.

Now 5-11 overall and 0-4 in the Mason-Dixon Conference, Longwood dropped a pair of games on the road last week, falling at St. Paul's 94-69 Monday and at Mount St. Mary's 88-42 Saturday afternoon.

Poor shooting doomed the Lady Lancers in both defeats. Longwood hit just 39 per cent of its shots at St. Paul's as freshmen Angee Middleton with 15 points and Kita Chambers with 10 points led the scoring. LC hit just 30.7 per cent of its shots Saturday in Emmitsburg, Md., while nationally ranked Mount St. Mary's canned 47.8 per cent of its shots.

Lee leads the Lady Lancers in scoring (13.9) and rebounding (8.4) while Caren Forbes is averaging 11.5 points and 5.1 assists per contest. Forward Karen Boska is scoring at a 9.7 ppg. clip with 6.6 rebounds per game.

Gymnastics

Longwood's road-weary gymnastics team will have its first home meet of the season Friday after five consecutive away competitions. Maryland Baltimore County, a team that won an earlier meeting, will furnish the opposition in Lancer Hall with action beginning at 7:30.

Coach Ruth Budd's team will bring a 2-5 record into the meet, after falling to Division I Radford 167.85-161.30 Friday night on the Highlanders' home layout. Budd felt her gymnasts did well, considering that half the team was suffering from the flu.

"We did much, much better on beam than we have all year," said the coach. "It was a pretty good meet for us."

Top performances were turned in by junior Debbe Malin and senior Lisa Zuraw. Malin was third all-around with a 32.60 while Zuraw and freshman Linda Chenoweth tied for sixth all-around with scores of 32.45. Malin tied for third in vaulting with an 8.6, was second in bars with an 8.1 and placed third in floor (8.55).

Zuraw was 4th in vaulting (8.55) and beam (8.15) and 6th on floor (32.45). Leslie Jaffee tied for 5th in vaulting (8.5) and, along with teammates Mary Schaefer and Chenoweth, tied for 5th in bars (7.45).

Longwood will have its second straight home competition February 15 when Trenton State and Georgia College visit for an afternoon meet.

hitting five of nine shots from beyond the 19-foot, 9-inch, 3-point oval which is used for Mason-Dixon games. He finished with 17 points and hit crucial shots near the end of regluation and early in overtime.

In what was without question a "team win", there were many contributors, Junior Kevin Ricks had six points, 3 assists, 2 blocked shots and 2 steals. Senior Lionell Ogburn had 5 points and a career high 7 assists.

Center Quintin Kearney had 7 points and 7 rebounds, including a dunk at the Mount St. Mary's end of the court near the start of the game. Kearney, suffering from a toothache, did not play as well as he had been playing of late. Senior Dave Edwards came off the bench to get 4 points and 5 rebounds in 14 minutes of action.

"It was a great team victory," said coach Luther. "Everybody contributed. I couldn't ask for a better effort than we had tonight. Heading into the game I really felt we could do it if we held down our turnovers. The Mount gets a lot of its offense from its defense with steals leading to easy baskets.

"We wanted to get the ball to Kenny (Fields) down low and have him kick it out to Lonnie if things were jammed up inside. That play worked for us in several key situations. Lonnie really delivered in the clutch."

Continuing a steady climb toward a possible winning season, Longwood's men's basketball team upset third-ranked Mount St. Mary's 74-69 in overtime Friday night in Lancer Hall.

With their fifth straight win, the Lancers took over first place in the Mason-Dixon Conference. Now 9-10 overall and 4-1 in the league, Longwood hosts Randolph-Macon Wednesday and Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday in a pair of MDAC games this week.

Next week crucial road tests at Liberty (Monday) and at Maryland Baltimore County (Saturday) will confront Longwood.

In defeating the Mount Friday night, Longwood served notice that the dominance of Randolph-Macon and The Mount in the MDAC is in danger of coming to an end. R-MC and MSM have ended up 1-2 in the first two years of the conference. The Lancers, 4-10 just two weeks ago, now have a shot at winning the MDAC regular season crown.

A Lewis 3-pointer with 3:57 left in overtime put Longwood up for good 69-66.

The biggest shot of the night, however, belonged to 5-8 senior point guard Frank Tennyson. With time running out and The Mount ahead 66-63, Tennyson drove down court, pulled up outside the 3-point line and launched a missle which sent Lancer fans and players into orbit when it swished through the net as the buzzer sounded.

It almost seemed that Longwood was destined to win when Tennyson's shot hit the mark.

Longwood ended Mt. St. Mary's 11-game winning streak while at the same time improving its own homecourt mark in Lancer Hall to 51-16 since the facility was completed in 1980.

Picked to finish fifth in the six-team league by the coaches, Longwood has improved steadily since an 0-4 start. The senior-dominated ball club plays excellent defense and leads the conference in field goal percentage (52.6) and free throw percentage (73.9).

LANCER HALL WAS JUMPING

Asked how much his team has improved since the season began, Longwood coach Cal Luther replied, "It seems like we've come light years at this point. There's no question we've improved a great deal.

"Several factors have contributed to this improvement. We started the season with basically two new players in the starting lineup. Kenny (Fields) played just one semester last year and Quintin Kearney just joined us this season. It took some time for the players to become a cohesive unit.

"Our seniors, in particular Lonnie Lewis, are probably playing the best basketball of their careers. We're a veteran club and we're able to do a lot of things defensively. We threw six different defenses against them (The Mount) tonight. When we made them play against our halfcourt defense we were successful in stopping them for the most part."

Fields Player Of Week

Senior men's basketball co-captain Kenneth Fields has been named Mason-Dixon Conference Player of the Week and Longwood College Player of the Week for the period January 26 through February 2 following his outstanding performance in the Lancers' 74-69 overtime triumph over Mount St. Mary's Friday night.

Fields scored a career high 29 points and pulled down 7 rebounds to lead Friday's upset victory. A 6-2 forward, he had 41 points, 13 rebounds, 4 blocked shots and 2 steals last week as Longwood beat Winthrop 67-58 Monday and The Mount Friday to maintain a 5-game win streak.

"Fields just played out of sight," said Lancer coach Cal Luther after Friday's victory. "He really came through for us."

The Fairmont Heights High School graduate scored 17 points in the first half and 10 in the last four minutes of the half when Longwood erased a 30-23 deficit to take a 35-34 lead. He fouled out with four minutes remaining in regulation. He was 11-17 from the field and 7-9 from the line.

Longwood's top rebounder (7.3) and second leading scorer (18.3), Fields ranks among Mason-Dixon Conference leaders in scoring, rebounding, field goal percentage (59.3) and free throw percentage (77.5). He also has 34 assists, 28 steals, 12 blocked shots and 13 dunks.

KENNETH FIELDS

The business major has scored in double figures in all of Longwood's 19 games this season. He has led the team in scoring seven times.

Clark Retires

By MELISSA BETH CLARK

"When people think of the Information Office at this institution they think of Sue Clark; Sue, to most people, is an institution. We are going to miss her as much as anyone could possibly be missed at Longwood College." Don Lemish, Vice-President of Institutional Advancement.

On January 31, 1986, after 20 years of faithful service in the Information Office, Mrs. Sue Clark retired from Longwood. She began work in 1965 part-time and by September of 1968 she was a full-time employee. She has worked with many people through the years and has the warmest regards for her co-workers.

"All the people I have worked with, there is just something special about each Longwood employee; the men and the women in the physical plant, the maids and janitors, the division chairmen, the secretaries and faculty. It has been such a joy working with everyone."

Sue was born in Halifax County and moved to Farmville in 1932. Her mother, Elizabeth Carter, was a graduate of the Longwood class of 1898.

"My mother had the highest respect and the greatest love for the school. We were literally born with the same love. All my sisters and my children attended Longwood."

Datona, Lauderdale To Moderate Spring Break

Both communities are sponsoring organized activities aimed at somehow moderating student drinking during the spring break invasions of March and April.

"What has gone on before was a Sodom and Gomorrah affair," says Jerry Nolan, spokesman for Daytona's National Collegiate Sports Festival, which is supposed to draw students into activities more constructive than with those with Sodom, Gomorrah, Daytona and Fort Lauderdale generally are associated.

"The festival demonstrates we are getting away from the tarnished image of the past," he says.

Daytona and the other vacation spots in Florida don't have much of a choice.

This is the first spring break during which the state's new 21-year-old minimum drinking age law is in effect, and rising insurance costs are forcing communities to find ways to minimize the wild partying that has led to injuries and even deaths in the past.

Fort Lauderdale, for one, is sponsoring an "Olympics" featuring volleyball, a tug-of-war and various dance and trivia contests.

Daytona Beach hopes to attract up to 20,000 students to its first National Collegiate Sports Festival.

The festival, scheduled for March 8 through April 6, will feature about 20 different sports ranging from rugby to golf.

Four national corporations — including Walt Disney — and about 30 Daytona businesses are supporting the events.

Nolan hopes the festival also will encourage more

Ruth's Radio Scam

By BRUCE SOUZA

Many FM radio listeners of late have been greeted by a diminutive woman with a crusty german accent. "Hallo Sexoolly Speeking" the show opens. The distinctive voice belongs to Dr. Ruth Westheimer, better known simply as Dr. Ruth. Her weekly syndicated radio show has become an open forum for sexial problems. There are no holds barred as listeners nationwide call to discuss wide variety of sexual dysfunctions, and other sex related problems. Dr. Ruth is a strong advocate of contraception, masturbation, and the use of fantasies. However, she rarely has any useful advice for anyone who is mildly intelligent.

Westheimer's earthy approach is attractive to many who are surprised to find such a forum on FM radio. It's only fair to mention that radio shows similar in nature which feature genuine medical doctors have been airing on AM radio for years. Why then is Doctor Ruth so popular? One reason may be the unique character which eminates from her tiny frame. Besides her books she has a cable TV show and is also regular on David Letterman's Late Night TV show. Letterman shrewdly uses Westheimer to extract laughs from his audience, and Dr. Ruth willingly plays along with Letterman's hijinks.

It's not that Dr. Ruth is a total crackpot, although the image of a sexually liberated little old lady seems to please many. Not to sound prudish, but I question how one can solve a legitimate sexual problem on radio, considering the limited time allowed for each call. Dr. Ruth is not a medical doctor, and simply defers caller

SGA Survey

In order that we may make sound decisions that are based on a general concensus of students, we ask that you please take a few moments and answer this brief questionnaire. Please return these surveys to the SGA at box 1136, or simply drop them in the suggestion box in the new smoker.

1. What do you view as the three most important issues involving you as a student today?

2. What could the Student Government do for you this year to improve the quality of life here at Longwood?

3. What type of performers would you like to see the Student Union programming board bring to campus?

4. Would you be willing to pay a ticket price of say $5 or $7 in order to help supplement the cost of bringing a "big name" band to Longwood?

5. If you could change one thing about Longwood, what would it be?

There are several committees in Student Government that need manpower. This is your opportunity to help shape the policies that effect you. If you're interested, please fill in the section below.

My Page On Visitation

The improving Student Government Association, through the last actions of ex-President Garth Wentzel and the first actions of new executive John Colangelo, is submitting a plan to the Board of (it's a nice place to...) Visitors; the proposal is shaping up to look like an extension of the current visitation hours to 8 a.m. to 6 a.m. This means that one student may visit the room of another student at any time during the 22 hour per day period. This short period of non-visitation is established to insure that students may not simply move in to another's room.

Regardless of the length of restriction time (some schools have instituted twenty-three and one-half hour visitation), a new visitation policy is a good move for Longwood College.

While he was S.G.A. President, Wentzel did some checking with other schools in Virginia about their visitation policy. Wentzel, famous for his letter to the editor stating, "My friends know that I believe that gays have two basic rights: 1) the right to pay taxes and 2,) the right to die," informed me at the time of his findings. "No school has a visitation policy as restrictive as Longwood's. Some schools don't even have a visitation policy, George Mason, for example."

The idea, it seems, was first suggested to SGA members by ex-R.E.C. of Frazier, Amy Thompson, during a meeting of the infamous Alcohol Task Force (A.T.F. — All Too Familiar). Thompson knew that defending our kegs was a lost cause and tried to refocus our attention. "A change in visitation would be welcomed by every R.A. and R.E.C. and probably the administration too" Thompson told S.G.A. representatives.

The current visitation policy is simply a hassle for everyone involved.

For the student body, visitation is a joke; some see it as a sport, dodging the night host can be both challenging and rewarding. Others see it as humiliating. Getting busted on the way in by a rare overzealous night host (coitus preventius), or on the way out during "the Long Walk' back to your dorm (didn't I see that same shirt at the mixer last night?) can be traumatic experiences.

Do not assume that people only break visitation for companionship, cramming for a test in groups beyond midnight is also a primary motivator.

For the R.A.s, visitation means a hassle when they enforce it, a wrong when they ignore it and a guilt-trip when they violate the rule themselves. Visitation is far and away the rule most broken by R.A.s, as well as being the rule that is observed the least by the entire student body.

For the R.E.C. and the Judicial Board, the current visitation policy means meaningless paperwork and a total waste of valuable time. Case after case, incident report after incident report, a tap on the knuckles is all anyone will ever receive for violating the silly visitation policy that was set up to keep Hampsters away from the pre-liberated women of the Normal School.

The effects of the visitation policy include lack of respect for the Judicial Board and a general feeling that Longwood rules are born to be broken. Everytime a Judicial Board member gives up free time only to hear a visitation case drag on, that member thinks about quitting the board. And everytime a violator breaks a minor, unenforcible rule, it makes it that much easier to break vital, important rules, like the honor or fire codes.

Freedom to come and go between dorms via the various main entrances will surely mark the end of side doors being propped open and doors being damaged by the more physical elite who simply yank open the barriers of the heart.

I submit that the dorms will be much safer when there is only one well lit entrance to each building, as opposed to the 3 or 4 propped open or broken doors that are the existing situation in each residence hall.

We are now only left to hope that during their next visit, the Board of Visitors will realize that some people do in fact live here at the 'wood and know as much as anyone about what is right for Longwood.

In fact, why not put a student on the Board of Visitors? Other schools are moving in that direction. Few state school boards are more out of touch with the student pulse than is Longwood's Board of Visitors.

WHY CAN'T WE INSTALL A CURRENT LONGWOOD STUDENT AS A NON-VOTING MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF VISITORS?

Memorial Scholarship Fund

Longwood College has announced the establishment of a scholarship fund as a memorial to Margaret Kennedy (Peggy) who was killed in an automobile accident last summer near her home in Westbury, NY.

Ms. Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kennedy, had completed three years at Longwood where she was majoring in medical technology. Her twin sister, Patricia, also attended Longwood.

PEGGY KENNEDY

"We have received substantial contributions from Peggy's family and friends," said Donald Lemish, the college's vice president for institutional advancement, "and we anticipate sufficient support from other friends to enable the fund to reach an endowed level in a short time."

Plans are to establish a permanent endowment fund, with the interest income to be used for an annual scholarship to a student in the natural sciences department.

Contributions may be sent to the Longwood College Foundation (Farmville, VA 23901) and designated for the Kennedy Memorial Scholarship Fund.

All donors to the fund will be recognized by Longwood within the college's established gift recognition societies, Lemish said.

How About It?

For one week keeping the tables in the Dining Hall Clear. There has been talk before, if we would take our dishes back, ARA would sponsor more special meal nights.

Well, here is a challenge: one week of clean tables Feb. 17-23, for one Build a Berger Night on Feb. 27. Just imagine homemade hambergers with all the fixin's you could possible think of and more!

I know this campus can pull together to do astounding things. So, how about it?

Faculty

Changes in mid-19th century France transformed journalism from its opinion-shaping role for the elite into popular entertainment for the masses, a Longwood College professor said in a recent speech.

Dr. Jill Kelly, assistant professor of French, discussed what she called the "industrialization and democratization of art" in 19th-century France in a Faculty Colloquium Lecture Feb. 5.

"Printed information, once the exclusive domain of the well-to-do who could afford the relatively exorbitant subscription rates, was becoming the property of a wider and less educated public. . .Even the illiterate and semi-literate could enjoy the medium," she said.

Newspaper publishers were able to cut operating expenses through technological advances in paper and ink production and in the mechanics of printing, and by adding advertising. Previously, newspapers were a "luxury item" that advanced political views, she said.

There were three forms of popular entertainment in the new journals — visual images (mostly lithographs), gossipy tid-bits of news called "faits divers" (real news), and the serial novel ("roman-feuilleton"), said Kelly.

Lithography was first used to reproduce contemporary and classical artwork, much of it religious. Another popular use was the "portrait-charge," a large format engraving of a famous person. Photographs did not become a staple of newspapers "until much later in the century," when technical advances made that possible.

"We, who are so used to the availability of art images, inexpensive art postcards and wall posters, may find it hard to imagine the effect that these images had on people whose secular art experience, if any, was limited to architecture and an occasional museum visit," Kelly said.

The faits divers were "just bits of stories — four or five lines — often clipped from provincial papers and reprinted in Parisian papers or vice versa. People had always been fascinated with other people; now they were becoming vicariously fascinated through print." These stories included "scandals, accidents, thefts, petty crimes, embezzlements and catastrophes."

Daily or weekly installments of novels were read, or heard read, by "everyone from the banker to the chambermaid. . . They were interminable, multi-plotted epics — with more similarities to our

R.A. Project

By CRAIG HARDY

Have you ever been ripped off ? Have you noticed a large amount of vandalism on campus, and does it bother you? If you answered yes to any of these questions, this article may be of concern to you.

Several R.A.'s as part of a special assignment have been involved in work groups to come up with ways to help prevent vandalism and other crime on campus. The other part of the assignment was to come up with ways to increase security at Longwood in general. We would like to share with you our ideas:

First of all, February 10th-14th will be designated as campus-wide Hall Watch week. Hall Watch is similar to the neighborhood watch programs implemented in cities throughout the U.S. A resident or a group of residents will patrol the halls for a given period of time, and report theft, vandalism, trespassers, and a host of other infamous crimes. Hall Watch had, indeed, already started in the Colonnades. From our understanding the program is a great success. Hall Watch certainly seems to have validity to it. This proves to be true when the number of incidents has dropped considerably.

SAV (Students Against Vandalism) are advocating other notions as well. They try to point out to others that the community as a whole suffers. When some idiot breaks a window and doesn't get caught, thenearest residents will be charged. So being the passive, "don't get involved" resident really does not pay. It's you that is getting ripped off. That is money that could be better spent such as on better food.

SAV would also like to point out that if you see someone committing such an act vandalism, stealing, and the like, the police will preserve your anonymity. With your name remaining secret, how can you not report someone who is ripping off you and your fellow residents? You can simply drop the suspects name into your RA's mailbox or under his door. A phone call to the Campus Police would work just as effectively also.

Ambassadors

By KIM SETZER

The Ambassador's Alumni Telefund Campaign started on Monday, February 3. Ambassadors call Monday through Thursday from 6:30 until 9:30. They call alumni who have graduated as long ago as 1918 and ask for support. Last week, the Ambassadors received contributions between 7,000 and 8,000 dollars a night. This calling will continue for eight weeks. The goal of the Ambassadors this year is to talk with over 11,000 alumni, obtain at least 6,000 pledges, and reach at least $160,000 in support for Longwood College.

corporations to support intramural programs on campuses. IM sports, he notes, can use some fund-raising help.

But no one pretends the activities aren't intended to moderate revelers' drinking.

"We hope the level of drinking will be lower than in the past," Daytona Chamber of Commerce representative Betty Wilson says.

Daytona also will mount a poster and radio campaign to promote sensible alcohol consumption.

"Any planned activity will be advantageous in (controlling) how students party," maintains Beverly Sanders of Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students (Bacchus), a group that runs "alcohol awareness" programs on campuses around the country.

Yet the hard-partying spring break tradition is still a favorite of some local businesses.

"These kids are going to come down, party and raise hell. At least I hope so," says Tommy Fuquay, manager of The Other Place, a popular Daytona Beach club. "It's the only time of year we make money."

Fuquay says he is more worried about the new 21-year-old drinking age slowing business than the festival.

Most of the national beer companies, as well as long-time spring break visiting corporations like Playboy, plan to return to the area, too, to promote their wares.

Coming, too, is Michigan inventor Ronald Rummell to market his new product: a vest allowing its wearer to carry six beverage containers and keep them cold.

"It's an alternative to bulky coolers," he explains.

upon caller to seek the appropriate professional help.

Among the legitimate callers are the inane buffoons who want to saddle and embarrass the nation with sophomoric problems. Only last week a fellow called whose problems was that he couldn't get a date, and hadn't in two years. Our friend admitted that he was too anxious and forward on his previous encounter with women. He was adamant about not dating again until he could learn to control his animal urges, and stop scaring women away. Doctor Ruth's advice: "You must keep trying." It was clear Doctor Ruth had no solutions for this 22 year old pubescent. Later in the show a college student called to ask how he could stop fantasizing about the beautiful women in his classes, and instead concentrate on his professors lectures. Doctor Ruth's advice: I hev a brilliant idea. Iv yoo sit in ze front of ze cless you vill not be destracted by ze young frauleins." The only condolences that can be offered to the dolts above is that at least the phone call was toll-free.

Dr. Ruth freely dispenses information on contraception, and offers other common sense type remedies. Her show maybe helpful to dispel many myths and misconceptions that young people have in regard to sexuality. What irks me is when reasonably intelligent sounding adults call. Why call Doctor Ruth? If you have a problem and you are intelligent enough to realize it, you must also be intelligent enough to know that calling Doctor Ruth will rarely provide an answer. Only the most confused realizes the problems that need to be publicly directed to the obvious solutions. Some call expecting Dr. Ruth to come up with a miracle solution to some bizarre problem. As all radio talk show hosts do, she has to cut short the weirdos. Dr. Ruth simply offers the majority of callers what is known to most as plain old common sense.

Dr. Ruth for the most part is a sham. Through the media she has developed a growing personality cult. Her show is like going down to the gossip fence to catch a few juicy stories. Not that there is anything wrong with tuning in to catch the latest travesties in other sex lives but don't do it under the guise of it being educational.

The 2 hour show flows at a good pace until Dr. Ruth deems it necessary to anoint the audience with a humorless archaic antedote followed by her german flavored cackle. The show, however, is not entirely uninteresting to listen to, but it soon becomes predictable. One by chance may pick up a snipet of useful information, but most of us will simply chuckle as others publicly hand out their dirty under. "Sexually Speaking" with Doctor Ruth Westheimer airs Sunday nights 10-12 p.m. on WRXL 102 FM.

EDITOR'S NOTE: At press time, Souza gave me a call with a Dr. Ruth update. It seems that during the Sunday show, Westheimer received a call from "Steve" in Annandale, Virginia. Steve's problem is that his girlfrind is away and he does not get to see her that much. When they do get together, Steve reports that he "likes to perform intercourse for four hours," but that they suffer 'lubrication problems' during the marathon.

Dr. Ruth's response to the problem is a bit graphic for these pages, but the staff has been informed of her (Ruth's Advise) solution and if Steve's girl from Longwood wants to come by the office, we'll let her know what to do. We won't keep you a minute over 2 hours. We Promise!

soap operas than to classic literature." Eugene Sue and Paul de Kock, the "masters of the genre," became household names and some now-famous writers —Victor Hugo, Flaubert and Balzac — saw their work published in the periodicals.

The publication of La Presse, in 1836, heralded the new era in French journalism, Kelly said. "Emile de Girardin had dreamed for years of a less expensive periodical that would reach a wider audience. Taking full advantage of the ever-increasing technological changes. . .he developed into a viable form his idea of a lower subsription price offset by a fourth page of advertising . . . By the early 1840s papers were affordable to an enormously wider audience and available on the street as single issues."

Conservative critics scoffed at both the writers and readers of serial novels, considering genre cheap and materialistic. "In the mid-19th century, the French intellectual looking back on his proud heritage of 700 years of literature saw with fear the increased pace with which art was becoming more than ever before a negotiable commodity on the capitalist market."

But the "new order" was here. to stay, Kelly concluded. "What had changed was that it was now a different kind of art by a different kind of artist for a different kind of public. Journalism consciously and unconsciously had given the democratic, materialist tendencies of the age a perfect medium through which to express themselves . . . Journalism had its role in developing an art that was more fully about the people, for the people and by the people."

National News

IN AN UNUSUAL MOVE, a university president has asked a district attorney to reconsider his decision not to file felony rape charges against three members of a fraternity. A San Diego State U. student says she fell unconscious after being tricked into drinking a mixture of Kool-aid and Everclear at a Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity party, and that three fraternity members raped her while she was unconscious. The district attorney had decided that the woman had been "taken advantage of" but not raped — which prompted outraged SDSU students to ask what the difference was.

THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT at the U. of Massachusetts says he may write to the chancellor expressing the association's support for student control of the Student Activities Fund. At issue is an attempt by the director of student activities to control the student government's trust fund. The fund comes from student fees and pays for all student activities, but has been in the red for two years. "I'm in favor of students taking over their own money," the association president says. "That's something I fought for back in the '60s."

Parlor Entertainment

Longwood College extends an invitation to "step into the parlor" for entertainment as it was before radio, movies, and television were invented.

The Valentine's Day Parlor Entertainment is scheduled for Friday, February 14, at 8 p.m. in the Gold Room of Lankford Building.

"The parlor used to be a center of entertainment," Dr. Sprague said. "Family members and guests were invited to play the piano or other musical instruments, sing the latest hits or old favorites, recite poetry, and exercise their wits in word games."

Professional standards were not expected, she added, "the willingness was all. And those who might be too shy to exhibit their accomplishments could always join in the applause."

Proceeds from the Parlor Entertainment will be used for scholarships.

Admission is $5.00 for adults, $2.50 for students.

RABBI MEIR KAHANE, the radical Zionist, didn't like it much when the Tulane U. student government cancelled his speaking engagement because the security arrangements were too expensive — he sent a telegram calling the decision "illegal and outrageous," threatening a $1 million lawsuit and vowing to make his appearance as planned, with or without an invitation.

IN THE WAKE OF THE DEFEAT of recent U. of Illinois Student Government Association legislation aimed at limiting SGA support of showing X-rated films, the SGA Campus Affairs Committee announced the showing of "Not A Love Story" — a film claiming to show the extent and growth of the pornography industry. "We hope to educate and promote inquiry and thought on the issue of pornography on campus," the committee chairperson says.

THE CHANCELLOR DIDN'T HEAR THE POP of even one champagne cork at U. of Wisconsin's December commencement ceremony — and he was impressed. "There was still exuberance," he said. "But it was orderly. It was the kind of joy or enthusiasm that makes you feel good." The chancellor has threatened to cancel future ceremonies if the "traditional" rowdiness and drinking continued.

FRATERNITY FACTS: In 1985, there were 5,618 undergraduate chapters and 350 colonies in the U.S. There were 300,000 undergraduate members and 100,000 initiates. The total number of living alumni members is nearly four million.

WHO'S TO BLAME? In a recent Parade magazine survey of teachers, almost 90 percent blamed parents for the problems of the country's education system. The teachers say parents do not instill discripline and other qualities in their children that would motivate them to learn, and that it is difficult to find parents interested in creating a home environment conductive to learning or willing to discuss their child's problems in school.

A SHORTAGE OF PROFESSORS, expected to hit in the 1990s when many current professors retire, may be headed off with the help of a $4.75 million fund set up by the Ford Foundation. The money is to be divided among successful bidders from 39 colleges that have been invited to propose projects to solve the problem.

SKUNKS HAVE INVADED the Delaware State College campus, and are living under the residence halls. Students walking the campus at night are falling prey to the little stinkers, and the odor usually hangs in the air for two to four days. Officials say they "have notified Environmental Control, and are waiting to hear from them."

THE FULL AVERAGE ANNUAL COST of education at public four-year colleges can be met by only 27 percent of families of college-bound seniors, according to The College Board. Only 12 percent can pay the total costs at private four-year schools.

FOUR-YEAR PUBLIC SCHOOLS reported a 2 percent drop in full-time enrollment this fall, but a 2 percent rise in part-time enrollment and an 8 percent increase in graduate enrollment. (Source: American Association of State Colleges and Universities).

DO COLLEGE GRADUATES WORK HARD? In a survey of employers by Montclair State College, 22 percent said employees recruited from campus are hard working, and 17 percent said they were unwilling to work hard.

ALTHOUGH A THIRD OF THE DEAF STUDENTS who enter college intend to earn a bachelor's degree, only 5 percent actually do. (Source: National Project on Higher Education for Deaf Students).

FOR THE FIRST TIME, the Colorado U. Board of Regents has a student adviser. The Regents approval of the non-voting seat brought to an end three years of student campaigning. Students had twice, unsuccessfully, taken the measure to the state legislature. The position is on a one-year trial basis, and can be eliminated at any time on 30 days notice.

A BEER A DAY keeps the doctor away: Moderate drinkers have 25 percent fewer illnesses compared to non-drinkers and hard liquor users in a new study by the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine. "It is very interesting," says Thomas Turner, president of the Hopkins Alcoholic Beverage Medical Research Foundation. "There is a great deal of evidence accumulating all over the Western World that moderate drinking is associated with better health."

A STUDENT MAY SUE the U. of Pennsylvania, claiming she was denied permission to tape lectures in a political science class while suffering from a hearing loss, unless her grade of C is changed or she is allowed to withdraw from the course retroactively. The professor says he has never received a request from any student to allow tape recording of his course for reasons of hearing loss.

Maybe there is a substitute for experience.

Need someone to wash your clothes? Iron your shirts? Clean your room? Do you need someone to mix drinks for you while you relax in front of the TV or are you just looking for a dinner companion? If the answer is yes to one or more of these questions then come to the Lancer Cafe Wednesday night at 6:00 for the Alpha Sigma Alpha maid service auction. You won't be sorry.

All girls interested in forming Longwood's first drill team should call Christine at 392-6217 or just keep your eyes peeled for meetings and tryout dates which will be posted around campus in the near future.

You are cordially invited to a sweetheart dinner Thursday, February 13 from 5-7 p.m. in Lancer Cafe. The meny includes rib eye steak, baked potato, tossed salad, texas toast and a drink for only $4.95 per person. Reservations are required.

Send your roommate or friend a Val-o-gram, available February 10, 11, 12, 13 during lunch in the new smoker. White is for friendship, pink is for a secret admirer and red is for love (includes red hots!). Sponsored by the Colonades, the messages will be delivered at 1:00 p.m. on Valentine's Day.

The pledges of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority are also sponsoring balloon-a-grams sold in the new smoker (or Tri Sigma Chapter room) February 6-13. $1.00 for one balloon, $5.00 for a half dozen and $10.00 for one dozen. The messages, which will also be delivered on Valentine's Day, can also be sent out to Hampden-Sydney.

Lancer Cafe is where its at again this week: a live d.j. will be spinning your favorite tunes (free) on Tuesday night; the search for Longwood's most talented person continues Wednesday night at 8:00; Back Door presents BERMUDA TRIANGLE Thursday night at 8 p.m. The band is free to Longwood students.

The Longwood Counseling Service will be sponsoring a lecture Wednesday afternoon at 3 p.m. entitled: "Career Decision-Making! What to do with a Major In . . ." to develop skills in career decision-making and assist in decisions regarding choice of majors. (Career Resource Center, South Ruffner).

Anyone wishing to join the Sociology-Anthropology club should come to the weekly meetings on Tuesdays at 3:15 in the Seminar Room in Hiner (located on the second floor next to the department's office).

If your organization, club of association has an event or special happening that they would like to announce in Campus Notes, contact the Rotunda at 392-4012 or leave a notice in box 1133. Please remember that the Rotunda comes out on Tuesdays.

THE STATE LOTTERY in California is paying off for education. Public schools received $272 million in lottery proceeds: $220.32 million to elementary and secondary schools, $32.64 million to community colleges, $12.24 million to the California State University system and $6.8 million to the University of California system.

A SNOWBALL FIGHT, started by a few U. of Illinois students, got out of hand when nearly 300 others joined in. The crowd went on a three-hour rampage, breaking car windows and mirrors, and overturning a van. Damages may reach $5,000. The university police say the students were "taking out their frustrations over final exams."

MARIJUANA USE has a greater effect on memory and thinking ability than previously has been thought, according to Listen: A Journal of Better Living. The journal says the marijuana-induced chemical changes in the brain diminish both memory and thinking ability. Occasional use affects short-term memory, and regular use damages long-term and abstract memory. Reading comprehension problems are also common. (Contact: Call Richard Inglish at 202-722-6728).

ONLY ABOUT 5 percent of the students who graduated from the U. of West Virginia's College of Agriculture from 1975 to 1984 took jobs on farms, according to WVU's recruiting committee.

PEER PRESSURE AND SOCIALIZING are the primary reasons students at Rochester Community College drink alcohol and use drugs, according to a survey by the student newspaper, Echo. The average age at which students first experimented with alcohol is 14; among those who have used drugs, it is 16.

OLDER STUDENTS often feel "very isolated," according to officials at Columbia U. Non-traditional students have "a stronger sense of intentionality than the adolescent student and this makes for a very different college attitude."

A GAMBLING RAID by the U. of Nebraska police netted seven student arrests. Police say the students are not tied to any one organization, but combined they handled about $52,000 in gambling per week.

MORE THAN 68,000 STUDENTS from middle-income families will be denied federal scholarships next fall, according to Education Department officials. The Department is cutting $170.9 million from its programs as its share of the nearly $12 billion in savings required by the new deficit-reduction law.

PELL GRANTS will fund 2,691,000 students for the 1986-87 academic year. The income cutoff for a student from a typical family of four will drop from $25,000 in adjusted gross income, to $24,000.

WOMEN WILL BE ADMITTED to at least one of Princeton U.'s three all-male eating clubs. The University Cottage Club voted to admit women in the midst of a sex-discrimination suit filed against the clubs and the school.

VANDALISM, EXCESSIVE DRINKING, body-passing and disorderly behavior on the part of student fans is precipitating a few changes at the U. of Wisconsin football stadium. A committee studying the problem recommends issuing students color-coded tickets and allowing them to enter the stadium only at designated gates, maintaining the student seating section except for the top few rows, and discontinuing the sale of beverages in hard plastic cups in the student section.

SIX MINORITY GROUPS at the U. of Pennsylvania are protesting the possible reinstatement of a professor who was suspended last year after referring to black students in his class as "ex-slaves" and making other racist remarks. The students are also demanding more minority faculty and creation of a Minority Affairs Office to aid victims of racial harassment.

INSPECTIONS OF FRATERNITIES and sororities may be renewed by the U. of Minnesota's Department of Environmental Health and Safety. The plan to renew inspections comes in the wake of a proposal by the city of St. Paul to license Greek houses under strict rooming and boarding house codes.

CAMPUS ALCOHOL INTAKE is down, but is still considered a serious problem, according to two recent polls. A poll by BACCHUS found that drinking has dropped 13 percent among males, and 25 percent among females, since 1981. Another study found that college administrators say alcohol abuse is less of a problem than it was six years ago, but is still a "terrible problem."

A $600,100 CLAIM has been filed against Stanford U. and the campus police by a student arrested at an October sit-in. The student charges that the arresting officer's use of the compliance-pain hold was an "excessive, unreasonable, unnecessary and unlawful force." He also claims he was "placed in isolation, strip searched and beaten" while in jail.

LOW BUDGETS needn't keep student organizations from advertising on the U. of Utah's campus: For $15, they can have announcements aired hourly each day for a week in the Union Terrace. The announcements can be changed each day to keep the message fresh. The service was brought in as a response to a poll which found that students want to know more about what their leaders are doing.

DIET AND EXERCISE have an effect on test performance, according to the Penn State U. assistant dean for counseling and academic skills development. Students should eat food easily digested and high in protein such as fish, cheese or eggs the night before an exam. To raise blood sugar and adrenalin levels, students should eat hard candy directly before the exam. To relieve tension, students should exercise to the point of perspiration, but not fatigue, about an hour before an exam.

WINDOWS ARE BOLTED SHUT in the men's freshman hall at the U. of Mississippi to "balance the heating and air conditioning systems, and to prevent objects being thrown from windows," according to the UM housing director. UM will also begin billing entire floors for vandalism when the vandal is not caught. As one official described it: "It looked worse than bad. It looked like a burned-out bunker on some floors."

Patrol Keeps Longwood Safe

"Why do I have to pay so much for damage done to my hall?" "I don't feel safe in my own room at night." "Nobody cares about the dorms."

These are just a few of the comments you may have heard from students on campus. They reflect an overall feeling on the part of Longwood's student body that nothing can be done about the vandalism and security problems on the residence halls. There is, however, a group of students who believe they can make a difference. This group consists of residents from First Floor Tabb who spend every night making hourly rounds of the Colonnades Residence Complex (Tabb, So. Tabb, South Ruffner, and French). Between midnight and 7 a.m. Sunday-Thursday and 2 a.m. and 7 a.m. Friday and Saturday, members of this voluntary group make continuous rounds for each of their hour shifts. The Colonnades Security Patrol uses a Campus Police radio (allowing direct access to the Campus Policeman on patrol) and wears T-shirts paid for by the Colonnades Hall Council. The originators of this idea, E. J. Bryant and Jerry P. Hurt, believe that the presence of the patrol helps deter possible vandals and trespassers, as well as makes the women of the Colonnades feel more secure (First Floor Tabb is the only floor of males in the complex). While on rounds, the patrol unprops doors, confronts suspicious-looking individuals, and reports problems to the Campus Police.

Sue Clark Retires

was in the class of 1937. She went two years then married her husband, James Thomas Clark, who was attending Hampden-Sydney College at the time.

"He was 17 and I was 15, he wore this little garnet and grey cap that made my heart go pitter pat!"

Mr. Clark was sheriff of Farmville, like his father before him, from 1944-1968. He was also the doorkeeper for the House of Representatives for many years.

Sue was also Justice of the Peace from 1946-1976. And in 1963 she was appointed a Civil Marriage Celebrant along with the Court Clerk Vernon Womack. She often held marriage ceremonies in her home and would even play a record of the wedding march and decorate the room.

"I would try to have it as pretty as I could because it was their special wedding."

She also has worked with the Red Cross for over 30 years, has been a Daughter of the American Revolution for 10 years, and a Daughter of the Confederacy for 30 years.

Sue is very proud of her ancestory and stresses the importance of knowing your roots.

"Don't ever forget who you are, it has carried me through many crisis." Sue is the grandaughter of "one of Pickett's men" Thomas Towns Carter. She proudly flies an American flag every day, weather permitting.

She has very strong views about Longwood now and Longwood many years ago.

"In a way, I feel sorry for the students because they don't get to go to "Chapel" (Chapel was when students got together in the auditorium and had special programs.) Dr. Jarman used to sing. He was quite a singer."

She remembers the pride the students used to have in the campus.

"Years ago you would never see anyone cut across the grass. I would love to see the campus treated a little better."

Also the office that is now known as the "Information Office" used to be known as the "Home Office."

Longwood gives Clark a standing ovation.

"The alumni used to love to come in the "Home Office." They felt that it was the only thing about Longwood that wasn't changing. The alumni have said that unless things change they cannot continue to support the college through contributions and have things treated the way they are. The alumni would like to be treated with respect, warmth, and friendliness. They love Longwood so much."

Sue would like to see the Rotunda treated with more respect. For example, smoking is not permitted in the Rotunda. The reason stated Mrs. Clark is "according to the Farmville Fire Department there is a dangerous updraft that could cause fire to spread." She feels that students should be "a whole lot more conscious about fires."

Sue is very proud of her new Lancer Club Honorary Membership.

"For a non-sports person I feel it is just the greatest thing. I never played sports but I watched the games all my life. When I was young, getting to go to a basketball game was a big thing. I continued to love it and, just to think someone would notice."

She has encouraged the players for years both on and off the courts and for her loyalty she received a standing ovation at the last Lancer game.

After her retirement Sue plans to stay at home with her husband of 50 years and continue working in her garden which has become her treasure since she recovered a projectile point there several years ago.

"Dr. James Jordan has changed my opinion about a lot of things and especially my outlook of gardening."

She also plans to spend time with her children Major James T. Clark, III., and her daughter Martha Susan Belcher of Virginia Beach. Both of her children attended Longwood and her daughter was a classmate of Longwood's own Barbara Bishop.

When asked what her greatest hope for the future of Longwood was she replied, "People used to sing, we loved Longwood. It isn't like that at Longwood anymore. I wish Longwood pride could be brought back."

It seems only fitting that I close this article with these outstanding comments about Sue Clark from Longwood's President, Dr. Janet D. Greenwood. "Sue Clark has been a very effective "good will" ambassador for the college both on and off the job. We appreciate her interest and care for Longwood and its people and know these attributes will not stop with her retirement."

Gymnasts Score Record

By JIM WINKLER

The Longwood gymnastics team hosted its first meet of the year in high fashion, outscoring UMBC 168.75 - 159.45. The Lancer score topped the old school high of 166.40 which the team recorded last year against William & Mary.

"The victory was sweet revenge," said Longwood Coach Ruth Budd. "The team was psyched about our first home meet, and we had a super audience cheering support." Earlier this year UMBC defeated the Lancers for the first time vever 153.70 - 149.75.

The Lancers, now 3-5, will host Georgia College and Trenton State Saturday at 20:00.

Senior Lisa Zuraw led the Lancers over UMBC. She won the vaulting (9.0) and floor competition (8.8) and finished 2nd on beam (8.8). The senior also finished first in all-around (34.95) to tie the Longwood record which Kelly Strayer set last season in the NCAA Regionals.

Strayer, who had not competed this year due to an injury, performed just on beam. Her first performance was a gem, as the senior tied the Longwood record (8.9) and won the competition. Budd noted that Strayer will probably compete in more than one event next week, as she has been able to work out more in recent weeks.

Freshman Linda Chenoweth finished 2nd all-around (34-45), which is the third highest score ever performed by a Longwood gymnast. The freshman placed 2nd in vaulting (8.8), 3rd on beam (8.65) and floor (8.5) and 4th on bars (8.5). Chenoweth has scored well for the Lancers in all-around all season.

Junior Debbe Malin also came close to setting a Longwood record. Malin won the bars competition scoring 8.95, which is just short of the school record (9.0 - Strayer in 1985 Regionals). The junior tied for third in vaulting (8.75) and finished third in all-around (33.30) to complete the Lancer sweep in all-around.

"The team performed great," said Budd. "It was the first time all season that we were able to have everyone healthy and able to compete. The team worked well together."

Coach Budd is hoping for another "good crowd" Saturday when Georgia College and Trenton State face the Lancers at 2:00 in Lancer Hall. Longwood will have just one other home meet after that, the Virginia State Meet March 1 at 2:00. Radford, JMU and William & Mary will face the Lancers in that meet.

Lady's B-Ball

Longwood's women's basketball team will finally be able to unpack its bags for a few days. The Lady Lancers have two home games this week after playing away for nearly a month.

Coach Shirley Duncan's team will host Mason-Dixon Conference foes Liberty University Tuesday and Maryland Baltimore County Saturday in action this week. Starting time for the games is 7:30. Both are key contests as the Lady Lancers point toward the MDAC Tournament February 27-March 1 at Pittsburgh-Johnstown.

Now 6-13 overall and 0-5 in the league, Longwood was up-and-down last week, falling to District of Columbia 77-76 Tuesday, whipping Bridgewater 90-44 Thursday and losing at Pittsburgh-Johnstown 82-63 Saturday night.

Caren Forbes with 16 points, Melanie Lee 14 points and 10 rebounds, and Karen Boska, 11 points and 8 rebounds. The Lady Mountain Cats got 32 points and 14 rebounds from Karen Sayers.

Freshman Sandy Rawdon scored 15 points to lead Thursday's win at Bridgewater. Forbes had 14 points and Lee 12 as all 11 Lady Lancers scored in the 90-44 victory. Longwood scored its season-high point total against the Lady Eagles.

Longwood turned in one of its top performances of the season at District of Columbia last Tuesday. The Lady Lancers led 76-75 until UDC scored late to squeak by 77-76. Forbes scored 18 points and dished off 8 assists, Lee had 17 points and 11 rebounds and freshman Kita Chambers had seven points and 10 rebounds.

Tuesday night's home game with Liberty will be Longwood's first in Lancer Hall since William and Mary visited January 16.

Wrestling

By Tony Brzezicki

After struggling against Washington and Lee Wednesday the Longwood Lancer grapplers bounced back at the Old Dominion Duals Saturday to up their record to 7-10.

The Lancers defeated Loyola 51-18 and Christopher Newport 54-12 at ODU. Longwood's only loss of the weekend came at the hands of Howard University by a score of 32-24. Last Wednesday Longwood traveled to Washington & Lee and came back with a 42-12 defeat.

Whitman picked up three wins last week against one defeat, bringing his overall record to 26-10. This sets a new Longwood record for most wins in a season, surpassing teammate Billy Howard's 1985 school record of 23-15. Whitman won on a 4-3 decision against W & L and picked up pins against Loyola and Christopher Newport before losing a 9-7 decision to his Howard opponent.

Strauss wrestled an excellent week by pinning opponents at W & L, Christopher Newport, and Kutztown (an individual match).

PETE WHITMAN

He received a forfeit from Loyola and was handed his one defeat by Howard. Strauss' record now stands at 16-13.

Taylor evened his record at 15 after winning all four of his matches. He defeated a grappler from W & L 12-5, Loyola 7-6, got a pin against Christopher Newport and received a forfeit from Howard.

Howard had a 3-0 weekend and pushed his record up to 17-7-1. He won on a technical fall against Loyola 19-4, pinned his Christopher Newport opponent, and received a forfeit from Howard.

The Lancers' last regular season match is Wednesday in Lancer Hall against Division I opponent Virginia Tech starting at 7:00.

Longwood then heads to Liberty on Friday to compete in the NCAA Division II Regional championship. Individual winners will earn the right to compete in the National championship at Edwardsville, Ill. February 28-March 1. Only one previous wrestler from Longwood has made it the Nationals, Tim Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald ranks third among Lancer grapplers for most wins in a season with a record of 22-9 in 1984-85.

Lancer Sports

Lancers Continue To Demolish Conference

Like "Ole Man River," the Longwood men's basketball team just kept rolling along last week, notching its sixth and seventh wins in a row and climbing above 500 for the first time this season.

The first place team in the Mason-Dixon Conference with a 6-1 league mark, Longwood is now 11-10 overall after beating Randolph-Macon 78-57 Wednesday and Pittsburgh-Johnstown 80-69 Saturday. After a stretch of four straight home games, the Lancers face two road tests this week.

After visiting conference rival Liberty University Monday night, Longwood will travel to Baltimore Saturday to take on Maryland Baltimore County, host for this year's Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament February 27 - March 1. Both MDAC foes figure to give the Lancers all they can handle.

Longwood returns home to host a talented Atlantic Christian squad next Monday (Feb. 17) in what will be a free ticket night for Farmville-area elementary school and junior high students.

TRIO LEADS THE WAY

Longwood got outstanding performances from its three-man punch of seniors Lonnie Lewis and Kenneth Fields and junior Quintin Kearney in beating Randolph-Macon and Pitt-Johnstown last week.

The Lancers raced to a 45-25 halftime lead and then coasted home with an 80-69 win over the Mountain Cats Saturday night. Longwood's third straight home crowd of 1,000-plus had lots to cheer about as Lewis scored 23 points, Fields 22 points with 10 rebounds and Kearney 18 points with 12 rebounds.

Fields and Lewis scored 14 points each in the first half as Longwood used its highly effective halfcourt trap to disrupt UPJ's offense. Pitt-Johnstown scoring leader Bill Lindsay managed but six points in the first half. Fields added 3 assists, 3 blocked shots and 3 steals in a fine all-around performance, while guard Kevin Ricks had 6 points, 6 assists and 4 steals.

Wednesday's victory over Randolph-Macon, which ended a string of six straight losses to the Jackets, followed a different scenario. A fired up but injury-riddled R-MC team battled Longwood to a 33-33 halftime deadlock. The Lancers, with Kearney leading the way, exploded in the second half and waltzed away with a 78-57 triumph.

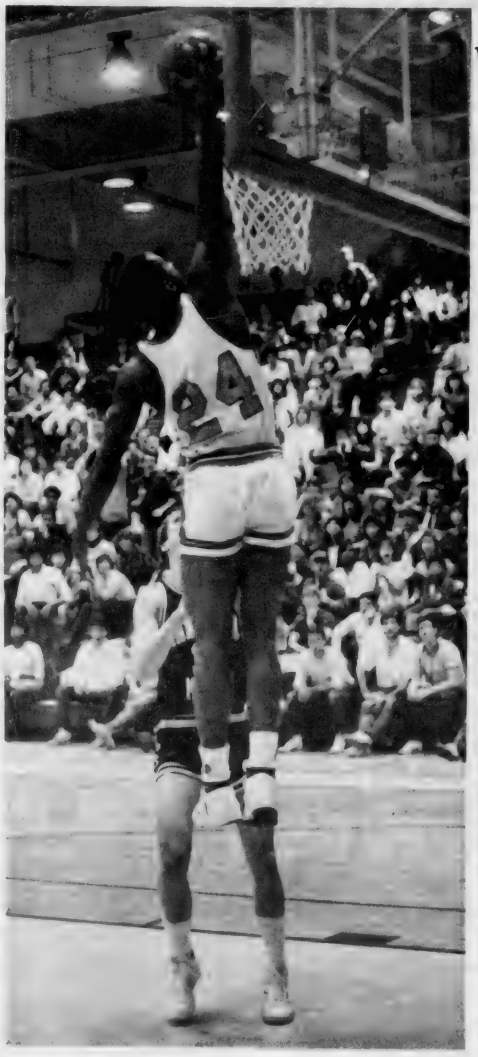
Kearney dominated the inside in one key second half stretch as Longwood went on a 22-8 run to go from a 39-39 tie to a 61-47 lead. The 6-6 junior center scored nine points in the outburst with a slam, three follow-shots and a free throw. He finished with 14 points and 6 rebounds. Lewis scored 22 points while Fields had 18 points and a team-high 8 rebounds.

Guards Kevin Ricks (8 points, 8 assists, no turnovers), and Eric Pittman, 8 points, 4 assists and 3 steals, also made major contributions to the victory, which avenged a 60-56 loss to the Jackets January 15. Longwood hit 63 per cent of its shots Wednesday night. A large (1,253 estimated) and vocal home crowd aided the victory.

NOTES ON THE LANCERS



— Fields and Lewis have been amazingly consistent this season. Fields has hit double figures in all 21 of Longwood's games while Lewis has made double digits in 20 of 21 games and 17 in a row.

— In addition to playing outstanding defense recently, Longwood leads the Mason-Dixon Conference in both field goal (.529) and free throw (.746) shooting. All five starters, Lewis, Fields, Ricks, Kearney and senior Lionell Ogburn, are shooting over 52 percent from the floor. Ogburn is high man at .600 from the floor.

— When Lewis hit a cold streak in the first half of Wednesday's win over R-MC, Ricks pumped in four of four outside shots to take up the slack.

— Home attendance is on the rise for the Lancer cagers. Longwood students and fans have been quick to jump on the bandwagon with crowds of over 1,000 for the Mount St. Mary's Randolph-Macon and Pitt-Johnstown contests.

— If awards were given out for comeback team of the year, the Lancers would rate high. Rebounding from 0-4 and 4-10 starts, Longwood has won seven in a row and 11 of its last 17.

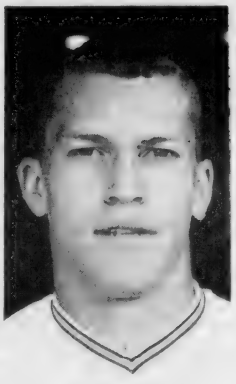
Kenny Fields soars over Randolph-Macon.

Whitman, Player Of Week

Longwood sophomore wrestler Pete Whitman won three of four matches last week to break the school record for wins in a season, and for his accomplishments, Whitman has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period February 2-9. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood Sports Information Office.

Whitman upped his season mark to 26-10 last week, bettering the record of 23 wins which teammate Billy Howard established last season. Competing at both 142 and 158 pounds, Whitman got a 4-3 decision against Washington & Lee, picked up pins in wins over Loyola and Christopher-Newport and dropped a 9-7 decision to his Howard University foe.

After going 17-17 last season, Whitman now has a career record of 43-27. He is expected to be one of Longwood's top performers Friday and Saturday at the NCAA Division II Southern Regional Tournament at Liberty University in Lychburg.



Lewis, Conference Player Of Week

Senior co-captain Lonnie Lewis, who scored 45 points in two Longwood victories last week, has been named Mason-Dixon Conference Player of the Week for the period February 2-9. Player of the Week is chosen by the MDAC Publicity Office at Maryland Baltimore County.

Lewis, the league's leading scorer for much of the season, poured in 22 points in a 78-57 win over Randolph-Macon Wednesday and 23 points in an 80-69 victory over Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday. His output helped the Lancers raise their league-leading record to 6-1 and overall mark to 11-10.

Averaging 19 points per game, Lewis is one of the top free throw shooters in the nation. He has hit 63 of 72 at the charity stripe (87.5 per cent) and 52.6 from the floor.

Saturday night he moved into third place on Longwood's all-time scoring list. Lewis now has 1,336 points in four years, moving ahead of Ron Orr (1,335). Only Joe Remar (1,479) and Jerome Kersey (1,756) rank ahead of Lewis.

LONNIE LEWIS

A graduate of Henrico High School, Lewis has hit double digits in 20 of 21 games this season and 17 in a row. His play has been a key factor in Longwood's recent seven-game win streak. He is a business management major.

College Head Meet To Discuss Non-Involvement

By JESSICA SNYDER

More than 100 college presidents met in Washington last week to exhort students to become less "self-obsessed," and get involved in their communities.

The coalition of presidents suggested making "civic responsibility" a graduation requirement, and even replacing student aid programs with grants for community service work.

Some observers, including students, predict collegians are in fact too self-involved to respond even to the spectacle of administrators — who historically fret student activism might inhibit campus fund-raising and image-building efforts — encouraging political involvement.

Other educators worry a lack of funding and of "leverage" over students will wreck the presidents' hopes for more student activism.

"It's one thing to change graduation requirements (to force students to become involved)," says Leonard Gordon, an Arizona State scoiologist who studies trends in student attitudes. "Students will respond to that. But if they have to depend on voluntary response, they just don't have the leverage."

+Carry the message of civic responsibility to campuses.

+ Ask governments and schools to provide more service-related internships, possibly making community service a requirement for financial aid.

"Students need to hear, repeatedly and from many sources, 'you have a duty to pay your dues,' " explains Frank Newman, head of the Education Commission of the States and co-founder of the Coalition of College Presidents for Civic Responsibility.

"Students today, as compared to students in the 1960s, are more self focused and cynical. They see problems as big, complex and beyoond their ability to do anything about them," he says.

Newman authored a report last spring that criticized students for being "self-obsessed" and "materialistic."

The report, in turn, led Newman and some colleagues to form the coalition to find ways to divert students from their "materialism."

Newman would like to convince students it's in their own best interest to get involved, whetrher it be stumping for a favorite candidate, ladling soup at a local shelter or counting ballots in a school election.

Dr. Richard Rosser, president of DePauw University in Indiana, concurs.

"Community service probably ought to be a requirement on every campus in this country," he says.

To get them to accept it, Newman suggests replacing existing loan programs with grants for public-service work.

"Students who are piling up loans are less willing to view obligations to society," concedes Newman. "They say, 'you talked me into borrowing $15,000 (to pay for college). I've got to get out and make that big money.' "

But Robert Atwell, president of the American Council on Education, last week told the coalition such grant pograms would have little chance of funding, given the budget strictures of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act.

"Students are more enmired and enmesthed these days in their own problems of getting through college and working part time," ASU's Gordon adds. "If presidents want response, they'll have to address bread-and-butter issues such as housing for married students, child care and cooperative housing."

Study Abroad In France

Longwood College is pleased to announce the third year of its very successful study abroad program in southern France. This three week program (June 19 - July 10, 1986) will enable students to earn three credits in French 311.

Southern France's climate in the summer is dry, warm and sunny.

The program will be held at the University of Toulouse which dates from 1229 and houses a student body of approximately 10,000.

The foreign language department at Toulouse offers many programs that place major emphasis on the application of languages toward both the humanities and business.

Any two students who have completed two semesters of college French with a B average or three semesters with a C average are eligible to apply. There are several scholarships available that will partially cover the tuition expense. For more information please contact: Dr. Jill Kelly, Department of English, Philosophy and Foreign Languages, Longwood College, Farmville, Va. 23901.

Longwood Sculptor

Pieter de Groot is a sculptor whose work, unlike Michaelangelo's, won't endure for centuries. But that's not for lack of talent.

His carefully sculpted swans, condors and other figures are made of ice, rather than clay or stone. de Groot, a chef for ARA Services at Longwood College, makes what he calls "ice carvings" to enhance the buffet table at special dinners. The Dutch-born chef has made four ice carvings at Longwood — three swans and a condor — and has sculpted several hundred during his career of more than 40 years.

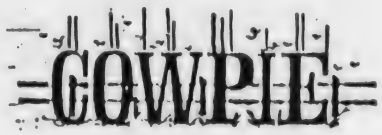
The Phillipines: Dangling By A Thread

By MATT PETERMAN

Ferdinand Marcos has been declared the winner in the Philippine election, but is declared the loser in almost every other respect. Hoping to be elected easily, to show the world how popular he was, he underestimated the popularity of a martyer's widow, Corazon Aquino. The calling of these early elections in which he was so confident to win, turned out to be his biggest political mistake.

His crumbling government controlled completely by him, through his cronies, has lost credibility. He can't hide the poverty that the average Philippine person lives in, or the economy that looms on disaster. The strength of the New People's Army (NPA) is increasing dramatically, and is threatening revolution, that could lead to a communist military dictatorship upon the death of Marcos or sooner.



The U.S. has tried to move Marcos toward reform by the threats of less aid of all kinds, but most attempts to persuade Marcos have been fruitless. The Philippine people are at a point to believe that any government is better than the Marcos government. This of course would be a communist government led by the NPA, which would be even worse.

The U.S. deeply concerned about the vital Air Force and Navy installations; Clark air base and Subic Bay. These bases provide a balance of power in South East Asia against the Soviet Union. Without these bases many pro American countries, would move closer to the Soviet Union, which is presently building a base in Vietnam. They are also necessary to keep valuable sea lanes open. The alternative for replacing the bases would cost billions of dollars and would not be as strategic.

By stealing this election, it shows that Marcos isn't as strong and popular as he claimed to be. If anything it gives the NPA, a reason to topple the Marcos government with support of the Philippine people. Because the military of Marcos primarily keeps him in power, it will take a show of arms to oust him, and with him the U.S. bases.

Ferdinand Marcos was so very blind in his pursuit of wealth and personal security, that he destroyed the Philippines in the process, with no easy solution in the future. With President Reagan not prepared to abandon the Philippines, like past Presidents have abandoned countries like Nicaragua, and Iran, the U.S. military has a strong possibility of intervening, and restoring peace and order to the Philippines. In doing so, the U.S. would reinstate the principles of democracy that the Philippine people so desperately yearn, while protecting vital U.S. interest in that part of the world.

Weber Continues Fantasy

To The Editor:

I was fascinated by your capitalized editorial plea of February 11 for a non-voting student member of the Board of Visitors. Your request was granted by the Board some five years ago and is in effect today. The President of the Student Government Association is a non-voting member of the Board. He or she is invited to Board functions, receives a pre-Board meeting briefing from President Greenwood, and sits with the Board in an official capacity during meetings. John Colangelo, as SGA president, is the current student representative to the Board of Visitors. Perhaps it is not the Board that is out of touch with students, as your editorial claimed, but some students who are out of touch with the Board!

Dr. Robert P. Webber
Faculty Representative to the Board of Visitors

EDITOR'S RESPONSE: Ah Dr. Webber, I haven't heard your whinings for a while. I've looked for your letter to the editor sent back in September; sadly, I believe it was filed cylindrically. Last time, your letter raged on a new, earn-while-you-learn staff of three putting together a paper which was littered with typographical errors by our ex-printer in Amelia. I wrote an editorical telling all that if you don't write, shutup, because you are the cause of the problem. Well you did. Shut up that is, for a satisfying five months.

Allow me to clarify last week's editorial statement: What I meant to say was, that I would like to see a REAL student representation on the Board of Visitors, a Participator, a board member. Colangelo, as S.G.A. President, is allowed to attend open meetings, as is anyone who wants to walk on in. There are frequently times when the Board gives everyone the boot, including you, asking all to leave while they do whatever Boards do.

Last year's S.G.A. President, Garth Wentzel, told me that Vice President for Student Affairs, Phyllis Mable advises the S.G.A. representative to not make waves, to be an observer. This administrative discouragement continues as policy today.

My call last week was for a student to be appointed as a non-voting MEMBER of the Board of Visitors, an improvement on the restrictive, misleading system now in place. Other schools are beginning to do this, so must Longwood.

After we get a TRUE student Board Member, maybe we can achieve the same for the faculty. Nothing could make me happier; The Board of Visitors would be oozing of communication, and you, Dr. Webber, would have some REAL power.

I trust that next year's editor will hear from you in about 5 months.

Desk Side Chats

By DEBORAH L. SHELKEY

Relaxed, and self-confident he sways back in the chair behind his small desk. Philippe Casenave, the visiting teaching assistant of Basic French is tucked in an office amid the Military Science Departments. Casenave took a year off from his own studies to teach at Longwood. This fresh political science graduate from the University of Toulduse admits he is happy at Farmville's small college.

Casenave, who is turning 21 in May, has been learning the English language for 10 years. Reading has been the greater force for his speaking and understanding ability, not conversation. Since January, he has had a single room in Curry dormitory and confessed that living alone has proved better for his schedule. Though the food in the dining hall was a major change of cuisine he is accustomed to, he claims that ARA meals are "not that bad."

When asked if he misses his home and family, he smiles. (I believe he expected the question). Occasionally Casenave "feels blue" but with teaching and learning he "doesn't have time to be homesick," but he does write home twice a month.

Casenave was surprised to realize some of his female students find him intriguing because he is French.

This teacher-student likes to come to campus mixers and D.T. Bradleys. When he is not playing Rugby or lifting weights, Casenave checks into Lancaster library. He finds books written in French and reserves movies. To Casenave's disappointment, the library is closed Friday nights.

A frown flickers on his face when Casenave shares feelings about Longwood's reputation. Casenave is concerned that some Longwood students have negative attitudes about the college. He tells me: "Quality students make a quality college. Students should criticize themselves first."

Referring to the different social standards, Casenave shakes his head to the American dating rules. He believes one should not date one person so seriously he closes himself off to others. This language teacher believes one should date in groups and have many close friends of the opposite sex. The "French are Dragmatic" he tells me, meaning they base decisions on experiences. He confesses the French are very rational and call this idea, the "French Square Spirit."

At the close of this chat we discussed his feelings of the abuse of drugs on Longwood. Casenave is alarmed by the amount of alcohol consumption and use of marijuana on campus. He claims students break drinking laws because there are drinking laws. American college students drink to escape, but French students drink wine with meals and when they "meet with friends."

Casenave plans to return to Toulduse in September and resume his studies. Bonne chance!

Basketball Special Olympics

The therapeutic recreation organization is hosting the basketball Special Olympics. Buckingham, Prince Edward, and Cumberland counties are particpating as well as the workshop and consortium.

Pre-game activities will begin this Saturday, February 22 in Lancer Gym from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. The pre-game involve screening the participants to determine their skill level.

The Special Olympics will be held Saturday, March 1st at Hampden-Sydney's gym due to the unavailbility of Lancer gym. The competition will be taking place from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. with a victory dance afterwards from 4:30 to 5:30.

Volunteers are needed. Anyone interested in helping may contact Michelle at 392-5405 (Rm. 367 of North Cunningham or by writing to the Therapeutic Recreation Organization, Box 1158 in care of Michelle).

These two Saturdays will be filled with enthusiasm and excitement so come on out and support the Special Olympians and your school.

New Courses For Credit

Additional courses carrying academic credit, which are directly from our course catalog, are being offered through Continuing Studies. These classes will require the same classroom participation as a regular semester class but will run in a compressed session. If you are interested in any of the following courses, contact the Office of Continuing Studies:

Marriage and the Family — M. Pippert
Disc. and Parliamentary Proc. — R. Woodburn
Psychology of Adjustment — P. Wacker
Stress Management — E. Smith
Classroom Behavior Management — D. Stein
Drug and Alcohol Abuse — D. Stein
Ornithology — S. Breil

Classes begin the first week in March.

"I've made a tiger, horse, swordfish, dolphin, basket of plenty, ship's bow, shrimp boat, lettuce, Christmas tree — you name it," he said. "Sure, it takes talent. Not every chef can do it."

de Groot's most recent effort was a condor he creatred for the Thomas Sully Benefit Dinner on Feb. 8. He started out with a 300-pound block of ice which, when finished, weighed about 150 to 200 pounds and stood 3½ to 4 feet high. "It usually takes an hour to an hour and a half to make, depending on the figurine," he said.

He made the condor on Feb. 7 and put it back in the freezer until three hours before the dinner, when it was placed on the buffet table. He usually works on the dock behind the dining hall, "to get rid of the excess water and ice."

After these special functions, the ice carving is returned to the back door to melt away. "After four or five hours, about 20 percent of the ice has melted down. So, your figure gets smaller and smaller."

de Groot, who has made smaller carvings with chocolate, butter and other substances, considers ice the easiest to work with. "But it has to be tempered first. When you take the ice out of the freezer, it's about 25 degrees below zero. You have to wait four to six hours, until it's about zero. Otherwise, with the slightest hit, the ice scatters just like brittle glass."

"When it's ready to work with, you just chip away the excess. You can use a chain saw, blow-torch, chisel, icepick, saw, whatever . . . Yeah, your fingers get cold but you get used to it. But your feet get cold because you're standing in ice. So you always wear some boots."

The best pace to make an ice carving is in an ice-house, because the atmosphere is more conducive. "The ice doesn't drip as much and you don't get as much water. But I have made them everywhere — on the street, in the back of a church, in a dance hall. People usually stop and watch you work. They look at your progress, ask questions, and say 'Hey, that looks nice. What is it?' "

"I made ice carvings on the side, for weddings and parties, when I worked at the Culinary Institute of Washington, D.C. The going rate is $100 to $125. I also made them when I worked for Sheraton (hotels) and American Airlines. At the Sheraton in Oklahoma City, I did one every week for the Sunday buffet for two years."

de Groot advises beginners to work from a sketch and make markings on the ice before carving. He used those steps when starting out but not anymore. He has given classes in ice carving at the Culinary Institute in Washington, where he taught part-time in 1984, and for ARA, an international food-service company.

He learned how to carve ice in 1949 when he was working in Indonesia for a chef who also was a Dutch native. "I was the sous chef (second in command) at one of the largest hotels in the Pacific. I had already done some chocolate sculptures and sugar forming — you take gelatin and powdered sugar, which is called 'pasta lache,' and cut it or mold it by hand, like clay . . . Eventually I became better than the chef at ice carving, mainly because of my previous experience as a pastry chef."

De Groot had gone to Indonesia, a former Dutch colony, after being drafted into the Dutch army in 1946. It was there that he met his wife, Hilda. They have two married daughters; one lives in Atlanta, the other in Oklahoma.

The chef also has made "ice sockles" — smaller versions of ice carvings — for special table service. "I've made basket and bowl shapes to serve butter, caviar, salmon and lox." Other sculptors have been carved from butter (using a 30-pound cake of butter) and from paraffin mixed with fat.

de Groot, 58, has worked at Longwood a little more than a year. A native of The Hague, Netherlands — where the International Court of Justice is located — he served in the Dutch underground during World War II, as a teenager. He was captured three times by the Nazi occupying forces — he escaped twice and once was turned over to the Dutch authorities, who released him. He immigrated to the United States in 1960.

Since 1976 he has worked in various positions for ARA, including the food-service operations at the University of South Carolina and Georgia Tech, and the Xerox management training center in Leesburg. While a chef at the Oklahoma City Sheraton, he served presidents John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon. He also has served the leaders of more than 20 nations, including the Soviet Union and China.

In addition to his duties as chef, de Groot trains chefs and cooks in ARA's Mid-Atlantic Region under a pilot program.

Student Union Board Exposed!

As the paint begins to dry on the walls of the Lankford Student Union, the Student Union Board (formally S-UN) is also preparing itself for a new coat of paint.

The Student Union Board is expanding. We have added new student leadership positons and are looking for interested, motivated people to fill those positions.

The Union Board offers you an opportunity to expand your experiences here at Longwood, as well as meet new people, make new friends and have some fun.

The Union Board programming organization means exactly what it says — Students putting on programs for the students, faculty and staff of Longwood College.

The Student Union Board is composed of seven committees which work independently and jointly to program events in the respective areas of interest. The committees are: Mainstage, Backdoor, Films, Lectures, Arts, Recreation and Lancer Cafe. Additionally, we have a Building Operations position that will work with the Director of the Student Union recommending building procedures and operations. Whatever you're interested in, the Student Union Board probably has it.

At Student Union Board we stress: Communication, Management, and Leadership. This does not mean that we are immune to having fun — we do a lot of work, but we also have fun doing it. In fact, one of the best things about being in S.U.B. is the people. Each member is unique and individual. In S.U.B you will be exposed to new people and new ideas — you'll have friends of varying degrees and types. The key to the key to the Student Union Board is involvement! So come to a meeting and find out how to get the most out of your Student Union Board.

Meetings are every Monday, 6:16 p.m, in the Conference Room, Lankford Student Union.

In an effort to reach out to you and meet your entertainment and leisure time needs we have put together a survey soliciting your ideas and input. These surveys will be distributed through some classes and will be available at various locations around campus. Results of the survey will be sent to those participating and will be available to all students.

Interested persons are welcome to attend our open meetings or may contact Gwen Walker, Chair Student Union Board, Box 1307, or Paul Striffolino, Director Student Union-Student Activities (392-9347).

polarizing their own campuses by subsidizing — with credit or grants — community work that may be too liberal for campus conservatives, or too conservative for campus liberals.

"Any president supporting activism had better be very careful that he doesn't offend one group by supporting another," Gordon cautions.

Some students also are skeptical.

"When I'm not at work, I'm usually doing my homework," says Lesley Taylor, a freshman at Michigan State. "I don't think volunteering is going to be the first thing on students' lists after work and classes."

Already "there're tons of organizations" for students to join, says Taylor, who works in MSU's Student Activities office. "But I don't think many people know about them."

Bi-weekly flyers advertising the volunteer groups and activities generally lie piled in the corner of the office, Taylor says.

"Yeah, that would be great," DePauw junior Vickie Wilson says of her president's plans for greater student involvement. "But it won't work because people here don't get involved."

President Rosser disagrees, noting group fund-raisers have involved as much as half DePauw's students.

When the campus chaplain last year visited every DePauw resident hall and greek house to encourage charity fund-raising work, "I'll admit they didn't jump at the idea," Rosser recalls.

"But we used their competitive spirit, saying 'the guys at Delta House are doing something; you've got to keep up.' We played on their sense of public image," Rosser says.

"Faculty and administrators can influence students only when they're ready to be influenced," he contends. "People got tired after the intense protests of the '60s.

"Increasingly, (administrators) will see responsiveness. But not because they're exhorting students, but because students are ready. They've caught their breath and are ready to become activists again."

Lady Lancers basketball player Caren Forbes has received Player of the Week honors from both the Mason-Dixon Conference and Longwood College, it was announced Sunday.

Forbes had a pair of outstanding performances last week as Longwood beat Liberty University in overtime 93-89 Tuesday and fell to Maryland Baltimore County 78-74 Saturday night.

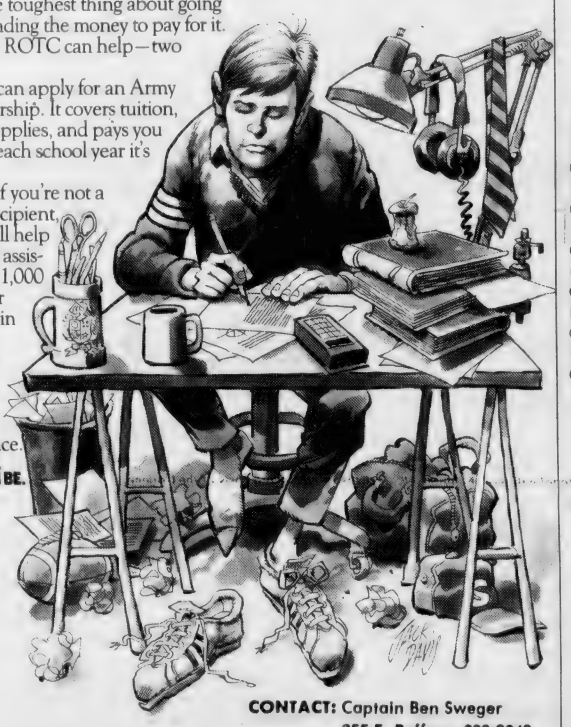
A 5-6 junior guard, Forbes scored 46 points for the week. She had 26 points, six assists and six steals against Liberty. In that game also she canned 10 of 11 free throws and scored six points in overtime. Against UMBC Saturday, Forbes added 20 points, six rebounds and three assists.

Longwood's all-time career assist leader with 349, Forbes has been a double figure scorer in each of her three seasons with the Lady Lancers. She averaged 11.8 points as a freshman, 14.2 as a junior and is currently scoring 13.2 points per contest.

Forbes ranks among the leaders in the Mason-Dixon Conference in scoring, assists (5.0 average) and free throw shooting (77.8 per cent). With over 900 career points, she is a sure bet to end her career with over 1,000 points and next season could challenge Sue Rama (1,471 points) for the Lady Lancers' career scoring leadership.

EVEN STRAIGHT A'S CAN'T HELP IF YOU FLUNK TUITION.

Today, the toughest thing about going to college is finding the money to pay for it.



But Army ROTC can help—two ways!

First, you can apply for an Army ROTC scholarship. It covers tuition, books, and supplies, and pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect.

But even if you're not a scholarship recipient, ROTC can still help with financial assistance—up to $1,000 a year for your last two years in the program.

For more information, contact your Professor of Military Science.

ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Lancer Sports

Lancers — 8 Of Last 9

Winning for the eighth time in its last nine games, Longwood beat Md. Baltimore County Saturday night 63-60 to clinch second place in the Mason-Dixon Conference and a first round bye in the league tournament February 27 through March 1 at UMBC.

Now 12-11 overall and 7-2 in the conference, the Lancers have three regular season contests remaining. After hosting NAIA power Atlantic Christian Monday, Longwood visits nationally-ranked Mount St. Mary's Saturday and hosts Armstrong State next Monday (Feb. 24). Should Longwood defeat The Mount, it would at least tie for first place in the conference regular season race.

Mason-Dixon Conference Standings

+Mt. St. Mary's	6-1	20-3
+LC	7-2	12-11
Liberty	5-4	17-11
Ran.-Macon	4-4	13-11
Pitts.-Johnstown	2-7	7-16
Md. Balt. Co.	1-7	3-20

Seniors' Last Home Game

The Armstrong State contest will mark the final home appearance of five Longwood seniors who have keyed this year's success. Co-captains and leading scorers Lonnie Lewis and Kenneth Fields and top reserves Frank Tennyson, Dave Edwards, and Lionell Ogburn will play their last game in Lancer Hall Monday night. Game time is 8:00, following the LC women's game with Catholic at 6:00.

Lewis (1,366 pts., 232 rbs.) is the third leading scorer in Longwood history and Fields (574 pts., 222 rbs.) one of the most exciting players ever to wear the Lancer Blue & White. Tennyson (295 pts., 149 assists) Ogburn (189 pts., 69 rbs.) and Edwards (245 pts., 206 rbs.) have been solid performers as reserves and part-time starters.

Tennyson and Lewis have played at Longwood four years, Edwards three and Ogburn and Fields two, after transferring in as juniors. The senior class, largest in Lancer basketball history, will be recognized prior to the Armstrong State-Longwood tip-off.

Lewis' Free Throws Sink UMBC

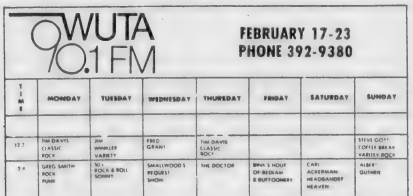
Lewis scored 19 points and hit a pair of free throws with 13 secons left Saturday night at UMBC to help the Lancers hold on for their 63-60 victory. Up 37-30 at the half, Longwood fell behind by a point, 53-52 with 5:52 remaining, before rallying behind Lewis, Quintin Kearney and Fields.

Eric Pittman hit the front end of a one-and-one to put Longwood up 61-58 with 50 seconds left before UMBC's Breck Robinson rammed home a dunk just 14 seconds after the end. Robinson had 22 points and 16 rebounds for UMBC.

After Lewis was fouled intentionally, he dropped in the free throws to put the game out of reach. The Retrievers got off a final three-point attempt, but it missed and Fields knocked the rebound outside to Lewis.

Longwood shot poorly from both the floor (42.8 per cent) and the line (60 per cent), but outrebounded the taller Retrievers 44-41. Kearney grabbed a career-high 14 rebounds, Fields nine and Kevin Ricks six to pace the Lancers on the boards.

Fields scored but eight points as his streak of 22 consecutive double figure games came to an end. In addition to 19 points from Lewis, Kearney had 14, Pittman 11 and Ricks 8.



Longwood had dropped an 85-84 double overtime decision at Liberty University last Monday. The defeat ended a seven-game Lancer win streak. The Flames battled back from an eight-point deficit in the final 1:09 to tie the game at 73-73 and won in the second overtime. Liberty scored 10 three-point goals in the contest.

Notes On The Lancers

— Lewis and Fields continue to dominate the Mason-Dixon Conference statistical races. Lewis leads in scoring (18.6) and free throw percentage (.875), while Fields ranks third in scoring (18.0), leads in field goal percentage (.569) and is tied with Kearney (7.4) for fifth in rebounding. Lewis has now reached double figures in 19 straight games.

— With at least four games still to play, Lewis is 113 points behind Joe Remar (1,479 points) among Longwood's all-time leading scorers. Lewis has an outside chance of catching Remar and moving into second place.

— Following the Armstrong State game next Monday, Longwood will play in the MDAC Conference Tournament semi-finals Friday, February 28 at Maryland Baltimore County. The Lancers will get a first round bye along with Mount St. Mary's. Winner of the MDAC Tournament will receive an automatic berth in the NCAA Division II Tournament.

Gymnasts

By JIM WINKLER

The Longwood gymnastics team hosted a tri-meet Saturday afternoon and finished second by a mere .05 point. Georgia College won the meet scoring 166.0, while Longwood finished just behind with 165.95. Trenton finished third with 164.05.

"Beating Trenton puts us in a better place for the NCAA Division II Regionals, as that is one of the schools who have a shot of going," said Longwood Coach Ruth Budd. "However we did not score as well as we could have, and little mistakes cost us first place."

Lisa Zuraw led the Lancers, now 4-6. The senior won the all-around competition (34.2), and the vaulting event (9.0), and tied for first on bars (8.4). It was the third time this season that Zuraw scored at least 9.0 in vaulting.

Freshman Lynda Chenoweth and Kim Booth also placed for the Lancers. Booth finished third on floor (8.55), while Chenoweth scored the second best Longwood total in all-around (33.4) to finish fourth. Senior Kelly Strayer placed second on beam (8.7) while competing for the second time since returning from injury.

The Lancers will compete in the Towson Invitational Saturday at 2:00, before returning to Lancer Hall on Saturday, March 1 when they host the Virginia State Meet at 2:00. Radford, William & Mary and James Madison will join Longwood in that meet. Longwood closes out their regualr season March 8 at Auburn.

Grapplers Finish Third

Longwood finished a distant third in the NCAA Division II Southern Regional Wrestling Tournament Saturday at Liberty University and the Lancers' top two individual grapplers were prevented from earning a trip to nationals because of an official's incompetence, according to Lancer coach Steve Nelson.

Liberty had 90¾ points, Pembroke State 90¼, Longwood 39 and Pfeiffer 26 in the team finish. Lancers Pete Whitman (142 pounds) and Billy Howard (158 pounds) suffered close losses in the finals.

Whitman, who ended the season with 29 wins, beat Marks of Pembroke 6-3 in the first round. In his final match against Pruett of Liberty, he lost a 3-2 decision when he was called for stalling in the last 20 seconds. Earlier, the official had failed to give Whitman credit for a pair of takedowns, according to coach Nelson.

Howard beat Manley of Liberty 9-5 in his first round match and was beating Cluchey of Pembroke 4-3 until he was called for stalling as the final buzzer went off. He ended regulation at 4-4 and lost in overtime 4-1. Howard ended the season with a record of 19-8-1.

"It was probably the low point of my coaching career to see two of my wrestlers have a trip to nationals taken away from them by an official's incompetence," said Nelson. "I was really proud of my guys. They kept their composure."

Nelson explained that the two officials who had been scheduled to work the tournament never showed up. In their place, two substitute officials called the matches. One was inexperienced and the other was the public address announcer for Liberty who is a certified high school official. The latter is the official who refereed Whitman's and Howard's match.

Nelson also protested a late weigh-in by Liberty's Pruett Friday night. The results of the protest, which is being made to the NCAA Division II Wrestling Committee, will not be known until later this week or early next week.

Sting's Peace Initiative

Ever since the 1960's, many folk and rock groups have at least minimally included social and political statements in their music. As the Vietnam conflict was resolved and civil rights legislation was enacted, much of the fire in young peoples' music died. This signified an end for many rock groups as well as political action groups. As the 1970's progressed people like the Bee Gees and disco music invaded the scene.

With a few exceptions, it wasn't until the late '70's that a re-emergence of socio-political messages in popular music again became popular.

Now, Pop Star Sting, in his infinite wisdom, has written a song about the superpower conflict. The song "Russians" is a sappy, idealistic, unrealistic, uniformed, historically flawed version of a moralistic attempt by Sting to prey upon the emotions of teenyboppers. However, a December 1985 Gallop poll indicated that a whopping 68 percent of the population want Sting directly involved in arms reduction talks. Thirty-five percent of those polled want Sting to run as vice president with 600 club guru and presidential hopeful Pat Bobertson.

When asked about his political background, Sting, once a part-time Longwood student, was quoted as saying, "I got a C- in Jimmy Helms' Local Government course which is damn good." In his first meeting with Russian leader Secretary Gorbachev, Sting said, "I just couldn't take my eyes off that crimson birthmark on his forehead which is shaped like the state of Maryland which is ironic because Maryland is close to the statue of Liberty."

Sting, who has an obvious knowledge of world affairs, has decided to sponsor a benefit concert in Vienna, Virginia. Both Reagan and Gorbachev will attend and together sing background vocals in the finale. The show will also feature Nancy Reagan singing the classic "I Don't Know How to Love Him." Monetary proceeds from the concert will go to Reagan's and Gorbachev's favorite charities. Gorbachev has pledged his portion of the loot to the Afghan Relief Fund. Reagan's share will go to the Senior Citizens of the Screen Actors' Guild. Both leaders acknowledge Sting as being a new driving force in detente.

Mikail Gorbachav was spotted recently in Paris with a worldly looking baseball cap. "Ve have no aspirations to rule de verld," Gorbachav announced sheepishly.

Goodwin To Student Teach On Space Shuttle

NASA has made the surprise announcement that a student-teacher will be the next visitor aboard the space shuttle. Sarah Goodwin, from Longwood, will be the student teacher. A spokesman for the Board of Visitors said, "Oh yes, of course Ms. Goodwin will pay comprehensive fees, after all the space shuttle's orbits include 16 passes over Longwood's 52 acre campus, this definitely constitutes a 'usage' situation."

An unnamed member of the board of visitors said, "It would be outrageous to charge Ms. Goodwin the full comprehensive fees so we have developed a special formula. Each orbit will bring Goodwin over the 'wood for about two seconds each, the fees will run her about 10 bucks per second, minus the 2 percent Longwood Astronaut discounts will have Ms. Goodwin paying $316.00, instead of the usual $365.00. The Visitor concluded, "fair is fair," and "Longwood, it's a nice place to visit."

NASA spokesdude, Bill Halley, was asked why Longwood was chosen as the school to sponsor this new program. "Well, the search started several years ago at Harvard and Yale and we've been working our way along, and after the Challenger explosion . . . we rounded her up at a Rush party. She's quite a girl." Ms. Goodwin speaks: "Risks are part of life, I figure. I'm no stranger to risks, I've been using the withdrawal method since I was a kid. Also, my mother was a pioneer of sorts, she was the first astronaut groupie depicted in "The Right Stuff."

To The Editor:

We hate the food in the dining hall. We hate the dining hall. There's too much trash on campus. There's not enough light on campus. We hate these things. We hate trying to park around here. Campus Police are too slow. They give too many tickets. They give us too many tickets. We hate the Campus Police. We hate the visitation policy. We hate visition. Who wants to visit anyone around here anyway. We hate the people around here. We hate the furniture in the high-rises. We hate the garbage in the high-rises. We hate the high rises. The R.A.'s Suck. All of 'em. It stinks that they don't pay tuition. Tuition bites. We hate sweat pants. People who wear 'em look fat. We hate fat people in sweat pants. It sucks when Hampden-Sydney has a better band than us. It sucks at Hampden-Sydney. Why does the Snack Bar open at 4:00 on Saturdays. Why does the snack bar close at 1 a.m.. Why does the snack bar close. We hate running to Par-Bil's at 11:58:42. We hate liquor laws. They suck. So do people that make them. We hate people who call it number 1 or number 2. We think that classes on the third floor smell. So do other classes. All classes. All professors. All books. We despise people who wear sunglasses at night. Where are they looking? We hate Corey Hart. We think MTV is a scam. So is the "damage deposit." So is Ric Weibl. The Housing Office is a joke. So is Ric Weibl. So is Ricardo Mantalban. What the hell does Tatoo do for Fantasy Island. Is it because of his height. Maybe so, Ricardo. We hate Blondes in black cars. Longwood girls in H-SC cars make us vomit. How did they pay for those things anyway. And how did they get their cars, too! It sucks when we get B's on easy tests. Tests should all die. Grades should die. Why the hell can't everything be pass-fail? Why the hell don't people take bribes anymore? Why the hell can't wine coolers come pre-opened? Why can't the students have a key to every building? We hate people who don't trust us. Why does lead in pencils get dull? We think the post office should stay open on Saturdays. Mail should be delivered continuously. It should never sit. Virginia State Troopers suck. Who the hell do they troop over, anyway? The "Grounds Crew" is worthless. They spend all morning driving on the grass and all afternoon reseeding. They never reseed. What the hell do they do all afternoon. We're getting pretty damn tired of all this writing, too. What do you think?

Cowpie,

We have learned through anonymous sources that on September 17, 1985, a member of your staff performed an illegal act of cruelty. On that day several Musca Domesticas were hunted, stunned with a swatting device, placed in a row and tortured with a burning cigarette, causing extreme pain and death. Due to recent Virginia State legislation, such acts of violence as performed against the common housefly are illegal.

We are on to you and you will soon be taking the big hit. We trust proper assistance will be given to our investigators as we determine who on the Cowpie staff was responsible for this uncool act.

D.u.n.g. Announces Challenge

By O.L. TRYGEN

The Dining hall Union of Non-Greeks has issued a challenge to the Student body of the 'wood; this project is aimed at keeping the Blackmeal Dining hall tables clean. I caught up with a DUNG committee member plainly known as "Gordo" at McDonalds.

CP: The Blackmeal Dining hall has been a mess for years; Gordo, can you tell me what your plan is?

Gordo: "First, let me say that this GWPIE thing is funny as shit. Youse guys are really goin' places in dis world, yep. Now, the Challenge. DUNG has formulated this plan where the students of the 'wood have one-week to get their act together and clean their crap off of the tables when they are done eating. After one week, if this is not done, the Blackmeal staff will no longer provide dishwashing service to the students' plates and forks and stuff. Picture this: You walk over to the line and go to get a plate, but they're all in a pile, dirty and stuck together like. Isn't that great? They're gonna have to pry the things apart and then get their food plopped on dirty plates. It's gonna be great! What do you think? gosh!

CP: Might just work. I understand that there is more to the plan.

GORDO: Yea, there is. We call the plan "Escalating — gross-out."

It was first put to work at Mecklinburg Prison. Each week, if the students continue to act like a bunch of slobs, the plan calls for increased disgust. During the second week, the food will be served raw. So you get to put cold food on dirty plates. The third week calls for a layoff of 50 percent of Blackmeal workers since the only real service provided is unloading the trucks and setting the food crates in the dining hall. Like you'll have to dip your cup into an open crate to get milk!"

CP: The 4th week?

Gordo: That's when we really get 'em. We start cooking again and serve the same old food! Whaddaya think? Whaddaya think?

Dropping A Line

Lines have been a very prominent part of man's life since the beginning of time. Even the cavemen stood in line for a piece of Saber-tooth Tiger meat. Here at Longwood, students experience lines in every aspect of their daily lives. Here is a list of lines that we encounter:

(1) The Dining Hall Line

If you get to the dining hall early, you are smushed up against the door, if you get there late, you are backed up to about the Lankford Building.

After you are in, you must present that wonderful thing that the administration has bestowed upon you, The Longwood Identification Card. After you are clicked in and the card is thrown back at you (you get good at catching that sucker after a while), you continue through the line. When you reach the silverware, you check it for any technical difficulties, such as missing prongs or handles. Then they have to run out of food right when you get there.

(2) The Bookstore Line

Ah, yes, at the beginning of each semester, we must encounter the bookstore line. Standing in lines for hours, forking out your life savings. You can do some of these things to keep you occupied:

— balance your checkbook and realize you are already overdrawn ninety dollars. Oh well, you didn't need that biology book anyway.

— file your nails

— bite your nails

— read all the dirty cards

(3) The Mixer Line

The mixer line is like herding cattle. In this line you are stamped, hole-punched, clicked and branded. If you aren't of age, you don't drink or you use someone else's ID, like your grandmother's. After you are finally in with your branded Mickey Mouse stamp, you get into the assembly line. The first stop is the beer — prepare yourself for a three hour wait. After you have your beer, the assembly line lets you off at the dance floor. You are asked to dance by a geek with body odor in your abnormal psych class. Then, back into the line. The next pitstop is the bathroom.

Now, be sure to smile at the nice policeman who is standing there. Sometimes, you wonder if they have ever snagged anyone. (they certainly can't snag a football). Then, wait in line for the bathroom for another three hours.

Oh well, next time you find yourself in this horrible predicament, there is only one thing to do — BUTT IN LINE !!!!!

It's Funny, And True!

Did you ever sit back in class and wonder where teachers learn the stuff that they know? I'm not talking about how to project to the class, the use of eye catching visual aids, or even their broad knowledge of many pertinent issues (and some that aren't so important — like that Sir Thomas Crapper's claim to fame is the first flush toilet). Of course, I'm talking about how some teachers have the ability to write notes on the chalkboard with one hand while simultaneously erasing those notes with the other hand.

If you haven't, think about it for a second. And while you're thinking about it, think about some of these:

— How can teachers lecture, reading from a book, and walk around the entire room — first, without tripping over a damn thing; and second, still know exactly what is going on in every aspect of the classroom (like who's falling asleep or just plain not paying attention — "Mr. Johnson — would you care to comment on that, please?") Regardless of that, how can they back up towards the board while reading out of a book, always stopping just inches from getting reamed by the corner of their desk? Always!

— One teacher once said that teaching was the only job he knew where the client actually wants you to work less. What about going to the dentist or being in court? Or going to the proctologist — hernia specialist — any doctor in general? or reading the Rotunda (well, screw them — they aren't paying us).

— What about the way they dress? Who designs their wardrobes — Barnum and Bailey? Just because you know which foot to put your socks on (as they have permanent toe imprints from being worn four days in a row) doesn't mean you can't change them. Just put a big "L" on the one where the toes (from left to right) read smallest to largest and an "R" on the other one.

— Getting back to erasing. Why do some teachers spend a good ten or twenty minutes erasing the board from the class period before and some teachers just breeze quickly over the board leaving lines than continue to drive you crazy for the rest of the class (hence, no notes taken that day!)

— Speaking of no notes (or no clue while we're at it), did you ever notice that if you ask a question that a teacher doesn't understand, they still have a way of answering it that is so totally unrelated that half the students shake their heads affirmatively so that they don't look dumb. ("Hey, did you understand what he just said?" "What?"). More often than not, the answer is so effective that the student never asks another question — ever!

— By the way, who makes up their office hours? It absolutely astounds me how they know when every one of their students have class so they can offer their services during those times. Why do they even bother making them up? To make us all neurotic? Well, I'm not going to college for nothing — I always look for another teacher who's in their office thinking that nobody is going to come by and ask them a totally unrelated question. Nine times out of ten, I usually get the answer I was looking for . . .

Kampus Kop Stake Out
Turns (Sweet And) Sour

By SONIA VOBITCH

In a stunning turn of events, the Campus Police allowed a vicious criminal to slip away from their "long arms" late last week. The story unfolds . . .

Cowpie investigative reporters have discovered that a full-force stake-out was set-up last Friday in order to catch a hardened criminal. A policeman, wishing to be unnamed said, "Things were going very well, we had everyone quiet and well hid behind some bushes, the 'shhhh-ing' was down to a minimum. Suddenly, two of the newer officers came up from behind, talking and carrying on. The idiots brought hamburgers and beer and stuff!"

Apparently the officers had become confused and believed that the "stake-out" was actually a "steak-out."

The Kampus Kops would not reveal at this time anything about the suspect they were trying to catch. However one high level official did say that the suspect in fact was, Stu Dent, number 1 on the Kampus Kops most wanted list. "This man is a master, nabbing this booger will really solve some problems, that slime ball," the unnamed official rampaged. Dent is the guy who parks along blue curbs, areas reserved for faculty only.

'Intellects' Vs. 'Strivers'

PALO ALTO, CA. (CPS) — Are women on campus more "intellectual" than men?

According to the survey, females classified as "intellectuals" outnumber males classed as intellectuals by a two-to-one margin.

"It's obviously not a representative sample. However, I don't think they (Stanford students) are different than students at other major research institutions," explains Herant Katchadourian, who conducted the study along with colleague John Boli.

Stanford students were asked to fill out a questionnaire on their course plans and their attitudes about what they are studying.

While "careerist" men tended to ignore liberal arts courses, "intellectual" women often took a substantial number of liberal arts courses, and maintained an interest in careers.

"I am not surprised by the Stanford findings," says Barbara Hetrick, dean of Academic Affairs at Hood College in Maryland.

"I would expect more women to have humanistic values and to be more likely to seek knowledge for knowledge's sake," she says.

Hetrick herself recently finished a study of how Hood's predominantly female student body changed its political and social views after going through four years of the school's liberal arts curriculum.

Hetrick found seniors were considerably less materialistic than they had been as freshmen, that they were more concerned about community welfare and developing a general philosophy of life.

The Stanford survey defined "strivers" as strongly motivated toward careers and intellectual pursuits. They tend to come from lower economic backgrounds than other students.

"Unconnected" students generally come either from very high or low social status families.

"Intellectuals" usually come from families of high socioeconomic status, and their fathers often hold advanced degrees.

"Careerists" are from a wide array of backgrounds, but often have parents who emphasize career success.

While Stanford students changed categories throughout the four-year period they were observed, radical changes were rare, Katchadourian explains.

While a "striver" might become an "intellectual", or a "careerist" could become a "striver," rarely would an "intellectual" become a "careerist" or vice versa.

Moreover, it was uncommon for "strivers" to become "unconnected," Katchadourian says.

Fireside Chat

By MELISSA CLARK

On Feb. 20, 1986 at 7:30 p.m., students and faculty, as the guests of Dr. Janet D. Greenwood, participated in a "Fireside Chat" at Longwood House. Dr. Maria C. Milan Silveira, Associate professor in the department of English, Philosophy and Foreign Languages, presented a program entitled "Cuba — Before and After the Communists." Dr. Silveira was introduced by her daughter, Jenny, who is a freshman at Longwood. Dr. Silveira graduated valedictorian of her class and at 17 she got a gold medal in the olympics for the 100 meter dash representing Cuba. She then went to the Normal School for Teachers and graduated with honors. While in school she attended the Conservatory of Music. In 1956, Dr. Silveira was awarded Teacher of the Year in her providence. In 1962, she decided she wanted freedom from the communists so she left Cuba and came to the U.S.

In 1964, she became a member of Longwood's faculty. During her summer vacations from Longwood she attended Stephen Austin University in Texas and in 1969 she received her masters from SAU. She returned to school at the University of Virginia in 1980. In 1984 she once again received Teacher of the Year award, this time from the state of Virginia. Next month, Dr. Silveira's new book entitled "Juan Carlos Onetti and His Context" will be coming off the press.

Although Dr. Silveira came to the U.S. from Cuba to seek freedom she still has the greatest love for her homeland. She explained during her lecture that Cuba used to have most of the same freedoms that we have in America. However, Cuba has changed drastically over the years and its future now remains uncertain. Dr. Silveira implied that it is important for people to have a knowledge of Cuba and its present situation.

Mock Disaster Keeps Everyone Ready, Willing And Able

About 3 weeks ago, the town of Farmville decided to stage a mock disaster. Since the best place to have the disaster, seemed to be the tallest building in Farmville, the college was contacted. Under the coordination of Donald Lemish, the Vice President for Institutional Advancement, and Phyllis Mable, the Vice President for Student Affairs, a plan was put into place.

This plan consisted of getting 15 people from the 9th floor and 15 from the 10th floor. They were to participate as the injured in the disaster, and be rescued by the various fire departments. Getting dressed up, as to give the effect of an authentic disaster, the stage was set, and soon the fire alarm in Curry went off.

The alarm went off at 2:30 p.m. this past Sunday afternoon. The building soon became empty as people rushed out of the building, except for those injured in the disaster. The air raid alarm was sounded, calling all fire departments to come as quickly as they could.

The first to arrive, was Farmville fire engine, with a cherry picker attached to its back. As it hooked up its hoses, many ambulances arrived, and started to take out their gear. More rescue squads arrived, as the area echoed, with radios and sirens.

Police lines were established, and only Police and Fire personnel were being allowed to enter. At this time many rescue personnel were now at every corner around Curry, hooking up fire hoses to various hydrants, in order to get water, to what could be a burning building, while others kept alert. With the water flowing, the Fire Departments could now put out any fire.

While this was going on, the cherry picker was now in operation. It reached over to the 2nd floor window and rested on the overhang. The firemen attempted to open the window, but it proved to be very difficult, seeming like it would never open. They then took a ladder in attempt to reach a 3rd story window, but it was too short. They then retrieved an ax and broke the 2nd story and cleared it free of glass. Supplies, such as oxygen tanks and tools, were then fed into the window.

More Fire Departments from different places and counties arrived and proceeded to hook up their fire hoses. At this time, about 40 minutes after the alarm, the mock injured began to come out of the building. After being carried down many flights of stairs, they were put into ambulances and taken to the hospital.

At this point the Farmville Fire Department, tested their cherry picker, towering it 8 floors parallel to the Curry residence hall. The mock disaster began to wind down after this. A mere 1½ hours of hard, but slow work came to an end with many results.

According to Dave Johnson, the R.A. on the 10th floor of Curry, "the whole point of this was to find the mistakes, so if it should happen, they would be prepared." He also added that, "it did accomplish its goals," and because of this it was a "success." As one bystander commented, "it seemed that the Fire Departments were slow and clumsy, and I'm relieved to know that in the case of a real disaster; it could now be taken care of more efficiently."

Letters

Cowpie Stepped On

Dear Mr. Editor:

Let me start by saying that I thought last week's issue of The Rotunda was one of the best I had ever read. The "Cowpie" section had some very clever things in it and most of the pieces were extremely funny.

I did, however, have a problem with the picture of the space shuttle. The attached caption was in very poor taste as I saw it. Seven people died on that thing and I don't think we should be making jokes about the tragedy. I'm sure I'm not the only person on this campus with this view.

I believe from now on we need to police ourselves a little more and really think about the consequences of certain things when they are put into print. The bit about Rock Hudson probably rubbed a few people the wrong way also. I, however, did not really have a problem with that because my views on homosexuals are basically the same as Garth Wentzel's.

Thanks for listening. I really felt the need to say something this week.

Stuart Hallett

To The Editor:

I don't know exactly who I can take my frustrations out on. So I guess that you will do. This letter concerns your cowpie articles concerning the Space Shuttle Challenger. I feel that whoever would write something so immature and stupid about such a tragedy is a complete +10xj!?n+! If all they have to do is sit around and make fun of people dying, then their butts have no business here! I feel that someone has a lot of growing up to do, and furthermore if this paper gets off on such stupid articles, then it is just as low as the person who wrote the article. If your mom, father, husband, wife, etc., dies tomorrow in an explosion as terrible as the Shuttle's explosion was, I hope that THEN you will write another article making fun of their death. (To whoever wrote the article)

Thoroughly disappointed and angry,
Natalie Puryear

P.S. I'm sure most people will agree that the article was tasteless and tacky.

Raio's Rudeness

To the Editor,

I found the treatment meted out to Dr. Webber's letter (dated February the 18th) extremely offensive and in very poor taste. The way in which the editor of this newspaper has reacted to readers' letters in the past has always left a lot to be desired. But this was definitely a case of going overboard in the haste for slandering and insulting a respected member of the faculty.

I just hope that Mr. Raio improves his style a bit and does not subject us poor readers to his particular brand of "quasi-witticism" too often. I, however, do understand that this tabloid is trying to emulate the National Enquirer and the New York Daily News. So asking for just "plain" news might be a bit too much.

Nadeem A. Kizilbash

To the students of Longwood:

Even though Cowpie is supposed to be a humorous "lampoon" section of the Rotunda, we do honor our statements. In saying so, we would like to recognize the one brave sole who actually read our scavenger hunt article and persued the matter to such an extent that one of the precious articles was located. This brave soul actually had the gaul to obtain (no. 23), "A tape of Ric Weibl saying, 'I don't care — you can do anything you want to do.' " Ric may pick up his prize at the Rotunda office. Please be assured that the tape has been destroyed.

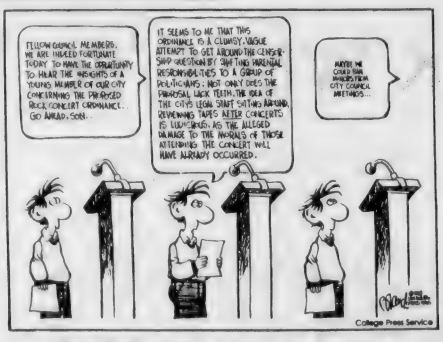
Judicial Board Comments

To the Editor,

Upon a recent sit in on a Longwood College Judicial Board Hearing, I have a few comments. Being an unbiased student — I feel for both sides. My quarrel is not with the participants or verdict, my questions concern the procedures. The Judicial, as well as Honor, Board is a prestigious and authoritative body, but their regulations seem absurd! The hearing is virtually a court case, comeplete with judge - chairman, jury - board members, tape recorder, defendant - accused, plaintiff, and witnesses - all of which (excluding the accused) were required to leave after and in between testimonies. The actual hearing procedures follow the standard court procedures - identification of people, verification of charges, questioning and testimony between the persons involved. What is missing, and my questions concern is:

(1) the lack of council allowed in the hearing — how is the accused who is nervous and upset to clearly think of all options without council to aid them?



(2) conditions of the courtroom — how can decisions be made in hot, small, cramped rooms which everyone is dying to get out of?

(3) questioning and testimony procedures — does the accused not have right to follow leads and explanations without being interrupted and told "that's irrelevant" — how does the judge-jury know a statement is irrelevent until the statement has been heard?

(4) VA state laws were involved in part of this particular hearing, yet the officer's actions were unlawful according to VA state law, but "lawful" under Longwood College student Handbook rights.

My quarrel is not with inadequate procedures each is required to follow! I'd hardly say the hearing I witnessed was fair, though I don't believe the blame rests on the Board. The blame rests on the ridiculous rules and procedures used during such events. I strongly urge Judicial Board supervisors to re-evaluate their procedures. Help the Judicial Board to adequately form their function with pride. And, help the students to a fair and "innocent until proven guilty" hearing!

Economics instructor, Gilbert Mundela informs students of underground economy — the abuse of cocaine. Mundela uses this concrete example that is "mining the economy" to help students grasp abstract issues. Citizens cannot ignore these issues; one must talk about the problems of society to solve them. This talk tact should not offend students, but help to break the "barrier between the students and teacher." One "must use realities to explain what is going on in the world."

Mundela believes students should have positive attitudes about learning. If a student claims he dislikes a subject, it is probably because he does not understand it. "Everyone should expand knowledge of a subject that he finds boring." Mundela admits he used to hate History until he researched the topics that concerned him. "The world changes everyday, one needs to be informed and address the main issues."

Residing in the states for about six years, this native from Africa has many ambitions for life after Longwood. Mundela plans to leave Longwood in May after teaching on campus for 2 years. Receiving his Masters degree in May in Economics, Mundela is changing his concentration to finance as he turns to working for his Ph.D. This economics professor believes he has established a "bridge" between his home country and the States, but he merrily says: "Home is where you are happy."

Laughingly, Mundela remembers working nightshift as a desk clerk at 7-11. He spends his free time jogging, swimming, and playing soccer. Sometimes Mundela grabs a chicken sandwich from Wendy's or a Personal Pan Pizza from Pizza Hut or perhaps he visits French restaurants in Richmond. He tells me, "Americans eat too many sweets."

Musie's role allows freedom for thought. Reggae "gives a transitional message" and "soukous" ("mellow music") soothes the intellect. "Rumba" is African and fills a gap of feelings for home. Jazz, Blues, and Country relax this teacher as he unwinds from the day. Mundela also unwinds by penning. After much searching in drawers, under books and scattered papers he uncovers a manila folder containing his poetry. "To Mother," and a line from another — "We made rainbows in the sand," caught a tear and a smile.

An analogy of Gilbert Mundela's, expressed his feelings of relations between other countries and its people. "A dog uses a tree a nudge an itch on his back, but humans turn to other humans to scratch and soothe the itch. People who work and appeal together build a better society." People need to show more interest in the other rather than the "small box." The television controls the mind, one should read and discuss with others.

Ambassador's Corner

By KIM SETZER

The Longwood Ambassador's Community Service Project this year was Channel 23's Great TV Auction. The Great TV Auction is the only live televised showcase of businesses in our viewing area. It lasts for nine days and is approximately 57 hours long. The Auction is necessary to raise funds for Channel 23 by promoting area businesses. The success of the Auction depends on the support of the business community for donations such as merchandise, services, and cash in return for unique television exposure. Many civic leaders, celebrities and other familiar faces will describe and display items on-air during Auction Week. The audience bids from their own homes.

The funds raised by the auction go toward the general operating fund. The operating funds are used to support station operations, station program activities, and to purchase programming such as "MacNeil-Lehrer" "Newshours," "Nature," "Sesame Street," "Wall Street Week," and many others. Farmville night will be June 4. Kirk Vetter is Special Projects Chairman for the Ambassadors.

The Ambassadors are into their fourth week of calling for Alumni donations. They have raised 95,781 dollars from 3,084 donors. The top callers were: Week No. 1: Melissa Clark; Week No. 2: Sarah Thayer; Week No. 3: Mable Hamlette.

Players Stage "Man Of LaMancha"

For centuries, readers have been intrigued with the Don Quixote story. When life "seems lunatic", can an individual, armed with idealism and the desire to create a better world, really make any impact on the degradation of the human condition? This powerful question is answered affirmatively in the current Longwood production of "Man of La Mancha" opening February 27 and running through March 1 at 8:00 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium.

For Thomas A. Williams, who portrays Don Quixote in the production, the character of Quixote has always carried a deeply personal message. The actor states that "playing Quixote was a turning point in my life — a reminder to look for the good and to accept others and myself as we truly are." The actor believes that "it is only when one starts accepting the good in themselves that he starts to change. Often it takes an outside force to be the catalyst for this change."

The play is set in a Spanish prison during the 1500's. For the prisoners, the catalyst for positive change enters when the author, Cervantes, is thrust among them to await his appearance before the Inquisition. Habitually, the prisoners rob a newcomer of all his possessions; but Cervantes defends his right to keep his manuscript of the as-yet-unpublished Don Quixote story by involving the prisoners in a dramatization of the life of his "mad knight." As the prisoners become more and more engaged in their first experience with acting and more inclined to judge themselves "not for what they are, but for what they might become," a tremendous increase in self-esteem occurs. By the time Cervantes is actually summoned to face his ordeal before the Inquisition, there is a more positive spirit among the murderers, thieves, and ruffians.

The cast of the Longwood production is as varied as the prisoners they portray, and the production features both the college and community actors. Williams, in the role of Quixote, is a member of the Longwood Music Department faculty and is known for his vocal performances with the Atlanta and Richmond symphonies as well as for his portrayal of Don Quixote in the Dogwood Dell production several years ago. Susan R. Mondschein, playing the role of Aldonza-Dulcinea, is known to area audiences for her portrayal of Anna in the Buckingham Touring Company's production of "The King and I", Yente in "Fiddler on the Roof", and Irene Malloy in the Waterworks' "Hello, Dolly". She is chairman of the English Department at Buckingham County High School and, currently, instructs the vocal classes for Project Mark in Buckingham County. Robert Henkel, Sancho Panza, is employed at Dinwiddie's Department of Social Services but has previously participated in Longwood's theatre offerings as Tulsa in "gypsy". Musical theatre is his love, and he has appeared in "The Pirates of Penzance" and "Amahl and the Night Visitors". In the dual role of Sampson Carrasco and the Duke is Scott Koenigsberg, a Longwood freshman who was last seen as Buddy Layman in "The Diviners". A versatile young actor, Scott is equally at home with Shakespeare and musical theatre and was active in high school theatre in Fairfax. Sandra Clayton will portray the role of Quixote's niece, Antonia, and brings to the role a wide variety of experience in high school and the Children's Theatre of Richmond. One of the mainstays of the Longwood Theatre Department, Laura Coombs (Mrs. Peachum in "The Three Penny Opera", stage manager for "The Diviners") will portray the Housekeeper. Current president of the Longwood Players, Toby Emert, is familiar to area audiences from his portrayal of Charles in "Blithe Spirit", Barnaby in the Gary Wenzel (Jose), and Brian Wenzel (Lorenzo). Laura Boyett and Kim Talley create the dance roles of the Mule and the Horse. The squires to the Knight of Mirrors are Jeff Fleming, John Simpson, Toby Emert, and Ashby Conway. Captain of the Inquisition is Glenn Gilmer.

Get Your Gun" and Slade in "Ten Nights in a Barroom." Ken Vaiden, senior music major, will create the role of the Padre.

"Man of La Mancha" contains many difficult supporting roles. Appearing as the muleteers are Rob Robertson (Pedro), Jay Freeman (Anselmo), Fred Banks (Tenorio), Adharsh McCabe (Paco), Michael Hart (Juan), Waterworks' "Helly, Dolly", and the street singer in "Three Penny Opera". In the current production of "Man of La Mancha" he will play the barber. Ralph Haga will play the Innkeeper-Governor. Ralph is a familiar face on the local scene from roles in Waterworks Productions — Emile in "South Pacific", Buffalo Bill in "Annie

Picasso's Don Quixote

The production is guest-directed by Diahn Simonini who is also guest-director of the Long Way Home Outdoor Drama and artistic director of the Buckingham Touring Company. Bruce Montgomery, chairman of the Longwood Department of Music, is musical director and conductor of the orchestra. Nancy Sherman is accompaniest, and A. Moffat Evans is the scenic designer.

Tickets for "Man of La Mancha" are available at the door on February 27, 28 and March 1. There will be a special student matinee from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday, February 26. For information call 392-9361.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (CPS) — A blind theology student can use state money for tuition without violating the U. S. Constitution, the U. S. Supreme Court has ruled.

Secretary of Education William Bennett claims the decision furthers his plans to allow parents to use public money to send children to religious or other private schools.

Civil rights watchdogs, on the other hand, say the court worded its decision in a way that will leave intact the effective separation of church and state.

The question was whether the Washington Department of Services for the Blind could aid Larry Witters, who wanted to use assistance money to attend a theology school.

Washington's vocational program for the blind awards money directly to students, who are free to choose their courses. Since the state didn't require Witters to use the money for religious instruction, his choice wasn't "a state endorsement of religion," the court ruled.

In praising the decision, Bennett said the ruling supported his proposal to create education vouchers, which students can use to attend any school.

Now, the government awards money directly to schools, which use it to education whomever shows up for classes. Under the voucher system — which critics say would get the government into the business of supporting church schools — students who didn't want to go to public schools could "pay" for private instruction by using "vouchers."

Though the court decided state aid to Witters wasn't a "direct subsidy" to a religious school, it sent the case back to the Washington Supreme Court to decide if it is "an excessive government entanglement with religion."

The American Civil Liberties Union, though unhappy about the decision, downplayed its repercussions.

"Though we'd like to see that federal funds aren't used for religious education, period, this ruling will have only limited effects," says ACLU spokesman Charles Sims.

"The decision was meant to apply to a higher education situation in which funds were intended to reach broadly and weren't specified for religious education. So the court only created a small situation in which government money can be used (for religious purposes).

Other colleges have been busy grappling with religious issues in recent weeks, too.

Texas state schools now are awaiting a state attorney general's ruling whether it can offer students bible courses taught by teachers who are paid by private church groups, not by the universities.

And last week, the University of Southern California decided to delete an allusion to Jesus Christ from its diplomas.

The words "Our Lord" will be edited from the phrase "The Year of Our Lord" on all diplomas, primarily to satisfy the sensitivities of Jewish and other students who don't accept Christian theology.

But convocation Chairman Dr. Gerald Fleischer says the deletion hasn't calmed the controversy completely.

"They say the date is still a Christian date. You can't escape the implication of A.D., or Anno Domini (meaning 'year of our lord' in Latin)."

Douglas Lytle, editor of the USC Daily Trojan, adds "some people suggested substituting 'the' for 'our,' so the diploma reads 'year of the lord.' That way people can think of whatever lord they want to."

Gymnasts To Host Meet

By JIM WINKLER

The Longwood gymnastics team will compete in its final home meet of the season Saturday afternoon when it hosts the Virginia State Meet at Lancer Hall at 2:00. Radford, James Madison and William & Mary will join Longwood in the tourney. Radford won last year's event, scoring 170.25.

The Lancers raised their record to 8-8 Saturday afternoon when they finished in second place in the Towson Invitational. William & Mary and Towson tied for first in the meet with 173.70. Longwood took home the second place plaque with 164.9 and was followed by Bridgeport, 161.45, UMBC 159.5, George Washington, 158.85 and Hofstra, 152.90.

Lisa Zuraw was the only Lancer to place in any event. The senior tied for second in vaulting (9.0). It was the fourth time this year Zuraw scored at least 9.0 in that event. Zuraw had Longwood's top bars score as well (8.7) and finished with the second best Lancer all-around score (32.0). Freshman Lynda Chenoweth had the top Longwood all-around score (32.45) and finished tenth overall.

"The meet put us in a good position to make the NCAA Division II Regionals," said Longwood Head Coach Ruth Budd. "Our average team score is up to about 165, so we're in good shape." Budd also noted she was particularly pleased with her team's performance on floor. "We scored well on floor, and I think it was the highest we've scored as a team on that event all year," said the Longwood coach. Budd added that Longwood really had troubles on bars in the meet, and that's what hurt them.

The Virginia State Meet Saturday at Lancer Hall will give Longwood a chance to seek revenge on a couple of state rivals. Longwood defeated James Madison earlier this year, but lost to Radford and William & Mary. After the State Meet, the Lancers close their regular season at Auburn March 8.

Mason-Dixon Tournament To Begin

Longwood's women's basketball team, 1-7, 7-16, will play in the opening round of the first-ever Mason-Dixon Women's Tournament on the University of Pittsburgh-Johnstown campus at 7:30 Thursday night against Liberty University. Longwood concluded its regular season Monday night against Catholic University.

All of Longwood's games in the Mason-Dixon Tournament will be broadcast on WFLO-FM radio (95.7) with aire time 10 minutes before the scheduled tip-off.

The Lady Lancers, who split with the Liberty during the season, won a coin flip Sunday and are seeded fourth after tying the Lady Flames for fifth place in the regular season standings. Winner of Thursday's contest will play conference champ Mount St. Mary's (8-0, 21-1) Friday night at 6:30. Pitt-Johnstown (6-2, 18-7) will play Maryland Baltimore County (4-4, 20-8) in the other semi-final.

The championship game will be played Saturday night at 7:30. Mount St. Mary's has an NCAA bid just about sewed up whether or not it wins the tournament.

In its most recent action Longwood came up with one of its best efforts of the season, falling to UPJ 87-85 in Lancer Hall Friday night. Paced by Melanie Lee's 28 points and 9 rebounds, the Lady Lancers had possession of the ball with three seconds left and a chance to send the game into overtime.

An in-bounds pass which was a little too high forced Annette Easterling to waste two seconds retrieving the ball. The sophomore guard was able to get off a hurried shot, but it was off the mark as the buzzer sounded.

Easterling scored 12 points and handed off seven assists in perhaps her top performance of the season. The 5-4 cager has played well since moving into the starting lineup February 15.

Lee canned 14 of 17 shots from the floor to score her game-high 28 points. She did not attempt a free throw. Caren Forbes added 14 points and 9 assists, Sandy Rawdon 10 points, Beth Ralph 13 points, and Karen Boska 8 points and 8 rebounds.

In a game that was close throughout, Pitt-Johnstown managed a 45-44 lead at the half. Longwood hit 38 of 76 shots from the floor (50 per cent), but made 9 of 15 free throws compared to UPJ's 21 of 28.

"We did a real good job Friday night, especially on defense," said Lady Lancer coach Shirley Duncan. We were much more patient offensively and were able to get the ball inside. We've been working on this and that work is beginning to pay dividends.

"Our game with Liberty in the tournament will be a toss-up. We'll have to play real good defense, go to the boards and be patient on offense if we expect to win. In tournament play over the past two seasons we have had a habit of losing in the first round and coming back in the consolation bracket. We're concentrating on winning our first game in the Mason-Dixon Tournament."

Lee Forbes Honored

Longwood scoring and rebounding leader Melanie Lee was named to the All-Mason-Dixon Conference women's baseball first team and Lady Lancer guard Caren Forbes was picked on the All-MDAC second team in voting by the conference coaches which was announced Sunday afternoon by the MDAC Publicity Office.

Lee, a 5-11 junior center, averages 14.8 points and 8.8 rebounds while shooting 54 percent from the floor. She is the third leading scorer and field goal shooter, and fourth best rebounder in the Mason-Dixon Conference.

Forbes, a junior guard, is scoring 13.3 points per game and dishing off 5 assists per contest. She became the seventh player in Longwood history to score 1,000 career points last week, and ranks among the conference leaders in scoring, assists and free throw shooting.

Mount St. Mary's ranked 5th in Division II and 8-0 in the league's regular season, garnered top honors in the conference. Mount coach Bill Sheahan was picked as "Coach of the Year" while Mount guard Shaun Jackson shared the "Player of the Year" honor with Maryland Baltimore County center Tammy McCarthy.

Also named to the first team were Pittsburgh-Johnstown's Karen Sayers and The Mount's Sandy Storey. Second team members included Jill Halapin of UPJ, Harriet Blair and Sharon Freet of Liberty University and Lisa Green of Mount St. Mary's.

Intramural Update

Past event winners:

Women's "B-League" basketball finished up last week with the "B-League Bombers" coming in first. The "Ghettoetts" took second.

Current events:

Women's Basketball will be finishing up this week with the "Sharpshooters" and "Pem" in the finals. "Pem" is the only team still undefeated. There are six guys remaining in the Ping Pong Tournament which will be winding down in a week or so. Coed Innertube Water Polo is still going strong with eight teams still splashing along.

The Coed Volleyball Tournament will be starting this week with 11 teams participating. Eight teams will be participating in the weekend basketball tournament on Feb. 22-23.

Longwood 'Outdepthed'

Mount St. Mary's used its superior depth and height to wipe out a 35-29 halftime deficit and beat Longwood 83-65 Saturday night in Emmitsburg, Maryland. The Mount, with a 51-20 edge in rebounds and 27 offensive caroms, scored on eight straight possessions near the start of the second half to take a 43-39 edge.

The rally really took off when Longwood center Quintin Kearney went to the bench with his fourth foul. The 6-6 junior scored eight points on 8-10 free throw shooting before fouling out. He played a total of 21 minutes and 30 seconds and failed to score in the second half.

Senior co-captian Kenneth Fields scored 18 of his 22 points in the second half to keep Longwood within striking distance until the last few minutes when The Mount's depth really showed. Fields added 6 rebounds, 4 assists, 3 blocked shots and 2 steals.

Guard Kevin Ricks had another fine all-around game with seven points (all on free throws), 4 assists, 2 blocked shots and 3 steals.

Mount St. Mary's, now 23-3 overall, got 23 points, 9 rebounds, 8 assists and 3 steals from MDAC Player of the Year Paul Edwards who topped the 1,000 point mark for his career. Mike Grimes, a 6-10 sophomore, had 14 rebounds and 8 points and George Young added 12 points.

The Mount's whopping rebound edge provided 81 shot attempts compared to 39 for Longwood. While MSM had 36 field goals to LC's 18, the Lancers canned 27 of 37 free throws compared to the home team's 10-17.

"They (The Mount) really wore us down in the second half when their size and depth came into play," said the coach. "We played well despite the loss. I doubt if anyone this season has held them under 30 points and been up by six at the half. I think we can put this game behind us and concentrate on the tournament."

MDAC Tourny

This is the first year that the MDAC Tournament winner will receive on automatic berth in the playoffs. It gives the tournament, in its third year, a new look.

"Having the bid to shoot for makes a lot of difference from a coaching and an incentive standpoint," said Lancer Coach Cal Luther. "Our kids are well aware of the possibility of receiving a bid. The fact that we split with Mount St. Mary's during the regular season gives us some confidence. Now we have a chance to play them again on a neutral floor if we both get past Friday night.

"I'm definitely concerned about us looking past the semi-finals. We are a team that has to work hard all the time to be successful. I know we'll have our hands whether we play Liberty or Pitt-Johnstown."

Fields, Lewis Honored As Tourney Begins

Longwood senior co-captians Lonnie Lewis and Kenneth Fields have been voted to the All-Mason-Dixon Conference men's basketball first team by the league coaches, it was announced Sunday afternoon by the MDAC Publicity Office.

Lewis (18.4 pts.) and Fields (18.2 pts., 7.1 rbs.) rank two-three in the league scoring race and have reached double figures in 24 of Longwood's 25 games. The senior duo were the ringleaders of a Lancer team which rebounded from a 4-10 start to win nine of its last 11 games and notch second place in the league standings.

In addition to his scoring, Lewis led the conference and ranks among the national leaders in free throw shooting (.881). Fields was the conference king in field goal percentage (.571) and rated seventh in rebounding.

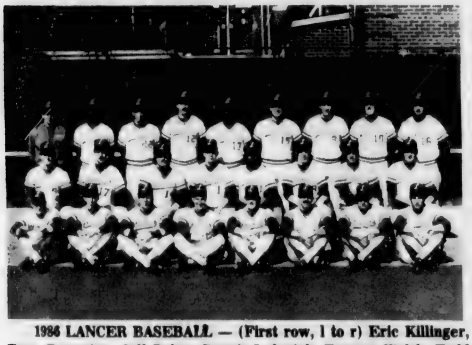
Fifth-ranked Mount St. Mary's, the MDAC regular season champ, won the major honors as Mount Coach Jim Phelan was named "Coach of the Year" and senior standout Paul Edmonds was picked as "Player of the Year."

Rounding out the all-conference squad were Mike Minett of Liberty and Bill Lindsay of Pittsburgh-Johnstown on the first team, and James Griffin and Danny Johnson of Randolph-Macon, Dan Kennard of Liberty and George Young of The Mount on the second team.

With the regular season ending, Longwood's men's basketball team can turn its attention to a specific goal: to win the Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament and receive an automatic bid to the NCAA Division II Playoffs. A home date with Armstrong State completed the regular season Monday night.

The Lancers, who have won nine of their last 11 games after a 4-10 start, will play the winner of a Thursday night game between Pitt-Johnstown and Liberty in the MDAC Tournament semi-finals at 6:30 Friday night at Maryland Baltimore County.

Should Longwood win its Friday night contest and the championship tilt Saturday night at 7:30, coach Cal Luther's squad would be in the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1980. The Lancers ended up 28-3 and fourth in the Division III Tournament in the 1979-80 season.



Longwood, 13-12, missed a chance to tie for the league's regular season crown Saturday night when 5th ranked Mount St. Mary's took on 83-65 win on its home court. Nevertheless, the Lancers will receive a first round bye in the tournament thanks to a secjond place league finish at 7-3 behind The Mount's 9-1.

Longwood, the only league team to defeat Mount St. Mary's during the season (74-69 in overtime), will have to get by a tough game Friday night to have another possible shot at The Mount, which will almost surely get on NCAA bid regardless of the outcome of the tournament.

Standings

	Conf.	Overall
Mount St. Mary's	9-1	23- 3
Longwood	7-3	13-12
Liberty	6-4	18-12
Randolph-Macon	4-6	13-14

Baseball Cranks Up

The Longwood baseball team, which opens play Wednesday at St. Andrews, should be a contender for the NCAA Division II Playoffs for the fifth straight year. The Lancers, 119-42-1 over the past four campaigns, ended up 34-12 in 1985.

Longwood opens its 52-game schedule with a five-day, nine-game road trip, Wednesday through Sunday of next week. Following the stop at St. Andrews, the Lancers play doubleheaders at Francis Marion Thursday, at Morris Friday, at Benedict Saturday and at Allen Sunday.

Prospects are bright for the Lancers in 1985. With eight starters returning from a team that batted .339 and averaged 9.6 runs per game, Longwood will be potent at the plate once again.

Key losses from last season, however, will be hard to replace. First baseman Allen Lawter was Virginia College Division Player of the Year in his senior season. Pitcher Scott Mills, now academically ineligible, had a 7-4 mound record in 1985. Mills is a student assistant coach on this year's team.

"We should have another good year," says coach Buddy Bolding, "but our schedule is much tougher than last year. We play several strong Division I teams."

Included on the 1986 slate are Division I's Duke, Wake Forest, Virginia Tech, William & Mary and Liberty University, among others. The Lancers will face Division II programs such as Slippery Rock, Shippensburg, Norfolk State and St. Augustine's.

"The pitching of veterans Todd Ashby, Rob Furth, and Tony Browning will likely be the key to our season," says Bolding. "We'll be counting on them as our top-line starting pitchers."

Ashby (6-2, 7.24 ERA), Browning (7-2, 4.81) and Furth (6-2, 2.31) head a group of five returning pitchers. Sophomore left-hander Tony Beverley 3-1, 2.56, and junior Sam Hart 1-1, 4.24, are the other veterans.

Returning starters include: shortsop Kelvin Davis .378 B.A., 31 RBI, centerfielder Dennis Leftwich .373, 57 stolen bases, catcher Jeff Rohm .370, 17 doubles, third baseman Marty Ford .368, 67 runs, first baseman-designated hitter Jeff Mayone .341, 47 RBI, 10 homers, rightfielder Mike Haskins .283, leftfielder Tommy Walsh .282, and second baseman Todd Thompson .232.

Also back are junior Tom Klatt .314, 27 RBI, who played catcher and designated hitter, leftfielder John White .306, rightfielder Bill Conroy .271 and second baseman Mark Walsh .265.

Rugby Looking For Men

The Longwood Rugby Club is back for their spring season. After coming away from a 6-3 record last semester the Club looks forward to a very good spring season.

Combined with fourteen returning starters including Joe Piscotta and Phillip Casanave two all-state Rugby players; from the A side and some potentially strong new prospects Longwood looks forward to another successful spring season. Captain Dave Grant was quoted saying "This spring semester provides Longwood with a very challenging opportunity to show the college and the state the caliber of Rugby that we are capable of playing.

The team encourages any men still interested in playing to come out. We also want to invite the entire student body, faculty and administration to come support the club. This season extends from Feb. 22 to April 26. Home games are played on Saturdays at 1:00 at the Presidents field.

Feb.
22	William & Mary	A
Mar.
1	VA. Beach City	A
22	Washington & Lee	H
29	Univ. of Richmond	H
April
5	Lynchburg	A

Fields Player Of Week

Senior men's basketball co-captain Kenneth Fields has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the third time this season after scoring 40 points and playing solid all-around basketball in two games last week. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Fields had 18 points and six assists in Longwood's 88-80 win over Atlantic Christian last Monday and came back with 22 points, 6 rebounds, 4 assists, 3 blocked shots and 2 steals in the Lancers' 83-65 loss at Mount St. Mary's Saturday night.

The 6-2 forward, who was named first team All-Mason-Dixon Conference Sunday, scored 18 of his 22 points in the second half of Saturday night's contest, hitting 8 of 15 shots from the floor and 6 of 8 free throws.

Longwood's second leading scorer and rebounder, Fields is averaging 18.2 points and 7.1 rebounds per game. He leads the Mason-Dixon Conference in field goal percentage at .571.

Antropology Gets Boost

by MELISSA CLARK

The newest addition to the Sociology and Anthropology department came in December when Dr. Karen Armstrong joined the Longwood faculty. She is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh.

Prior to getting her degree, in 1970 she began to focus on European studies because of her interest in Scotland. She also had an interest in archaeology and in 1972 she directed an archaeological dig at Hanna's Town. Here she uncovered evidence that revealed it had been a colonial site raided and burned by Indians in the eighteenth century. In the summer of '72 she went to Ireland to a field training village and collected information on folklore in that area. In 1973 she visited a highland village in Tarbert, Scotland, for a year of study on the subjects she had chosen for her doctorate; Women's Political Activities and Women in the Tourist Industry.

In 1974 she began teaching at the State University of New York (SUNY), a four year college for the arts with 23 campuses. There she taught anthropology and coordinated the women's studies program from 1974-1981. While teaching at SUNY she completed her doctorate in 1975, and returned to Scotland in '76, '77 and again in '81 for follow-up study. At SUNY she says that there was "a great emphasis on students completing special research projects outside campus." Some of her students did special research on the

The Miss Longwood Pageant is coming to town on March 22 and this year's contest proves to be the best ever — sporting a very notable panel of judges, some exciting entertainment and a $300 increase in prize money over last year's show.

The Pageant is a Miss America preliminary. Ten contestants will compete for $3,100 in scholarships, the Miss Longwood title and the opportunity to compete in the Miss Virginia Pageant in July.

Perhaps the best place to begin, then, would, be to introduce this years judges:

Victoria Longley, of Roanoke, Va. and Syracuse, N.Y., is a nationally known fashion designer who coached Vanessa Williams in all phases of her successful competition for the Miss America title in 1984.

Ms. Longely specializes in pageant gowns and contestant refinement. She has been featured on "PM Magazine" and in the Washington Post, Rolling Stone, and Star Magazine. Her creations have appeared on the covers of People and Ebony magazines; in Life, Newsweek and Vogue; and on the Johnny Carson Show.

For the past five years she was executive director of the Miss Greater Syracuse Pageant and had two Miss New Yorks and one Miss America. Ms. Longley herself won several Miss America preliminaries, including Miss Richmond 1977, Miss Greater Syracuse 1973 and 1979, and Miss Providence, Rhode Island 1976.

Alfred C. Matacia of Keswick, former president of the Dogwood Festival and former dean of the Realtor's Institute of Virginia, who has judged more than 150 Miss America preliminaries.-

Matacia, president of Matacia Real Estate of Charlottesville, is a director of the Virginia Association of Realtors. He is on the Board of Directors of the Dogwood Festival and is a life member of the Charlottesville Albemarle Jaycees.

Longwood's Dr. Fawcett: Top Of His Field

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

Many members of Longwood's faculty have interests in their fields beyond our classrooms and campus, which carry them to far corners of the world in their "spare time." One such individual is Dr. L.R. Fawcett Jr., the college's Director of Physics and Pre-Engineering programs.

Dr. Fawcett was working at Argonne National Laboratory in Chicago in the late 1970's making neutron capture cross-section measurements on Uranium 238 (that is, a measurement of the probability that a neutron will collide with and stick to a Uranium 238 nucleus).

After presenting the results of the Argonne Laboratory experiments at an international conference, Dr. Fawcett was invited to reanalyze the results of a fusion-fuel production experiment at Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico. The experiment had been performed and theoretically analyzed in the mid-late 1970's: the actual results did not correspond well with the theoretical expectations due to physical occurrences not accounted for in analysis. Dr. Fawcett's job was to reanalyze the results, taking these unaccounted for reactions into consideration.

Although presently still working on this project, he has also become involved in a number of other activities at Los Alamos, some of which have been completed and had their results published, some others which are still in the process of being performed. Dr. Fawcett's main interest at Los Alamos now is an experiment he himself suggested in 1982: measurement of the neutron-neutron cross-section, which is a measurement of the probability that a neutron will collide with another neutron.

The experiment requires a series of underground nuclear explosions, the first of which took place in April 1985. This explosion was used as an indicator as to the best method of going about the actual experiment. The next phase is scheduled for this coming April. This is a feasibility step, looking for the chances of all the requirements for the full experiment being met, namely simultaneous ignition to within a billionth of a second of two neutron sources, and at least the required number of neutrons present from these sources. If the anticipated results occur in this explosion, the experiment will continue; if not, it will be dropped from the laboratory's roster: nuclear explosions cost millions of dollars, and therefore, each nuclear test has as many experiments as possible attached to it.

Some experts have said in the past that these particular results cannot be obtained, and that it would certainly be the most difficult neutron experiment devised by the mind of man, but ". . . we're not convinced of that and will try," remarked Dr. Fawcett.

Although the experiment is still only being technically constructed, its ultimate goal, the neutron cross-section, could lead to knowledge of whether or not there is a relation between electromagnetic forces and nuclear forces. Physicists used to believe these forces to be independent of each other, but since the mid-1960's, think there may be a 3 or 4 percent dependence.

"Some theories of the universe suggest that the forces of nature are related, and imply that one force formed the universe, but 'split' soon thereafter, becoming the four basic forces we know today.

The four cosmic forces are the nuclear force, electromagnetism, the weak force and gravity.

The nuclear force — also called the strong force — binds electrically neutral neutrons and positively charged protons together in the atomic nucleus . . . (This experiment hopes) to learn whether the presence of electric charge affects the nuclear force." (quoted fromThe Farmville Herald, 12-28-84)

In preparation for the April 1986 explosion, the neutron-neutron scattering experiment has been placed deep inside a tunnel that has been dug into a mesa near Yucca Flats, Nevada, at the Nuclear Energy Testing Site. Two thin tubes merge at a small angle at one end of the experiment and are connected to it by a 20 ft. by 3 ft. scattering chamber in which neutrons passing down the tubes from each of the two nuclear sources will meet and cross paths in a precise spot, to be recorded by a neutron detector.

While Dr. Fawcett is involved in the actual design of the experiment, teams of scientists work on developing the devices used in the experiment, and figuring out the formulas necessary for interpreting the information once it is found.

Dr. Fawcett commented that "The work that goes on at our laboratory is not purely, by any means, for the motivation of just developing new weapons. A tremendous amount of the budget goes into looking for alternate sources of energy and into basic physics experiments. The idea of acquiring new knowledge to better understand the universe is one of the greatest motivating forces at our national laboratories."

Opinion: ARA Police

By DINA EZELLE and DEBORAH L. SHELKEY

Heed their badges of blue caps with white visors and blue smocks as they parade around your favorite eating site. They are seething at the bit to smack the back of your hand if you dare to cross their rules. Rarely do they smile only do they guard their personalities as they almost fear to smile and show humanness. Who are these blue crusaders? ARA police.

Upstairs campus dining in Blackwell at 5:00, students are "greeted" by a peer in a monotone voice who barely sneers out the night's choices. Heaven forbid they take the order of the table while there are three vacant seats. Do they think possibly the missing persons have voiced their choice to those already seated?

ARA police are getting paid whether they see the money or not. Maybe some students belittle them or are rude, but do not waitresses and waiters everywhere receive this treatment from customers. Okay, you say ARA waitrons do not have to be cordial, they are not working for tips. They are serving students as they are.

Downstairs dining is jolly too. The ones working behind the counter hardly notice the plate in front of them as they continue to gossip in front of the grill. An appetite is lost as a student sees the cook scratching his ear and wipe his nose with the back of his hand. And if ARA decides to close off sections of tables, students are expected to go to another table with people who have finished eating and shoved their dirty dishes to the center of the table, so they can chew their cud in conversation. Faces mock newcomers as "invading their space." Do customers at Pizza Hut slide in a booth with a couple who are already chomping a Super Supreme Pizza because there are no more booths available? How cozy.

Restaurants open sections to accommodate their customers. I guess ARA police feel they do not have to treat students with respect because they do not bus their tables. Where is respect supposed to begin? If busing one's dishes was not such a hassle — bursting through lines, weaving through impatient traffic, to a small secluded corner of the dining hall — students would make the effort. Some do. Set up trays helped but where is the plan for busing that can work?

The blue crusaders' crackerjack badges of ARA are tarnished in attitude and planning, but who is to say they will be polished?

Visitation Survey

To The Editor,

Thanks for your editorial on Visitation. Hopefully, it will encourage people to be responsive to the survey that The Resident Life Committee is getting ready to conduct dealing with visitation. The survey is going to ask which options the students prefer as far as visitation is concerned.

At the present time RLC is moving toward 24 hour visitation. Ah, but what about cohabitation being illegal in Virginia. Well, visiting and living are two different things. There will be guidelines enforced to see that cohabitation does not exist and roommate rights are not being violated.

Hopefully with a change in visitation we can move toward promoting maturity and growth for individuals here at Longwood.

From The Housing Office

The Office of Cashering and Student Accounts has recently prepared and mailed billing statements for the Fall Semester Student Fee Deposit. These statements were addressed to all students at their home addresses.

This $100 statement includes a $10 non-refundable Readmission Fee and a $90 Student Fees Deposit which is applied towards Fall Semester tuition. All students, resident and day, intending to return to Longwood for the Fall Semester are required to pay the $100. The $90 is refundable prior to June 1, 1986.

The Housing Office encourages all resident students to insure the deposit is paid by the March 21st deadline. Payment of the deposit by the deadline is required in order to participate in the Room Selection jprocesses as well as pre-registration for Fall Semester, 1986 classes.

Persons who have not paid the deposit on time will not be permitted to select a room or be signed up as a roommate-suitemate until the final stages of the Room Selection Process.

APPLICATIONS FOR EDITOR BEING ACCEPTED

QUALIFICATIONS:

A. Applicant must be a full-time undergraduate student at Longwood College, i.e., be enrolled in the equivalent of no less than 12 semester hours at the time of application and during the term of appointment.

B. Shall be a student in good standing, i.e., not be on academic or disciplinary probation.

C. Shall have posted no less than a 2.5 grade point average in the semester immediately preceding selection to the position of editor, and shall have no less than a 2.5 cululative grade point average.

D. Shall not have an elective or appointive position in student government during tenure as editor.

Study Abroad This Summer

Longwood College's Art Department and Office of Continuing Studies are offering a six week, 6 credit course (Art 301-302) for the summer of 1986. Study will include travel to Greece, Italy, Holland and England. Other places of interest that will be studies include the Oracle of Delphi; the Acropolis of Athens; the Eternal city of Rome; the Renaissance city of Florence; the romantic city of Venice; the Paris of Louis XIV and Napolean; the Amsterdam of Rembrant and Van Gogh; and London, the city of towers, castles, palaces and museums. The course is designed to introduce students to the joys and mysteries of history, art and travel. Dr. Elisabeth L. Flynn, Associate Professor of Art History, who has traveled and photographed extensively in these countries, will conduct the course. The course will be offered to all members and friends of the Longwood community. Enrollment will be limited to 20 students.

Travel arrangements will be conducted by Fan Travel Service, LTD. Final cost will be determined by the number of students enrolled. Based on participation of 20 students, total cost to Fan Travel should not exceed $2,700.

There are several spaces still available. Interested students should immediately contact Dr. Elizabeth L. Flynn or Dr. Patricia Lust, Director of the Office of Continuing Studies, Longwood College.

Dr. Sandra Breil

By DEBORAH L. SHELKEY

Professor of zoology, animal gorphology, vertebrate physiology and on demand ornithology, Dr. Sandra Breil confesses she did not become interested in biology until she earned her first 'A' in a biology course in college. She has dissected birds, turtles, sharks, frogs, cats, minks, and a monkey, but still admits to a wariness of the 8-legged creature — a spider.

Breil enjoys animal gorphology the most but believes it is the hardest course she instructs. All students in lab dissect his own mink, by the systems: digestive, circulatory, excretory, nervous, and reproductive.

Dr. Breil has been teaching at Longwood for 19 years and has collected an enormous amount of old finals. She soaks these old papers overnight and grinds the mixture in a blender to create "handmade paper." Realistically, grades from 'A' to 'F' are all chewed and washed up together. Laying the paper pulp on a screen to drain, the "new" direct joining in with the dissection. One can become "familiar and accustomed" with paper can then be used for Breil's art projects. Breil displays her collages in sales gallery in Charlottesville and exhibits her work in local craft shows and has received many ribbons.

Having been to many parts of Europe, Breil's travel interest is carrying her to Germany. Greece, Italy, France, and the Netherlands with Dr. Flynn's art-history course this summer. She then gets lots of time for another hobby — photography.

Dr. Breil encourages students to keep up in class, if a student does not follow or understand Tuesday's notes, he "sure as hell is not going to know what's going on in Thursday's lecture." She recommends reviewing notes daily and asking questions in class.

Though her office is decorated with a grand array of pink pigs, Dr. Sandra Breil reveals her favorite animal at the zoo is the giraffe. They are "very arrogant" and at the same time, "look stupid," but she likes their long eyelashes. When the long-necked creature bats those charming eyelashes at Breil, it is probably because they share a secret. They both mind spiders in their paths.

The Oil Weapon Is Disarmed

By MATT PETERMAN

Back in 1973, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), used the oil weapon against the United States by cutting off all oil exports, which amounted to about 25 percent of our total energy needs. This sent serious economic shock waves through our economy, making the U.S. take a closer look at the way it used energy.

Today, we use oil more efficiently, but like then the recent fall in oil prices will also send shock waves through our economy, but this time for the better. The immediate impact of the $15 a barrel drop, in the price of oil, will bring down the price of gasoline and heating oil about 30 cents a gallon. This will mean a savings of about $24 billion a year, at the expense of OPEC nations, while increasing our growth, keeping inflation and unemployment down.

The U.S. will also benefit indirectly by the stimulation of the economies of Europe and Japan. Through the stimulation of these economies, the U.S. dollar will down in value making th U.S. more competitive, while opening its export markets. This is particularly important because of the massive trade deficit, of $140 billion, the U.S. ran last year.

Because these gains are coming at the expense of oil exporting nations, many fear the collapse of banks, who have loaned these countries money. This, for the most part is not true. The amount of oil importing nations paying back their loans will increase, outweighing the risks of increased credit to oil exporting debtor nations. The only major problem in the banking industry will be the small banks in oil producing states, such as Texas and Louisiana, which could fail, because of a lack of slack to handle huge losses.

At home, we will feel the benefits of increased competition between substitute energy and oil. This, as it works its way through the economy will lower inflation and increase growth, something that could not have been attained without the prices of oil being lower.

All in all, the U.S. must be careful not to increase its oil appetite to a point, where oil could again be used as a weapon. If we were to be led into this rut, the OPEC nations would not have as strong a weapon since, their oil only takes care of 38 percent of world demand compared to 68 percent back in 1973. So far the benefits of cheaper oil have had only good effects, and most bad effects will most likely be outweighed.

Cigarettes Contain Radiation

Cigarette packages already carry several warnings about the health hazards from smoking. If new research proves conclusive there might be need for one more — "Warning: radiation in cigarettes can lead to cancer."

According to the March Reader's Digest, cigarettes contain so much radioactivity that a pack-and-a-half-per-day smoker gets a yearly dose of radiation in parts of his lungs equal to what his skin would be exposed to in about 300 chest x-rays.

Although the experts are not sure of the full extent of the health risks, Dr. Joseph R. DiFranza of the University of Massachusetts Medical Center believes that "radiation alone could account for about half of all lung cancers in smokers."

Scientists have traced radiation in cigarettes to the fields where tobacco is grown. For many decades, farmers have fertilized tobacco crops with phosphates rich in uranium. By decay, this uranium generates radium-226, which in turn spawns radon-222, and eventually lead-210 and polonium-210. Tobacco plants readily absorb radioactive elements from the fertilizer and from naturally occuring sources in the soil, air and water.

Ultimately the radiation is inhaled deep inside a smoker's lungs. As a smoker consumes cigarette after cigarette, insoluble particles incorporating radioactive isotopes may be depositied at the same points in the lungs.

According to Edward A. Martell, a specialist in radiochemistry at the National Center for Atmospheric Research, these points become "hot spots" of radioactivity. Martell believes it is no coincidence that most lung cancers begin at these branch points where radioactive debris gathers.

Unfortunately it is not just smokers alone who are at risk from radiation in cigarettes. Reader's Digest reports that at least 50 percent of the radioactive isotopes from cigarette smoke wind up in the air, and a smaller percentage of this and other elements in the smoke are inhaled by those around the smoker.

Takeshi Hirayama of the Institute of Preventive Oncology in Tokyo studied records of more than 91,000 women and found that non-smoking wives of heavy smokers had more than double the risk of dying from lung cancer than did the non-smoking wives of non-smokers.

Supreme Court Case Could Halt Letters Of Recommendation

Depending on how the U.S. Supreme Court rules this spring, professors around the country may stop writing recommendation letters for students, some lawyers say.

The court will hear arguments this spring on the case of Andrew Burt, who claims University of Nebraska Medical Prof. John Connolly's "negative" recommendation defamed him.

Forcing professors to shoulder the expense of traveling to defend the recommendations they write could discourage or simply prevent them from writing references in the future, some officials say.

No one contests what was in the letter.

When Burt applied for a job as an orthopedic surgeon at a Colorado hospital, it asked former teacher Connolly to write a reference letter.

In response, Connolly wrote Burt's performance at Nebraska was "well below average," and advised he should not be hired in orthopedic surgery.

Connolly did add Burt "might serve adequately" in some other health field.

Burt left Nebraska in 1977 for California before looking for work in Colorado in 1981. He sued Connolly that year, claiming the professor defamed him in the letter to the hospital.

Connolly's lawyers claimed Colorado was the wrong jurisdiction, and that the case had to be thrown out unless it was filed in Nebraska, where Burt did his residency.

The case, turning on the jurisdiction issue instead of the defamation issue, finally made it up to the U.S. Supreme Court this year.

"What happens if a faculty member is hailed to Alaska?" wonders University of Nebraska General Counsel Richard Wood. "We would have to hire counsel up there."

Leaving a state to defend oneself "would present a tremendous burden on the defendant," adds Marilyn Mintz of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP). "It would severely impact on the system of evaluation as it applies to faculty members."

Wood also contends a Burt victory would inhibit employers as well as professors in writing reference letters.

Burt declined to comment on the case, and his attorney, Robert Dyer, did not return reporters' phone calls.

Connolly's attorney, Thomas L. Roberts, says the professor merely was performing a professional duty by responding to the hospital's request and, therefore, had minimal contact with Colorado.

Furthermore, since Connolly wasn't paid for writing the letter, je had no economic relationship with the state, Roberts says.

A federal district court in Colorado agreed with Roberts' argument, but the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the decision in Burt's favor.

Of their chances for victory this spring when the Supreme Court hears the case, Roberts believes "I think we have a good chance of reversal."

However, the process has not been cheap.

Roberts estimates the cost of defending Connolly will run "In the tens of thousands of dollars. The cost of litigation is extremely high."

Nebraska's insurance will foot the bill.

"You don't see many lawsuits like this, and, hopefully, you won't see many in the future," Woods says.

SURVEY: Students Prefer Sleep Over Dating

It doesn't have much to do with their high-living image, but college students probably prefer sleeping to dating, a new Levi Strauss Co. survey of collegiate attitudes has found.

Listening to records came in second, with 63 percent of those questioned rating it as one of their favorite pastimes.

Sleeping was third, with 56 percent, followed by going to movies and eating.

Only 42 percent of the respondents said dating was a favorite activity.

There were, of course, regional differences in extracurricular tastes. Students in the East and South, for example, felt dating was more important than did Midwestern and Western students.

Only about a third of the Westerners listed dating as a favorite pastime.

Levi Strauss calls the study its "501 Survey" because the company is researching why traditional jeans are gaining favor again on campuses, Boyle explains.

In fact, "jeans are more popular than ever with college students," Boyle says, adding students who have jeans wear them 75 percent of the time.

Company executives theorize singer Bruce Springsteen may be partially responsible for keeping jeans so popular on campuses, Boyle adds.

The study, Boyle says, "gives the company an overview of the habits of consumers. Students are a prime target (market) for our jeans."

Fashion Show

By LAVATER WALKER

On February 22, 1986 the Longwood College campus students and faculty body were treated to an outstanding fashion show from the Kappa Diamonds Court, auxiliary to the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, Inc. The show was held in the Gold Room of Lankford at 8:00 p.m. The admission cost was $1. There was a T-shaped stage that was surrounded by chairs for the audience. The spotlight and bright stage lights highligted the models and accented their outfits.

The models were ladies in the Kappa Diamond Court: Marilyn Royal, Pamela Abrams, Charlease McCauley, Tracie Pervall, Melanie Lee, Tuwanda Wynn, and friends Winona Waddy, Elizabeth Cho, De-De Kerns, Kerry Laughlin, Lea Ann Lawson, and Janet Mia Lee. The commentator for the event was Melanie Lee, also a Kappa Diamond.

The various scenes in the Fashion Show were modeled to the beat of music; New Attitude, which was of course modeled with the record "New Attitude" showed the new wave fashions, Casual Wear, Fitness and Swimwear, fashions for looking great and staying in shape, Business, and After Five. In some scenes, models wore outfits courtesy of Baldwin's. Leggetts, The Fashion Post, and the Esther May Village Shop, all of which are located in Downtown Farmville.

The audience also heard a duet by Mr. Michael Lee, Melanie Lee's brother, and Ms. Gayle Jones, a Longwood student. The songs were "I'm Born Again" and "Half Crazy."

The directors, Tracie Pervall and Winona Waddy, deserve a great deal of credit for arranging such a wonderful show. Also, the models deserve much credit for making the plans go smoothly. The models had their walks, turns, and smiles and other enthusiastic movements all in place.

BENNETT: SOME COLLEGES ARE 'RIPPING OFF THE AMERICAN PUBLIC'

Bennett is expected to propose changing the way the Education Dept. recognizes accrediting agencies when he unveils his plans for the Higher Education Reauthorization Act next week.

Now, Bennett told Congress, accrediting agencies grade colleges more on their resources and procedures than on how well they teach students.

TWENTY PERCENT of students attending four-year colleges have $200 or more per month in discretionary income, according to a study by Simmons Market Research Bureau. Two-thirds of the students with this much spending money work during the school year.

A RULE LIMITING CAMPAIGNS for student government to a three-day period may be challenged in court. A U. of Alabama student, running for student government president, is challenging the rule with the help of the American Civil Liberties Union. The student says the limitation restricts his, and other candidates', freedom of speech, and has already held an "illegal" campaign rally.

THE U. OF WINNIPEG ADMINISTRATION is being accused of intimidating four students who complained that a university security guard yelled racist insults at them and threatened them with physical violence. According to the Canadian University Press, the incident occurred when the guard found the students studying in a seminar room an hour before the university officially opened for the day. The students say the school told them they would be charged with trespassing if they lodged a formal complaint against the guard.

Leadership Retreat Big Success

By ROBERT SMITH

Over eighty Longwood College student leaders gathered Feb. 21st to the 23rd in Virginia Beach for Longwood's first leadership retreat. Students from many diverse organizations attended the three day conference involving interest sessions, guest speakers and core group activities.

Day one consisted of registration at the Howard Johnson Hotel on the beach at Virginia Beach. Guest speaker Bonnie Hicks, a professional keynote presenter, opened the weekends conference with her keynote address on "Motivation-Leadership Potential." Core group activity followed with each group putting together idea's for a commercial presentation for Sunday's closing finale. Each of the ten core groups consisted of a cross section of student leaders from S.G.A. Residence Hall Councils and R.A.'s, fraternities and sororities, dining hall services, Ambassadors and many others.

The second day started off with aerobics and quickly moved into the first interest session titled "Style—Staying in Touch with Your Leadership Effectiveness" presented by Sue Saunders and Teresa Alvis. Following the session was a very informative panel discussion involing three successful Longwood Alumni who were student leaders while attending Longwood College. The three alumni were Gay Kampmueller, Stephen Meyers and Lynda Whitley. They spoke and answered questions from present Longwood leaders. They clearly showed and gave examples of how important involvment during college is.

After brunch, the third session titled "Don't let your organization be "Wiped Out" by Waves of Confusion" involved how to make your meetings more effective and productive. This presentation was conducted by Robin Olmstead and Kathy Brown.

The final interest session conducted by Bob Smith and Paul Striffolino was titled — Motivation and Group Cohesion — Who are the members of your crew and how do you get them to sail together. This session consisted of motivation techniques and the important roles in an organization. Saturday evening was the formal dinner with guest speaker Phyllis Mable. She spoke about Longwood of the future. After dinner was the infamous trivial pursuit tournament which was won by the AXP team, narrowly edging out the SPE's and Pelta's.

Sunday was the wrap up and each core group presented their commercial promoting Longwood. The core groups also discussed many issues concerning students and how effective leadership may improve current problems here at Longwood. The Student Leadership Training Committee has worked hard all year long putting the retreat together and were quite pleased with the results. The committee consists of Vicki Bodin, Bob Smith, Carol Cooper, Kathy Brown, Sue Saunders and Chairman Paul Shtriffolino. When asked what his impression of Longwoods first leadership retreat, Striffolino stated "Motivating and thrilling! The students attending were great! They applied themselves, had fun and came up with excellent suggestions for some of Longwood's concerns. Let's do it again in the fall. Go Longwood!"

STRIPPERS AND PORNOGRAPHIC FILMS, as enticements for rushes, have been banned by the Syracuse U. Interfraternity Executive Council. The ban is based on an IFC constitutional clause requiring the fraternity system to uphold the image of the university. Some fraternities had substituted strippers and X-rated films for alcohol during last fall's dry rush.

UNAUTHORIZED CLASS VISITORS to U. of Wisconsin classrooms could be fined $10,000 and sent to jail for two years if a bill in the Wisconsin legislature becomes law. The bill is intended to thwart the efforts of Accuracy In Academia, the group using class monitors to identify so-called Marxist professors.

U. HAWAII PROF FINDS LINK BETWEEN BAD VISION AND HIGH IQ

He speculates it's because students' brains grow as they read a lot, thus causing neural developments that can alter the brain's visual functions.

HARD ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES are temporarily banned from the Northwestern U. campus. The policy is a compromise between the school and its Interfraternity Council — The university had proposed a total ban of alcohol when the IFC lost its general and alcohol liability insurance.

A TELEVISION MONITOR at the Milwaukee Area Technical College will present titles of books which are unavailable and names of courses for which students cannot get books until they appear in class. Students had complained of standing in line for more than 45 minutes, only to find that the book they wanted was out of stock. During peak periods, the monitor's messages will be revised hourly.

THE "LOVE CONNECTION" at Northwestern U. is a computer dating service run by the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity and Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority to raise money for Easter Seals. For $1, students can receive a list of students with whom they are "compatible." The students fill out a questionnaire about themselves, and a computer matches questionnaires with similar answers.

A "GROSS DIS–CRIMINATION" is how an Auburn U. professor is describing the school's policy of admitting scholarship student-athletes with ACT scores below the school's usual requirement of 18. The professor warns that any exemptions to the minimum requirements can make the university vulnerable to lawsuits.

STUDYING HAS EDIBLE REWARDS for students at Northwestern U. The local McDonald's restaurant offered students a free cheeseburger for every A or A- earned during the fall quarter. Although the 8,569 A's and A-'s NU awarded are worth $5,655 in cheeseburgers, the McDonald's manager says the offer is good for business — most students end up paying for french fries and a soft drink.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF SUDS at a laundromat near the U. of Georgia-Athens. Ringers is a combination laundromat-restaurant-bar where students can mingle, watch MTV, eat hot sandwiches, drink beer and still keep an eye on their laundry through the glass windows behind the bar. To attract UGA students, Ringers cashes personal checks, pipes rock music into the laundry room and manages the wash-and-dry cycle for students returning late from class.

BEFORE GRADUATING from Northern Illinois U., students must demonstrate knowledge of the Declaration of Independence, the constitutions of the United States and the state of Illinois, balloting procedures and the proper use and display of the flag.

THREE STUDENT DEATHS at the U. of Kansas last semester have prompted the student affairs office to develop a permanent campus committee on mental health. The committee will explore causes of undue stress for students, provide mental health services for students and help promote a "healthy and wholesome mental climate" for KU students.

SWASTIKAS and Klu Klux Klan initials were painted on the Afro-American Cultural Center at Yale U. Students are not so upset with the graffiti as they are with the fact that more than two weeks passed before it was removed. One student noted that pro-divestment graffiti had been removed from a university building the same day it was written.

STATE GOVERNMENTS, in 1985-86, will pour record amounts of money into student grant programs, according to a survey of the National Association of State Scholarships and Grants Programs. Aggregate need-based student aid offered by the states is expected to increase by more than 11 percent.

A STUDENT BILL OF RIGHTS is now under consideration by the Michigan legislature. If approved, the measure will eliminate double jeopardy — when a student is tried off-campus in a court of law and by a university judiciary board for the same offense. The bill provides students with the right to an attorney, to a formal hearing before a jury comprised of student peers, to cross examine all witnesses, to appeal a hearing decision to the institution's governing board and against self-incrimination.

TO SAVE STUDENTS MONEY, the Memorial U. (Canada) Faculty Senate has "resolved that undergraduate students may not be required to submit essays, projects, assignments or any other work forming part of their recognized programs of study in typewritten form."

UNIVERSITY CARE SERVICE has come under investigation for mail fraud after the parent of a U. of Michigan student complained to the post office that a "survival kit" she had purchased for her son was never delivered. Parents of students at Western Kentucky U. had complained of the same problem in December. The company is based in Indianapolis, Ind.

ABOUT 300 STUDENTS at Florida State U. had to be confined to their rooms for a week because a student they may have had contact with came down with the measles. As an added precaution, the university required all students, staff and instructors under 30 to be immunized before the end of January.

STUDENTS ARE CELEBRATING a victory in their anti-apartheid battle at the State U. of New York-Binghamton. The Marriott Corporation, the primary food service vendor for the Binghampton campus, was the target of student protest last spring because it has operations in South Africa. The administration had agreed to conduct a student referendum on whether Marriott's contract should be renewed in 1987, but Marriott recently announced that it is withdrawing from its South African operations.

in the talent marketing of such entertainers as Kenny Rogers, Juice Newton, Loretta Lynn and Conway Twitty.

Selbe is a partner in the law firm of Stott and Selbe of Roanoke and has served on the Board of Directors of the Miss Virginia Pageant since 1979. He is involved in numerous community organizations, including the Board of Directors of the Roanoke Arts Council, the Mental Health Service, Rotary, the United Way, and the Chamber of Commerce. He owns a major amusement park.

Charlotte Thomas Churchill of Crewe, Miss Virginia 1961, who recently received the top volunteer award in Ft. Wayne, Ind., for "outstanding service to the people of the community," and who spearheaded the implementation of career education and planning programs in the public schools of Indiana.

Mrs. Churchill currently teaches Latin at Prince Edward Academy. She has been an instructor in foreign languages at Virginia Tech. She is the organist at Gibson Memorial Episcopal Church in Crewe, immediate past president of Episcopal Church Women, president of the Crewe Garden Club and first vice president of the Crewe Woman's Club. She is a native of Roanoke who moved to Crewe from Ft. Wayne, Ind., where she was active in numerous civic groups. Her husband is superintendent of the Norfolk Division of the Norfolk Southern Railway.

And Annamarie Smith, Miss Portsmouth Seawall Festival, who was first runnerup to Miss Virginia 1985.

Ms. Smith was First Runnerup to Miss Virginia in both 1985 and 1980. She has held the titles of Miss Portsmouth Seawall Festival, Miss Hampton-Newport News, Miss Norfolk and Junior Miss of Virginia Beach. She has had extensive experience in community and professional theatre, in radio, in modeling and as TV spokesperson for advertising campaigns for High's Ice Cream, Dick Keatley Lincoln-Mercury, Giant Open Air, and Grand Furniture. She played the part of Vicky Lang on CBN's soap opera, "Another Life."

As for the entertainment — not only will all ten Miss Longwood contestants be performing, but a musical variety act will also be on hand for the festivities.

The Richmond group, known as "Held Over," consists of three sisters, ages 13, 12 and 11. They have performed their singing, dancing, and comedy act before audiences of all ages along the east coast.

They were one of the star attractions at the opening of the Sixth Street Market Place in Richmond, and they also have performed at fund-raising telethons, state fairs, tobacco festivals, state and national conventions, and at the Miss Richmond and Miss Hopewell Pageants.

The girls — Karen, Paige and Kristen Held — began singing together in church seven years ago and have been entertaining professionally for three years.

Karen and Paige have had theater experience as two of the Von Trapp children in "The Sound of Music." Karen was cast as Helen Keller in "The Miracle Worker." Paige, an accomplished dancer, appeared nationally on a "PM Magazine" television feature on mannequin modeling and on a WXEX-TV production on break dancing. Kristen was selected as Future Miss Richmond in 1982 and has been involved with dramatic parts and TV commercials.

The girls have studied piano and dancing since the age of five and have been active for three years in dinner-theater productions and children's theater (musical and dramatical).

Since early in 1984, "Held Over" has worked under the professional guidance of Jack E. Carter, the director of Artist Development programs for Bakphil Productions in Nashville, Tenn.

However, it's this year's prize money that may very well prove to be the main attraction for the Pageant entrants.

The Miss Longwood Pageant this year will offer one of the largest scholarship packages of any local Miss America Pageant in Virginia.

The total amount to be awarded is $3,100, up $300 from last year, according to H. Donald Winkler, pageant director. Nationally, the Miss America Pageants provide the largest scholarship program for women in the United States, with more than $5,000,000 being awarded last year.

McDonald's of Farmville is providing a $1,000 scholarship for Miss Longwood, plus $500 for wardrobe expenses for the Miss Virginia Pageant in July. Other state pageant expenses for the Miss Longwood will be covered by the Miss Longwood Executive Committee.

Golden Corral Family Restaurant of Farmville will give a $1,000 scholarship to the First Runnerup, an increase of $300 over last year.

The Third Runnerup will receive a $100 scholarship from the Miss Longwood Executive Committee.

Donald Lemish, who heads the scholarship committee for the pageant, said: "We are most appreciative of the continuing support from David Love at McDonald's and the management of Golden Corral, and we're very pleased that Carmine Foods has joined our Pageant family. They all responded to the need for increasing the Pageant's scholarship base to the point of being one of the top scholarship-supported pageants in the state."

So, who are the contestants?

One of the South's best Scottish dancers and Longwood's record-breaking gymnast are among 10 contestants who will compete Saturday night, March 22, for the title of Miss Longwood. Other contestants include the current Miss Teen of Virginia, two former highschool Homecoming Queens, and singers and musicians who have achieved national, state, or regional recognition.

The title carries with it a $1,500 scholarship and the opportunity to participate in the Miss Virginia Pageant in July. Contestants will compete in talent, swimsuit, evening gown and private interviews.

The Pageant, billed as Longwood's top variety show, will be held at 8 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium. Doors will open at 7:20. Tickets are $3.00 for aults and $2.00 for children 12 or under.

Contestants were selected through preliminary competition held in December. They are:

Susan Ragan, a junior from Newport News and president of the Delta Psi Kappa professional honor sorority in physical education. She has studied and competed in Scottish Highland Dancing for 14 years, and she has won more than 1,000 medals. At the age of 17, while a high school senior, she won the Southeastern District Championship for the Open category — the highest of five levels of proficiency for her age group. At the Pageant, she will perform a Scottish dance to recorded music by Scott Mac Cauley, a Scottish bagpiper. The tape was sent to her from Scotland.

Lisa Zuraw, a senior business major from Sterling. She was co-captain of Longwood's gymnastics team last year and has set new College records in gymnastics floor exercise, vaulting, and all-around. She is state champion in vaulting. She will perform a gymnastics-dance routine to "1984-Jump."

Carla Lee Lockhart, a freshman from Chesapeake and recipient of an English Education Scholarship. She is the current Miss Teen of Virginia. She was graduated from Indian River High School, where she was chosen "Best Actress" and "most talented student." She will sing "City Lights."

Stephanie Beadles, a freshman from Mechanicsville. She has studied voice, dance, and dramatics and, in high school, was a cheerleader and was chosen "Homecoming Queen" and "Best Looking." She won the "Future Miss Richmond Pageant" in 1970 and was second runnerup in the Miss Mechanicsville Pageant last year. For her talent presentation, she will sing "You Made Me Love You."

Renee Martin, a junior elementary education major from Lynchburg and recipient of the Nellie Nance Ward Scholarship. She is a graduate of Heritage High School, where she particiapted in the New Heritage Singers, a show choir that placed fourth in national competition. She also has studied violin, piano and dramatics. She will sing "My Tribute."

Martha Pruitt, a sophomore pre-dental hygiene major from Cape Charles, who was 3rd runnerup in last year's Pageant. In high school she recieved the award for "Outstanding Achievement in Music" and was chosen to the All-Shore Band and the All-Regional Band. She also was a cheerleader. She has studied the flute for nine years and will be playing a flute solo, "Bluesette."

Karen Groome, a freshman business major from Highland Springs. In high school she participated in chorus, dramatics, gymnastics and modern dance, was a cheerleader, and won the "Academic Presidential Award." She will do a jazz dance to "What a Feelin" from the movie, "Flashdance."

Sabrina Stevens, a freshman foreign language major from Leesburg. She sang for three years with a band, performing at dinner clubs, weddings, receptions, and other events. She also has studied ballet. In high school she was a cheerleader, was selected Homecoming Queen and "best looking," and placed second in her school on the National Spanish Examination. She will sing "Saving All My Love for You."

Anita Washington, a freshman elementary education major from Richmond. In 1984 she was chosen as "Miss Photogenic Virginia Modern Miss." In high school she was a member of the International Thespian Society and the National Forensics League. She has had four years of drama study and seven years of choral experience. She will sing "Don't Rain on My Parade" from "Funny Girl."

Debbie Wood, a freshman elementary education major from Chesterfield. She sang in her school choir through middle school and high school, particpated in school musicals, and was selected to the "All County Choir." At Longwood she is a member of the Camerata Singers. She will sing a medley of Broadway show songs titled "That's Entertainment,"

Miss Texas, who was second runnerup in the Miss America Pageant, will MC and perform at the Miss Longwood Pageant.

Miss Texas, Jonna Fitzgerald, is an "an outstanding fiddler," according to Pageant director, H. Donald Winkler. She was a talent winner at the Miss America Pageant with her rendition of "The Orange Blossom Special." She will play it and three other selections at the Miss Longwood Pageant.

Miss Texas has been chosen as one of the five state title holders to comprise the Miss America troupe, which is traveling and entertaining throughout the United States this year.

Miss Texas attends the University of Texas at Arlington where she is a junior honor student with a major in communications and political science.

Poll Shows Students Ignorant About Birth Control

College students either don't know much about birth control, or they pass it up because it is "unromantic," a new poll says.

In either case, a vast number of collegians eschew birth control altogether or use unreliable methods.

A Gallup Poll of more than 600 students at 100 campuses found 32 percent of those surveyed believe withdrawal will protect women from pregnancy.

Of the women who use birth control pills, a third take older, more dangerous pills containing high estrogen levels.

The study also revealed 60 percent of the students had some sex education in high school, but half of this group said they could have used more information.

"It therefore seems more education effort needs to be made in high school," says Michael Policar, a gynecologist who directs Planned Parenthood for San Francisco and Alameda counties.

In fact, 75 percent of the students who said they were sexually active in college had their first sexual encounter in high school.

Moreover, three quarters of the students think taking the pill is as dangerous as having a baby, which is not true, Policar asserts.

"Many (students) don't realize that newer formulations (of birth control pills) provide lower hormone doses while maintaining effectiveness," Policar says, adding "they may be taking more drug than they actually need."

Policar thinks many students get their birth control misinformation from their peers.

"I think students know more than the survey indicates," Conant Sloane says, adding they are at the age in which they are learning about risk taking. "Unfortunately, a lot of students are playing Russian Roulette."

"It's not romantic to talk about birth control" when sexual opportunities arise, Conant Sloane explains, adding there are no good role models for students.

Men, moreover, generally are uninvolved in birth control. Many still believe the myth that condoms are "like taking a shower with a raincoat on," she adds.

Since the beginning...1920-1986

The following is the fifth in a series of articles extracted from old Rotunda issues. This article was first run on September 24, 1952.

Dwight D. Eisenhower, Republican nominee, will pass through Farmville on September 26, aboard his special campaign train. He will be in Lynchburg at 5 p.m., in Farmville between 6 and 7 p.m and is expected in Richmond at 8:35 p.m.

Plans are being made for the students to be down at the station when the train comes through. Although a stop has not been planned, it is hoped that the train can be slowed down so that everyone wanting to wave to the general can do so.

The plans for a whistle stop tour which was to have included Farmville were abandoned, it was reported, when the General and his advisers decided that the time could be used more profitably in the "deep south". According to many experts, however, Virginia is included in the list of the four southern states that Eisenhower has the best chance of carrying in the November 4 election.

On his first visit to Virginia, the General will speak at Roanoke, Lynchburg and Petersburg before going into Richmond for a major speech there. His special train will enter the state from North Carolina and follow the Norfolk and Western tracks from Roanoke to Richmond.

Eisenhower's plans to come to Virginia were reportedly strengthened after the success of his first southern trip. Several weeks ago, he ventured into the democratic south and made major speeches in Atlanta, Tampa, and Birmingham. These cities, as well as several other cities and towns which he visited on that trip had the opportunity of greeting a presidential nominee for the first time in many decades.

Tentative plans concerning his visit to the capital city included a major speech from the south portica of the capital building after a motorised parade down Broad Street.

Eisenhower will arrive in Richmond in the wake of the Democratic presidential nominee, Governor Adlai Stevenson who spoke there last Saturday. Mr. Stevenson motored down from Washington for his speaking engagement and included stops in Quantico, Fredricksburg and Bowling Green in his quick trip into the old dominion. Plans are now being made for a second visit by Governor Stevenson to Virginia.

Until the arrival of the two presidential candidates this year, Richmond, as well as most other parts of the state, had seen presidential candidates but twice in the twentieth century.

Collegians Not So Apathetic

By JIM SCHWARTZ

Today's students may be more interested in jobs and wealth than their predecessors, but it's not because they're greedier, two University of Wisconsin professors say.

Their study of student attitudes also suggests calling collegians apathetic is a bum rap.

"I think attributing apathy to this generation of college students is misleading," maintains Prof. Bud McClure of the University of Wisconsin at River Falls.

In a sample of almost 300 students from the River Falls campus, McClure and associate Thomas Russo found students to be most concerned with issues that have immediate impact on their lives.

"International issues of today are perceived to be out of control," McClure says.

In contrast, the "quiet generation" of the fifties was more orderly because "there was a sense of (national) invulnerability."

But today's students, McClure says, are not much different from their predecessors of the late sixties and early seventies.

He thinks it's because observers often exaggerate the number of students who were politically active in the sixties, and underestimate the number who are active today.

The key to provoking student activism, he says, is to find issues that affect students directly, and ones about which they feel they can influence the outcome.

McClure attributes student interest in South African apartheid to students realizing they can influence college holdings in companies doing business with the Pretoria government.

"I don't disagree with" the notion that students are not as politically passive as some critics suggest, says Kenneth Green of UCLA, which co-sponsors with the American Council on Education an annual survey of some 200,000 freshmen nationwide.

Most observers who call collegians apathetic, in fact, cite the UCLA study, which, among other discoveries, has found freshmen becoming ever more materialistic in their life goals.

The findings recently convinced a group of college presidents to resolve to make "community service" a graduation requirement. The group hoped to end students' "preoccupation" with career and material goals.

But a number of other studies, most recently from Mount Hood College in Maryland, documents that student attitudes generally change and become less egocentric during the course of college.

And many of the other impressions of students as overly materialistic are derived from studies done at "private elitist schools in the East," McClure contends.

McClure's study, done at a midwestern state school, may be more representative of student attitudes nationwide, he says.

His students' career aspirations, moreover, have more to do with "trying to establish an identity in a chaotic world," McClure concludes. He believes becoming a professional is a way of exerting control over oneself in a world frequently perceived as out of control.

"Some say it's greed, while others say it's uncertainty about the future," Green says of student career aspirations.

"When I have asked a college audience 'how many of you know people who have lost their job?' I see a sea of hands," Green adds.

This may be why "we see a lot of portfolio-building behavior" among college students, he speculates.

tradition of music and the fiddle and farm life in Scotland, the Eskimos in Alaska and the tourist business in Austria.

In January of 1981, she left SUNY and went to the University of Paris VII in France where she taught American Culture and American History to French students for one semester. She stayed in Paris until April of 1982 and then returned to the United States. After her return she began working in a law office in Connecticut where she did para legal research on the International Banking Act and real estate. After the birth of her daughter Delia in 1983 she continued working in the law office until 1984, when she accepted a position at Cecil Community College in Maryland. There she taught Sociology, Social Problems and Marriage and the Family until 1985 when she accepted a position at Longwood.

Dr. Armstrong says she came to Longwood "in order to get back into full-time teaching and because I was able to teach Anthropology again." Also, her husband Brian works just outside of Washington, D.C., so Farmville is in a good location for her family.

At Longwood Dr. Armstrong is presently teaching an Anthropology and Folklore class, 320, that studies other cultures and their tradition, folklore and music, with a focus on the people of southside Virginia. Students in her 320 class are required to do a special project. Some of her students are working on projects on the house styles, musical traditions, jokes and religion in certain culture areas. She also teaches a class entitled Supernatural Belief Systems, 321, that studies the religion in other cultures and in American Society with a focus on Myth, Taboo, Cults and the Supernatural.

Next semester Dr. Armstrong will present a new class open to all students entitled "Women in Society." According to Dr. Armstrong, this directed study course "will be arranged around readings about women in our own and other cultures. It is meant as an introduction to the study of womens' roles and contributions from the perspective of anthropology and sociology. An introductory level course in either subject is helpful but not mandatory and the course is open to anyone in the community."

Although Dr. Armstrong is hoping to return to Scotland this summer, in the future she would like to direct a summer field school in Scotland. She says she "would like to take a group of students to a village near Wich, Scotland, to study the people and cultures there." She would try to arrange for students to stay in a stone cottage guest house during the field school. She wishes to hear from anyone interested in going to Scotland and doing field studies there.

On Longwood, Dr. Armstrong says that she is "quite impressed with the Sociology and Anthropology department" and feels "the student-faculty relationships seem to be very good at Longwood." She says that "coming from New York to Farmville, things are very new to me," however, she is enjoying her teaching position at Longwood. Longwood is fortunate to have Dr. Armstrong and her students are definitely benefiting from her teaching expertise.

Chlamydia- Most Prevalent S.T.D.

By JIM SCHWARTZ

Medical researchers claim chlamydia has become the most prevalent sexually transmitted disease in the country, and college students are among the most likely to contract it.

Screenings of women coming to health clinics at the universities of Washington, Denver, Nebraska, Alabama, Boston and Tufts, among others, show seven to 15 percent test positive for chlamydia.

And rates as high as 35 percent have been reported at certain clinics.

There may now be three to four million new cases of chlamydia each year in the United States, estimates Dr. Lawrence Sanders of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Furthermore, 15-to-19-year-olds are the most likely people to get the disease, the CDC says.

Little hard data exist to verify that incidence of the seemingly-obscure disease is rising, but general observations by doctors around the county suggest the disease is spreading, says Prof. Walter Stamm of the University of Washington's medical school.

However, research in England does show incidence of the disease has been increasing there annually for the last ten years, Stamm adds.

Especially troubling to doctors is that chlamydia often does not produce symptoms in its victims.

However, unlike acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) and herpes, chlamydia is readily treatable with antibiotics such as tetracycline, Anderson explains.

Symptoms, usually occurring within ten days, often include discharge and a burning sensation when urinating.

Increased availability of cheaper tests for chlamydia also may be contributing to the rise in reports of the disease, Anderson notes.

A chlamydia test usually costs $35 to $50, she adds.

But Anderson cautions that standard pelvic exams, even those including a Pap smear, usually will not detect chlamydia.

The lack of symptoms in victims may help explain why many people are less concerned about chlamydia than they are about more fearsome veneral diseases like AIDS and herpes.

At least 40 percent of the chlamydia cases diagnosed in women are asymtomatic, says Susan Lloyd of the CDC.

About 20 to 30 percent of the men diagnosed do not show symtoms, she adds.

Victims often don't discover they have chlamydia, moreover, until they are treated for other illnesses like gonorrhea.

Health centers are doing more to prevent the spread of the disease.

"We are getting more aggressive in treating sex partners," Anderson says.

The new tests also allow clinicians to examine for chlamydia specifically.

Anderson recommends young adults who are sexually active, especially with more than one partner, should be tested for chlamydia.

ED DEPT. COULD LOSE 25 PERCENT OF ITS BUDGET

Even before President Reagan's budget proposed slashing the Education Dept.'s budget 10 percent, the Congressional Budget Office told the Senate last week "automatic" cuts due Mar. 1 to satisfy the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law could shave 25 percent off the department's fiscal 1987 budget.

That would amount to a cut of $7.65 billion, compared to the $3.2 billion the president proposed Feb. 5.

Pell Grant funding would be cut by 17 percent, the American Association of State Colleges and Universities predicted.

But all college programs would be "decimated" by the Gramm-Rudman cuts, which go into effect if Congress and the president don't agree on alternative cuts by March 1, the Committee for Education Funding says.

Golf Team 'Optimistic'

Longwood men's golf coach Steve Nelson is optimistic about the upcoming spring season with six veterans returning from the fall and three newcomers comprising the squad. The Lancers have their first home match Thursday when they play Virginia Wesleyan and Hampden-Sydney at Longwood Golf Course at 1:00.

"We should be much better than last year's team," said the coach. "Our top three players are solid golfers. If we can get some good play from our number four and five golfers we could do well."

Junior Ty Bordner will seek to equal or better his fall stroke average of 77.2. Bordner set a school record for 36 holes with a 71-72-143 in the Old Dominion Tournament.

Newcomer Richard Hardy is an experienced golfer who has the ability to shoot in the 70's consistently. Junior Mark Marshall is another veteran whom Nelson feels will do well this spring.

The Lancer golfers opened their season in the District III Tournament in Sanford, North Carolina March 10-11 balloning from a first round 337 to a 349 and finishing 17th out of 24 teams.

Longwood was tied for ninth place after the first round at Quail Ridge Golf Course, but slipped eight spots after slumping on the second day of the tournament, ending up at 337-349-686.

Hardy was Longwood's top performer in the 36-hole tourney. He carded an 85-79-164 to beat out Bordner's 80-87-167 for team honors.

Also playing for Longwood this spring are Chris Gray, Jon Goddin and Joe Bernat.

Battling for the No. 1 spot are Chuck Fagan and Jeff Lewis, a transfer from Gettysburg College. Freshmen Jeff Mount and Doug Todd will likely play the No. 4 and 6 positions in the top six. Doug is the younger brother of former Lancer netter John Todd ('83).

"Even with the loss of three of last year's top players, we will be stronger this year," says Posipanko. "We have a better schedule, more home matches and good incoming talent. We should have a shot at a break-even season."

Lewis- Ireland Bound

As a member of the Carolina All-Stars, a team made up of former college players from the Carolinas and Virginia, Lewis played against international competition on a five-game trip through Ireland. The team, coached by former Winthrop College Head Coach Neild Gordon, played the Irish National Team, a pair of Irish all-star teams and competed in an International Tournament in Dublin with other teams from Europe.

LONNIE LEWIS

Lewis, a graduate of Henrico High School in Richmond, has hopes of playing professionally in Europe. Playing in Ireland gave him a chance to show what he could do against international competition.

Lewis is Longwood's third best all-time career scorer with 1,425 points. He averaged 18.1 points and ranked among national leaders in free throw percentage (.890) during the past season. The 6-3 senior reached double figures in 26 of the Lancers' 27 games in 1985-86.

An All-Mason Dixon Conference first team selection, Lewis was a co-captain for Longwood, helping the Lancers rebound from a 4-10 start to finsih 14-13 and second in the MDAC.

Also included on the team were several players from Winthrop, Presbyterian College and Newberry College.

Riders Take Ribbons

Longwood's riding team, in its second competition of the spring, earned nine ribbons in an intercollegiate horse show at the University of Virginia March 1, but finished 10th with 12 points.

Virginia won the show with 49 points and Sweet Briar was second with 30.

The Lancers got ribbons from: Karen Clarke, 6th in horsemanship on the flat and 5th over fences, Mike Carey, 6th over fences, Bill Fahey, 4th over fences, Ann Lawson, 5th on the flat, 6th over fences, Lawrence Sutton, 4th on the flat, Sharon Kauffman, 3rd on the flat, and Jennifer Winn, 4th on the flat.

Longwood is looking forward to hosting its first show of the season April 6.

Player Of Week

Sophomore lefthander Tony Beverley hurled shutout baseball while working 6 and one-third innings of relief and was chosen Longwood College Player of the Week for the period March 3-10. Player of the Week is selected by the Longwood Sports Information Office.

TONY BEVERLEY

Beverley picked up a win March 7 while blanking West Virginia Tech over the final 3 and one-third innings and came back March 8 to blank Division II power Shippensburg over the three innings he worked in Longwood's opening game 10-5 defeat.

The Lancer pitcher has not allowed a run in his last 11 and one-third innings of work and leads the Longwood staff in earned run average at 1.26. He has allowed just two earned runs in 14.3 innings. With a 2-0 record thus far, Beverely has already notched a five-inning no-hitter.

He blanked Benedict March 1, 14-0, allowing just three walks and striking out 10. His no-hit performance is only the fourth in Longwood baseball history.

LANCER SPORTS

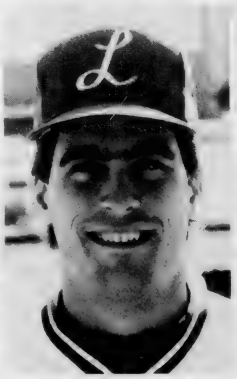
Baseball Splits Twin Bills; Mayone Slams In Ten

Longwood's baseball team, off to a 9-3-1 start, took both ends of a doubleheader from West Virginia Tech March 7, but fell to visiting Division II power Shippensburg in a twin bill March 8 in action at Lancer Field. The Lancers resume play on the road Tuesday at Radford before returning home to host Division II's Slippery Rock Thursday and Mount St. Mary's Saturday. Both twin bills begin at 1:00.

The doubleheader with Shippensburg marked Longwood's first big test of the season. The Raiders are among the best teams in Division II year after year, and certainly lived up to their billing.

Shippensburg won the first game 10-5 and took the nightcap 6-0, handing the Lancers only their second shutout in the last 132 games. In the opener the visitors from Pennsylvania pounded out 10 hits and took advantage of two Longwood errors to score four unearned runs.

Junior pitcher Rob Furth took the loss as Longwood squandered a 3-0 first inning lead. Catcher Jeff Rohm and rightfielder Mike Haskins came through with the key hits. Two walks plus a double by first baseman Jeff Mayone loaded the bases. Rohm plated one run with a single and Haskins delivered a two-out base-hit for two more runs.



The Raiders took control in the third on two walks, a single and a homer for a 4-3 lead. Six more turns crossed the plate in the fourth on five hits, an error and a walk. Tony Beverley came on in the fifth to shut-out Shippensburg over the final three innings.

Longwood loaded the bases in the fifth and scored two runs on a sacrifice fly by Tom Klatt and an error, but could pull no closer.

In the second game Shippensburg's Clapper fired a one-hitter and blanked the Lancers. The Raider hurler allowed only three Lancer runners to reach base. LC loaded the bases in the third on a walk, an error and an infield single by third baseman Marty Ford which hit an umpire.

Clapper got out of the jam by inducing Lancer shortstop Kelvin Davis and Mayone to hit into fielder's choices. Junior pitcher Tony Browning was saddled with the loss as 3 Shippensburg homers spelled the difference. The Raiders are now 2-0.

Jeff Mayone ripped four hits in seven at-bats and plated five runs in each game with a 3-run homer to pace the sweep of West Virginia Tech. Longwood pounded the Bears, who were opening their season, 15-8 and 16-8 behind a 24-hit attack.

MAYONE DRIVES IN 10 RUNS

Mayone, the top Lancer slugger, upped his season RBI total to 15 with the barrage. The junior is hitting .333 and is Longwood's career leader in homers with 21.

Sophomores Bill Conroy and Davis backed Mayone in the opener. Conroy, hitting .375 with 7 RBI, and Davis, the Lancers' top run producer with 14, each had a 2-run double. Beverley picked up his second win of the season in relief of starter Steve Gedro. Beverley pitched 3 and one-third innings of shutout baseball in a game that was stopped after six innings.

It was in the second game that Mayone clouted his 3-run homer. Davis added three more RBI with a 2-run homer, Rohm went 3-4 with two doubles and 3 RBI and freshman Greylin Rice drove in 3 runs with a double. Freshman Joel Bryant picked up the win with relief help from Tommy Walsh. Darkness stopped the game after five innings. Bryant is now 2-0.

Longwood played the games without the services of centerfielder Dennis Leftwich, out with a twisted ankle. Leftwich hit a torrid .476 and stole five bases in six attempts in the Lancers first seven games before being injured. Rohm and senior second baseman Todd Thompson returned to action after missing several games with hand injuries and Conroy played despite a sprained ankle.

Women's Golf Gears Up

Third in the 1985 tournament, Longwood will serve as host of this year's event which will be played in Wilmington, North Carolina April 11-13.

Expected to lead the Lady Lancer effort is sophomore Tina Barrett, who qualified for the NCAA Women's Golf Tournament last spring. Barrett set a school record for stroke average—78.6, and was named a second team All-American.

Marcia Melone, a co-captain along with Barrett, is hoping to regain the form that earned her second team All-America honors last spring. She had a stroke average of 80.8 in 1984-85, but didn't play as well in this year's fall season.

The Lady Lancers opened their spring season March 7-9 in the Hudson Industries-Troy State Invitational Tournament at Lakepoint State Park in Eufaula, Alabama, and finished in a disappointing 20th place out of 21 mostly Division I teams.

Longwood opened the tourney with a 343 but improved to 333 in the second round. Windy conditions contributed to the Lady Lancers' final round of 350 for a 54-hole total of 1026. Coach Barbara Smith's 5-person lineup included all sophomores.

Barrett played well, particularly the first two days, at the Lakepoint State Park course, a long layout which featured lots of potential problems with water. She paced Longwood with a 78-77-83-238. Melone shot 88-81-86-255. Tammy Lohren shot 86-88-90-264, Gretchen Pugh 91-87-91-269 and Nacy Ryan 91-94-94-279.

Also playing for Longwood this spring will be Susan Broadwater, Amy Lavin, Kim Poirier, Leigh Russell, Leslie Oscovitch, and Libby Moore who joined the team this spring.

The Troy State Tournament provided the Lady Lancers with their first extended action on a golf course since the end of the fall season in October. With the next tournament in Florida March 30 through April 1 (the Peggy Kirk Bell Invitational), Longwood's golfers will be looking to improve on their performance in Alabama.

Shuler, Gough Expected To Lead Softball

Longwood's women's softball team, which may face a rebuilding year in 1986, opens its season this week with four home doubleheaders in six days.

The Lady Lancers host Vermont Monday at 3:00, Virginia Wesleyan Tuesday at 2:30, Ferrum Thursday at 3:00 and Lock Haven Saturday at 3:00. All of Longwood's home doubleheaders will be played at the Farmville Armory field.

"We are anxious about the start of the season," said first-year coach Loretta Coughlin. "We are young but as the season progresses we will develop a chemistry to play well together."

Coughlin and fourth year assistant coach Ernest Neal have six players back from last year's 16-11 team. Longwood has had four winning seasons in five years of softball competition.

Returning players include Bobbi Shuler, Annette Easterling, Julie Biscoe, Chris Lebel, Haidee Shiflet, and the veteran of the team Penny Gough.

BOBBI SHULER

On a team with no seniors, Gough, a junior first baseman, will be looked to by her younger teammates for leadership and help as needed. Gough batted .283 and drove in 13 runs last season. Shuler, an outfielder, led the team in RBI last season with 18 and batted .247.

Unfortunately for Longwood, none of the six returning players is a pitcher. The Lady Lancers will have a completely new staff. Newcomers Stacey Thompson and Jill Everett will share the mound duties.

Tennis

By ROBERT TAYLOR

It appears that Longwood men's tennis coach Rich Posipanko has his work cut out for him after a 2-14 record in 1985, but the coach feels the 1986 team could be his best since the 1983 squad finished 7-7.

The Lancer netters open the season this week with four home matches. Longwood hosts Glassboro Wednesday at 3:00, John Jay Thursday at 3:30, King's College (PA) Saturday at 1:00 and Lock Haven Sunday at 1:00.

Longwood will be led by returnees Arjun Rishi and J. D. Almond. Almond is expected to play No. 5 and Rishi No. 3. John Pastino is another veteran from last season.

Pruitt Captures Miss Longwood Crown

By BRUCE SOUZA

It was sort of like scoring a hat trick. It seemed like the new Miss Longwood, Martha Pruitt a sophomore from Cape Charles, won every category available. Pruitt seemed flabbergasted as she wrapped up Ms. Congenaility, Most Talented, and finally the Ms. Longwood title.

The pageant was hosted by Jonna Fitzgerald, Miss Texas 1985, who was also 2nd runner up to Miss America 1985. As a hostess she did a far superior job than last year's hostess, although her continuous attempts to perk up an uninspired audience soon became boorish.

The evening's entertainment highlights included some extraordinary musicianship by Miss Texas, as she played her fiddle to everyone's delight. Also featured were those veritable little imps from Richmond, The Held Over Sisters. These precocious little pixies had everybody smiling, as they belted out popular tunes both past and present. Miss Longwood 1985, Kim Kenworthy reminded the crowd why she was chosen last year by serenading an appreciative audience. The unsung heroes of the show were the members of the Longwood Jazz Ensemble who provided the background music during the swimsuit and evening gown competitions.

The contest itself consisted of only 9 entries, as senior entrant Lisa Zuraw was unable to attend. All contestants performed admirably as the talent show featured many singers, a floutist, and two dancers. The swimsuit display seemed to dissappoint many, as some of the contestants filled out the posterior portions of their swimsuits a little too well.

All in all it was a decent night's entertainment as long as you're not ardent feminist. The technical aspects of the show went relatively smooth with the exception of a few miscues.

Martha Pruitt will go on to represent Longwood at the Miss Virginia pageant to be held later this year. The Rotunda would like to extend its congratulations to first Runer up Carla Lockhart., second Runner up Susan Reagan, and all the other contestants.

Longwood Reorganizes Curriculum

College Will Divide Into Three Schools

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

Longwood College is presently in the process of dividing its curriculum into three separate schools: the School of Education, the School of Arts and Sciences, and the School of Business.

Prior to this reorganization, every department head had to go to the Vice President of Academic Affairs to approve their every move. This is the same system of administration that has been used since well before the high-rises were built, doubling enrollment.

Last summer it was realized that the system must be broken down in order to be more efficient and avoid confusion. The result in these three schools, each of which will be headed by a dean who is also a teacher. They will be in charge of questions concerning curriculum, faculty development, and co-college programs. The dean selection process is now underway, and should be completed sometime in April.

The results of this change on the students and faculty will actually be nothing at all, as it is basically a formality. Most colleges of Longwood's size (1500-3000 students) are organized into specific schools, according to the enrollment's interests. Course offerings will not be effected as the faculty number and curriculum quality are upgraded.

Prospective students have come to expect 'schools' of their major from a college. For example, a future business major would rather enroll in a school of business than in a department of business, putting Longwood "a little bit behind the eight-ball," as Dr. Jacques of the Business department put it.

My Page

It was quick and it was sure. Longwood's student-run disciplinary system, the way in which students have been regulating themselves here for years and years, the process that has seen good times and bad and has improved markedly in recent semesters, was destroyed this month in one fell swoop. Sliced and diced, demolished and abolished by Longwood's "Q-tip" administrators (a useful group, unbreakable, with soft heads on both ends, these things become self-defeating, dangerous even, when pushed too far into your ear; although never around for very long, there is always another one in the box.

Once again, the Q-tips have acted, the latest administrative travesty is the development of Minimum Saction Guidelines for Disciplinary Cases. A group made up primarily of administrators and faculty members, sat down and tried to think of every rule that could possibly be broken at Longwood. The list covers every violation from using sex to get a better grade to gambling and burning candles, (I can see Stubbs now "Open this door right now, I know you're having a candlelight ceremony in there, you brazen hussies.")

For every violation, there is a minimum punishment that must be levied by the judicial and honor boards. There is no room for flexibility, lenience, special considerations.

The disciplinary system has been effectively removed from the hands of the students of Longwood. On the bright side, we are all still allowed to decide on our own what clothes we will wear each day and the Board of Visitors has just recently struck down the proposal allowing the Housing Office to arrange marriages. Next on the agenda, the administration will be reevaluating the pros and cons Farmville's Free Market Economy.

A judicial board member told me that he "feels like a puppet, we have absolutely no flexibility, I think the whole thing stinks."

I submit that the recent surge in student participation as board members will reverse as soon as the members begin to feel the strings being tied to their hands, their feet, their minds.

The administration has said that the reason for the mimimum sanctions is the descrepancy between punishments dished out by the boards, the R.E.C.s and the Dean of Students. Students accused of a violation have a choice between an administrative hearing or a board hearing. The sanctions emerging from these various forums either have been too inconsistent, potentially or actually.

I say: so what? This problem is one that faces the U.S. Judicial System too. It is due to the silly American belief that justice prevails before all else, that each individual case is different, and must be decided on its own merits. No legislature or elite group can make assumptions about incidents or situations that have yet to occur.

The committee that compiled these minimum sanctions could have devoted their entire careers listing every possible consideration, circumstance and conceivable factor, and the list would still be lacking. Each case must be considered separately, no effort is capable of anticipating even the most clear cut violation. In fact, didn't some Italian sociologist make up one of these lists a couple hundred years ago? Where is he now? Dead, just like his silly minimum sanctions work.

The rule at Longwood is for the Dean of Students to review and approve every decision made by the disciplinary boards; in the past the Dean has had no hesitency to overturn both the "verdict" and the sanction. Surely the Dean will not allow improper santions slip by her desk. Why must this minimal student imput be eliminated?

Longwood brouchures sent to high schoolers taut this system as an example of the respect students get while "living fully" at college. The student-run judicial system used to be one of the best things about Longwood. The number of students involved now is very high. The system was getting better slowly but surely until these new minimum sanctions have changed the entire basis for student decision-making.

Judicial Board Member: "I will not obey these minimum sanctions, they will have to fire me before I go against what I believe is right."

I urge all disciplinary board members to toss these sanctions in the trash where they belong. The authors of this document do not have access to the facts and testimony of the cases. Only you have access to the information upon which to base a sanction. Only you can decide on a fair and proper punishment for the various offenses. If the administration forces you to follow the sanctions and ignore your heart, your mind, then save yourself some trouble and quit the damn boards. There are inexpensive computers that perform the simple tasks that board members are now being asked to do. The minimum sanctions have eliminated your usefulness. Your time can be better spent pulling up a couch, watching the tube and chugging a cold one. Your judgement is no longer needed.

ARA Workers Respond

To the Editor:

This letter is written in response to last week's article "ARA Police" written by Dina Ezelle and Deborah Shelkey. We'd like to clear up a few misconceptions.

The students who serve you as waiters and waitresses have two or more tables to wait on. This means they are very busy running back and forth to bring you your food. Every effort is made to please you. The reason orders are not taken until everyone is seated, is to assure that everyone gets their choice. This is the result of a decision made after complaints that we didn't wait for everyone to be seated. As any employee in any establishment, we have rules we must follow.

Yes, waiters and waitresses are often treated rudely. The fact of the matter is that we're your fellow students and friends. There isn't any need to be rude. If you have a problem with one of us, please see one of our supervisors. There are usually two student supervisors at every meal, or you can talk to Doris Cary, Rick Johnson, or fill out one of the blue "response" cards. Your complaints are taken seriously so voice them. Instead of sitting back and talking, do something about it! We all care about your complaints and every effort will be made to improve the problem.

Sections of the dining hall are closed off near closing time. This is so we can have one side of the dining hall clean to make sure we get done before our next classes, etc. Doesn't it make sense to have the few people that come in late eat on one side rather than scattered all over? We can't spend the whole day in the dining hall, and this system enables us to get our work done and see to our other commitments on time. We make sure there are always enough accommodations.

In closing, we'd like to add that we are not monsters trying to ruin your meal. We are here for you but we need your cooperation. Please help us by cleaning up after yourselves and treat us as you'd like to be treated — with common courtesy and respect. We're only human, therefore we are capable of mistakes but we do work hard to make the dining hall a better place to eat in. We'd also like to take this opportunity to cordially invite Dina Ezelle and Deborah Shelkey to work in the dining hall to see our point of view before they form bad opinions of us.

The SGA Is Rolling

My Fellow Students,

I would like to take this opportunity to communicate some information that I feel is important to you as a student at Longwood, a "State of the Association" address if you will.

The upcoming elections on April 17 will be the one of the most important elections in a long time. We will be voting not only on new class officers and honor-judicial board members, but also on a new visitation policy and the amendments to the SGA Constitution.

Deb Anas and the Residence Hall Life Board have been hard at work all semester formulating a new visitation policy for the student body, I will return to Longwood in May to present the proposal to the Board of Visitors. If passed by the Board, it will take effect next semester.

We have also been working this semester on a much needed revision of the SGA Constitution. I will not attempt to list all of the changes here, but let me summarize them by saying that we have basically abolished the Executive Council and reorganized the executive powers under a more realistic Student Senate.

There have also been some developments in the state legislature that will be of interest to you. The General Assembly has approved revenue bond projects which include 5 million dollars for the greek housing project, 1.3 million for the renovation of Cox and Wheeler into efficiency apartments, and 1.1 million for the acquisition of additional parking areas. Also in the project is money for the replacement of bathroom plumbing, fixtures and tiles in Cox, Wheeler, Stubbs, and South Cunningham.

We have many more plans for the rest of the semester and next year, all of which are at a stage where we need your input to help us make the best decisions for all of us. I urge you all to come out to Student Government meetings and exercise your voice. Meetings are held every Thursday at 6:00 in the Conference Center of Lankford.

"Bay Shore To Predge Your Wok"

To The Editor:

I would like to know why - Longwood College hires so many foreigners or professors with accents which the students cannot understand? This semester this problem has been brought to my attention because fifty percent of my professors fill either one or both of these stipulations. I am finding it hard to understand one of these professors in particular because she talks incoherently and does not explain material so that the average student can comprehend. When one asks her a question, she has not mastered the English language enough to understand your question, let alone answer it. I would like for the administration to sit in on her class to see if they could solve a problem after she had inadequately explained the proper method to solve the problem.

I question not only her credentials but also her competence to teach. Take for instance, the other day we had a test with very few problems on it and she gave us a problem that could not be done and did not catch her error until fifteen minutes was left during regular class time.

I have maintained a 3.0+ average since my second semester here so it is not my stupidity that prevents me from learning the material dictated by incompetent foreign professors. One could advise me to register for classes taught by true Americans but in two cases these foreigners are the only professors that "try to teach" these particular classes and in the other instance it was a choice between two foreigners. I encourage the administration to answer my question of why hire foreigners that do not deserve the pay check we provide when they do not perform their job of educating us.

U.VA Student Rages On Parking

Dear Mr. Editor,

This last Monday I had the misfortune to visit your Longwood Campus while driving an automobile. In most cities, towns, and even college campuses a car is not considered a liability (we will not consider New York City) but when I arrived on your spacious campus I quickly began to note a serious lack of space for guests. Is it that guests are not welcome here? Is the administration embarrassed of something that they don't want outsiders to see? Low admission standards are hard to see from the road anyway! I quite frankly was upset but not near as upset as the next morning when I hiked back to my car only to discover a ticket on it. I guess that guests have to be out by 8:30 in the morning! Tell me Mr. Editor, does your administration handle everything with such brilliance? Are all problems handled with efficiency, some how I doubt it.

Time Piece: 1968-1972

Compiled by Bruce Souza

We at the Rotunda thought it would be fun to back track a little, and see what the women of Longwood were thinking and saying during the years 1968-72. During these years there were dramatic changes in American society, as well as at Longwood. Here are some short news stories, letters to the editor, and gossip as it appeared back yonder.

Note: Although we found many pictures of current faculty members we are saving those for a rainy day.

G — Last week we saw a "Dash Dogfood" truck making deliveries to the back entrance to the dining hall and also to Lankford. Does A.R.A. Slater feed us dogfood as a meat substitute? A.B. & D.P.

A — Mr. Carbone says he doesn't know what truck you saw but that it wasn't delivering dogfood to the dining hall. He said it might have been a truck from the wholesale grocery store he deals with and the dogfood sign could have been an advertisement. Slater deals with Armour and Swift packing companies for its meat and to Mr. Carbone's knowledge they do not make Dash Dogfood.

Q — Is there any truth to the rumor that the police are going to make raids on the motels in the area? If so, what would be the consequences if a Longwood student was found in the room? What right do the police have to make sudden raids on a room which is supposedly private and paid for? B.C.

At a meeting held approximately ten days ago by Prince Edward County Sheriff, Jack Overton, with a number of our student leaders, he indicated to our student leaders that a number of law enforcement agencies were contemplating the possibility of "raiding" motels in several surrounding counties in light of suspected violations of the law. There was no indication on Sheriff Overton's part that he felt any of our students were involved in these violations in the law but he simply wanted student leaders to have this information. It was the feeling of several members of the staff that I should note this at the Press Conference held on April 20, 1972. In accordance with the staff's request, I did discuss this briefly. Involving the legal rights of the police to "raid" such motels, there are, of course, limitations as prescribed by law as to what law enforcement officers can do. I have a great confidence in the local law enforcement agencies and certainly feel that they are conforming with all aspects of the law.

ALPHA DELTA PI SWEETY

Tommy Johnson, a sophomore at Hampden-Sydney College, has become the "Sweetheart" of Alpha Delta Pi sorority. When asked how this came about Frankie Brown said, "So many fraternities have sweethearts, so why couldn't we? We wanted someone who wasn't someone's boy friend, someone we could all be friends with."

Many of the sisters had met him at Tom's Campus Room and when he visited the chapter room during open house. All the girls liked him immediately and when he was nominated for "Pi Guy" he received a unanimous vote. At least twenty of the sisters drove to Hampden-Sydney that night and serenaded Tommy outside his window at Cushing Dormitory.

"My roommates knew what was going to happen and they had been acting funny all night. They were really giving me a lot of grief." When Tommy heard the girls outside he realized what was happening.

He became the official "Pi Guy" during a ceremony held in the chapter room. "I felt kind of funny," Tommy said, "It's not an everyday occurrence."

Colleges In The News

CHARLOTTESVILLE: At a recent session of the State Senate, Senator Herbert H. Bateman, of Newport News, proposed a resolution that would tighten control over dormitory visits by members of the opposite sex. Mr. Bateman charged that sex among students at the state's colleges and universities has "gotten out of hand." He referred to dormitories as "bawdy houses" and added that the situation was worse than could describe.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

There are some of us on the Longwood campus who have recently discovered an appalling situation centered in our newly-acquired television rooms. Some inconsiderate girls are taking their dates over to the Lankford Building for a presumed night of watching the "telly", and turning our precious television rooms into makeout headquarters for the unimaginative. Now why can't these people find some other place for their "courting' and sparkin' " instead of taking up a whole couch and a whole television room? It would be fine for couples to gather, several in a room, but they should be willing to share the room with the dateless and not demand privacy for their own concerns. Those TV rooms were built for the enjoyment of all, not just a few, and they were equipped with televisions and furniture for the comfort of all. So please, those of you who are guilty of this, don't come to the TV rooms unless you want to watch television, with company.

M.B.

"Pi Guy" Tommy Johnson

Dear Editor,

As seniors looking back over four years at Longwood, we have seen many beneficial changes take place, both social and academic. One of the most favorable of these has been that concerning class attendance, but we feel that there is still room for improvement. Under the present system each professor makes his own regulations regarding attendance in his classes, but it doesn't take one long to realize that it is most often those jprofessors' lectures are uninteresting, of little worth, and-or impertinent to tahe course that allow few or no "cuts" at all. It would seem that a system of unlimited cuts in all classes (with the possible exception of performance classes) would serve to keep both students and professors "on their toes," for then the instructor would have to make his lectures either so interesting that the student would not want to "cut" (and this is not unusual even now with some of our faculty) or so valuable to the student generally and to the course material that the student would feel that she could not "cut" (this, too, is found among courses).

An unlimited "cut" system would be a challenge to all and would bring greater academic satisfaction to the students of Longwood. We would like to ask the students, faculty, and administration: Why don't we take another look at this situation?

More Freedoms Gained... Will They Be Abused?

By LIBBA BALL

Longwood girls — rejoice over new — founded liberties! In the past month, you have been granted dual privileges that others before you will envy. As students, you now have the freedom to drink alcoholic beverages within the Farmville City limits, (complying with Virginia state A.B.C. regulations); and now Seniors can keep their cars on campus all year instead of the prior nine-week ruling. What next? Will we be granted permission to wear slacks and bermudas on campus in the near future? What's this rumor about Longwood's Summer Session being co-ed?

About this drinking within Farmville's limits — it's amazing to watch the crowds of girls gather in "3.2 serving" Tom's Campus Room. Leo's will really take a loss on business! And can you imagine what will happen to the local taxi services now that the girls can walk only three blocks to drink? Hampden-Sydney has a virtual week-night monopoly now. What girls won't trot down to Tom's if it means a social encounter — and besides, if you run into somebody with lots of coins, you can have a free juke-box concert over a pitcher! One warning: If you're planning an evening at Tom's with a date, better get there early. By 8 p.m., all the seats are taken and a line of thirsty girls encircles the bar! Quoted two steady-goers, "After just one week's freedom, we're just loving' it!"

Realistically, is this new freedom a fair one? Fair in the sense that the students deserve it? Are the girls who go drinking capable of handling themselves on the three-block return to campus? Now that the prowler has been penalized, "life after dark" is a little safer; but how can we be sure a stray girl won't wander down the wrong street when sh's had too much to drink? Will social offenses increase? Are those girls whose first drinking experiences will be welcomed by this privilege, be granted justice if they do present misconduct? Perhaps this permission is on a trial basis; but unless the girls who take advantage of this privilege use it with discretion and maturity, this trial drinking rule may become a thing of our fantasy! So be careful; don't drink more than you feel you can handle — you don't impress anyone when you can't even sign in, except your shocked head resident. Social probation mars anyone's record. If you're traveling with a group of girls, "safety first" says it's better to return in a group. Try not to snake your girl friend's date, and an evening of social drinking can turn out to be a lot of fun. Snake your best friend's date, over-indulge, and you may find yourself at the Virginia Unemployment Office. Amen! The social standards committee has granted us this permission; they feel the student body is capable of behaving itself; let's not misuse this once in-a-life-time liberty!

Just think! Our Seniors can have their own cars on campus year-'round! Underclassmen, don't despair at not being able to do this. England's Prince Charles, owner of a $3,120 sports car has been informed that he will not be allowed to drive on Cambridge University's campus without special permission. Charles, only 19, has to be 22 before he is granted this permission — so if the Queen of England's son can't drive while on campus, we young ladies of the Old Dominion shouldn't feel so deprived. Advice? Make friends with a senior!

Advanced Scuba Spring Breaks In Bahamas

By NELSON BORDEAU

Everyone in our advanced scuba class anticipated the Bahamas to be a perfect paradise, and it was.

The first night of our adventure brought us to the island of Bimini. Bimini is a very small island; you could walk around its perimeter in about fifteen minutes. The island itself was once a coral reef which resembled hardened lava rock with deposits of sand and shells scattered amongst its surface. Large leafy palm trees, provided shade to make the sun's intense heat a little more bearable, protruded all over the island. In the middle of Bimini lies one dusty dirt road. On the roadside there were small gift shops and plenty of places to get a cool, intoxicating beverage.

Early the next morning our class left the island and headed for our first dive site! When we arrived for the dive, the captain informed us we would observe a sixty foot tug boat which had wrecked there last year. Dive partners were paired up and splashed in one after the other. Under the crystal blue water laid the rusty framework of the boat about thirty yards away. The water clarity in the Bahamas made visibility a perfect pleasure for the diver. As we swam closer to the boat, marine life multiplied in abundance. There were fish of all shapes and sizes bearing all the colors of the spectrum. While looking inside the boat the beamlike structures which held the frame together were covered with hardened coral formations and barnacles which blemished the entire wreck. It was hard to believe that so many invertebrate and vertebrate animals could find their home on a boat that had only been wrecked within a year's time.

Throughout the trip our class made many more dives (12 total). Each new dive was a refreshing learning experience as well as an adventure. By the end of the trip each student had completed the requirements to receive their Advanced Open Water Divers certification.

The boat ride back to the United States left most of us with long faces, knowing that in a couple of days our spring break would be over and soon we would be behind the desks at Longwood again, finishing up the rest of the semester. Although our Bahamas trip was short, it's something that we'll never forget.

Any students who are interested in taking scuba diving as an elective next year will be eligible for the annual Bahamas trip upon completion of scuba class. Scuba class lasts one half of a semester and will start this September. Jim Glasser is the instructor of the course and he's more than willing to get you started. For more information about scuba class, check your Longwood College Catalog and register for an adventure of a lifetime!

Opinion: The No Pet Policy

By ROBIN MEEK

Remember your first few weeks as a college freshman, the feelings of being homesick, of missing your family and friends, but most of all your pet? A pet can be a best friend and a security blanket when facing the new challenging world of college. Why doesn't Longwood College allow pets other than fish and why do they exclude the carnivore family? When I say pets, I do not mean horses or St. Bernards — just easy to handle, house raised dogs and cats.

The R.E.C. of the Collonades gave me the following reasons for not allowing pets in the residence halls: fleas, allergies of the other students, and the problem of confinement. Last year Longwood had to purchase approximately two hundred new mattress and boxsprings because of flea infestation. The exact cause of the flea problem could not be proved as the result of a house raised animal, but it was suspected, according to Rick Weibl, Director of Housing. If a pet's owner is confined to the room with his pet, wouldn't he invest in methods of preventing fleas for the pet's comfort as well as his own?

I recently read a letter submitted to Ann Landers that stated it is actually better for a cat to keep him confined in your house instead of letting him run loose out doors. When the animal is outside he has a better chance of picking up various diseases and insects. Granted one dorm room is not exactly adequate room for a pet to run and play in, but think of the constant love and attention you and your roommate can give the animal.

I feel the only substantial argument the housing office has regarding the no pet policy is for the occupant who is to inhabit your room after you and your pet leave, if he or she suffers from allergies. This can easily be solved by designating a hall to be used, year after year, for the sole purpose of pets and their owners. Shouldn't someone get a special interest form raised for a hall that would allow pets?

Another gripe Rick Weibl of the Housing Office has was that come the end of the second semester when the students are packing up to go home they tend to leave their pets on campus. Mr. Weibl approximated that last May there were between twenty to twenty-five cats left wondering around campus. It could not be proved that all of these animals belonged to the students, but, nevertheless, homes had to be found for all of the felines. If a student has the pet with him all year he should have become very attached to it and should not just discard the animal at the end of the school year.

In high school, certain rights and privileges were denied to us because a select few would abuse the rules. This is college, and we are supposed to be adults and should be treated accordingly. Why not let those of us who want the responsibility of maintaining a pet have the opportunity to prove that we are adults in a way other than just by our ages. We should not let the crusade for a hall for pets and their owners turn out like the twenty-three hour visitation rights.

Housing Office Out Of Closet

Following last year's Room Selection Process, the Housing Office sent an evaluation of the process to 200 randomly selected resident students asking them their thoughts and opinions about the process. The results of that evaluation have been used to improve this year's Room Selection process.

Several improvements that returning students can look for this year relate primarily to a desire for more information about the process being available. Therefore, the Housing Office intends to make better use of posters and the ROTUNDA.

After improvement will be the offering of two ROOMMATE SEARCH SOCIALS. Given the success of last year's effort, it was decided that two socials would allow for those persons needing to fill their room-suite or seeking to find a roommate to have a greater opportunity to locate one another. The socials are scheduled for April 2nd and 15th in the Virginia Room at 5:45 p.m.

Finally, the process has been slightly modified to make waiting in line less of a problem. Returning students will be able to obtain assignment cards and lottery number any of three days by coming to the Tabb first floor lounge. Number Draw will be April 7, 8, and 9 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

One thing that has not changed is the effort on the part of the Housing Office to make the process as simple and hassle free as possible.

For the second year, the Housing Office will be offering rising seniors the opportunity to live off campus. The Senior Lottery will be implemented as a part of the Room Selection Process and will be used to permit up to fifty resident students who have earned and are attempting enough credit hours (90) to be considered seniors next fall.

All resident students who were eligible received specific information via campus mail.

The Housing Office will notify the fifty residents released from the residency requirement prior to room selection so that they will not compete with other residents selecting rooms. If they are unable to find a place to live off campus, they may still be housed where space is available. ARA Dining will also be providing meal plan options for off campus students as it has done in the past.

The Board of Visitors have authorized the use of a lottery as a means of dealing with an anticipated housing "crunch." Next year as the result of the closing of South Cunningham for spring semester and a greater number of new students desiring to attend Longwood it is believed we cannot accommodate everyone in the halls.

Taken To The Limit

The lower dining hall was taken to the limit with the LIMIT on Friday night. Sun had organized the buying of beer in a different fashion this mixer. Tickets could be bought at two different locations in the mixer. It seemed to work much better carding the students once they were in the mixer.

The LIMIT played both pop and new wave music.

AXP served beer to all patrons for 75 cents a cup. Both negative and positive comments were made on the price of beer. If you have any suggestions or comments about the mixer or any SVN events — I urge you to come forward and give your suggestions.

Book Review: Clan Of The Cave Bears

By CHARISSE McGILL

The Clan of the Cave Bears is a group of men, women, and children who live in a cave about the time Homo-Sapiens began. According to Victor Barnoiw who wrote An Introduction to Anthropology, the Clan were Neanderthal Men. The Neanderthal Man had a thick skull, low brow bridges, heavy chinless jaws and teeth, and facial protrusions. The skull often had a low elevation. The Neanderthal skulls were often very long, and broadened out behind the ears. They often had broad noses, large eye sockets and a forward projecting upper jaw. The mouth was very broad, and the neck was thick and heavy with muscles. The leg bones were bowed, but the Neanderthal stood upright. The men had barrel liked chest and powerful arms and legs. The women had breasts and had a menstral cycle like the woman of today. The Neanderthal man stood about five feet tall and the woman about four feet nine inches.

Neanderthals did not have the vocal capacities of humans today, but made limited sounds and hand gestures to constitute a language. Evidence shows Neanderthals hunted and used fire. They were the first to bury their dead. Sometimes graves were dug in the back of the cave and the bodies were put into the fetal position.

The book, Clan of the Cave Bears, begins with the Clan searching for a new cave. An earthquake has destroyed their home. A human girl of five years old is also stranded by the earthquake. When the girl tries to find food and shelter, she is attacked by a cave lion, who wounds her but does not kill her. The clan stumbles upon the little girl in their search for a new cave.

The Clan's medicine woman treats the girl and begs to bring her along on the journey. The Clan is weary, because it is against their tradition to allow anyone but clan to be amongst them. Since the girl was hurt the leader agreed to bring her along. When the girl gets better, she finds the Clan a cave to live in. The Clan is weary of her but accepts her because she led them to a place where they could hunt and live in safety.

The girl lives with the Clan and learns the ways of the Clan. She becomes one of them even though she is different. She becomes the daughter of the medicine woman, and as she is accepted more and more she becomes a medicine woman herself.

Clan of the Cave Bears deals with emotions such as fear, love, hatred, and jealousy. This book shows how two different stages of human beings live together and the joys and problems they face. It portrays the beginning of Man and how the world may have been before the dawn of the Homo Sapien. To read Clan of the Cave Bears is to see the beginning of the world, and how other humans may have survived in it. I would suggest Clan of the Cave Bears as enjoyable reading for anyone with a vivid imagination.

Longwood Offers Tour To Germany

Among the opportunities Longwood College is offering during the summer of 1986 is the "Fair Tale Festival Tour," a two-week visit to the Hesse and Weser areas in central Germany where the Brothers Grimm collected folk tales, myths, and legends and wrote them down as Grimms' Fairy Tales.

The tour is scheduled for August 6-20 and will be directed by Dr. Mary Stuart Woodburn, associate professor of education at Longwood.

The tour will be of particular benefit to educators who work with children, Dr. Woodburn said, but also is designed "for families to enjoy together." Academic credit is available, and expenses are tax deductible if the tour is used to maintain or improve professional skills.

The itinerary in Germany includes Frankfurt, Marburg, Kassel, Hamelin, Bremen, and numerous villages and hamlets. Visits to special exhibits, fairy-tale castles and theme parks, museums, local festivals, marketplaces, inns, lectures and performances are among highlights of the tour.

The tour group will enjoy magnificent scenery along the Rhine River, in the Rhinegau vineyards, the Vogelsberg Mountains. and the thousand-year-old forest of Rhinehardswald; outstanding examples of Gothic architecture, including the Cologne Cathedral, the University of Marburg, the Town Hall of Goettingen, and the 13th-century St. Elisabeth Church; and visits to castles, fortresses, inns and taverns that date from the 12th century.

The cost of the tour is $1,695, plus $160 tuition fee. Included are round-trip air fare (New York to Brussels and return), land transportation, continental breakfast daily plus 10 dinners, accommodations in first or superior class tourist hotels, entrance and guide fees, lectures and performances.

For complete information on the Fairy Tale Festival Tour, write or call the Office of Continuing Studies, Longwood College, Farmville, VA 23901, telephone (804) 392-9256.

A PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICER ordered anti-Adolfo Calero slogans painted on a Duke U. bridge to be blotted out before the Nicaraguan contra leader, scheduled to speak there, arrived. The director of public safety says, "We should not be concerned about political signs . . . somebody in public safety made a mistake and I'm not real happy about it."

ILLEGAL BICYCLISTS could cost the U. of Arizona as much as $100 million in federal aid if a veteran wins a lawsuit concerning violations of Federal Handicap Regulations. A lack of bicycle regulations has allowed students to lock their bikes to handicap rails and in front of doors. The president of the UA Veternans Club — a handicapped person — says he will sue if UA does not regulate the bikes.

A BILL TO PHOHIBIT HAZING by student organizations died recently in a Indiana legislative committee. The committee chair says hazing is already covered under a state "recklessness" statue, but the Indiana U. dean of students says that "Whatever is avialable is not being used for hazing."

A FILM entitled "Football Fever Strikes Again," shown to hall and fraternity residents at Northwestern U., surprised its audience and prompted housing officials to toss penalty flags. The movie's sponsor, Campus Crusade for Christ, told hall officials that the film was full of football highlights and would be a good warmup for the Super Bowl — but failed to mention the film's religious overtones. "They didn't lie to us," says one official. "They just presented it to us completely wrong."

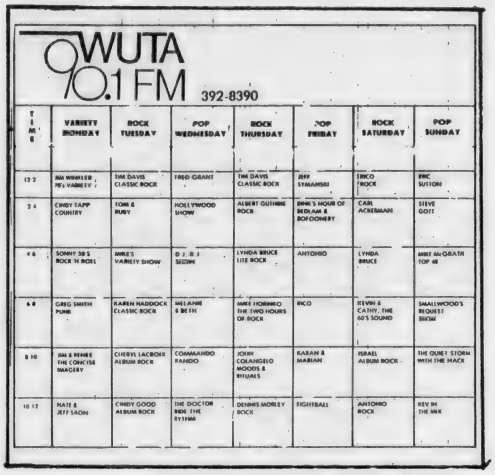
THE FLOOR SHIRTS, designed for the residents of a Michigan State U. hall, are eliciting mixed feelings from the men who are supposed to wear them. The front of the shirts say, "We draw the line at ugly women," while the back of the shirts bear a drawing of a "pig lady" with a red line running through it. "This is a college," one resident says. "You expect more maturity."

STUDENTS LIKE THE IDEA of seeing syllabi before enrolling for courses, according to a survey by the U. of Oklahoma student government. The survey also found that students are evenly divided on the question of a plus and minus grading system, and overwhelmingly prefer cans over cups for their soft drinks.

A $4 MILLION BUDGET makes the U. of Florida student government one of the richest in the nation for schools of comparable size. The U. of Michigan's student government controls $2 million, Florida State U.'s $1.7 million, and the U. of California-Berkeley's $900,000. Longwood's SGA has a budget of $1000.

A PETITION calling for a recall election for the U. of Hawaii student government president was submitted to the student senate with twice the number of required signatures. The petition charges the president with running an "unethical and illegal" campaign, using student funds to hire an assistant and to pay for a dinner for himself and two guests, and failing to fulfill campaign promises.

UNIVERSITY OFFICIALS at Northern Illinois U. are tampering with financial figures to make it appear as though the student government's operation of the Student Food Service is losing money, according to charges made by the student government president. The president says NIU wants to turn the food services over to a private contractor. "We know what their game is," he says, "and they're going to have to start playing fair."



"DEBBIE DOES DALLAS" was shown by a student group at the U. of Illinois as a protest against the student government's efforts to ban pornographic films from campus. The X-rated film attracted more viewers than all six shows of each of the other three movies ("Footloose," "French Connection" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark") on campus that weekend.

THE ROTC BUILDING WAS "BOMBED" with confetti and flowers when more than 30 U. of California-Santa Barbara students engaged in a mock war game to make an anti-military statement. "What is this, the '60s?" asked an angry ROTC administrative assistant.

"SAFE" (Straights Against Faggots Everywhere) is a student group organized at the U. of Delaware to stop the funding of the school's Gay and Lesbian Student Union. Meanwhile, students at Utah State U. formed the Heterosexual Alliance to "discourage publicity about homosexuality." USU also has a Gay and Lesbian Alliance.

MYSTERIOUS GRAFFITI ARTISTS have students at the U. of Wisconsin baffled. The graffiti — a circled letter J — has been appearing on campus building, desks and blackboards, but no one seems to know its origin or meaning.

"Faculty Follies"

By JULIE MOBLEY

Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity is sponsoring the first "Faculty Follies," since the 1960's. This is an annual event to be held in Jarman for the promotion of spirit and fun. Faculty and staff participate in acts created by themselves. APO will be the MC Wednesday, April 2, at 7 p.m. The cost is $1.00 for students, faculty, staff and community; 50 cents for children under 12. This project creates monies for Prince Edward Rescue Squad. With 11 acts this will be great fun! For more information to participate contact Julie Mobley, Frazer 845, 392-9794. Come see if your favorite teacher or staff member can make the grade! Free tickets may be given away on WUTA so listen in!

Softball Takes Tough Opener

The fine line between winning and losing in any sport often hinges on defense, and such has been the case for Longwood's women's softball team thus far in the season. The Lady Lancers got off to an 0-6 start last week, despite out-hitting opponents in several games.

Walks have also played a role in Longwood's slow start. Lady Lancer pitchers have issued 44 free passes in the first six games.

In Saturday's first-game, 13-8 loss to a strong Lock Haven team, Longwood had 10 hits to the visitors' five, but six Lady Lancer errors negated the hitting advantage. Mary Dailey had three hits and Penny Gough two for Longwood in the opener.

It was all Lock Haven in the nightcap as the Pennsylvania team took a 9-1 win.

This week Longwood will seek to bounce back with a visit to North Carolina-Greensboro Monday and a home meeting with Chowan Wednesday at the Farmville Armory Field. Wednesday's twinbill tips off at 3:00.

Longwood's top hitters so far are Gough (.368), Tina Hall with a .333 average, three doubles and two triples, Dailey (.333) and Jill Everett, .316. The Lady Lancers have a respectable team batting average of .272.

Tuesday against Virginia Wesleyan, Longwood totaled eight hits in the opener to three for the Marlins but came out on the short end of 5-2 contest. Five errors hurt the Lady Lancers. Hitting leaders were Julie Biscoe, Lois Kinch and Hall with a pair of safeties each.

Longwood took a 3-0 lead in the nightcap, but Wesleyan rallied with an eight-run third inning, and took the victory 12-5.

In last Monday's season opener Longwood out-hit Vermont 7-6 but committed five errors, helping the visitors take a 6-2 win. Hall went 3-4 with two doubles and a triple and Everett had two hits to lead Longwood at the plate. Vermont took the second game 10-7 despite two hits each from Dailey, Gough and Everett.

Intramural Update

Past Event winners:
Ping Pong (mem's) — Chuck Fagan
Innertube water polo — Aiose

Coed Volleyball — Blaxzers
Badminton (women's) — Gilbert-Bennett
Current events:

Men's Badminton will finish up on Monday, March 24 with Ashby-Browning playing the undefeated team of Rishi-Lim. Men's tennis doubles and spades are both in full force and continue through the next few weeks. Softball will begin on Monday. There are 28 teams participating. The Men's Division is broken up into two leagues, "A" and "B", both of which contain 8 teams. The women will all compete in the the same league with 12 teams.

Coming events:

Live '86

On April 19, LIVE '86 will occur. This project, initiated by the Longwood Community, calls for Longwood Students Faculty and administration to band together and provide volunteer energy for the clean-up of Farmville's public areas. Each volunteer group will be assigned a specific area to clean up of the town entrance ways, the various lakes, Bicentennial Park etc. The Farmville Town Council will be providing the equipment, finances and supervision. There will also be cash and prizes to those groups with the most participation. On Wednesday, March 26, there will be an informative meeting in the Prince Edward Room at 5 p.m. for organization leaders and all interested persons. If you are unable to attend, or would like more information, please contact Diana Scudder Box 1194.

Equestrian Team Takes Ribbons

Seven Longwood riders earned ribbons in an intercollegiate horse show at Williamsburg Wednesday and three Lancers have now qualified for regional competition.

Regional qualifiers are Bill Fahey in novice horsemanship on the flat and over fences, Mike Carey novice on the flat and over fences, Jennifer Winn, novice on the flat and walk-trot.

Fahey had a 3rd on the flat and a fourth in fences and Winn a 2nd in walk-trot at last Wednesday's show hosted by William & Mary and Christopher-Newport. Other Longwood ribbon winners were Ann Lawson, 1st in novice fences and 6th in novice flat; Karen Clarke, 5th open fences; Margaret Keller, 5th novice flat; Sharon Kaufman, 5th walk-trot and Tina Popernack, 5th beginner walk-trot-canter.

Golf Team Takes Second

The Lancers, who are playing in the Elon College Tournament Monday and Tuesday, totaled a 337 to finish six strokes behind Hampden-Sydney's 331. Virginia Wesleyan was third at 370.

In addition to Hardy's nine-over-par 78, Longwood got an 82 from Ty Bordner an 86 from Mark Marshall, 91 from Kevin Hare, 92 from Chris Gray, and 99 from Jeff Ramey. Joe Bernat shot an 85 for Longwood, playing as an individual.

"We did not play very well," said coach Steve Nelson. "Neither Bordner or Marshall are playing up to their potential right now. It's still early in the season, however. We have the potential to be a good team.

Next Monday the Lancers will play in a four-team match in Lexington, VA with VMI, Washington & Lee and Bridgewater, before hosting Hampden-Sydney and Newport News April 2.

THE PI KAPPA ALPHA fraternity was kicked off the San Diego State U. campus for at least five years for its role in an alleged gang rape of a freshman sorority pledge at a party. Thirty of the chapter's 110 members also face administrative charges which could lead to expulsion. Meanwhile, the fraternity suspened two of its own members for recording a "rape hotline" message on a telephone answering machine. The message told callers to "arrange" a rape by leaving "your name, number, age and time you would like yours to occur . . .Group discounts available."

PROFESSORS WOULD BE PROHIBITED from profiting from testbooks sales at their own universities if a bill now before the Arizona legislature becomes law. Student complaints prompted an Arizona congressman to introduce the bill requiring professors to turn over text royalties at their own school to the university. The Arizona Board of Regents is opposing the bill.

STUDENT ACTIVISTS are speaking out against a proposal to incorporate a county ordinance prohibiting sleeping or camping on private property into the U. of California-Santa Barbara campus regulations. The students say the rule would infringe on constitutional rights to free speech and freedom of assembly. Annual events such as a rugby tournament, dog show and frisbee competition would also be affected.

Player Of Week

MARTY FORD

Lancer third baseman Marty Ford came up with a defensive gem Saturday which would have been good enough to make the WTBS late-night sports show as "The Play of the Day." For that play plus an outstanding week, Ford has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period March 16-23. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

In the fourth inning of Saturday's opener with Mount St. Mary's Longwood held a 3-0 lead. The Mount had runners at second and third with one out when the next batter ripped a line drive that had "hit" written all over it.

Ford dived to his right and speared the smash before doubling up the runner at second base to end the inning. The Lancers went on to win the game 7-0 and sweep the doubleheader.

"That was the greatest play I've ever seen in college baseball," said Lancer coach Buddy Bolding. "You won't see a ball hit any harder than that. It would have been a great play if Marty had just knocked it down. He really picked us up and took them (The Mount) out of a potential big inning."

In five Longwood victories last week Ford hit .450, getting nine hits in 20 at-bats. He had four doubles, a triple and a homer with eight RBI's and 10 runs as well. He also stole six bases in six attempts.

Hitting .367 for the season with seven doubles, Ford ranks second for the Lancers in RBI's with 15 and has scored a team-high 21 runs. A three-year starter, he is a graduate of Patchogue-Medford High School.

Gymnasts Close Out Season

By JIM WINKLER

The Longwood gymnastics team finished fifth out of six teams in the NCAA Division II Southeast Regional Championships at Indiana University of Pennsylvania Saturday evening.

The host school won the championships scoring 178.40 and will advance to the NCAA Division II National Championships. William & Mary finished second (176.35) and was followed by Towson (174.30), West Chester (170.50), Longwood (165.95) and Trenton (163.90).

Lisa Zuraw led the Lancers in the competition. The senior placed fifth in vaulting with 9.15, just short of the Longwood record, 9.2, which she set in the Virginia State Meet early this month.

Longwood Coach Ruth Budd felt her team performed well in the meet. "It was a high pressure meet, and their was a lot of noise making it very hard to concentrate, especially on beam," said Budd. "But the team hung in there and performed well." Budd also commented on the efforts of the two freshmen on the team. "Our freshmen performed well under pressure. Kim Booth had a no-fall meet, competing on floor and beam. She scored 8.65 on beam and really did a good job," said the Longwood coach. "Lynda Chenoweth (Longwood's other freshman) also had a good meet, but was very underscored on beam, receiving less than 8.0," said Budd. Chenoweth scored a personal career best in vaulting (9.0) inthe competition.

Along with Zuraw, Kelly Strayer competed for Longwood for the last time. The senior scored 33.85 in all-around. It was just the third time this season Strayer was able to compete in all events, as she has been recovering from an early season injury.

Budd was not as pleased with the judging in the competition as she was with her team's performance. "A few of us (the coaches) felt the judging was bias towards the .home team," said Budd. "We felt William & Mary should have won the competition, not IUP."

It was the eighth time in nine years that the Longwood gymnastics team had competed in post-season competition and the seventh consecutive year. The Lancers finished the season with an 8-9 record.

Baseball Wins 5; Tough Schedule Ahead

Boosted by five wins in a row, Longwood's baseball team enters a six-game stretch against three teams which figure to be in the hunt for a spot in the South Atlantic Regional playoffs.

The Lancers host Maryland Baltimore County for two Tuesday at 1:00, St. Augustine's Wednesday in a 1:00 twin bill and visit always tough Norfolk State Saturday for two games. The UMBC doubleheader has been scheduled for Thursday but was moved to Tuesday. The Retrievers and Norfolk took two from Longwood near the end of the 1985 season, snuffing out the Lancers' playoff hopes.

If Longwood continues to hit the ball at a .380 clip as it did last week, the rest of the season should be a success.

Paced by senior Dennis Leftwich and juniors Marty Ford, Jeff Mayone, and Jeff Rohm, Longwood beat Radford Tuesday 7-6,13-2, Mount St. Mary's Saturday 7-0, 6-3, and St. Mary's Sunday 15-1.

For the week, Rohm hit .786, Leftwich .563, Ford .450 and Mayone .444. The foursome also drove in a combined 29 of Longwood's 48 runs. Shortstop Kelvin Davis ripped three homers for the week.

Senior Todd Ashby and freshman Steve Gedro turned in the top pitching performances. Ashby hurled a five-hit shutout in the first-game win over Mount St. Mary's Saturday, upping his record to 2-1. He walked one and struck out three.

Gedro, like Ashby a lefthander, tied a Longwood record for strikeouts when he fanned 12 St. Mary's batters in Saturday's nine-inning, 15-1 Lancer victory. He allowed just three hits and didn't walk a batter. Tommy Norris (1983) and Richard Vaught (1980) share the strikeout record with Gedro.

Leftwich got things started against the Mount with a lead-off homer in the first game. He added a two-run single for three RBI's. The biggest play of the day was turned in by Ford from his position at third base.

In the fourth with Longwood holding a 3-0 lead, The Mount had runners at second and third with one out. Tim Wiegartner ripped a screaming line drive toward the hole between third and short. Ford speared the hit and doubled the runner at second base to end the inning.

Ford was the hitting star of Longwood's 6-3 win the nightcap. He ripped a double and a triple, driving in three runs. Junior Rob Furth went the distance to get the win, pitching his way out of several jams.

Mayone, Longwood's RBI leader for the season with 25, drove in five runs with four singles in Sunday's 15-1 win over St. Mary's. Ford added three RBI with a homer, capping a 10-run uprising in the sixth inning. Leftwich scored five runs in the victory.

Leftwich is making a solid comeback from a sprained ankle. The centerfielder is leading the club with a .514 batting average and has stolen seven bases in eight attempts.

Rohm raised his average from .333 to .500 last week including a 6-6 showing in the sweep of Radford last Tuesday. The catcher has 19 hits in 38 at-bats.

Longwood coach Buddy Bolding is closing in on his 200th victory. The Lancer coach has a record of 192-81-2 heading into this week's action. He's in his eighth season at LC.

The Lancers are now hitting .325 as a team, up from a .299 batting average through the first 12 games of the season. Longwood hit .339 in 1985.

Mens Tennis

After opening the season with 9-0 win over John Fay Friday morning, Longwood's men's tennis team dropped matches to King's College (PA) 9-0 Saturday and Lock Haven 6-3 Sunday in play last week.

Longwood's next match is April 1 when Virginia Wesleyan visits for a 3:30 match. The Lancers, 1-2, will also host Hampden-Sydney, Newport News and Mary Washington next week.

Rugby

By DAVE LARSON

The Longwood College Rugby team had its first home game of the season this past Saturday. Their opponents were the club from Washington and Lee. Both teams played a real hard game with Longwood coming out on top 37-0.

Phillip Casanae started the scoring in the first half with a drop kick from 30 yards out. With about 20 minutes to go in the half, David Larson scored back to back tries for Longwood, this ended the half at 17-0.

In the second half Brian Liming started the scoring with a tri. David Rackley followed with two tries and Danny Nero and Tracey Kilby combined ended the game with the last tri.

The Longwood club had an excellent afternoon of Rugby and would like to thank everyone that came out to the game for their support. They would also like to invite everyone out to see Longwood play the University of Richmond next Saturday the 29th of March at the President's field.

Women's Tennis Splits

Longwood's women's tennis team got a win and a loss in its first week of spring action, beating Ferrum 8-1 Tuesday and bowing at Randolph-Macon Woman's College 7-2 Friday.

Playing without soph Connie Harrell who was out with the flu, the Lady Lancers got wins from the No. 1 and No. 2 doubles teams at RMWC. Ann Pitzer and Diane Rogers were victorious in No. 1 doubles and Mary Lynn Lawman and Heather Gardner came out on top at No. 2.

In action this week the lady netters host Elon Tuesday for a 3:30 contest.

LANCER SPORTS

Longwood's women lacrosse team marked the debut of first-year coach Sue Finnie with road victories over Mary Washington and Hollins, plus a homefield triumph over Sweet Briar last week as senior scoring leader Sue Groff tallied 17 goals and goalkeeper Kate Scanlon notched 31 saves.

Groff, the top career scorer at Longwood, had 6 goals in Tuesday's 12-9 win over the Blue Tide, seven more in Wednesday's 15-2 shellacking of Hollins and four in the 12-6 win over Sweet Briar Friday. She added six assists in the three outings.

Scanlon's play was a major factor in Longwood getting off to a 3-0 start. She came up with 12 saves against Mary Washington, eight against Hollins and 11 in Friday's win over Sweet Briar.

"Sweet Briar is probably one of the four best teams we'll play," said Finnie. "Our play in the second half really won it. We did a better job of containing their top scorers."

Longwood led 7-4 at the half and outscored the visitors 5-2 in the second period.

Other defensive leaders for Longwood last week were seniors Sharon Bruce and Tammy Marshall.

Senior Teresa Alvis had seven goals in the three games while Caren Forbes had five goals and six assists. Forbes, the assist leader on the Longwood women's baskeball team, has now channeled her playmaking abilities into lacrosse. Another cager Karen Boska had four goals in the victories and a team-high four assists in the win over Sweet Briar.

Longwood will be idle until resuming play April 3 when Roanoke comes to visit.

Womens Golf Looks To Future After Troy State Travesty

Longwood's women's golf team will be seeking to bounce back from a poor showing at the Troy State Tournament March 7-9 when they take part in the Peggy Kirk Bell Invitational in Winter Park, Florida Sunday through Tuesday.

Coach Barbara Smith has been working her team hard in practice in an effort to iron out some of the problems which cropped up at Troy State.

"We have the potential to play much better than we did in Alabama," said Dr. Smith. "We're looking forward to getting back into action."

Longwood Begins Cooperative Engineering Program With University Of Virginia

Longwood College has established a dual-degree program with the University of Virginia in which students will earn a bachelor's degree in Physics from Longwood and a master's in Nuclear Engineering or Engineering Physics from U.Va.

Students will be enrolled in Longwood's physics program for the first three and a half years and must complete 111 credit hours with at least a "B" average. Then they enter U.Va.'s School of Engineering and Applied Science as a "conditional" undergraduate. After taking a semester of appropriate courses, they are admitted unconditionally into the graduate program of either Nuclear Engineering or Engineering Physics. That takes about 12 months to complete.

"This program is a packaging of existing courses, both here and at the University of Virginia," said Dr. L. Raymond Fawcett, director of Longwood's Physics and Pre-Engineering programs. "It offers the students something unique without extra expense to the cooperating institutions. It doesn't involve any new courses, faculty or equipment."

A detailed "memorandum of understanding" between the two institutions was signed March 10 by Dr. James Adams, Longwood's vice president for Academic Affairs; Dr. Fawcett; Dr. T.G. Williamson, chairman of U.Va.'s Department of Nuclear Engineering and Engineering Physics; and Dr. James L. Kelly, a member of that department and program administrator.

The so-called "3½ + 1½" program is similar to other cooperative arrangements between Longwood's physics program and engineering programs at Old Dominion University, the Georgia Institute of Technology, and U.Va. Longwood already has a "3+2" program with U.Va. whereby students earn a bachelor's in Physics and a master's in Electrical Engineering. The programs with ODU and Georgia Tech result in two bachelor's degrees, one in Physics and another in Engineering.

"It's a creative and innovative way of putting the pieces together into a package that is good for Longwood, good for the University of Virginia, and good for the student," said Dr. Fawcett, who has worked on the program with Dr. Kelly for the past year and a half. "It is a wise

Have Passport- Will Travel

Later this year, three anthropology majors, following a pattern of recent years, will pursue their studies in foreign lands. Betsy Chalfant and Keith Russell will participate in an archeological project at an ancient site in the Middle East, and Denise Rast will study at the University of Londgon's Institute of Archaeology.

In the past two years, four other anthropology majors have studied at various locations around the world. That's not bad for a program which currently has only 17 majors.

Chalfant, a sophomore from Charlottesville, and Russell, a senior who has spent about half his life abroad, will take part in the "American Expedition to Petra" — a survey and excavation project in Jordan — from June 20 to August 16. Only about a dozen college students from the United States and Europe go to Petra each summer.

Located in a desert east of the Jordan River, Petra is roughly halfway between the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba. The site contains the ruins of a rock-hewn city that was the capital of the Nabataeans, an Arab people whose kingdom flourished from the fourth century B.C. through the second century A.D. Petra, an important trading center in the ancient Middle East, was conquered by the Romans in A.D. 106, was apparently abandoned after an earthquake in 551 and was "rediscovered" in 1812.

The American Expedition to Petra (AEP) is sponsored by the University of Utah and directed by Dr. Philip C. Hammond, an anthropology professor there. An authority on Nabataean culture, he has worked at Petra, on and off, for more than 30 years. The AEP, which is worth 12 academic credits, was begun in 1973.

Nestled in a valley amid red-sandstone mountains, Petra is noted for its natural beauty. The site is accessible only on foot or horseback through a deep, narrow canyon. "Petra owes its uniqueness to the monuments elaborately carved from the dramatically colored living rock of the flanking cliffs and surrounding mountains," according to Encyclopedia International.

Editor Impeached

Frank Raio, Rotunda Editor since September 1985, was forced to resign his post late last week amidst a sea of controversy. The Rotunda staff asked Raio to resign in light of "his declining motivation and increased ego." Many of the exact reasons for his dismissal are being withheld as part of the 'resignation agreement', but the Mazda RX-7 purchased by Raio during Christmas Break will be sold and the money returned to The Rotunda account.

Raio, who had been credited with the increase in circulation of the Rotunda to 3,000 copies per week, was allegedly under tremendous pressure to "outdo himself" every week. One staff member commented that "He (Frank) was going loonie! He would storm into the office and start throwing last week's paper at anyone there. Then he would sit at his desk and laugh at every story that had been turned in. One time, we caught him lying on the floor kissing a picture of Amy (his girlfriend who is student teaching in Korea)."

Raio has been seeing "professional help" in Lynchburg since January. Presently, he is staying with a friend of the family until a decision has been made on a pending application to excuse him from classes the rest of the semester.

The Rotunda will continue to publish with Barrett "Mick" Baker as acting Editor-in-Chief. Baker, who has been on the Rotunda staff since the fall of 1984, and has a background of experience in "Union Communication Services." Asked about the recent incident, Baker commented, "First, I'm going to get all these damn papers off the floor — this place is a mess!"

Letters

A Letter Of Thanks...

To the Editor:

I know members of the staff aren't supposed to write letters to the Editor but this is more a letter of thanks than controversy, so perhaps you will print it anyway.

The Longwood Company of Dancers recently held their annual Spring Concert — an event that I had the pleasure of helping out with. Unfortunately, since last weekend just happened to be the time during which Easter falls, the crowds that attended the performances were disappointing compared to all the hard work that goes into such a production. Hence, this letter is one of encouragement.

Many people don't realize just how much work goes into a large scale production like this — and let me just interject that it is a lot — so they can't truly appreciate the effort. In that context, I would personally like to thank the crew that helped out, including Mike, the spot man, Jennifer, the sound lady and Glenn, who did just about everything else.

I would also like to personally thank Company Director, Pipsa Nieminen for her patients and suggestions and to all the Company members for their help and understanding, not to mention my gift — its good to know when your efforts are appreciated.

Finally, I would especially like to thank Sherry Massey and Deb Robbins for walking me home at night (as I'm afraid of the dark) and for boosing my confidence up during those times when I didn't think we'd ever make it. It was tough, but the more you told me I could do it, the closer we got to getting it done.

Again, thank you for everything — I love you all!

Reverse Discrimination On Drill Team

Recently, an incident was brought to my attention that I found truly appalling.

A young female student here at Longwood, took the initiative to start a drill team. She took the time to find a sponsor, set up tryouts, and select a panel of judges. She posted signs announcing the forthcoming tryouts, which were open to anyone wishing to try out for the team. Tryouts were held, and girls were selected to be a member of Longwood's First Drill Team. During this period, two black, female students expressed their desire to be on the team. Of course, this did not present a problem. They were even allowed to select two of their own judges. Unfortunately, they chose not to attend any of the practices. They did not try out, nor did their judges present themselves.

They then went to Sue Saunders complaining of discrimination. How could they have been discriminated against when they did not even try out for the team?

Also, these girls have been complaining about the "style" of the drill team. They do not want to put kicks into the routines. Obviously, if they do not like what the drill team does, they should not be a part of it. If a white student had complained about the Drill Team routines, she would have been told not to try out for the squad.

Sue Saunders, in all her wisdom, made these two individuals co-captians without them even trying out for the squad. This will only result in mounting tension. Also, there must be another tryout for their firends because they also feel discriminated against. There is absolutely nothing wrong with black students being members of the drill team, b ut we should not make judgemental decisions based on skin color. Everyone had the same opportunity to participate in these tryouts. Is this fair?

By DEBORAH L. SHELKEY

On April 13, 1986, Farmville's Wesley Foundation is throwing a paper into the fire. A 20-year mortgage will be paid off this spring. The Foundation, or Center is a recreation spot, study area, conference space, or just get-away room for the students of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney Colleges.

The Virginia Conference United Methodist Church had a higher education campaign and set a goal of $10 million, but received $7 million to go toward colleges and Wesley Foundations. VPI & SU and U.VA had centers that were completely paid for, but Longwood's Foundation was left with a $60,000 debt from the cost of the building and furniture. The first $30,000 was paid off from pledges of Alumni, friends, churches, and the conference. (a 10-year period)

The remaining $30,000 was to be paid off on a note at the bank, from rent of the Center's apartments. In 1965-7 the Board members were responsible for raising $200 each to help pay off this incredible debt.

Students, churches, and Board members have worked long and hard to see this note paid off, hence the mortgage-note-burning celebration April 13. Bishop Robert Blackburn is attending and is guest preacher at Farmville United Methodist Church and speaker at the Wesley Foundation Program that Sunday. Past members of the Board and Longwood Alumni are attending. One hundred are expected to come to the celebration and witness the flaming paper. A luncheon will be held in Longwood's VA room. A welcome is extended to students and faculty who are interested in the program. Come to the Center April 13 at 2:00.

Spring Weekend

For the first time ever IAA will be sponsoring something just a little different for SPRING WEEKEND on April 12th. No, it won't be anything too outrageous but it does have the potential to be a lot of fun.

What is it? It's a tug of war between classes. IAA understands that certain pressure can build up between classes. God knows that most freshmen would love the chance to trounce on upperclassmen (or vice-versa). So here is your chance! Come out and let off a little steam. More information will be coming out soon so be thinking about it.

Oh! And for those of you who can think of something besides a mud pit to use between the teams (the tug of war will be in front of Stubbs). Your suggestions are welcome.

In an effort to avoid having numerous cars towed, I want to reiterate the regulations concerning parking in non-designated and-or towing zones.

1. The fire lane in front of Curry-Frazer is not a loading zone. It is a fire lane. Last semester we faced an emergency situation in which ambulance staff were unable to assist a student due to the enormous illegal parking situation. Cars will be towed from this area!

2. Parking on the grass, particularly near Cox, Wheeler and Stubbs is resulting in damage to the grounds and thus costly repair, which is billed back to students. We need to start manicure of the lawn now, to have it ready for graduation. These areas are also clearly maked as towing zones!

3. Handicap spaces are located throughout campus and are reserved for individuals with appropriate decals. Other cars will be towed!

I encourage you to review the "fine print" of the Parking Regulations which are available from Campus Police. Some students have faced tremendous parking fines due to not reading these regulations.

If you have trouble finding a spot, remember the Campus Police will give you a lift back from the Wynne Building. Just drop by and ask them to follow you up there.

Thanks for your assistance as we continue to improve the parking situation. If you have suggestions for improving parking, please write them down and drop them off at my office (first floor Tabb). The Parking Appeals and Policy Committee will soon be looking at regulation changes for next year.

A New Twist

"Women and Society" will be arranged around readings about women in our own culture and other cultures. It is meant as an introduction to the study of women's roles and contributions from the perspective of anthropology and sociology. An introductory level course in either subject is helpful but not mandatory and the course is open to anyone in the community.

The readings will include such books as Women of the Forest (South America), Images and Self Images (Morocco), Fenwomen (England) and All Our Kin (United States).

Dr. Karen Armstrong, who has done field research on women's roles in Ireland and Scotland, will teach the course.

SGA Elections

Petitions for offices will be available in the information office on Thursday, April 3 at 12 p.m. The following offices are available. Election guidelines will be attached to the petition. All students with required GPA are encouraged to run. The following positions are open:

10 Honor and 10 Judical Board Positions.

Campus Notes

Anyone interested in attending the Richmond Professional Chapter's monthly meeting on Tuesday, April 8 should get in touch with Burt Brooks before Friday, April 4. The meetings are held at the Holiday Inn, 3200 Broad Street, Richmond and begin at 11:30 a.m. You do not need to be a member of the American Marketing Association to attend. This month's meeting will center on the 1985 Clio award-winning television commercials.

Lancer Cafe continues its search for the most talented person on campus Wednesday night. Anyone who would like to enter or who needs more information, should contact Bob Cottrell down at the Cafe.

The film, "Flash Gordon" will be shown in Bedford Auditorium (in the Art Building) on Wednesday night at 7:00 and 9:15 p.m. The cost is one dollar.

People interested in the Sociology-Anthropology Club should attend the weekly meetings held on Tuesdays at 3:15 in the Conference room on 3rd floor Hiner. They are currently discussing plans for an end of the year party for anyone who is interested in attending. If you are interested, come to the meeting. You do not have be a Sociologist-Anthropologist to attend.

We'd really like to run some more of these, but nobody else sends us any material with information, dates or other pertinent campus information. If your group, organization, club, contingency, or own personal self would like something put in campus notes, then by all means send us a note via the campus mail to box 1133. We understand there are a lot of events happening out there but we can't print what we don't know about. Please submit notices to us by Sunday night of the week before you would like your message printed. Also remember that the Rotunda is distributed on Tuesday of most every week. Thank you.

Dance Company Spring Concert

The Longwood Company of Dancers finished up a tough semester of dance this weekend with three spectacular evenings of performance as they presented their annual Spring Concert. Unfortunately, the crowds that attended were relatively small as most people went home for Easter weekend. However, those who got to the show Thursday night or stuck around this weekend to see it, were treated to what many consider to be the best Dance Company show ever.

Under the direction of Finnish exchange teacher, Pipsa Nieminen, and with the patients and choreography by various Company members, the concert contained a large variety of different dances that appealed to all members and age brackets of the audience.

The show opened on a quiet note with "Life is a Celebration", a soft ballet piece choreographed by Kelly Shannon and performed by Shannon, Kim Cecil, Sandi Dovel, Carolyn Espigh, Amy Harrell and Tracie Settle.

The next dance, "Tangooh!" contained the mystery and intrigue of a small cafe located somewhere in the back streets of the Latin Quarter of Paris. Choreographed by Pipsa Nieminen and performed by Sanna Ahvenainen, Amy Baar, Kim Cecil, Roberta Cook, Lee Ann Grimsley, Sherry Massey and Gail Starling.

"Feelings from Yesterday", a solo choreographed and performed by Pipsa Neiminen followed the sultry music of Duke Ellington in a varient improvision of modern dance mixed with some of the more classical styles to form a well executed dance that held the audience captive.

On a more upbeat tone, Pipsa Neiminen choreographed "Din-Da-Da" — probably the best danced piece of the concert by a group of Company members. It contained some slow bits and some fast parts combined with a mixture of gymnastics, theatrics and cabaret antics to form a thoroughly enjoyable performance by Amy Baar, Kim Cecil, Sandi Dovel, Carolyn Espigh, Amy Harrell, Sherry Massey, Karen Mayo, Kimberly O'Conner, Deb Robbins, Tracie Settle and Kelly Shannon.

The next piece, "Body Work" held on to the upbeat tone of the previous dance by mixing modern dance with something like an aerobic workout as the dancers were constantly in motion. Choreographed by Lee Ann Grimsley and Gail Starling and performed by Grimsley, Starling, Amy Harrell, Kimberly O'Connor, and Tracie Settle.

The final dance before intermission, "Never too old to Dance", is based on the Esthonian Folk Dance that depicts how young dancing makes you feel. (Esthonia — also Estonia — is a constituents republic of the Soviet Union which lies in northeastern Europe along the Baltic Sea.) Choreographed by Pipsa Nieminen and performed by Sanna Ahvenainen, Roberta Cook, Sandi Dovel, Lee Ann Grimsley, Amy Harrell, Deb Robbins, and Gail Starling.

Upon returning from the intermission, the audience was treated to the most interesting composition of the evening. Choreographed by Pipsa Nieminen and the dancers, "A Voyage on an Empty River" again concentrated on improvision under choreographic limitations with component mixtures. The dance began under tense conditions as it was completely in the dark throughout a good portion of the first part of the music until the dancers are individually introduced by spots of light. When all the lights are on the dance changes again by taking the music away until the dancers reposition themselves in preparation of a follow-the-leader phase, bringing dancers in and out during the course of it. Phase three begins with a great deal of what seems to be confused running and hysteria until a single spot of light appears, attracting the dancers like moths — at first mesmerizing them and then frightening them while keeping them entranced — until the end when they become aware of the audience and then disappear into blackness. A very well executed and exciting to watch dance performed by Kim Cecil, Sandi Dovel, Sherry Massey, Deb Robbins and Kelly Shannon.

"Through the Eyes", choreographed and performed by Carolyn Espigh, Tracie Settle and Kelly Shannon was a perfectly placed transition between "A Voyage on an Empty River" and "Maniac" as its beauty, grace and softness gave the audience a chance to recover from the power of the previous dance while preparing them for the energy of the following piece.

Choreographed by Kim Cecil and Sandi Dovel, "Maniac" provided fast paced music matched with similar sequences of dance and the "flashiest" costumes of the concert series. Performed by Cecil, Dovel, Carolyn Espigh, Amy Harrell and Tracie Settle.

Another good transitional piece, "E'toile Noire" (French for Black Star), pulled together some very snappy choreography by Sherry Massey and Mia Kroger that brought all the dancers together into a composition of graceful movement combined with excitement and fun. Performed by Massey, Kim Cecil, Carolyn Espigh and Deb Robbins.

The second solo, "The Corner", performed and choreographed by Deb Robbins, was the third and final improvision of the series. Pensive moments and graceful choreography combined with gradually fading lighting effects added up to what was described by some viewers as the best piece all around in the concert series.

"For Farmville's Spring", choreographed by Pipsa Nieminen with background music by Johann Sebastian Bach, generally summed up the general theme of the Spring Concert series — the world is full of love, life and happiness; enjoy it to the fullest and help others to do the same. Performed by Kim Cecil, Carolyn Espigh, Sherry Massey, Pipsa Nieminen, Kimberly O'Connor, Deb Robbins, Tracie Settle and Kelly Shannon.

The Dance Company would like to thank the Department of Physical Education, Health and Recreation for their help with video taping and photography and senior Company members Mia Kroger, Sherry Massey and Deb Robbins for their faithful and untiring work and dedication through the years even when things looked real bad. Good luck in the future!

Special thanks to Wanda Massey for catering the reception after the final night — everything was delicious! Also, special thanks to Mike for a job well done running the spotlights and for changing your plans for going home to help us out (and for going to McDonalds for us!). More thanks to Jennifer for running the music and staying around late when we needed help and to all the people who helped out with handing out programs, etc.

Extra special thanks to Moffatt Evans for his patience with the lighting crew and for all his help. Also, extra special thanks to Glenn for all the work he did with lighting, running the curtain and generally keeping spirits up. Without you, the show would never have gone on.

Last, but not least, a hug, a kiss and an extra super special thanks to Barrett (Mick) Baker for all his time and effort. We're still not sure what you did but we really appreciate whatever it was — thanks!

MTV- Sex And Violence

Music videos can desentize college students to violence, a survey of 700 midwestern collegians has found.

The study, released last week by asst. Prof. Sharaf Rehman of West Texas State, found that after viewing music videos for a while, students became less capable of perceiving increasing levels of violence in the videos.

Rehman also found students tend to excuse violence in videos done by performers they like, and that women students in his study tended to view themselves as victims of violence.

They're not the only ones disturbed. A growing body of scholarly research seems to be supporting contentions that music videos often are unduly violent or sexual.

"I think the coupling of violence and sexual imagery is troubling," University of Georgia media researcher Joseph Dominick maintains.

Dominick and colleague Barry Sherman recently studied 165 "concept" music videos shown on MTV and two other stations that feature music videos, WNBC and WTBS, and found about 55 percent of the videos featured at least one violent episode.

The musical carnage ranks second only to prime-time network television, during which 60 percent of the shows feature at least one incident of violence.

While Dominick has no scientific measure of how popular music videos are among college students, he believes they are "big on campus from my casual analysis."

"You may be teaching a young, impressionable audience that the two things (sex and violence) go together," he says.

The Georgia and West Texas studies confirmed other observers' discomfort. "My tolerance level lasts 10 to 15 minutes because of the way they portray violence and women as sex objects," says Judy Byrd of the Sisters of Justice in Canton, Ohio, about videos.

"We are making inferences, but I think they are valid inferences," Dominick says, noting Billy Joel's "Uptown Girl" with Christie Brinkley and Bruce Springsteen's "I'm on Fire" as examples of upward aspiring males seducing rich females.

"I think there is some validity to the survey's point," contends Bill Chapman, director of creative services for WTBS in Atlanta.

"I would never run a picture of someone shooting someone else," he says, adding his channel, unlike cable operations, must meet Federal Communications Commission regulations.

MTV officials did not respond to calls on the subject of how violent or sexual videos may be, or how they might affect viewers.

Beware Of worms

Attention denizens of Longwood — the annual Sidewalkworm (slitherus paveamentus) has begun its annual mecca, traversing the scorching sections of sidewalk in a mystery that still baffles researchers today. It seems that these little critters get completely unsatisfied with their side of the sidewalk, braving intense heat and risking their very existance to reach a seemingly unknown region beyond — the other side.

Although these transitions usually take place during the early parts of the day (morning, in other words), they do sometimes make mid-day dashes and get caught half-way. Concerned students are invited to get out there with water bottles and encouragement, but please, by all means, do not interfere with the migrations, as it would really deflate their little egos.

Thank you for your patronage!

NATIONAL COLLEGE NEWS

BELL BLASTS HIS FORMER DOMAIN: In an article in the Phi Delta Kappan, former U.S. Sec. of Education Terrel Bell says his tenure was marred by constant battle with an ideological "lunatic fringe" within the Education Department over funding and other policies.

Many of the ideologues had a "revolutionary and shockingly radical agenda," which included dismantling the department itself, he wrote.

Much of the agenda was in a 1980 Heritage Foundation tract called "Mandate for Leadership," and a number of experts on the Reagan transition team were Heritage Foundation grads.

Dismantling the department, in fact, was a 1980 Reagan campaign pledge, one that Bell endorsed at a press conference following his appointment as secretary.

ABOUT 200 TOP FEDERAL EMPLOYEES HAVE FAKE DEGREES, THE FBI SAYS: Among those with phony academic or medical degrees are a former White House staffer and an aide to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the FBI reported.

The agency did not release the names of the pretenders.

U.S. SUPREME COURT DROPS LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION CASE: In his suit, Dr. Andrew Burt claimed former U. Nebraska Prof. Dr. John Connolly's negative reference letter kept him from getting a job.

At issue was if Connolly would have to travel out of state to defend himself, a precedent that, some experts feared, would inhibit professors everywhere from writing honest evaluations of former students.

But the U.S. Supreme Court dropped the case last week after Burt said he didn't want to pursue it, apparently relieving Connolly of liability but leaving open the question of requiring professors to travel to defend their reference letters.

POLICE ARREST TWO BROWN U. STUDENTS FOR PROSTITUTION: They say the two seniors may be part of a larger college sex ring involving several East Coast campuses, but the women arrested deny the charges.

Such incidents are rare, but in 1979 a "Glo-Worm Society" sent letters to a group of male U. of Colrado students, suggesting they could buy vaguely-defined sexual services for $20.

And in 1984, an ad in the Arizona State U. paper prompted an investigation into an alleged white slavery ring recruiting on campus.

PURDUE MAY BE KICKING NUDE OLYMPICS PARTICIPANTS OUT OF DORMS: Purdue banned its annual Nude Olympics this year because of decency laws, but about 100 students stripped down and ran the Jan. 21 race in the nude anyway.

About 150 face disciplinary actions, and now a few say they've keen kicked out of the Cary Quad dorms even before they've gone through their hearings.

LAUDERDALE POLICE REPORT RECORD NUMBER OF SPRING BREAK ARRESTS: By the end of the first week of March — barely a third of the way through the spring break season — Fort Lauderdale police say they'd already made 830 holiday-related arrests, as many as they made all last year.

They attribute the increase to enforcing some tough new laws, mostly governing public drinking.

SOUTHERN CAL MOVES STUDENTS OUT OF EARTHQUAKE-PRONE DORMS, AT A COST: USC has evicted 233 students living in dorms city officials in Los Angeles have cited as being unable to withstand earthquakes.

But the students are protesting and angry because the new housing USC wants them to occupy may cost as much as $800 a semester more than their old dorms and apartments.

NEW MEXICO HIGHLANDS FOOTBALL PLAYERS HELP LAS VEGAS' NEW MAYOR: Coach Don Shonka promised his players two free meals to distribute campaign leaflets for Las Vegas, N.M., mayoral candidate Leroy Sanchez, whose two brothers are university officials.

While Shonka said "I am not familiar with the term 'appearance of impropriety,'" Deputy Attorney General Kay Marr said laws regulating public employees' campaigning did not seem to apply to this case.

Sanchez won last week's election.

POLITICIAN SUES U. VERMONT OVER POLL: A Vermont Political Behavior class conducted a November poll of residents' senatorial preferences, but Republican candidate Anthony Doria sued last week because the poll "led the public to believe there were only two candidates in the race."

Lawyer David Putter objected that a state-run agency like the university has a "duty not to use the facilities, money or name to potentially injure a candidate."

"It doesn't reflect a personal opinion of Doria," replied Prof. Tom Rice, whose class conducted the poll. "It's just that he hasn't proven himself a serious vote-getter yet."

NOTES FROM ALL OVER: Playboy says its annual search for publicity and collegiate women to pose in the nude will be among Ivy League schools . . . A Michigan State snack shop is offering weekly drawings for plastic pink flamingos, now becoming a major dorm fad.

THE DRY RUSH has hit the Indiana State U. campus. The Interfraternity Council cited "greater liability" and "stricter laws" as reasons for banning alcohol.

JUDGING FROM THE LARGE TURNOUT of students, the new class, "Alcohol and Drug Abuse: From Cells to Society," has touched a nerve at the U. of California-San Diego. The course coordinator says that, among students, "there seems to be puzzlement about the nature of addiction as well as concern in being able to recognize and avoid it without completely abstaining."

DARTMOUTH COLLEGE SUSPENDED the 12 students who destroyed the symbolic shantytown. The same day, 18 other Dartmouth students were arrested when they refused to leave the sole remaining shanty. The college had sent crews to remove the shanty after the Town of Hanover charged the structure violated zoning laws.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON fraternity members at the U. of Michigan tore down their own posters after the advertisements were condemned by the Student Assembly president. The posters displayed the chapter's Greek letters over the tight-shirted chest of a woman.

THE BEANIE IS BACK. San Diego State U.'s fraternity rushees will be given red and black beanies to wear "to promote Greek identity and school spirit." The Interfraternity Council says SDSU is the first campus to use beanies to identify rushees since the 1950s.

A CLASS EXERCISE GOT OUT OF HAND when an assault was staged outside a library for a Syracuse U. law class. When the man playing the "assailant" drew a knife on the woman playing the "victim," he was tackled by a student who mistook the acting for an actual attack, and came to the woman's rescue.

A GRADUATE TEACHING ASSISTANT at the U. of Louisville is under investigation by the school for allegedly trying to recruit his students for the cult of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh. The TA, however, says he is being investigated because he taught his class in "a progressive manner."

Longwood Anthropology Students To Study Abroad

never been west of the Mississippi," she said. "I've been hyper for the past week, ever since I found out I was accepted. I've been making my travel plans and trying to get my passport and visa."

"I had planned to attend Longwood's Archeology Field School this summer, but this came along. It was sort of a joke at first, when I asked for an application. My parents didn't think I was serious. They said to me, 'Yeah, sure . . .' "

Russell, on the other hand, is an experienced traveler an is keenly interested in the Middle East. His mother works for the State Department and his father is recently retired from the State Department. Born in Cyprus, he also has lived in Greece, Mozambique, Oman, Japan and Australia. Shortly before last Christmas, his parents moved to Abu Dhabi, the capital of the United Arab Emirates.

"I'm looking forward to returning to the Middle East," he said. "I really liked living in the Sultanate of Oman; I liked the geography, the weather, the people. I took a year off school in 1983-84 and worked there as the manager of a construction camp. I had also lived there the previous summer and two summers earlier, when I worked for the U.S. Corps of Engineers. I used to take a four-wheel-drive jeep and go camping and hiking every weekend."

"The fact that Petra is in the Middle East was one of the major reasons I applied for the expedition. When I saw the brochure, I thought to myself, 'Hmm, Jordan Field School. That's right up my alley.' "

Because of his familiarity with the Arab world, Russell probably will encounter less "culture shock" than the other participants. Dr. Hammond has sent them a list of the rules — no shorts (they must wear long pants and long-sleeve shirts), they are forbidden from discussing religion or politics with Jordanian nationals, sunbathing will be done only in a restricted area, and females should not fraternize with nationals ("they will not understand just a friendly approach," he wrote).

Russell is currently doing an independent sutdy project in which he is surveying a stone mound site in Buckingham Count. The site has puzzled him so far, but he thinks it may have been used by prehistoric Indians for ritual purposes.

Rast will be a full-time study at the University of London's prestigious Institute of Archaeology under the Institute's "Junior Year Abroad" program. She will take a total of six specialized courses over the autumn term (Oct. 1 - Dec. 10) and spring term (Jan. 7 - March 18), and afterwards will take part in a 10-day fieldwork project in nearby Sussex County, England.

"In that one year I think I'll grow in a way that would take longer if I stayed over here," she said. "I'm apprehensive and nervous, but that's balanced by the excitement of the trip. Right now, I'm trying to find housing, preferably with other University of London students."

Like Russell and Chalfant, she plans to attend graduate school and is interested in a career in archeology. "My experience in the (Archeology) Field School last summer reinforced my desire to study archeology," she said. "Going out and actually excavating made me certain that that's what I want to do. There's excitement in just searching. My heart's in it 100 percent."

Rast will get a chance to see her future university when her family takes a vacation to England and three other European countries from May 15 to June 2. After studying in London, she will return for her senior year and will graduate on time.

At Petra, Russell and Chalfant will be examining a site whose earliest occupation was "at least 10,000 B.C.," according to Dr. Hammond. A famous poem calls Petra the "rose-red city, half as old as time." The expedition focuses on its period as the Nabataean capital.

The Nabataeans were highly skilled in ceramics, architecture, engineering and art. Extant structures at Petra include temples, tombs, cisterns, aqueducts and altars.

In the summer of 1984, three anthropology majors studied abroad — one participated in an archeological program at Westminster College in England, another visited archeological sites in England and Spain, and a third studied the French language and culture at the University of Toulouse in France. Last spring, an anthropology student took part in an archeology field school on San Salvador Island in the Bahamas.

NATIONAL COLLEGE NEWS

"THE FOOD IS REALLY SPOILED ROTTEN and it's nasty." That's what some U. of Kentucky students recently heard when they called the campus "Dial a menu" number to hear what was being served at the commons. The food was graphically described in unappetizing, and indelicate, terms. Food service employees say they don't know who created the message, how long it was on, or how many students heard it.

THE STANFORD MUSIANS' DIRECTORY is being compiled by a Stanford U. student to make it easier for musians to find each other and organize groups.

THE MOST PREVALENT CAMPUS VENERAL DISEASE is chlamydia, according to the Centers for Disease Control. Chlamydia often does not produce symptoms in its victims, and can cause pelvic inflamatory disease — which can lead to sterility — if left untreated.

FREE COLLEGE CATALOGS are going the way of the dinosaur. In the past, high school students trying to decide which college to attend wrote for free catalogs, but now they're likely to receive promotional brochures instead. "Flagship state universities are enjoying a wave of popularity," says a U. of Michigan official. "We have to keep from drowning in requests."

FEMALE MBA GRADUATES who let prospective employers know they are feminists are not likely to get hired, according to the Canadian University Press. The Oklahoma State U. researchers who prepared the study concluded that companies are interested in hiring women — but not women who might question company practices and create trouble.

FBI INTERVIEWS met with protest from students at the U. of Wisconsin law school. The students say the FBI discriminates against gays. Law school policy prohibits interviewers who discriminate on the basis of race or sexual preference from using the school's facilities.

RAISING THE DRINKING AGE won't help, according to Gerald Globetti, a sociology professor art the U. of Alabama. "Two things will happen," he says. "The community and law enforcement officials will lose interest, and people will learn how to circumvent the law."

DISCRIMINATION on the basis of sexual orientation should be prohibited, according to 86 percent of Canada's collegians. The Gallup poll results were reported by the Canadian University Press.

A SINGLE FOOTBALL WEEKEND at Indiana U. brings an estimated $1 million to local businesses, according to the Bloomington-Monroe County Convention and Visitors Bureau.

INAUDIBLE MESSAGES ON RECORDS AND TAPES help students study better, according to a merchant near the U. of Michigan. Messages such as "You have total recall of all that you study and read anytime that you want and need," is one of the messages hidden beneath "new age music." A UM psychology professor, however, says "There are no reputable researchers who have found any basis for the effectiveness of subliminal messages."

MOST HEALTH INSURANCE policies offered by colleges to their students discriminate on the basis of pregnancy, according to a report from The Equality Center. Only 10 percent fully cover pregnancy and treat it like other temporary disabilities.

ONE IN SIX female graduate - students in psychology has sexual contact with a professor while working toward their degrees, according to researchers at the U. of Missouri-Columbia. Nearly a third of the students questioned said they had been harassed, and half of those women said the professors retaliated when their advances were refused.

THE TOP-SELLING MAGAZINE on campus is, again, Cosmopolitan. The annual survey by College Store Executive found that Gentleman's Quarterly was edged out for 10th place by TV Guide.

"ADVANCE CLASS CUTTING" is a course offered by the U. of Missouri's Adult Extension Program. Registrants are urged to pay $3 and not show up.

THE DIOGENES SOCIETY, a new group at the U. of Southern California, provides a forum for students and faculty to discuss topics of general interest in an informal setting, and on equal footing. The discussions have a carefully structured format, however, because — as one student put it — "The faculty was used to lecturing, not just talking."

STUDENTS SHOULDN'T BE ABLE TO VOTE in county elections, according to a group passing petitions to bar U. of Kansas students from the polls. The group says the students are more liberal than the area's permanent residents.

America's Great Lodging Value

Act Now Or Action Later

By MATT PETERMAN

Last Thursday The House of Representatives voted against the $100 million of military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras. This serious set-back for the Reagan Administration is just that — a set back. It should be reversed in order to install a democratic government, leaving behind the Sandanistas, who have stolen their people's revolution and turned it into a fight for communism in the Southern hemisphere.

The $100 million in aid is prevention instead of sending U. S. troops into Nicaragua. It will equip, train, and field these "freedom fighters," so that they can effectively fight helicopter gunships piloted by Cuban advisers, who are presently training the Sandanistas. With this assistance the Contras will not wither away, leave nothing to dislodge the Sandanistas from rolling up Central America, except U. S. troops which would inevitably be called in if the Contras are defeated.

U. S. intervention can be avoided with the approval of this aid. The Contras are fighting a war that will put down a government trying to export its communist ideas and supporting terrorists in Guatemala, El Salvador, and Columbia. The Sandanista government, though illegal, will continue to sponsor terrorists and attempts to uproot fragile democracies where they have no right to.

The U. S. has a fundamental right to insure that the Nicaraguan people have an open, democratic, and pluralistic society as was promised to them by the Sandanistas in 1979. Instead of insuring the basic civil liberties of their people, they are suppressing the church, controlling the press, smashing labor unions, and restricting their people's movement.

Besides the above terrible abuses of power, the Sandanistas have also invited in the Soviet Union. The U.S. policy towards the Contras has not invited in the Soviet Union as many think — they were there before the Contras existed, or the Reagan Administration for that matter. The Carter Administration, in 1979, gave the newly formed "democratic government" generous amounts of aid, but the Sandanistas wanted to rule longer than perhaps would have been allowed to them, so they slowly cut ties with democracy. This communist state is too close to the borders of the U. S. to even think of not sending aid to the Contras.

The Contras would prevent a Soviet beachhead on the American mainland which would threaten the Panama Canal, distract the U. S. from NATO, and spread Communism into all surrounding countries, including Mexico, which in a few years down the road, could fall into the hands of the communist if the opportunity exists. This would leave the U. S. in a position of all out war.

Many say that any type of war can be avoided by diplomatic means. If Nicaragua could be steered in the path the Sandanistas promised The Organization of American States, back in 1979, the U. S. would be all for it. But with a record like the Sandanistas, any solution would be broken when convenient to the communist state. The Sandanistas would approve a settlement to put an end to the Contras, and when this threat to their government is gone, take a wreckless course to uprooting the frail democracies in Central and South America, with massive assistance from the Soviet Union.

The bad press the Contras have been getting is just not true. Many say that the Contra force is made up of the very people who helped the former dictator, Somoza, stay in power during his repressive regime. Out of the 71 top leaders of the Contra force, 19 were in the Somoza National Guard, 20 are former Sandanistas, and the rest are from the general population. It is also important to point out that if Marcos top military men had not turned, Corazon Aquino, could not have been brought to power.

The amount of $100 million is alot, but in the whole scheme of things, the U. S. gives billions of dollars in aid packages to other countries and in a situation that could endanger national security, it is money well spent. It is true that more aid will be needed down the road, but it is money for people who will fight their own battle; a battle that will have to be fought by U. S. troops, if the Contras die out.

This fear that the Contras will die out is driving the neighboring countries to seek peace with what will become their permanent neighbor — a neighbor that makes them very nervous. It is obvious that not many countries will speak out against something that could destroy them in the future. These countries move is an attempt to appease the communist state that has the biggest military Central America has ever seen. These countries silently want the U. S. to put an end to the Sandanistas' repressive regime, that poses a big threat to their democracies.

Saving these democracies is the duty of the U. S. in order to keep the American continent free from communism, especially this close to our borders. The U. S. should block a Soviet attempt to control Central America, which could materialize if the pressure on the Sandanistas should cease.

During this week the Senate will vote on the aid package and most likely pass it. Then it will go back to the House of Representatives again, who will hopefully vote for a set-back for the Soviet Union, instead of the United States in the future. This vote is crucial to the free world, while guarding U. S. interest in the region. This issue will constantly surface until finally U. S. troops will be called in to solve the problem if action is not taken today. If this is left to take care of itself, it could haunt the U. S. in the decades to come.

Maybe there is a substitute for experience.

Casual Aquaintances

By MATT PETERMAN

Well, it's Monday morning and time to go to class. Wearing my best casual looking outfit, and having slept for 12 hours, I picked up my English book and headed for class. Damn, I thought, what a good mood I'm in.

I left my room, and got on the elevator to ride ten floors to the bottom. After the elevator filled up, the quiet elevator stopped on the 2nd floor. The people on the elevator groaned, and I thought to myself; the stairs must be broken. When the doors opened, Karen, a girl I danced with at Saturday's mixer stepped on. "Hi, Karen," I exclaimed. She just turned and watched the numbers hit floor number one. The people on the elevator must have thought; what a jerk, and I must admit, I did feel stupid. Not to worry I thought, there are other women, and nothing is going to spoil this day.

I walked down the steps in front of Curry and was on my way to class. Having spotted my roommate, I waved and asked him "How's it going?" Obviously listening to a friend, he just nodded and walked by. At least he acknowledged my existence, I thought. At this point my good mood was faltering.

I walked past the tennis courts and started to cross the street, when I recognized, Betsy, a girl I sat next to in Biology last semester. "Hi Betsy," I said, with utmost sincerity. I guess she was thinking of why her boyfriend had dumped her or something, because she pretended that I wasn't there. To be honest, that really made my day!

Why even bother be friendly to these people I thought; I don't need this. With this in mind Susan, a girl who I saw at my mailbox every once and a while approached. We will just pass like total strangers, and that moment will be over. As we passed, I extended no greeting, but she did: "Hi, What's up." Being shocked, I turned around to save the moment but she had just just turned the corner. What a serious pisser I thought.

Well needless to say I did get to English, but I was in a foul mood. What a terrible day I thought to myself. The same thing happened on the way back with few exceptions. After arriving back at my room, I told my suitemates, and some visiting girls why my day had been so rotten. After finishing, they all responded with: "that happens to you too!"

GET TWO EDUCATIONS FROM ONE COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIP.

An education in your chosen major. And an education in becoming an Army officer. You get both with an Army ROTC scholarship.

Army ROTC is the college program that trains you to become an officer, a leader and a manager.

You take ROTC along with your other studies, and graduate with both a degree and a second lieutenant's commission.

Best of all, you can put both of your educations to work right away. In today's modern high-tech Army, we need engineers, communications experts, computer specialists, and other professionals.

Our scholarships cover full tuition and required fees. They also provide an amount for books, supplies and equipment, as well as an allowance of up to $1,000 each school year they're in effect.

So if you think all scholarships just provide you with a college degree, look into an Army ROTC scholarship. You'll be in for quite an education.

use of the resources we already have."

"This will allow someone who is a good student to complete both a bachelor's in physics and a master's in engineering in approximately five years, when otherwise it would take a little longer," he added.

In the electrical engineering program between Longwood and the University of Virginia, one student has received a master's, three former Longwood students are currently at the University, and several more Longwood students intend to go there next year. U.Va. officials are "very pleased with that program," Dr. Fawcett said.

Since Longwood first began a dual-degree program in 1978, with ODU, most students have successfully completed an engineering degree, he said. Approximately 20 students will have received engineering degrees at cooperating institutions by the summer of 1986.

At the beginning of the 1985-86 academic year, Longwood had 78 physics and pre-engineering majors. That number has risen steadily since 1977-78, when there were only 15 majors. Dr. Fawcett thinks the cooperative programs have helped attract students. He expects Longwood to enroll about 50 new physics majors next fall.

The new program "provides excellent preparation for the Ph.D. program," said the memorandum, which also expressed the "firm belief that it provides a valuable new educational opportunity for the citizens of the Commonwealth of Virginia."

Lancers Blow Seventh Inning Leads, Drop Doubleheader To Norfolk State

An Easter weekend trip to Norfolk turned into a nightmare for the Longwood baseball team Saturday. Host Norfolk State staged rallies in the bottom of the seventh inning in both games and swept a twinbill from the 20th ranked Lancers, 7-6 and 10-9.

Longwood will seek to bounce back this week with a home doubleheader against Virginia State Tuesday and visits to Duke for a single game Thursday and to Hampden-Sydney for a twinbill Saturday. Now 16-7-1, Longwood was ranked 20th in Division II in a poll released by Collegiate Baseball last Tuesday.

After splitting doubleheaders with Maryland Baltimore County Tuesday and St. Augustine's Wednesday, the Lancers visited Norfolk State. The Trojans rallied for three unearned runs in the bottom of the seventh in game one for a 7-6 win. They wiped out a 9-5 Lancer lead with five runs in their last bat in the nightcap.

Helped by two hits and two RBI's from Tommy Walsh and the pitching of Sam Hart and Tony Browning, the Lancers appeared on their way to victory in game one. Two runs in the top of the seventh had given Longwood a 6-4 lead, but a single and two errors loaded the bases for Norfolk in the bottom of the seventh. A one-out triple by Andrew Dixon provided the margin of victory.

In the second game Roger Baber had three hits and three RBI's, Robert Jackson two hits and three stolen bases, Kelvin Davis a three-run triple and Walsh two more RBI's as Longwood scored four in the sixth to take a 9-5 edge.

Norfolk State took advantage of four walks with three base hits and wiped out the deficit in the last inning with five runs.

Women's Tennis Takes Tough Loss

Visiting Elon pinned a 7-2 loss on Longwood's women's tennis team Tuesday in the Lady Lancer netters' only action last week.

Gaining victories for Longwood were Susan Miller at No. 6 singles 5-7, 6-0, 7-6 and Connie Harrell and Mary Lynn Lawman at No. 2 doubles 7-6, 6-1.

Now 1-2, Longwood plays at Sweet Briar Monday, at Southern Seminary Thursday and at Virginia Tech's number two team Friday.

Lacrosse/Tennis

Longwood's women's lacrosse and men's tennis teams swing back into action this week with several home contests on tap.

The 3-0 lacrosse team hosts Roanoke Thursday at 4:00 and Virginia Club Sunday at 1:00 in games at First Avenue Field.

The men's tennis team, 1-2, hosts Virginia Wesleyan Tuesday, Hampden-Sydney Wednesday, Newport News Apprentice Saturday and Mary Washington Sunday. The Mary Washington match begins at 1:00 while the other three begin at 3:30.

Softball Enjoys First Win Of Season

Paced by the hitting of Tina Hall and pitching of Stacey Thompson, Longwood's softball team notched its first win of the season Wednesday, beating visiting Chowan 7-3 at the Armory Field. Chowan came back, however, to take the nightcap 14-11.

Now 1-9, the Lady Lancers host Edinboro for two games Wednesday at 3:00 and play in the Methodist College Tournament Saturday in Fayetteville, North Carolina.

Hall cracked her second homer of the season and drove in two runs, and Thompson went the distance on the mound in Wednesday's victory. The freshman righthander issued five walks and struck out five while allowing eight hits. Chris Lebel had a triple and Bobbi Shuler a single and an RBI to back up Hall.

In the second game Chowan collected 11 hits and used eight walks to hold off Longwood 14-11. Jill Everett had two hits with a triple and an RBI, while Julie Biscoe and Hall also drove in runs for the Lady Lancers. Longwood benefitted from 10 bases-on-balls given up by Chowan pitching.

Longwood suffered a pair of close losses at North Carolina-Greensboro last Monday, bowing 5-4 and 3-2. Hall had a homer and a single in the first game which went nine innings. Thompson went 3-4 in the nightcap as the contest was called on account of darkness after UNC-G had scored the go-ahead run in the bottom of the sixth.

Longwood's men's golf team finished 22nd out of 25 teams in the 36-hole Elon College Tournament last Monday and Tuesday in Burlington, North Carolina.

The Lancers had rounds of 346 and 333 for a 679 total. Richard Hardy led the way with a 77-81-158. Ty Bordner shot 85-84-169, Mark Marshall 90-80-170, John Goddin 94-92-186 and Chris Gray 100-88-188.

Longwood hosts Hampden-Sydney and Newport News Wednesday at Longwood Golf Course, after traveling to Lexington Monday to play Washington & Lee, VMI and Bridgewater.

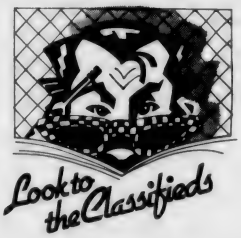
Rugby Sponsored By IAA

By DAVE LARSON



This past weekend the Longwood College Rugby Club played a revenge match against the University of Richmond. The game was a very heated one in both atmosphere and attitude. Nevertheless, Longwood came out on top 20-6.

The first half of the game was the most exciting for Longwood. Dave Rackley started the scoring in the first thirty seconds of the game by scoring the first tri. Longwood scored another two tries before the fifteen minute mark. Both of these tries were scored by newcomer Danny Nero. This ended the half with a 14-0 lead by Longwood.

The University of Richmond scored first in the second half with a tri with only twelve minutes to go in the game. With the game pretty much in hand Tom Ganun scored a tri for Longwood to secure the win.

Longwood did not only get revenge from a loss last year to U of R's side Longwood's B side also scored a victory 15-0. A tri from Tracy Kilby and one from Tony Lindsay were the big scores with Dave Grant adding two free kicks for goal.

Once again the club would like to thank everyone for supporting us in another winning effort. Also we invite you out to watch the Hampden-Sydney vs. Longwood Rugby game April 17th at Hampden-Sydney.

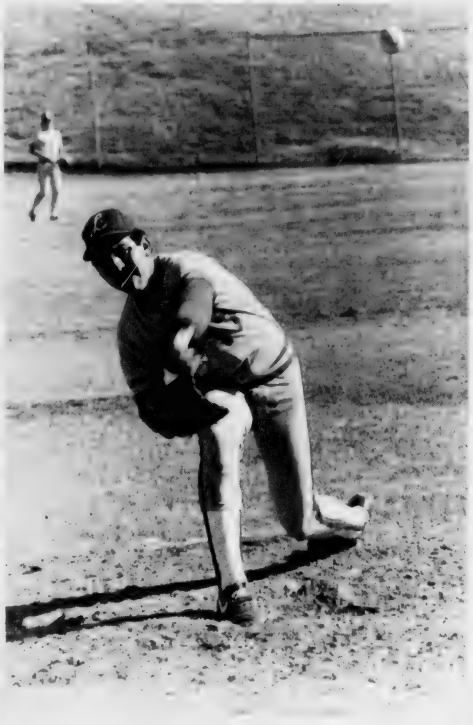
LANCER SPORTS

Baseball: 1 For 3 In Dual Double Headers

Solid pitching and timely hitting enabled Longwood to split a pair of home doubleheaders with Maryland Baltimore County and St. Augustine's.

Browning tossed a three-hitter as Longwood beat UMBC 4-2 in the first game of Tuesday's twin bill. The Lancers fell in the nightcap 9-3. Wednesday, after four Lancer errors helped St. Augustine win the opener 8-6, Tony Beverley and Rob Furth combined on a two-hitter as LC gained the split with a 3-1 victory.

Browning allowed the visiting Retrievers just three hits, one a two-run homer by Doug Ward in the fourth. The righthander walked two and struck out five while retiring the last nine men he faced.



Davis provided the offense with a run-scoring double in the second and a three-run homer in the fourth. Both of Davis' hits came with two outs. With UMBC holding a 2-1 lead in the fourth, he poked a drive over the wall in center field, scoring Jeff Mayone and Baber ahead of him. Davis now has five homers for the season.

In the second game UMBC's Brian Price kept the Lancer bats under control with a seven-hitter and the visitors pounded out 10 hits off Furth, Beverley and E. J. Bryant. Ward hit his second homer of the day. UMBC was ranked 23rd in Division II last week.

Wednesday St. Augustine's brought in a reputation as a strong hitting team. The Falcons, who were playing Longwood for the first time in history, ripped nine base-hits in the opener and took advantage of four LC errors to register the 8-6 victory.

Senior pitcher Todd Ashby held the visitors to one unearned run over the last three innings, after giving up seven runs in the first four frames. Longwood also had nine hits in the contest, but the Falcons turned three double plays to blunt the LC attack. Marty Ford drove in two runs with a pair of hits and Mike Haskins had a double for the Lancers.

Ineffective the day before against UMBC, Beverley and Furth were impressive in the second game Wednesday. Beverley gave up just two hits and a run while working four and one-third innings as the starter. He tired in the fifth, walking three batters, but picked up the win to go to 3-0 for the season.

TONY BEVERLY

Longwood pitcher in action against St. Augustine's Wednesday.

Furth came on in relief and faced a bases-loaded situation with only one out and Longwood ahead 2-1. The second out came when the Lancers foiled St. Augustine's attempted squeeze bunt. Calvin Butcher attempted to bunt but Furth threw high and catcher Roger Baber tagged out the runner trying to come home from third.

Furth then fanned Butcher to end the threat. In all the junior righthander retired seven of the eight batters he faced. He picked up a save for his efforts.

Tommy Walsh scored Longwood's first run in the second to tie the game 1-1. Walsh singled, stole second and scored from a third when Bill Conroy was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded.

Longwood took the lead in the fourth when Baber drew a lead off walk. Eric Killinger, running for Baber, stole second and went to third on an infield out. He raced home on a wild pitch to put the Lancers on top 2-1.

First baseman Jeff Mayone gave Longwood a 3-1 edge in the bottom of the fifth when he

Neptune Boasts Supreme Soccer Talent

All-State performers John Barone, of Neptune, New Jersey and Mike Edge, of Woodcliff Lake, New Jersey, have signed to attend Longwood College in the fall and play for the Lancers' NCAA Division II soccer team, Longwood head coach Rich Posipanko announced today.

Barone had 16 goals and 18 assists for Neptune High School last fall while making first team All-State Group 4. The 5-8, 160-pound forward was also named All-Conference, All-Monmouth County, and All-Shore his junior and senior seasons.

Named as one of the top 17 players in New Jersey, he had 52 goals and 70 assists in his career. Barone was also a first team All-Mid-Atlantic Region selection and made the New Jersey State Select Team all four years. He was also recruited by Old Dominion and UNC-Greensboro.

Barone will be the fifth Lancer booter from Neptune. Last year's squad included Neptune natives Craig Reid, Mark Kremen, and brothers Mark and Sean McArdle. All but M. McArdle, a two-time All-American, will be back in action for Longwood next season.

Edge collected 17 goals and 16 assists for Pascack High School in 1985. He was picked first team All-League, All-Bergen County, and All-State Group 2. He was also named among the Top 51 in New Jersey for 1985. A native of England, Edge was also recruited by Hartwick, among others.

"I feel that Barone and Edge have the talent to come in and make an immediate contribution to our soccer program," said Posipanko. "Both players have the potential to score some goals for us and we were looking to strengthen our offense after several of our top scorers graduated.

"With players of this caliber coming into the program we should be able to maintain the strong tradition we have built."

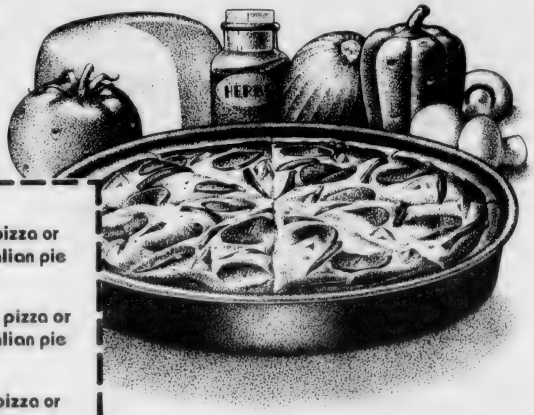
Longwood finished 12-4-3 and ranked among the Top 20 in Division II last season.

Player Of Week

Sophomore outfielder Tina Hall, a native of Petersburg and a graduate of Dinwiddie High School, hit two homers last week for the Longwood softball team and has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period March 24-31. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information Office.

Hall, who plays right field for Longwood, had a homer in Monday's first-game 5-4 loss at UNC-Greensboro and hit another round-tripper Wednesday in the Lady Lancers' 7-3 win over Chowan. Hitting .333 going into last week, Hall has been Longwood's top slugger with two homers, three doubles and two triples.

A standout in both softball and basketball at Dinwiddie High, Hall was also a star in the classroom, ranking 35th out of a graduating class of 305 and qualifiying for membership in the National Honor Society. She is majoring in physical education at Longwood.



TINA HALL

Tina is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Hall of Petersburg.

IS IT TRUE THAT PEOPLE WHO EAT AT PIZZA HUT GET BETTER GRADES?

No one knows. But, some people think there is a correlation to be found between those who care enough about the quality and freshness of the food they select and the attitudes they exhibit toward the quality of the time they spend in other endeavors outside the eating experience such as their studies. People who want the best just aren't as willing to sacrifice...even when it comes to pizza. At Pizza Hut, we certainly can't promise to improve your grades. What we do promise is the highest quality and best tasting pizza and priazzo™ Italian pie anywhere. And just to see if it helps...here are a couple of coupons so you can find out for yourself.

Talent Contest Goes National

Hey Lancer Cafe Talent Search participants — Why Stop there? The 5th annual American Collegiate Talent Showcase (A.C.T.S.) is offering a total prize packet of $6,000 to the top collegiate entertainer. Second place will receive $4,000 and third place gets $2,000. Other prizes include: Remaining finalists (4th-7th) — $500 each; performing alternate (8th place) — $500; video production merit award —$1,500; and, songwriting merit award — $500. (All video typed entries and original compositions are automatically considered for merit awards).

Additional opportunities include: all entrants will receive judges' critiques and comments on their entries; top classical entrant will be showcased at the association college, university and community arts administrators convention in New York City; selected rock groups will be showcased at the "Ritz" and "The Palace" in Los Angeles; selected comedy winners will be showcased at "Catch A Rising Star" in New York City; selected entrants will be auditioned by Warner Brothers and CBS records; selected entrants will be auditioned by Teddy Pendergrass, President, Teddy Bear Enterprises; Television's "Star Search" will audition all ACTS National finalists. Furthermore, all ACTS entrants are eligible to perform on a six week tour of overseas U. S. military bases — regardless of your competition placing!

So how does one get involved in all of this? Entries may be submitted on audio cassette tape, ¾" video tape or VHS video tape. Do not send reel to reel or Beta Video tapes. All entries must be postmarked by April 15, 1986. For more information, contact Bob Cottrell at Lancer Cafe. The preliminary judging process runs from May 15-19 where all tapes are critigued and scored by region. The top three winners per region are selected in this phase (21 winners total). In the next step, the 21 regional winners are re-scored with their previous placing being disregarded. The top seven entrants from this phase go on to be National Finalists in Nashville, Tennessee on September 5 where they will perform live. In all phases entrants are judged on: technical excellence; treatment of material; professionalism; and career potential.

Again, for more information or entry blanks, contact Bob Cottrell at Lancer Cafe, or call 1-800-448-ACTS.

Bands Raise Funds

The Longwood Bands will hold a fund-raising Italian dinner and "Pops" concert on April 20 in the college's lower dining hall.

The festivities, which will begin at 6 p.m., will feature a dinner of spaghetti, salad, garlic bread, beverage and dessert, prepared by the dining service's chefs.

During dinner, entertainment will be provided by strolling musicians from the Longwood Brass Quintet and the Longwood Jazz Combo. Following dinner, a concert will be presented by the Longwood Concert Band. Included in the concert will be Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, a medley from the Broadway musical "Cats," and The Planets by Holst.

"It will be an evening of fun and entertainment for everyone, and for five dollars and fifty cents the price just can't be beat," said Ralph Mohr, director of the Concert Band.

Proceeds will benefit the Longwood Band Fund. For more information, contact Mohr at 392-9368.

The Longwood Rugby Club traveled to Lynchburg this past weekend in anticipation of a very tough game. Last year Longwood played Lynchburg City during Oktoberfest in a very close game. However, this year was a different story, Longwood came out on top with a very impressive win 34-0.

The game started at a very slow pace with the first ten minutes looking as if Longwood was there just to be there. Then Phillip Casanae flurished with two strait tries. Phillip seemed to have started everything in the right direction. Longwood quickly started to play like a well disciplined team and ended up playing one of their best games ever. The whole team deserves a lot of credit for their performance. Also scoring in the A-side game was Tom Gonun and Chris Jacobs. Phillip Casanae added another two tries making it 4 tries in one game. Everyone on the A-side as well as B-side played an excellent game.

The next test Longwood will face are the men from Hampden-Sydney. Longwood beat them last season 41-0 and is going to try and top that victory this year. We invite everyone to come out and support the Longwood Ruggers on the 17th of April at Hampden-Sydney.

A special thanks goes out to all those fans who support us every weekend. The club has won three in a row and are trying to finish the season with no more losses. This task is not unreachable with the support of the fans and the school.

U-Cal Students Try To Fire Chancellor

About 2,000 U-Cal at Santa Barbara students have signed a petition to try to fire the school's chancellor.

As a result, the Associated Students Legislative Council will vote in early April whether to put Chancellor Robert Huttenback's credibility to a test before students.

The motion, which students say probably will pass, will have no binding authority. It's merely a statement of student feelings.

"We got student signatures to show it's a student movement, not a student government verses administration conflict. Those are all too common," student officer Todd Smith contends.

The petition is just the latest in a series of insults traded between the administration and the campus student government.

"He runs the school like a business, but does not deal with the consumer — students," Laine says.

The administration, in turn, says the student politicians are attacking Huttenback only to try to recoup credibility lost to allegations of scandal and failures to read student attitudes accurately.

Smith maintains students' ire began last spring when someone overheard Huttenback say he would flush down the toilet a student petition for divesting school funds in South Africa.

"The context of the situation has been forgotten," asserts Betsy Watson, the campus' director of public relations.

Students had forced their way into Huttenback's office, and demanded he sign the petition. Huttenback replied he would not be bullied, Watson says.

The student officers reply the chancellor tries to get his way even when students disagree with him by creating a student government of his own choosing and simply holding his own campus elections when legitimate votes displease him.

Students maintain Huttenback subverted student government by scheming to get his way on a campus busing issue.

Huttenback effectively overturned the results of an April, 1985, student vote against paying a fee for unlimited bus service in and around campus by staging a highly unusual polling on the issue at registration last fall.

The chancellor used the results of the fall vote — done by checking off a box on the registration form — to justify imposing the fee on students.

Watson says the administration made a procedural mistake by allowing the student government to take up the issue in the first place.

"I think (student officers) are very embarrassed (by subsequent student support of the bus fee)," Watson speculates. "They feel they have to posture themselves to restore faith on part of their constituency."

Moreover, Watson says the student government is still smarting from allegations made last fall that some officers mishandled student funds.

But the officers charge Huttenback, unwilling to abide any political defeat by students, has created his own rump student government by reactivating a student advisory council, made up of about 10 students handpicked by the chancellor and the school's deans.

Although the advisory council has no official power, "their symbolic power is tremendous," Smith argues, adding that Huttenback can use the group to demonstrate to the board of regents that he has the consensus of students on his policies.

My Page

I am back! My loss of power was as educational as it was short. I have learned that the man who is in control is the man who has no peons below him; a staff is helpful, but not worth the trouble they cause. All responsible for the revolt have been punished. I have also learned that a great percentage within the Longwood community are completely mindless schweenies, wearing collars and waiting for a leash to lead them anywhere.

The front page story, dated April Fool's Day, reporting my forced resignation, was a hoax. When they staff presented the idea to me, I said, "Nobody will believe this." How wrong I was. People who know me well were shaking their heads in sympathy. (Perhaps this should tell me something.)

Anyway, something happened this week that bugs the heck out of me and I think some public humiliation is in order.

Last Thursday there was a meeting of the Student Activity Fees Committee. This committee decides what percentage of the Student Activity Fee is given to student organizations like S.G.A., S.U.N. and The Rotunda. The committee has no auditing power or anything; they simply dole out money. The purpose of last week's meeting was to appropriate money for next year, but the poor, hopelessly powerless slobs of the S.A.F. Committee got bored and uppity.

Traditionally, next year's editor would attend this meeting, since it is his-her money the committee is misering over. However, due to Publications Board delays, next year's editor is yet to be appointed. I could not attend the meeting, because there was a death in the family that I am trying to marry into. A Rotunda staff member was sent to answer any questions that the committee might have. Now the fun begins.

The committee, without precedent, began asking detailed questions about this year's budget, questions that could only be answered by me (due to the sophisticated management system which gives me Absolute Power and exclusive embezzling capabilities). The Rotunda staff member employed internationally accepted "po'man's tactics" (ask for a million to get a buck and change), an angle used by every department head in every beaurcracy since Cicero headed the Ministry of Ego in Ancient Rome.

Anyhow, the committee received the false impression that The Rotunda was completely broke; the fact is that a great year for advertising and our policy of "restrained embezzling only when needy" has left us with money coming out of our goo-goos.

The once powerless S.A.F. paper-pushers decided to take action (aren't we testosterone-laden). Professional appointee John "Hey, toilet paper works just as good on your nose" Pastino (S.A.F. Committee Chair) was dispatched to "stop The Rotunda now", before we could spend more money we didn't have. Pastino went to see Dean of Students Sue "Take Charge" Saunders.

Picture this: Sophomore student John Pastino (who, by the way, was fired from The Rotunda staff this semester for repeatedly using darkroom equipment and supplies for his photography class) walks into the Dean's office with nothing but a title and misinformation. Pastino must carry some weight around here because Saunders made no effort to confirm his story. Saunders told me that she called me, but I found no message on the answering machine. "Maybe I didn't leave a message", Saunders said, but I told Barb Gorski to call you." Thanks, Sue.

Saunders recommended to neomaxizoomdweebi Pastino that he call The Farmville Herald and tell them not to print anymore Rotundas. No confirmation, no phone calls, no looking at the books, just "cut off The Rotunda."

A sophomore's phone call would not stop The Herald from printing our paper, even if it did, I would go to another printer.

Saunder's resume claims a background in journalism. Surely she knows that the Supreme Court slaps down every administrative attempt at closing down a college publication.

more than they are allowed; for the past several years, the paper has finished the year in deep debt. But as long as printers and suppliers offer charge accounts to The Rotunda, as they have been doing for 65 years, overspending will be possible.

Nobody in the universe has authority over The Rotunda except - the Publications Board, not the Dean of Students, and certainly not some sophomore schweenie. Only the Publications Board can exert power over the potentially reckless editor. The Publications Board has not met once during this entire year until last month (to choose next year's editor). I have enjoyed my freedom, but the future may show that overspending is a comparatively minor misuse of an editor's power. The Publications Board should reorganize and get off its collective butts now instead of waiting for a real journalistic travesty to occur.

Bolding Reaches For 200

Sometime within the next two weeks Longwood baseball coach Charles (Buddy) Bolding will lead the Lancer baseball team to its 200th victory. The 200th Longwood win will also be Bolding's 200th career coaching win on the college level.

Heading into a game at Duke April 7, Bolding had coached Longwood to a record of 197-87-2 over eight seasons. Since Longwood's first team finished 0-13 the year before Bolding took over the reins, the Bedford County, Virginia native has been at the helm of every Lancer baseball victory.

Bolding has seen Longwood baseball develop from Division III to Division II. Along the way the Lancers have been nationally ranked and have advanced to two NCAA Division II tournaments and one Division II World Series. Three Longwood players have also earned All-America honors and two have been named Virginia College Division Player of the Year.

Honors have also come Bolden's way. South Atlantic Region Coach of the Year in 1982, he was picked as Virginia College Division Coach of the Year in 1984. He was also named to the Olympic Tryout Staff for Virginia in 1983.

A graduate of Milligan College and the University of Tennessee, Bolding began his coaching career at Staunton River High School, his alma mater. He guided the Bedford County school team to a 47-22 mark in the three years before coming to Longwood in 1978.

All seven of Bolding's previous Longwood teams have had winning records and the current edition is 18-7-1 and ranked 20th in Division II.

Ashby Near-Perfect

Highlight of the week for Longwood was the pitching performance of senior Todd Ashby in Saturday's win over Hampden-Sydney. The lefthander allowed just one hit and walked one while striking out five. In all just two Tigers reached base.

Senior Todd Thompson ripped a two-run double in the fifth when Longwood came up with six of its seven runs.

Marching Band?

Marching band has come to Longwood. Starting the fall semester of 1986, the Longwood band will be expanding to include a marching band.

An extension of the concert band, the marching will run concurrently with the concert season. Members will play in both groups.

Rehearsal times will be at 2:30 - 3:45 on Mondays and Wednesdays, and 7-9 p.m. on Tuesdays. The classis music 209 and more information can be obtained from Ralph Mohr in the Wygal music building.

H-SC Professor To Lecture

The final lecture in this year's Faculty Colloquium at Longwood College will be given by Dr. Stanley R. Gemborys, professor of biology at Hampden-Sydney College.

Dr. Gemborys will speak on Wednesday, April 9, at 7:30 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium on the Longwood campus. His topic is "Changes in the Land: Understanding History Through the Artist's Brush." The lecture is open to the public at no charge.

The town of Eaton, New Hampshire, and surrounding countryside are the focus of Dr. Gemborys' lecture. Founded in 1766, the town experienced rapid population growth, he said, but "then slowly declined in response to changes in the strength of its agriculturally based economy."

By comparing contemporary photographs of the area with 19th century landscape paintings, Dr. Gemborys will "demonstrate the drastic changes in land-use and other changes that have taken place."

Dr. Gemborys is a graduate of Dartmouth College and holds the Ph.D. in botany from Auburn University. He has received National Science Foundation grants for summer study in marine biology and tropical ecology in Bermuda and at the University of Puerto Rico. He also received a fellowship for study in forestry at Harvard University.

He has been a member of the Hampden-Sydney faculty since 1967.

Lewis Looks To Ireland

By HOKE CURRIE

In the movie "The Man Who Would Be King" Sean Connery and Michael Caine use their knowledge of military tactics to gain wealth and power in a primitive country.

Today, Americans are using their basketball ability to gain tremendous popularity, if not wealth and power, in Ireland.

"For an American basketball player in Ireland it's almost like you're Michael Jackson walking down the street," says Longwood College senior basketball player Lonnie Lewis, who just returned from a junket to Ireland.

"American basketball players are big heroes there. The Irish people are amazed by our abilities, especially things like dunking and shooting."

Lewis journeyed to Ireland as a member of the Caroline All-Stars, a group of small college cagers from Virginia and the Carolinas. The All-Stars played seven games in six days against Irish professional and all-star teams. Former Winthrop College coach Neild Gordon led the team and organized the trip. Other members of the Carolina All-Stars were from Winthrop, Newberry, Presbyterian and Lander Colleges.

Lewis was amazed at the welcome he and his teammates received. The 6-3 guard probably got more attention from the fans in Ireland in one week than he received during his entire college career. The Richmond native scored 1,425 points in four years at Longwood.

"It was wild after games," he said. "We had to sign hundreds of autographs and the gyms were so packed that you couldn't take the ball out of bounds. The refs were very understanding. They would let you bring the ball in from on the court."

The All-Stars compiles a 4-3 record playing in places like Cork, Sligo, Port Arlington and Dublin, in gyms that held several thousand fans. Lewis more than held his own. He won a spot on the first five and scored in double figures in six of the seven games. His performance and the reception he got from the Irish fans have convinced Lewis that he wants to pursue a career as a professional player in Europe.

"I talked to coaches from several different Irish pro teams and one from a British team," Lewis explained. "They seemed interested in me. The coashes are looking for players who can score more than anything. They play a run and shoot style of basketball."

Scoring has always been Lewis's strong point. The third leading career scorer in Longwood history, he averaged 18 points per game for the 14-13 Lancers during the past season. In Ireland he scored well against mostly zone defenses.

Like all of the European professional teams, the Irish play under international rules. Scores such as 103-99 and 106-101 were the rule rather than the exception in games between the Carolina All-Stars and Irish teams.

The Irish pro teams are sponsored by various businesses. Lewis' team beat "Yoplait" of yogurt fame in a tournament in Dublin. Perhaps the most successful team in Ireland is Burgerland.

"Burgerland gets the best Irish players to go with their American players," said Lewis. "The teams in Division I can have just two Americans. The Americans usually balance each other out. It's the ability of the Irish players that separates the best teams from the average ball clubs.

"The teams are really built around the American players, and they expect us to dominate the games. They might consider less than a 30-point performance an off-night for the top Americans."

Lewis said the thing that impressed him most about Ireland was the absence of crime. "The police don't even carry guns," he recalled. "They have no crime whatsoever. I only heard a siren one time while I was there and that was an ambulance. The Irish people are completely honest."

Americans playing on the Irish pro teams are from small colleges like Western Michigan, Armstrong State, Pfeiffer and Newberry. Players can earn from $350 to $600 weekly in a season that lasts from September through March. Free transportation, housing and two meals per day are also sometimes part of the deal. Some of the top Irish pros end up playing in Italy or France where the salaries are a bit more generous.

For Lewis and other interested American college cagers it's a matter of wait and see until summer when the signing period arrives.

"It's pretty much of a waiting game now," said Lewis. "I feel confident I'll get an opportunity to play in Europe, but I won't know for sure until June or July."

A business major at Longwood, Lewis plans to finish his degree requirements in summer school and then begin a pro hoops career in Europe.

If he gets the chance, Lewis should have no trouble lighting up the scoreboard and keeping the eyes of Irish basketball fans smiling.

Faculty Follies Raise Funds

APO revived an old tradition at Longwood last week by hosting an event dubiously deemed the Faculty Follies. The "Follies" are a showcase for members of the faculty to exhibit their individual talents. APO, a national service fraternity, used the "Follies" as a fundraiser for the Farmville Volunteer Fire Department. At the end of the evening it was announced that $100 had been collected for their worthy cause.

The evening's entertainment showcased some rare moments of ingenuity and originality, a rare sight at Longwood. Even President Greenwood was able to join in the fun. The faculty members who were featured were: Nancy Anderson and her square dance buddies; the proverbial wit of Dr. James Helms; our Finnish professors Pipsa and Rista Nieminen performed a folk dance; and Nancy Huffman from the P.E. department. It was a bit of a disappointment that more of the faculty chose not to participate, but this didn't take away from a good show. Undoubtably the highlight of the show was the gyrations of the Pointless Sisters, who almost caused a riot before their encore.

Helter Shelter

Have you ever been jolted from your sleep with visions of nuclear annilation? Does a sudden test of the Emergency Broadcast system raise the hairs on your - hieny. When the fire sirens in town scream, do you take a quick stutter step towards your drug supplier.

Well cream your jeans no more, wipe that drop of sweat from your inner thigh, the Cowpie staff has cut through the red tape to discover the safest, most impenetrable place to go in case of a nuclear attack on Farmville.

John Pastiny, self-appointed Czar of Students Combined Retroactively to Order the Termination of Unilateral Molification, (SCROTUM) has organized a group of nuts to post signs and flyers. These notices are designed to inform the Longwood community of the location of the library.

The Lancaster Library has approximately enough canned and dried food to nourish six hundred students for a two-day period. However, ARA employees will not be allowed to use the facility due to the possible violent recriminations such a panic prone situation could spurn. The one exception is Tina, the infamous I.D. enforcer. She has been exclusively hired to guard the private escape hatch (pictured) to be used by Phyllis Mable and Janet Greenwood. The underground passage connects Longwood to Washington. Through an intricate system of levers and pulleys, Janet Greenwood and Phyllis Mable will be jettisoned to Washington for the post-nuclear decision making process. Students can rest assured that the gargantuan effort of post-nuclear rebuilding will be in safe, strong hands as Barb Gorski will remain surrogoat in charge. The transition should be easy because Barb Gorski has been in charge of everything all along anyhow.

COWPIE'S

"First Annual Free Pizza Fiesta"

FREE PIZZA-FREE PIZZA-FREE PIZZA

We have the scam! As you know Domeno's Pizza has just opened a new franchise in Farmville. The pizza chain offers free delivery and guarantees you a pizza in 30 minutes or less. If the pizza is late, you get it for free- NO CHARGE- FREE PIZZA!

Now Domeno's is just starting out and they are having a rough time of it. This is how we take advantage: At 8:00 pm on Tuesday, April 8th, everyone in the Cowpie reading area will call and order a pizza. By our calculations, Domeno's will be so overwhelmed with the orders that 89.7% of all of us who order will receive a free pizza. Pretty neat, huh?

A Janet Sighting

By ANARCHY MITOSIS

Although there was no photographer on location to capture the moment, she was sighted in Lancer Cafe on March 28, 1986, at approximately 5 p.m. during the faculty Happy Hour, chatting with various members of the faculty (who wish to remain anonymous, mostly due to the fact that half of them did not recognize her at first . . .)

When asked to comment on the occasion, Janet said "This is like deja vu — I feel like I've been here before, in another life or something."

The sighting was made by an oblivious onlooker who commented to a companion (who happened to have connections in high-up places) "Gosh! Judging by the heavenly-like aura she emits, she MUST be a movie star or at least a VJ on MTV!"

The whole affair was followed by an autograph-signing session in the Cafe lobby, attended by throngs of groupies wearing "Janet" T-shirts and buttons.

Last Minute Business...

He rearranged himself so the hair that was pulling eased itself from the moist sweaty squeeze. Harvey Kramer, who died on February 25, was survived by his wife Flo and two sons Lance and Brewster. He continued his scanning — mentally adding the ages — trying to compile a median. He remembered the time his grandfather walloped him for stealing toothpicks. Why toothpicks? He quickly forgot the reason as the accompanying chills brought blood to his face, and instigated a painful smile. The cold water shocked his skin before it randomly gravitated to the oval bowl.

Why are the obituaries always right before the television schedule? Is it so you can check out who died knowing that their old movies will soon grace the tube? Thank God for perforated 2 ply toilet paper, or "bathroom tissue" as it's called in homes with swimming pools.

His tendency was to use too much. There is nothing worse than a clogged drain with a turd spiralling counter clockwise towards the brim. He lowered his abdomen, and dragged the meticulously folded paper in the patented cleansing motion. He suddenly snapped his head upwards, as the shocking sound of hardwood rattling along the - metal bars broke his mental wanderings. His time had come. Time to join Gary and Linwood was the torturous thought his mind kept imposing on him. There would be no stay, no last smoke. Although he had previously entertained the illusion of asking for a non-existant brand.

The only decision left was to walk or to be carried. As the vicelike girps constricted the blood in his elbows and ankles he knew he would sit one last time, but when he looked down it sure as hell wouldn't say American Standard.

Resurrection

Next to the stars and stripes, the symbol which typifies America most is the Statue of Liberty., Our gift from France has greeted literally millions of immigrants as they entered the land of promise. Who would have thought that 100 years later the statue would have needed such a costly, and massive restoration effort?

"Give me your tired, poor, and a couple of bucks to fix me" the statue seemed to cry. The task of refurbishing this huge shrine was cast upon public and private funds. Certainly, there was little questioning that she needed more than a coat of paint and a little polish. Besides private donations and non-profit fundraising activities it is clear that a major portion of the funding has come from business. Yes! Now the symbol of America can be found on everything from snuff to packages of film.

One must simply reflect on the 1984 Summer Olympics sponsorship practices to get the picture. We've all mentally visualized 10 American world class athletes sitting around a table stuffing themselves with - Wonderbread PBJ's. And remember Kid's Wonderbread builds bodies 10 different ways! Ya right — starting with your fingers as you pry the masticated goop from the roof of your mouth.

Is it right to let any product embellish itself with the Statue of Liberty's likeness, just because it's donating a miniscule percentage to the relief fund. No holds were barred in Olympic sponsorship. Every product which contributed soon became "the "official" supplier of itself to the U.S. Olympic team. By the beginning of the 84 summer games almost every newspaper and television ad had the "official seal" boasting the sanction of the U.S. Olympic team. Manufacturers of products that Olympics athletes wouldn't dare use, jumped on the bandwagon anxious to share the good publicity.

Well then, is it right to have the Statue of Liberty enrained on the lid of Skoal Snuff (a product which is undoubtedly detrimental to one's health)? Nevertheless, with the restoration almost finished it is clear that the fundraising efforts have been extremely successful. Our country gave, and gave generously to restore our proud visage. But, this joyful resurrection has also sporned the deceitful and greedy folly of a few manipulative shisters.

The resurrection is not merely a physical one, but also a spiritual one. The past two years have re-awakened the nation's conscience to the Statue of Liberty's deeper meaning, and have once again engrained its image into the public's eye. Now, since we're all again aware that the torch on Ellis Island is about to burn bright again it's time for a few to exploit it.

Someone once said that "America is a country of entrepreneurs "but does that mean that nothing is sacred? Apparently the answer is — yes. Madison Avenue types have grasped the current popularity of the Statue of Liberty, and are translating it into big bucks.

Let's peruse some of the items to hit the market of late. In the fashion accessory department, we have "Liberty" 24 carat gold earings. Also, there are numerous scale replica's on the market (pictured) including a table lighter on which — you guessed it — the torch actually flames. Some of you may remember those AM radios shaped like soda cans. Now they are shaped like you know who. Beer mugs, roll-on deodorant, key chains, umbrella handles, cologne dispensers — you name it; have all become vehicles by which the form of the Statue of Liberty has meant cash for an unscrupulous few.

Surely the most heinous extrapolation of this trend belongs to a company we can't name. This company is marketing a birth control device named "Lady of Liberty." It is declared to provide "new sexual freedoms." The obvious use of double entedre hardly overshadows this unique spiked-ribbed condom.

However, the most preposturous idea comes from recently deposed chief fundraiser Lee Iaccoco. A chagrined Iaccoco announced last week that Chrysler Motor Corp. was going ahead with production of its new sports model the SLII. Reportedly, the car will be shaped like the Statue of Liberty. Iaccoco held a press conference to discuss the details just two days ago. After a brief outline of the specs, Iacocco went on to discuss possible drawbacks of such a project. "We are having a few problems with aerodynamics and image" Iaccoco muttered. In reference to image Iaccoco stated "We're hoping that the American male won't get hungup about driving inside a woman . . "

Not to miss out on a quick dollar, foreign car magnates - Renault and Lamborguini have announced plans for competitive new sports cars. The French will market a car shaped like the Eiffel Tower, and the Italians will market the aerodynamically superior Leaning Tower of Pisa model. Both companies say their cars are based on the idea that phallic images are aesthetically pleasing. These two models will purportedly integrate well with the SLII.

We at the Cowpie may be bastardizing our hypocritical oath by presenting an article with portions of truth in it, but we felt it important. The bottom line is that we have let "American business" debase the Statue of Liberty's image. The amazing fundraising effort spearheaded by Lee Iacocca has raised 233 million dollars so far, but was it worth it? It has cost 90 million to resurrect Lady Liberty. Our federal government spends 90 million dollars every 45 minutes. With the impending 4th of July reopening around the corner we must ask ourselves wasn't the Statue of Liberty worth 45 minutes of our tax dollars, considering the alternative?

AIDS Busters Comes To Longwood

The Cowpie, in our unabashed wisdom, would like to announce the formation of a new club on campus. In correlation with our support of Lyndon Larusche for president and legislation pending in Colorado for mandating Aids testing — we invite you to become an AIDS BUSTER.

Heterosexuals Unanimous, known in some circles as the Confederation against Rump-Pumpers, is opening a branch of their nationally recognized club at Longwood. Those wishing to join must simply fill out the form provided below, and return it to the Campus post office. In recognition of their new branch, Heterosexuals Unanimous has signified April 8 as Longwood's official AIDS BUSTERS DAY.

The Cowpie urges all heterosexuals on campus to show their unity by wearing the official AIDS-BUSTERS BADGE on April 8. The first one spotted during lunch by our survey crew will win a free large pizza. The winner, and all those returning the membership forms, will be recognized in next week's ROTUNDA as Official Aids Busters.

Daye Announces New Album

Singing star and former recluse Doris Daye has finally broken her silence with an emotional outburst last week. Daye, the star of many movies of the 50's and 60's has been a recluse most of the 70's and 80's. Ms. daye has been spotted only infrequently during the last decade, mostly by ardent fans and mudslingers like ourselves.

Ms. Daye's last known public appearance was in 1974, when she offered the press a written statement which suggested that if all races would intermingle more often we would all have a nice "coffee" colored skin tone.

Daye broke her 12 year silence yesterday by announcing the release of a new album. The LP is entitled "Detente with Doris", and strangely enough deals with Strategic Arms reduction talks. Her only comment on the album came yesterday as reporters cornered her, curbing one of her poodles on Beverly Hills neighbor Charles Nelson Reilly's mailbox. "Violence, Violence, Violence — that's all we ever hear about anymore", said Daye. She continued "Whaterer happened to the good old days when Dean Martin and I could pound a few martinis and make a "G" movie."

Her new album contains quite a few re-releases, and opens up with "High Hopes" a obvious reminder as to how we all felt as Reagan and Gorgachav held hands and nuzzled on the banks of Lake Geneva. The classic "Wish upon a Star" is a blatant sardonic attack on Reagan's "Star Wars" defense system. Throughout this record; Daye has mastered presenting a highly charged emotional theme by simply using children's songs. The album builds to a feverish pitch, and then Daye drenches us with reality as the finale, "Que Sera Sera", reminds us of the current political rhetoric and realities.

Dear Cowpie:

Recently my buddy and I were sitting up on the roof of South Cunningham looking at all the idiots on the roof of Curry. Suddenly it occurred to me that if I had a sniper's rifle of some sort, I could probably pick one or two of those bronzed baffoons off. However, my friend quickly reminded me that I would probably get in trouble with the honor board if one of those people fell. I'd probably get charged with Admonition for throwing things off the roof.

I'm a little confused on this issue, since I would be responsible for their falling, but not directly involved with "throwing" them off. Perhaps you could help me out.

What's the matter with the way we dress? Personally, we didn't think that article was very funny! Hey, you think we like shopping at Dollar General?! We're not exactly making ourselves rich trying to teach you ignorant little nose-up-in-the-air plebes how to succeed in the big, bad world of life. We're doing this because we are dedicated to our profession and we thought we'd like to pass a little of our wisdom down to you ungrateful little snods.

So until getting the Sears catalog in the mail becomes the highlight of your busy little weeks — get off our backs!

What's this about Easter being last weekend? You people are so misinformed! If you would just take the time out to look at your Student Handbook and Academic Calendar for 1985-86 (for those of you lucky enough to obtain one!), you would see that Easter is obviously on April 6.

I don't know where you people get off trying to put Easter in March — even the notion of it is ridiculous. Next time, maybe you'll check your facts before you go shooting your mouths off.

Gerry Farwell Proposes Sin-Tax

By X. CRETION

Outspoken and controversial pre-dawn television evangelist Gerry Farwall has approached the Reagan administration with a federal deficit cure-all: a tax aimed directly at sinners.

The Ireverent Gerry Farwall: I have dozens of Degrees and Diplomas from my school, Puberty U. in Lynchburg. Two of these are Political Science and Computer Science, both of these were earned during Christmas Break. Well, I was doing my Master's Thesis on the old IBM, but this time the machine would not perform, it merely kept flashing "Syntax . . . Syntax . . .Syntax." At every step along the way. . ."Syntax." "Surely this is a direct message from My lord. The answers to America's problems is a sin tax," Yahweh said to me in his surprisingly fluent English.

Cowpie: I see, before we continue with this, your Irreverence, I must say that there is a little piece of snot hanging from your left nostril and it's really bugging me.

Farwall: It is not snot.

Cowpie: Is so.

Farwall: Is snot . . . Darn, okay, happy now?

Cowpie: I am, but what will your Martinizing Man say? He only works one hour a day you know.

Farwall: Look pecker, are you gonna interview me or snot? Damn!

Farwall: I'm glad you asked the whole system is quite simple.

We're sorry, this interview has been ceased, interrupted, vetoed by unanumous dissention.

Longwood College Chemical Research Has Potential Space Applications

Chemical research underway at Longwood College has potential application for space and aviation uses. The research also enables chemistry students to get "real, hands-on lab experience" in three areas — polymers, crystals, and organic chemicals from pine trees.

"NASA, for example, is interested in the development of polymers that will not melt but will remain flexible and strong at high temperatures," said Dr. Patrick Barber, director of Longwood's chemistry program. "We're trying to achieve that," he said.

Polymers are compounds with high molecular weights. Some polymers — like cellulose, DNA, and proteins — are made naturally in biological processes. Others — like nylon, plexiglass, and polyurethane — are synthetically made.

The polymer work being done by Longwood chemists is funded in part by a grant from NASA. Dr. Barber, along with Dr. Maurice Maxwell, Leonard Klein, and chemistry students, are working in cooperation with NASA scientists at the Langley Research Center.

"Our work here at Longwood breaks ground for NASA," said Greg Chiles, a senior chemistry major. "Their chemists will take it one step further and determine if our polymers have potential for their purposes."

The recent acquisition of seven state-of-the-art instruments is "a tremendous boon to the research," Chiles said. "Our ability to determine how a polymer is shaped and structured has increased at least a thousand percent with the new instruments."

The new instruments, valued at more than $100,000, were funded as part of the million-dollar-plus appropriation by the 1984 General Assembly for renovation and modernization of Longwood's science facilities.

There are various ways to create polymers. In Dr. Maxwell's research, he is using an unusual organic acid as the basic starting material. That acid chloride is combined with other compounds to form the polymers.

Subsequent steps in the process include filtering, rinsing, drying, and crystallizing the polymer. Then a number of tests are performed, to determine relative molecular weight, the temperature at which the material is no longer flexible, and its melting point.

The Longwood professors and students have been doing polymer research for several years. "At this point, we're trying to improve the materials we've already made," said Jimmy Coleman, a senior. "We're trying to get the molecular weights up and to pull out more of the solvent."

In another part of the research, Leonard Klein and his team are investigating the structure of polymers and how other compounds can be hooked to them.

Crystal growth and structure research is being conducted by Dr. Barber and his student associates. They are "growing" lead tin telluride crystals which could be used to measure infrared radiation.

"Dr. Barber's project is apparently the only one like it in the world," Coleman said. "The crystals are still growing, but the project seems to be successful."

Dr. Robert Lehman and students Donna Donkle and Tamara Marshall are "evaluating pine foliage as a potential source for naval supplies and fine chemicals." They are extracting resins and other organic chemicals from several species of pine trees that grow in southside Virginia.

Their work begins with shredding the pine needles, followed by "a great deal of washing, separating, evaporating, growing crystals, and filtering," Donkle said. Finally, the compounds are analyzed by liquid and gas chromatography.

In addition to their immediate findings, the researchers hope that "the gas and liquid chromatographic patterns of these pine needle constituents will provide data for future investigations."

The student researchers work one-on-one with their professors during each phase of the projects. "The professors tell us what needs to be done next. We have to learn how to do it and then do it," Chiles said.

"We're in the lab every afternoon, Monday through Friday, until dinnertime," Donkle said. "This experience is really going to pay off for us. I visited Consolidated Laboratories in Richmond recently. They were impressed because I knew what they were talking about, and I knew how to

Longwood's Summer Writing Workshop

By MELISSA CLARK

Longwood will host its first annual Writing Workshop for high school teachers and students this summer. The workshop will be presented in two, two-week sessions from June 15 until July 12. Each session will attempt to help high school teachers and students develop their writing skills under the guidance of the workshop's faculty and guest lecturers. Certain faculty and guest lecturers will be offering special evening lectures that will be open to Longwood students, faculty and the community. Among the lecturers will be the director of the workshop: Billy C. Clark, Writer-in-Residence at Longwood; Dr. Rosemary Sprague, Board of Visitor's Distinguished Longwood Professor of English; Albert Stewart, noted Appalachian poet; Shirley Williams, distinguished American writer, journalist and poet; David Halevy, Senior Editor, Time Life Magazine; Charles McCarry, Senior Editor, National Geographic; Karen McManus, Technical Editor, BETAC Corporation, and John Weisman, Editor, T.V. Guide.

"The director, Billy C. Clark, is a noted American author of 12 novels and numerous short stories and poems. His writings appear in many high school and college literature books. The Champion of Sourwood Mountain was offered by the Book-of-the-Month Club. His book A Long Row to Hoe is used by a number of universities as a study of Appalachia, and was selected as one of Time Magazine's Best Books of 1960 and the Library of Congress chose to record it on talking records for the blind. Trail of the Hunter's Horn was selected as a Crowell-Collier

No Kidding This Time

Barrett "Mick" Baker was recently selected to assume the command of Editor-in-Chief for next year's Rotunda. Although Baker will only be here for one semester, he was chosen over two other candidates because of his previous track record in the field of journalism, having worked for Union Communication Services (a Washington-based Public Relations firm) for the past five years during the summer months, and for his dedicated work with the Rotunda for the past two.

"Currently we seem to be having a little trouble with getting money for next year's paper," stated Baker, "but I'm hoping that will all be worked out when the time comes to start putting it all together."

Baker, with the suggestion of the Publications Board, will be implementing a new "internship-apprentice" program to teach interested persons the various aspects of what it takes to put a newspaper together — from copy editing to layout; the actual process of putting the paper in its final form. "We've had somewhat of a staff problem for the past two years," said Baker. "I don't know if people are waiting for a personal invitation or they just don't want to get involved — maybe it's a little of both. Well, if you're waiting for an invitation, here it is: I need help! If you don't want to get involved, that's your perogative. But I can say this: working on the newspaper doesn't necessarily commit you to putting in vasts amounts of time — we really are an informal group and we usually do have a lot of fun with it.

The new Editor went on to say that working on the paper doesn't always mean writing articles, either. "We need photographers," he said. "We need people in the dark room; we need all kinds of help — and we're, hopefully, going to be able to do all the training necessary to get these people — and make them good at what they do so they can take that skill with them when they leave Longwood."

My Page

Take this job and shove it...

It wasn't until recently that I reached a point where I could get my mom to admit that it was a good move to transfer to Longwood. True, I left George Mason in favor of the 'wood because this small town college will sell you a diploma even if you don't know a foreign language. (By the way is that 15 dollar diploma fee Greenwood's charge for signing the damn thing, or what? Jeez, Dave Winfield and John Riggins give their autographs away.) When I arrived at Longwood, I found many more reasons to be here.

This school is an incredible land of opportunity; the size and personality offers virtually unlimited chances for people to grow academically, socially, and extra curricularly. Students here take for granted the benefits of having faculty members know them by name; extensions, career counseling, recommendations, friendship, after class tutoring: These are all things you would have to wait in line for at a big school, and at the end of the line, behind the desk, would be a stranger. With faculty involvement, Honors programs and independent study a motivated student can find neverending challenges at Longwood. If you don't find them, you're not looking.

The social life, with the easy, friendly . . . well, suffice it to say that even a GEKE can find buddies.

Opportunities in the S.G.A. and other student organizations are absolutely without limit. To look at the list of committee positions and offices I've held in just 2 years is a joke. Somebody might say, "that boy is an over-achiever, a definite born leader-type". Bullcrap! All I did was raise my hand and meekly say, "I'd like to try that position." Surprisingly, there were openings. Three months at Longwood and I was on the President's Student Advisory Committee, students who meet with Greenwood and tell her what we think about Longwood. What the hell could a new student contribute to that group? Not much. In one year I am Editor of the paper. There should be a line at least 3 years long for this position, but in fact the wait is only a few months.

Now one of the main reasons for these openings is the general apathy that is circulating this generation and I cannot get a handle on that; but I can now understand the other reason for nobody trying to make Longwood better: no matter what position a student holds, as the situation is today, the student is absolutely and utterly powerless. In my time on the President's Student Advisory Committee, I can honestly say that we did not accomplish one damn thing. Not one little thing; it's all talk. A typical example is: We're all talking about how to improve the usefulness of the Lankford building, Greenwood pulls out the chalkboard and starts drawing additions to Lankford, wings with a new cafeteria, etc. Come on, we can't even get money for a couple new trees around here, what's with the wings? Greenwood's line to students is "5 years from now..." Everything is 5 years away, like the Soviet Union's ~~5-year plans. The basic theory behind the 5 year thing is that 99 percent~~ of all students here now will be gone in 5 years and won't be around to remember the promises.

You know, student leaders or The Rotunda can pin down some of the lower-level administrators and make them look bad, but the ones on top are untouchable. From my conversations with Vice President for Circular Reasoning Phyllis "pat you on the rump and send you home" Mable over the past couple years:

Me: The French Gym is just sitting there, empty, being wasted. The S.G.A. would like to begin working towards a renovation...

Mable: "Well I don't know what the situation over there is, but I know nothing can be done anytime soon."

Me: "Whaa?"

Me: "Several years ago, the yearbook was given 10,000 dollars to publish, but the staff dissolved and the money was put in a savings bond that matures soon. If this money is given back to publications to buy type-setting stuff, the money would be made back in one year. For example, The Rotunda would save 5,000 to 8,000 dollars the first year. The Virginia, Gyre and Broadsides would also benefit."

Mable: "Well, I'm not exactly sure what happened there, but that money will be redistributed to all student groups and you can't have it. A good idea though."

Me: "That explains it."

Me: (For the third time) "Why did you approve (a vindictive, but look who's talking) Student Activities Fee Committee Budget that didn't give The Rotunda any '86-'87 money and didn't explain why we were fiscally eliminated?"

Mable: "You'll get your money, they will arrange it next year. . .if you want to get down to that shitty level, four members of the faculty have been in here saying that The Rotunda is awful and were wondering what they could do about it."

Speaking of Rotunda control, at least half of my editorials this year have addressed problems that can only be corrected by the Board of Visitors. Before the Board meets, they ask Greenwood to prepare a report to brief them on certain situations at Longwood: I heard last week that the "information office lady" sends a copy of The Rotunda every week to Board members. I was ecstatic!" "They hear me, they hear me!!" Maybe my ranting will do some good. But what does the Board wish to be briefed on in May? They told Greenwood that "The Rotunda is not something that Longwood can be proud of," They wish to be briefed on what can de done to clean up The Rotunda. Jeez! What about comprehensive fees for student teachers? What about a student member of the Board? Visitation Policy? Or maybe Judicial Board freedom? Didn't they read it??? How depressing. If I can find Greenwood this week, I will present her with the list of Supreme Court decisions that slap down any administrative attempt at controlling the student press. But the point is that the Board of Vasectomy skipped the concerns of the students and went right to Cowpie to find bad words.

Last semester, somebody told me, "everybody reads The Rotunda, dude, the press is powerful and so are you." Sadly this is not true.

Over the past 2 years, I've seen over thirty letters to the editor about parking — everybody rages about parking. Apparently it is the number one problem that students have. This semester, they re-landscaped the front of French and had about 150 sq. yards of dirt to dispose of. What did they do with it? They dumped it right in the middle of the parking lot by the tennis courts, thereby eliminating about 50 student parking spots.

We gave it a shot. I think we did a helluva job this year. There were lots of things we wanted to do, but time and the system seemed to run against us. Our goals were set so high that it was impossible to achieve them, and I guess that's the way it should be. Lots of people complained about us this year, but everybody read us. Ninety percent of The Rotunda copy was valid news and information this year but it was the other 10 percent that brought the circulation to 3000 and allowed the real stuff to be seen by all.

The purpose of this editorial (is there one?) is certainly not to discourage participation by students in Longwood's political wiffleball. Many other schools have powerful student bodies which come together and successfully make demands on administrations. Longwood could be the same way. If the students just got off their fannies and became a unified group, the powers that be could no longer dismiss student representatives as 'a few kids who'll be gone in a couple years.'

I guess this feeling of non-accomplishment is familiar to some others who went from a nobody to thinking you're somebody with power and slowly realizing that you're just another schweenie on the treadmill. Proposing, meeting, voting, arguing, petitioning, tugging on the skirts of the administration — you're like a tick on their legs, they pick you off, check you for Spotted Fever and flush ya.

Would I do it again? Hell yes! I had a great time; got a car out of the deal, stashed away some money for a rainy day and it's getting cloudy already.

To those who follow, on this page and in student government, hang in there 'cause someday an issue will arise and the students will stretch their bed sores, pull the wool from their eyes and act like the paying customers they are.

Dear Rotunda,

It has come to my attention that a new fraternity-sorority has been introduced to Longwood. No I'm not talking about TKE. I'm referring to Ric Weibl's new organization which has been wreaking havoc on all of the Greek organization's halls on campus. Think of Ric Weibl as being Pledge Master and being high and mighty; or so he seems to be trying to prove. Ric Weibl said that he is not to be double-crossed because he is the big guy, the college, and we are not in charge around here, and that inevitably the big guy wins. He says that we must come to him with proposals. Pledging is a game. I knew that drawing a lottery number made housing selection almost a thrill. But why do the Greeks have to play Ric Weibl's pledging game. Ric has the power to giveth and to taketh away your room. If you don't play the game you lose your room and get randomly beamed somewhere else on campus. I had to do lots of stuff I didn't want to when I was a pledge. Mr. Weibl seems to enjoy making students sweat it out. Power is wonderful. Anyway here are the rules to the game. To enter, you must not pay your deposit before deadline or you have to forget to pick up your white card from housing. Once entering you are told that you are bad, irresponsible, and out of luck. Next you are told what you should have done. Lastly you are told of a vague plan to get yourself out of the mess. Now comes the hazing. As if everybody isn't busy enough this time of year, you are asked to come up with a suitable means of punishment for yourself; or whoever is responsible. This is to be a reminder to prevent any future irresponsibility. The more absurd the better the punishment. I'm not sure if someone has said they'll write 1000 times "I will be responsible" but I'm sure it would be suitable punishment. I'm sorry but how much sillier can it get?

Sincerely,
I.M. Amused

Raging On Mable, Raio And Saunders

Dear Editor:

I have a couple of things to mention as I have been saving up for this grand opportunity for quite some time.

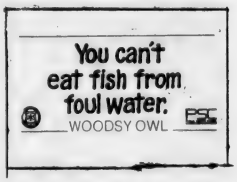
For lack of a good starting point, I'll start at the end, my most recent complaint. Let me begin by asking a question; Do students have rights? The Judicial Board says Yes; Sue Saunders says Yes; Barb Gorski says Yes; they all say read your Handbook and Statement of Student Rights available in Barb's office. But wait, someone forgot to tell Phyllis Mable. Or maybe they just don't apply to me? Oh well, I was guilty anyway, so what the hell.

My second grievance is with you, Mr. Raio (sorry Frank, but you asked for it). Actually it's your repeated attacks on the Minimum Sanctions Committee that I have a problem with, namely because I was on the committee. I would just like to let it be known that the committee was not in total agreement on these things, and thus not all "pin-heads," but hey that's democracy for you.

My next complaint is with censorship (A favorite Frank?) It seems that while the Rotunda can correctly print whatever it pleases, the average student who attempts to invoke his first amendment rights (whose essence is applied to the states through the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment — how's that Dave) through flyers and posters which are continually barred by the minority conscious, moral invoking Dean of Students Office (sorry Sue, but I still love you) with its extremely prejudiced use of the famed "approval" stamp.

Well sir, while I could go on forever (o.k. guys throw the flag, a little exaggeration) my typist is about to go AWOL — which by the the way reminds me of the Military Science Department, but I'll save that one for later.

J.D. Fitzhugh



Thanks To Fraternities

Editor, The Rotunda:

I would like to thank 2 fraternities at Longwood for their recent service provided.

First, the Sigma Phi Epsilon, thanks for filling the holes and putting up new strings at the basketball court on Main St. which is primarily used by our community kids and I secondly would like to thank the brothers of Omega Psi Phi, who number in few (2) but serves the community very well. Recently they held a clothes drive collecting clothes for the needy of the community. So to Eric and Mike, keep up the work and to the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity, again thanks and keep serving our community in such a manner.

A Letter From Next Year's Editor

When I first heard that I was to be the new Editor of the Rotunda, my first thought was to get on everybody's good side so that we could get as much done to improve the paper and student participation on it with as much cooperation from the faculty and administration as possible, not to mention the student body itself. Well, it looks like that's not going to happen. Therefore, I'm not even going to try to be nice. I don't know how you feel personally, but I feel like I've been pushed around, and in some cases, even lied to, since the day I got here. Consequently, I've been pushed to the limit and no longer wish to be pushed any further.

The circumstances behind this lie in an editorial written by my predecessor, Frank Raio, who found the need to slap a certain John Pastino on the wrist for over stepping his boundaries in the power department — an editorial that I can't say I would have written but, consequently approved of. Well guess what? The issue isn't dead yet, and to make matters worse, you and I have been drawn into it. That was the straw that broke that camel's back!

It appears that Mr. Pastino got a little mad about certain accusations written by Mr. Raio and subsequently, being the chairman of the student activities funds, decided to stab back at Mr. Raio by eliminating the Rotunda from the Student Activity's budget. In other words, the Rotunda is getting absolutely no money for operations next year. That's right — ZERO! Why? Because we didn't have a staff — a move that did not hit its original target of Mr. Raio but instead wounded me quite effectively.

However, this wound is not fatal due to the fact that if Mr. Pastino or his gang of Puppet Administrators don't want a student paper next year, then so be it — it's really no skin off my nose because if I have to, I'll take the Rotunda underground, with or without staff, and print a smaller version that could contain items of embarrassemnt to certain parties. Issues that the student body need to know but are being kept from — lack of funding does not take away my Constitutional rights or yours to freedom of the press. On the other hand, I would think that you, the students of Longwood, would be a little tired of these administrative cat and mouse games to show where the power of this college really lies and might find some interest in fighting to maintain the Rotunda in its present form.

The fact still remains however, that we do have a very small staff for next year's operation — if this issue ever gets resolved. If you'd like to get involved in solving it then, show the people "in charge" that you're tired of being pushed around and you're willing to fight for what is yours. How? Send a letter to the Rotunda, care of box 1133, stating that you would like to be on staff next year. Please include your name, current address, and position that you would like to cover. Currently we need interviewers, writers, advertising staff, photographers, dark room printers, copy editors, and various other positions that still need filling. You do not need any experience as we will be training people in various positions as they start to fill.

If you aren't going to be back next year, or you don't care to work with the Rotunda, show your support by sending me a short note (to the same address) voicing your opinion on this subject. Faculty are also encouraged to participate in this as the student newspaper is also meant to be a forum for yourselves as well. Please make responses as long as you like or as short as saying "I don't think it's fair" and sign it. Otherwise, we might not have another chance to do it next year — unless we spray paint it on the administration's walls....

Congratulations to the Class of 1985 for the excellent placement record of 94 percent overall placement. This percentage is higher than it has been for the past six years.

Data for the report was collected by the Office of Career Planning and Placement during the fall semester through the use of questionnaires and the telephone.

A summary of the report is found below.

SUMMARY OF PLACEMENT DATA

Total graduates (Professional-Arts and Sciences)	443
Total unable to contact	18
Percentage graduates placed (including employment, military and continuing education)	94
Percentage graduates employed	83
Percentage graduates continuing education	7
Percentage graduates military	4
Percentage graduates not placed	6
Percentage professional majors placed (includes majors in business, teaching, home economics, physical education, social work, therapeutic recreation, speech pathology)	94
Percentage majors in arts and sciences placed (includes majors not listed above)	91

Most graduates are employed in Virginia in such fields as educational institutions, merchandising-sales-advertising and banking-finance-insurance and others.

Of the 105 graduates responding to the salary portion of the questionnaire, most of them indicated earnings between $15,100 — $18,000.

More detailed statistics can be obtained upon request from the Office of Career Planning and Placement.

Survey: 1 In 5 Male Collegians Have Gone Smokeless

Even as the surgeon general, the American Cancer Society and the New England Intercollegiate Baseball Association last week joined in coincidental unision to call for bans on all advertising for Carolina University professor released a study showing that more than one out of every five male collegians dip or chew tobacco.

Still other preliminary data released at the same time indicate that quitting a smokeless tobacco habit may be far more difficult than giving up smoking.

In perhaps the most surprising news in a week of surprising smokeless tobacco news, Eastern Carolina Prof. Elbert Glover announced that 22 percent of the nation's male college students either dip or chew tobacco.

Glover and three associates asked 5,500 students nationwide about their tobacco habits, also finding that two percent of the females surveyed said they used smokeless tobacco.

In recent years, of course, many schools — Stanford, Maryland, Miami and Pacific Lutheran, among others — have restricted or simply banned smoking in classrooms and other campus haunts.

Few, however, have bothered to ban smokeless tobacco use.

Last week, the New England Intercollegiate Baseball Association came close, asking its member schools to ban all tobacco substances during games and practices.

At the same time, the American Cancer Society, meeting in Daytona Beach, endorsed a resolution to ban all cigarette and smokeless tobacco ads, especially those directed at young people.

The group wants to extend a new ban on smokeless tobacco advertising on electronic media to print media, too.

In a speech to the same group, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop released a report finding that long-time smokeless tobacco users are 50 times more likely to get cheek or gum cancer than nonusers.

"I am very alarmed at the high rate" of student use of the substances, exclaims Molly Laflin of Bowling Green State University.

Smokeless tobacco has become popular on campus, she believes, because commercials suggest it is safe, an impression further promoted by the number of seemingly healthy athletes who use it.

"You look at the World Series, and you see the players doing it," Laflin says.

One reason may be that they can't stop.

In a separate study, Glover attempted to get 41 students at an unnamed Christian college to quit smokeless tobacco. "They certainly had incentive to quit," he adds, because the school threatened to expel them if they failed.

Glover found their withdrawal symptoms were similar to smokers', "but more intense."

None could quit. Only one student managed to go more than four hours without dipping or chewing, and he used nicotine gum, Glover reports.

The same quit-tobacco course has a 38 percent success rate among smokers.

In his nationwide study of students' smokeless consumption, Glover found that 23 percent of the smokers who started puffing before they were 10 were still smoking in college.

But 61 percent of those who began using smokeless tobacco before they were 10 years old were still addicted by the time they got to college.

One reason smokeless tobacco may be so addictive is the continuous consumption of it by its users, Laflin speculates, adding dippers often put a pinch under their lip before going to sleep.

Glover and his cohorts also found campus use of smokeless tobacco varied by region. The rate was highest — 28 percent — among men at southwestern campuses. A relatively low 15 percent of the men at northeastern colleges chewed or dipped, the nation's lowest rate.

Gramm-Rudman Takes Aim At 1987 Student Aid

On December 12, 1985, President Reagan signed into law what has since become a household word — the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act. Gramm-Rudman (as we will refer to it) is a balanced budget measure whose chief sponsors were Senators Phil Gramm (R-TX), Warren B. Rudman (R-NH) and Ernest F. Hollings (D-SC). Under this Act an automatic deficit reduction procedure will be imposed through fiscal year 1991. Gramm-Rudman has already gone into effect for 1986 and will cut 11.7 billion dollars. 50 percent of these cuts will come from defense and 50 percent from non-defense areas.

The financial aid office staff at Longwood is concerned about the impact Gramm-Rudman will have on student aid dollars; however, we are also concerned about the possibility of the publicity surrounding Gramm-Rudman causing students not to file for aid funds. We URGE all students who would otherwise file for financial assistance to do so regardless of the Gramm-Rudman Act. At this time it is uncertain which financial aid programs will be affected or the dollar amount at any particular institution. It is predicted that Virginia's institutions should be able to absorb the first round of budget reductions. If an automatic reduction is again required, higher education programs could be cut an estimated 15-30 percent with the loss to Virginia's institutions between $21.6 and $43.2 million.

Since Gramm-Rudman will directly affect college students in need of aid funds, you need to let your congressman know how important student aid is to you, communicate to them that without this aid you may not be able to finish your education, and thank them for their support. And above all, file for the aid dollars that are still available to you.

Student Activity Survey

The Student Union Board is completing the process of booking programs for the Fall '86 semester. In an effort to find out what you want, don't want, and what you are willing to spend on entertainment, Bill Hughes, a senior marketing student identified a sample population, distributed the Student Union Board survey to that population through academic classes and tabulated the results.

Generally, we found that of those students surveyed, 5 percent of the total student body, most students are here on weekends, most want fewer mixers with high quality bands. Half the students surveyed have not attended a movie on campus and indicated that they didn't have the time. Sixty-four percent of the students surveyed indicated that they would participate in a Student Union Board sponsored trip, most preferred a Ski trip or an outdoor adventure trip.

What will your Student Union Board do with this information? A few trips both Ski and Outdoor will be planned for next year, high quality bands will be sought, a major revamping of our film program and weekend programming will be continued.

The Student Union Board would like to thank Bill Hughes for his efforts, the Students that completed the surveys and the faculty that took part in this project.

We are continually trying to improve our programming efforts to meet your needs.

Norman Simpson, a 1985 graduate of Longwood's chemistry program, says his research experience was the key to getting a position as a chemist in the nuclear medicine department at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, MD. He is involved in making and testing radioactive pharmaceuticals that may help victims of brain tumors, Parkinson's and Alzheimer's diseases, and AIDS.

"To get this position, I had to have excellent lab technique," Simpson said. "In this work, if your technique isn't perfect and careful, you could contaminate an entire lab."

Simpson estimates that he "beat out about 200 people" for his job at NIH.

Other 1985 graduates of Longwood's chemistry program are now in graduate school in medicinal chemistry at the Medical College of Virginia and in chemical engineering at the University of Virginia.

James Davis, a pre-pharmacy major, also is involved in the research at Longwood.

Delta Sigma Pi would like to thank ARA for supplying the utensils, cookware, and ingredients free-of-charge to the contestants in the Chili Cook-off.

Senior Reflections

This week the Rotunda asked seniors to reflect on their years at Longwood.

The following questions were asked:

A. What is the best thing about Longwood?

B. What about Longwood most needs to be changed?

C. What are your plans following graduation?

Denise Kuhn

A. Its smallness and traditions.

B. Traditions need to be brought back. Longwood shouldn't be such a suitcase college!

C. To be a director of sales in a hotel.

Tom "Sparko" Lackey

A. The opportunity that everyone has to get involved in something they like.

B. The lack of communication in the Administrative Offices.

C. I want to go to grad school.

Karen Nelson

A. Its smallness.

B. The food needs to be improved.

C. To get married.

Shari Scott

A. Social life

B. Bring Thursday night mixers back!

C. Trying to find a teaching job.

Jenny Parker

A. The relationships with the professors.

B. The "cake-walk" academic image.

C. Elementary teaching in Fairfax.

Steve Kidwell

A. The women

B. Thursday night parties.

C. To get married and go into the Army

Mike Green

A. Partying with friends.

B. Parking, administration control over student housing.

C. Hopefully, working for the government and living a good life.

Nancy Redican

A. Some of the people here who are down to earth and know how to have a good time.

B. Too many things are accomplished here through politics and not reason.

C. I'm going to enjoy life for three months for a change, then try for the G.P.A. Certificate.

Corky Robinette

A. S.U.N. Activities, the community at Longwood.

B. Everyone should get more serious about Longwood; we are getting better but some attitudes inside and outside of Longwood are still bad. This change can only come from within. Be proud!

C. To get a master's in Special Education.

Mark "Meatball" Mabey

B. School administration needs to stay out of the students' business.

C. Getting a Masters in History.

Mark Mitterer

A. Lancer Cafe.

B. Class Rgistration system. It sucks.

C. Graduate School; Business

Bruce Souza

A. I can now play "Jeopardy" better.

B. My underwear. No, really, the geographic location of the 'Wood' and the preponderance of institutional self-justification which runs rampant through the organs of the administration — literally.

C. I'm going back to my first-ever job — curb painting, you know — painting those house numbers on curbs.

Steve Nielson

A. Weekends

B. Attitude of everyone.

C. Going into the Army.

Jeff Lewis

A. Women.

B. Some women.

C. Going to JMU Grad School to look for more women!

Kevin Sneed

A. It is very easy to break rules.

B. The swimming test sucks. The P.E. Department is insensitive.

C. Top secret!

Babak Ardolan

A. Size: you can get close to everyone.

B. Better academics, teachers need to stress academics.

C. Working and going to grad school.

Teresa Alvis

A. Close Longwood community.

B. More respect for the Honor System and for the campus. I'd like to see some of these brainless people out!

C. Teaching — Elementary K-4.

Tom "T-Ray" Rhea

A. Odds of girls to guys.

B. Parking. Dining Hall needs longer hours.

C. Join the ranks of the unemployed!

Renay Bradshaw

A. Small classes

B. Parking. Maybe not allowing freshmen and sophomores to have cars would help; it might also keep people on campus.

C. Working at Nags Head and teaching K-4.

Lynn Jones

A. Men.

B. Visitation

C. Hopefully working

Sally Baughan

A. Small size, teachers get to know you personally.

B. Thursday night mixers

C. Teaching K-4.

Dan Grounard

A. 3 girls to every guy.

B. I thank Longwood for the $15 fee for diplomas, the $25 charge for housing before graduation, and the topper: the fantastic 1-hour keg party for my family the day of graduation. I laughed, I cried, I had a baby.

C. Teaching and coaching.

Susie Parsons

A. The best friends you have that will do anything you want to when they want to . . . if they have time.

B. The traditions need to be reborn.

C. Find the best paying job that I can compensate for.

Chris Marshall

A. The partying and the women.

B. I'd change parking and visitation.

C. I am going to clean teeth.

Todd Hunt

A. The atmosphere of Longwood was best for me, specifically the partying.

B. My GPA.

C. I'm running for President. I'm hoping to legalize hooch to break the deficit.

Kirk Vetter

A. Meeting people; the size of the classes.

B. The administration.

C. Working for my dad — construction.

Laurie Orange

A. My boyfriend.

B. Thursday night parties.

C. Going to Graduate School as advanced standing student.

Mary Thompson

A. Sawdust pile diving (by the smokestack).

B. Ranch Dressing in the Dining Hall.

C. Teaching elementary school.

Carolyn Doyle

A. Its personality

B. The type of boys that they accept.

C. Make lots of money.

Elizabeth Telliard

A. Being female and living in Cox.

B. This place is like a hihg school. People should be more open-minded.

C. Working for Longwood.

Steve Naus

A. Openness, friendliness

B. Visitation.

C. Sail boats in the Bahamas.

John Rusevlyan

A. Was 25c beers in the LDH.

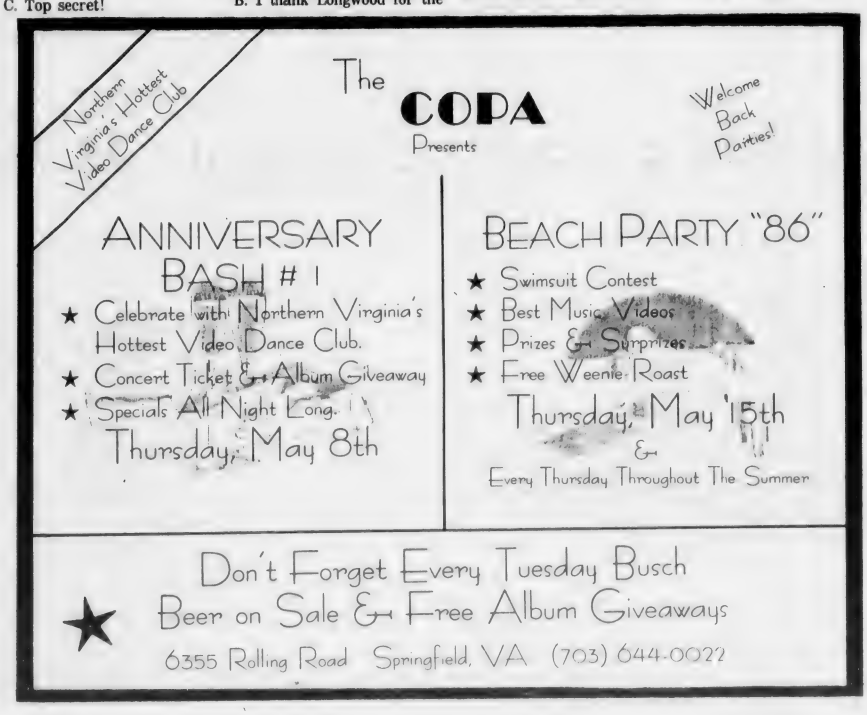
B. The dining hall in general.

C. Getting a sex change.

Todd Thompson

A. Ask me after a couple more beers.

B. Ask me after a couple more beers.



C. Ask me after a couple more beers.

Mark "Smurf" McArdle

A. Longwood soccer and friends.

B. Bigger recreational areas and scholarships for male athletes.

C. I don't know.

Classic and now appears in Platt and Monks American Anthology as one of the thirty greatest dog stories even written. Song of the River won the Friends of American Writers award as one of the three best books published in the south and southwest. His short stories and poems have appeared in numerous magazines and books such as Coronet and Best American Short Stories.

Dr. Rosemary Sprague is a prominent writer and is the author of biographies of Robert Browning and George Eliot, nine historical novels, and a study of five women poets. She was the editor of Poems of Robert Browning in the Crowell Poets Series. She has lectured at numerous institutions, including Stratford on Avon (England) and Oxford.

Albert Stewart is one of America's finest poets. He is considered by many critics to be the voice of Appalachian poets. He is the founding editor of Appalachian Heritage, one of America's most distinguished literary journals. His book of poetry, The Untoward Hills, is considered a classic and ranks as one of the finest works ever written on Appalachia. Mr. Stewart has published widely in magazines throughout America, and has devoted many years to assisting young writers. He lives in his ancestoral home, a National Landmark, on Yellow Mountain in Eastern Kentucky. Mr. Stewart recently donated his land and home to the University of Kentucky Agriculture Department so it could always remain in the care of those who loved the land and wildlife as much as he does.

Shirley Williams is a master of the feature story and is one of the finest non-fiction writers in America. For many years she has been feature writer and book editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal. Her workshop credits include such institutions as Hindman Settlement School, Indiana University, and John C. Cambell Folk School. She was a Professional Journalism Fellow at Stanford University during 1973-74.

David Halevy is a Time Magazine staff correspondent. He has been a correspondent for the Washington Star, news editor for various Israeli publications, and has had free-lance assignments for NBC and ARD (German TV). From 1967 to 1969 he was personal assistant and public affairs officer to the Israeli Deputy Prime Minister.

Charles McCarry, National Geographic is one of America's most distingushed writers; author of many best selling books, including The Tears of Autumn, The Miernik Dossier, Citizen Nadar, The Secret Lovers, The Better Angels, Double Eagle, and The Last Supper' selected by the Book-of-the-Month Club; and translated into 20 languages. His article and short fiction have appeared in Life, Atlantic, Reader's Digest, and Saturday Review. He collaborated with Alexander Haig on the book Caveat (1984).

Karen McManus is a distinguished editor and technical writer. She was slected to "Outstanding Women of America" in 1976. She is Technical Editor at BETAC Corporation, with duties in editing, teaching, evaluation, editorials, techniques, etc. She has published numerous articles.

John Weisman is a Washington, D. C. Bureau Chief for T. V. Guide Magazine. He is also the media correspondent for Mutual Radio News. His books include, Guerrilla Theater: Scenarios for Revolution (nominated for a National Book Award); Evidence; and Watchdogs (also published in Japan, the Netherlands and Italy). His latest novel, Blood Cries, will be published by Viking in the Spring of 1987. He has also published in the Washington Journalism Review, Penthouse, the Los Angeles Times, Rolling Stone Magazine, etc."

Anyone who is interested in attending the Writing Workshop (high school teachers and students only) or the special guest lectures (open to all) and would like additional information should contact the Office of Continuing Studies at Longwood College.

Lady Golfers Break Record

Ending the regular season in record-breaking fashion, Longwood's lady golfers registered a best-ever 304-304-608 Saturday and Sunday to win the 36-hole Penn State Lady Lion Invitational by eight strokes over second place Penn State.

Longwood, a member of NCAA Division II, defeated eight Division I teams while winning its second straight tournament. The Lady Lancers finsihed on top at the William & Mary Invitational April 18-20.

The two-day total of 608 was 40 strokes better than the previous LC mark of 324-324-648 which Longwood shot at the ECAC Open in 1984. Coach Barbara Smith's squad tied the existing record for one round — 304 — in both rounds of Penn State Tourney.

Leading the way to the weekend's record-setting showing was soph Tina Barrett. Barrett set a record of her own with an even-par 75-71-146, beating the school record for 36 holes she set last year (72-79-151). Barrett finished second behind Kirston Stone of Penn State who shot a two-under-par 71-73-144.

With a stroke average of 75.0 for her last eight eounds this spring, Barrett has a fine average of 77.5 for the year. She has played 29 rounds of golf in 11 tournaments since the fall. It is practically a foregone conclusion that the sophomore All American will receive her second straight invitation to the NCAA Women's Golf Championship May 28-31 at Ohio State.

Barrett, however, was far from the whole show for Longwood at Penn State. Sophomore Nancy Ryan shot a career best 75-76-151 to finish second and Marcia Melone also turned in a career mark with a 75-77-152 to come in fourth. Gretchen Pugh contributed a 79-80-159 and Tammy Lohren shot 87-81-168. Kim Poirier carded an 82-89-171, playing as an individual.

"The team was intent on beating the record of 304 for one round, but they couldn't quite do it," said Dr. Smith. "I'm very proud of the way we played. It's a great way to end the regular season."

The Alexandria native is the first Lady Lancer to hit over 50 percent of her field goals two consecutive years, and until this season held the school record for having the highest field goal percentage in a season. That record was broken by Melanie Lee, who shot 53 percent from the field this past season. When asked about this, Boska said she was happy for Melanie and that there is no competition for records between her teammates. "If someone performs better than I do then it's better for the team that they are playing," said the junior. She also noted that she always sees room for improvement in her game.

Boska learned about Longwood from a friend and probably wouldn't be here now if she hadn't received a scholarship. She says that she is glad to be at Longwood because the pace is much slower here on campus than at home. Her parents have always promoted and supported their children's interests, especially in sports. Karen has a brother who has played volleyball for Virginia Tech and two sisters who have played basketball for the United States Naval Academy. One sister, Bernadine, was the first female to score 1,000 points at the school. She also played volleyball for USNA. Boska likes Longwood for several reasons besides the slower pace. She likes the pretty campus as well as the size (enrollment of 2,600 students). Boska notes that it is much easier to know more people on a smaller campus. "It's nice to walk around campus and be able to stop and talk to other students," said the junior.

Boska stays busy in the offseason by playing basketball with friends, practicing the flute and competing on the Longwood Lacrosse team. She took up lacrosse last year as a way to let out some of the same energy she does in basketball. Boska is performing well in lacrosse, just as she does in basketball and everything else she sets out to do.

Rohm Player Of Week

How hot has Longwood hitting sensation Jeff Rohm been recently? So hot, that if he was able to maintain his current pace he would break former Longwood All-American Doug Toombs' record for batting average — an unbelievable .565.

Rohm, who has established or tied three school records over the past two weeks, has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period April 20-27. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

All Rohm did last week was extend his record consecutive game hitting streak to 12 and tie the Lancer mark for homers in a game — two. He also hit .579 with 14 RBI, a doulbe, two triples and four homers in Longwood's first four games of the week.

The junior catcher, who also fills the designated hitter spot, leads the team in batting average at .434 and in RBI's with 38. As of April 7 he was hitting .382 with just 16 RBI's. That was before he set another record for consecutive hits, with eight coming in games against Norfolk State and Liberty April 12 and 14.

Rohm realized a baseball player's dream last Thursday against Hampden-Sydney when he hit for the cycle. He started out with a triple and a homer and then followed with a single and a double. For the day, he was 4-6 with four RBI. He had driven in five runs with two homers and a single the day before in a 15-7 win over William & Mary.

Longwood record holder for doubles in a season with 17 last year, Rohm had hit 10 doubles, three triples and six homers heading into the Wake Forest game Sunday. He needs just one more double to tie the career record for doubles (34).

Rohm was an All-State, All-District and All-Region performer at Western Albermarle in 1982. He is majoring in business at Longwood.

Jeff Rohm's stroke was smokin last week.

Karen Boska — Top Athlete And Honor Student

By GWEN WALKER

Center Karen Boska, a junior from Alexandria, was the third highest scorer for the Longwood women's basketball team during the 1985-86 season. The junior is also an outstanding student.

What makes the accomplishment so great is the fact that Boska has had a 4.0 grade point average for the past two semesters. Boska, who finished the season with 248 points and 182 rebounds, says the key to her academic success is not waiting until the last minute to do her school work. "I stay on top of all assignments by using travel time to study instead of sleep. Road trips can be very long, and it would be a waste of time to just sit there looking out the window or sleeping," said Boska.

The junior averaged 9.9 points and 7.3 rebounds in the Longwood 25-game schedule. She shot 51.3 percent from the field and 65.1 percent from the charity stripe. Her totals included 30 assists, 17 steals and 8 blocked shots. She is a team-oriented player and feels she has contributed leadership, hustle and team spirit to the Longwood program. Head Coach Shirley Duncan states that Karen is totally committed on the court, whether it be in practice or a game. "It's that commitment which has grown into an addiction to academics," said Duncan.

Boska is quick to point out though that she does not lock herself into her studies when she's not on the court. "I make sure I have enough time to relax as well as study," said Boska.

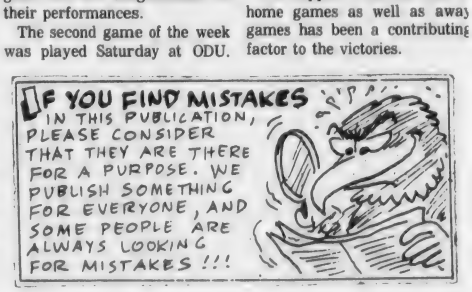
Rugby Club Continues To Slap Hiney; Hampsters Check For Hand Marks

By DAVE LARSON



Longwood first traveled to Hampden-Sydney last Thursday to face their archrivals. With no real big surprise as to the outcome of the game, Longwood crushed the men from H-SC, 42-0. Longwood played their second game of the week away at ODU again for the 5th time in a row the men from Longwood came out on top 19-3. After these two wins under Longwood's belt their record stands at 4 and 1 with only one game left.

Last Thursday the Longwood College Rugby Club traveled to Hampden-Sydney to defend last semester's 41-0 victory over H-SC. Longwood started right in to what later became a crushing victory. Phillip Casanave started the scoring off with the first try of the game inside the 5-minute mark. After the initial score Longwood didn't let up on the Hampden-Sydney team until a 36-0 halftime lead. Other scores in the first half were made by: Tom Ganun, 1 try; Dave Rackly, 1 try; Dave Larson, 2 trys and Tracey Kilby, 1 try. The point after conversions were made by Tim Seymour and Dave Grant. After the first half, Longwood decided to pull the majority of their A-side out and put their B-side in to finish the game. Although there wasn't a lot of scoring, except for a try scored by Vann Staton, the B-side played an excellent game. Players from both the A-side and B-side teams played a super game and are congratulated on their performances.

The second game of the week was played Saturday at ODU. The Longwood Club has been looking forward to this game all semester and went down to ODU in the right frame of mind to play. This game was one of the hardest games Longwood has played all year. The men from ODU take Rugby as serious as the men from Longwood. However, ODU didn't have what it takes to win. Longwood won 19-3. The first half was the best half for Longwood scoring 13 pts. The first try was scored by Dave Larson about midway through the half. Tim Seymour followed this with a penalty kick from 25 yds. out. Larson scored the second try to end the half. The second half was not as fruitful as far as points are concerned for the Longwood Club. The only score was a try by Phillip Casanave off of a beautiful pass from Dave Rackly. This put the score at 19-0. With only a few seconds left on the clock ODU scored a penalty kick. That killed the chances of Longwood's 4th straight shut out. The B-side game was a very hard played game also. The ODU team won a close decision 10-6. Alan Stancil scored the only try with Tim Seymour making the point after conversion.

The Longwood team has been playing some of the best Rugby, if not the best ever in the history of Longwood Rugby. In the last five games Longwood has allowed only 9 pts. to be scored on them and has scored a total of 171 pts.

The support from the fans at home games as well as away games has been a contributing factor to the victories.

Student Teaching In Korea— Heart And Seoul

Two Longwood College seniors will have an opportunity to truly be "ambassadors" for their alma mater.

Sarah Thayer and Beth Meehan, both elementary education majors, will do their student-teaching in Seoul, South Korea, beginning later this month. They are following in the footsteps of Amy Ethridge, who student-taught in Seoul early last spring.

Interestingly, Thayer and Meehan are members of a highly selective student public-relations group called the Longwood Ambassadors. Ethridge, who was graduated in May and teaches now at Osbourn High School in Manassas, also was a Longwood Ambassador.

She was the first Longwood student to student-teach in a foreign country.

Like Ethridge, Thayer and Meehan will teach at the Seoul International School, a private, English-speaking school with students from 35 countries. The school has 700 to 800 students in grades K through 12, about one-third of whom are Americans.

"I'm really excited," said Thayer, who is from Richmond. "I'm glad Beth and I have a chance to represent Longwood."

Thayer will teach in grades K-4, which is what she will be certified to teach along with reading, K-12.

Meehan, from Winchester, will teach in grades 4-8, which is the focus of her certification. "I'm not nervous about teaching there — not yet, at least," she said. "But I know that I will be. My modules have been so hectic that I haven't had time to get nervous."

Both are now attending the first session of modules — mini-courses for prospective teachers. Because they will still be overseas in December, they will be excused from the second session, which follows student-teaching.

Beth and Sarah left Sept. 21 from National Airport outside Washington and will fly to Seattle and then to Seoul. The two-part flight will take 20 hours. Neither has ever traveled abroad.

During their student-teaching, each will live with a Korean family, as did Ethridge. They will teach for about 10 weeks.

One aspect of the school should make them feel at home: it has a Wendy's restaurant, which is where students eat lunch. "Amy said the only difference is that the chili there is served with rice," said Meehan. "One day, she caught a kid who had sneaked his French fries into class."

Seoul, with 10 million, is the same size as New York and is the world's fourth largest city. The two students hope to attend the Asian Games in Seoul, an Olympic-like track and field that runs through the end of October.

Afterward, they will travel in the Orient for four weeks. They'll visit China, Hong Kong, Japan and finally Hawaii, returning on Dec. 20.

While Dr. Robert Gibbons, Longwood's director of student teaching, is attending a conference of international schools in Jakarta, Indonesia, in November, he will visit several other Asian countries to see about placing student-teachers. Several Longwood education majors have expressed interest in student-teaching overseas, he said. He also will be recruiting students for Longwood.

Thayer is head of the Judicial Board, Oktoberfest chairman, and a member of Geist, a leadership society. She was top caller in the Alumni Telefund last spring. Meehan is a former Orientation leader.

Longwood's Business Innovation Center— Opening Soon

"The U.S. has lost its ability to compete in the world economy," stated Lawrence Minks, Executive Director of the Longwood Business Innovation Center. In order to help remedy this situation, Longwood College will open the L. B. I. C. later this fall. It will provide a wide range of services to new and existing businesses in Southside Virginia. And it can well be a national model for other rural communities, according to an official of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The Center will:

- Support programs that inspire economic development, entrepreneurship, and human resource development.
- Strengthen the region's business and industrial competitiveness in domestic and international markets.
- Assist efforts to diversify the region's economy.

Examples of services to be provided by the Center are:

- Assisting new businesses in their development and growth.
- Identifying national and international sources of assistance.
- Conducting several advanced management seminars.
- Speakers, presentations, and information for interested groups.
- Computer-software packages for use by organizations.
- Self-adminsitered manuals to help inventors and entrepreneurs evaluate business ideas, and help them conduct preliminary patent-search activities.
- Assisting in computerized searches of new technology that may be adapted or applied to a new or existing business.
- Simulating new courses in Entrepreneurship and New Venture Development through Longwood's School of Business and Economics.
- Management materials to help businesses improve their productivity, quality, organizational development, and competitiveness.

"The Center's approach is unique in that it will look more to the businesses of the future which can diversify the local economy rather than conventional businesses," according to Theodore J. Lettes of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

He said that "areas of future growth and emerging business opportunities of interest to the Center will be the result of new global markets, the explosion of new technologies, and the resurgence of entrepreneurship in the United States."

"This is the basis," he said "for creating jobs and re-establishing the competitive capability of the U.S. within the context of world markets."

My Page

The following "joke" was printed in the September 19th issue of the Hampden-Sydney Tiger (newspaper). When I first saw it, my first reaction was to pull out a pen and start writing some choice obscenities attacking the 'school down the road'. But then someone who happened to be nearby at the time of my initial rage asked me why I was even bothering? "First," he said, "you're putting yourself on the same level of the people who wrote it (which is dumb) and second, two wrongs don't make a right."

Well, I have to tell you that I was still miffed, but I decided to compromise — I'm still going to run the reprint, but I am going to let you, the readers, make your own judgements. Any comments would be appreciated....

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Word Of Apology

To the students of Longwood College,

On September 12, 1986, an unspeakable quotation appeared in the Hampden-Sydney Tiger. Only after publication did I realize what I had allowed to be printed. I am deeply sorry that it happened.

Please understand that it was an error on my part, and not a malicious attack by Hampden-Sydney men. The Tiger claims to speak for Hampden-Sydney, but in this instance it could not have spoken any farther from the student body's actual sentiment towards Longwood.

I aks for forgiveness in hope that the happy and peaceful relations between your college and ours can be restored as soon as possible.

It will never happen again.

John W. Maloney
Editor in Chief

Business Innovation Center

Longwood. Dr. Minks noted that "Mr. Lettes assisted us in the initial development of the Center, and we look forward to continued cooperation from the Commerce Department."

Lettes is director of the Small Business Technology Liaison - Division of the Office of Productivity, Technology and Innovation (OPTI). OPTI promotes the productivity and international competitiveness of U.S. industry, primarily through the development and application of emerging technology.

Dr. Minks cited Longwood President Janet Greenwood as the "driving force" behind the Center. "She played a leadership role in opening key doors as well as persevering to make the Center a reality."

Dr. Greenwood said that the Center "responds to Longwood's goal of regional outreach to Southside Virginia in business and economic development and that it will provide professional development opportunities for some faculty and students as well."

She said that the concept of the Center is "consistent with the development efforts in Southside Virginia for the future." She expressed appreciation for assistance provided to the Center by such organizations as the Virginia Department of Economic Development, the Piedmont Planning District Commission, and Virginia's Center . . for . . Innovative Technology.

"Economic development is one of the big issues facing the whole region," said Jack Houghton, executive director of the Piedmont Planning District Commission. He added: "Anyone on that team is an added asset. The Center is a positive step."

Lettes referred to the Center as "one of the best planned operations I've seen yet." He said that "Dr. Minks has taken a good look at what has been tried in other parts of the country. When the Center opens, it will be much further along than most innovation centers."

When asked why a project like this was important to Southside Virginia, Dr. Greenwood answered, "Southside is responsible for only 1.1 percent of the economic output of Virginia — if we don't help ourselves, we are in big trouble."

"Besides that," continued Jack Jacques, Dean of the School of Business at Longwood, "we live in Southside and we need to take care of it."

Francis Butler Simkims Lecture Series Begins

A nuclear physicist from the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico will speak at Longwood College on Wednesday, September 24.

Dr. Delmar W. Bergen, whose work at Los Alamos involves the design of nuclear weapons, will discuss "Test Ban Issues." The lecture is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium and is open to the public at no charge.

Dr. Bergen has been associated with the Los Alamos National Laboratory for 25 years. He hopes that the fruit of his work there will never be used and stresses the necessity for interaction with other countries and "learning to care about people and the overall quality of life."

A native of Kansas, Dr. Bergen received degrees from Greenville College in Illinois, the University of Kansas, and the Ph.D. in physics and mathematics from the University of New Mexico.

For 18 months during 1979-80, Dr. Bergen was Special Scientific Advisor to the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Atomic Energy). He is the author of papers and unclassified reports published in professional journals and numerous classified reports on nuclear warheads for strategic systems.

His presentation at Longwood is the first Francis Butler Simkins Lecture for this academic year. The Simkins Lecture Series honors the memory of an eminent scholar and teacher who was a member of Longwood's faculty from 1928 until his death in 1966. Dr. Simkins was a prolific writer and perceptive scholar of the social, political, and religious history of the South.

Norman tried to use the 24-hour teller machine, but he couldn't stay awake that long.

Norman was really impressed with the Sovran Bank Cash Flow® machine. It could withdraw or deposit cash, transfer money between his accounts, even tell Norman his balance.

And with over 300 locations, Norman was sure he'd have no trouble finding one. Still he was disappointed to learn that Cash Flow machines were available for 24-hour use. Norman knew he'd never stay awake more than 23.

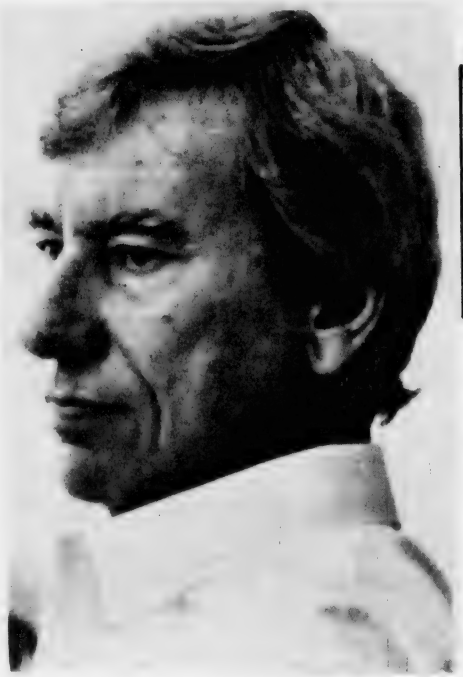
Living With The Soviets

"How to Live on the Same Planet with the Soviets" is the title of a lecture to be given at Longwood Coollege on Tuesday, September 23, at 8 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium.

The lecturer is Dr. Sanford Gottlieb, a well-known activist for arms control and the prevention of nuclear war. His lecture is open to the public free of charge.



Gottlieb is a Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellow who will spend the week of September 21 on the Longwood campus. He will lead class discussions and meet informally with Longwood students and faculty.

Gottlieb recently became a senior analyst for the Center for Defense Information in Washington, DC. Since 1982, he has been executive director of United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War, an organization of university students and faculty that sponsors educational activities, lobbies for arms control, promotes discussion of nuclear arms issues, and organizes the U.S.-Soviet university exchanges.

He also has worked with New Directions and SANE, citizens' lobbies for nuclear disarmament.

Gottlieb has testified before congressional committees and the platform committees of both the Democratic and Republican parties and has lectured throughout the U.S. He was The New York Times' "Man in the News" on November 27, 1965, when he coordinated the March on Washington for Peace in Vietnam that brought 40,000 demonstrators to the capital.

Author of numerous articles that have appeared in major newspapers and magazines, Gottlieb is a regular commentator on "In the Public Interest," which is broadcast by some 400 radio stations around the country.

In an effort to make sure that all clubs and organizations are represented fairly in the news, The Rotunda staff is asking each group to add a Public Relations staff member to their executive body. This person's duty would be to submit upcoming events to campus notes and possibly write short articles after events to report what happened. If this is not possible, please let us know well enough in advance so that we can have someone on staff cover it.

The Fall Women's Festival will be held Saturday, October 18th from 8:30 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. in the Wynn Building. Courses that will be offered include: basket weaving, bowmaking, smocking, pierced lampshade making, color analysis, wardrobe and accessories, hairstyles for your face, interior decoration, will planning, income tax tips and money savers, women in literature and the arts, and exploring your interests and skills. Registration deadline is October 3rd and applications are available from the Office of Continuing Studies.

The Department of Psychology is offering a tutoring service for students in any 100 or 200 level psychology course who are in need of extra assistance. Senior and Junior members of the Psychology Club will be doing the tutoring for a nominal fee. Students interested in this service are encouraged to contact their psychology instructor for a list of tutors.

The Ambassadors are still looking for students who want an opportunity to gain valuable experience in Public Relations and who want a major leadership role in the Longwood community. Applications are available in the Office of Institutional Advancement on the second floor in East Ruffner.

Having trouble with your essays? The English Department is sponsoring writing workshops every Wednesday from 12 to 8 p.m. in Barlow 102. Please call Mrs. Smith at 2-9356 or stop by Grainger 107 to make an appointment.

"We played well in the second half today," said Posipanko. "It's about time we scored some goals. It was a good win for us over a quality Greensboro club."

Karn, Gittman— Two Small Cogs In A Big Machine

With tournament Most Valuable Player Erick Karn leading the defense and Most Valuable Forward Scott Gittman leading the offense, Longwood notched two shutout wins to take the seventh Southside Virginia Soccer Tournament championship over the weekend.

The tournament crown is the 5-0-1 Lancers' second in a row and third overall since the tourney began in 1980. Longwood beat Slippery Rock 1-0 in opening round action Saturday and Greensboro 5-0 in the championship game Sunday.

Greensboro advanced to the finals with a 2-0 win over Hampden-Sydney. Slippery Rock took third place with a penalty shot triumph over H-SC. The outcome will go in the books as a 1-1 overtime tie.

Ranked 12th in the nation in Division II last week, Longwood is off until a trip Saturday to play Guilford in Greensboro, North Carolina. The Lancers have now shut-out four of the six teams they have played.

All-Tournament Team

Karn, Longwood's sweeper, spearheaded the defense which did not allow a goal in the tournament. Gittman, in addition to being MVP Forward, was the tourney's top scorer with two goals and an assist. The senior reserve did an outstanding job filling in for the injured Mark Kremen.

Gittman has already scored more goals (5) than he got in his previous years on the team.

"Scott has been a reserve for three years," said Longwood coach Rich Posipanko. "It was good to see him get a chance to play and do something with it."

Joining Karn and Gittman on the All-Tournament team from Longwood were Rob Liessem, chosen as the top goalkeeper in the event, and midfielder Jim DiModica. Liessem has collected 15 career shutouts and is just two short of tying Longwood's career record of 17, held by Brian Sprinkle. DiModica has played well since moving to midfield from forward after co-captain Shawn McArdle suffered a knee injury.

Greensboro's trio on the All-Tournament group included Most Valuable Defender Tim Blanck, midfielder Mike Krupica and back Brian Patterson. Third place Slippery Rock was represented by back Matt Veres and midfielder Eric Fogel. Hampden-Sydney placed back Jim Mulligan and forward Guillermo Lang on the All-Tourney squad.

A goal from Jeff Robinson on an assist from Mahfoud Kyoud was all the Lancers needed to get by Slippery Rock, 1-3-1 after the weekend action. Longwood had 22 shots to five for the Rock, coached by Posipanko's college

Player Of The Week

Freshman forward Laura Goetz scored four goals in three games last week for the Longwood field hockey team, and has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period September 14-21. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Longwood's top scorer, Goetz tallied twice in a 3-1 win over Lynchburg Tuesday, once in a 2-1 loss at William & Mary Thursday and once with an assist in Sunday's 2-0 victory over Appalachian State. The Cox High graduate has scored eight goals in six games, helping the Lady Lancers get off to a 4-2 start.

"Laura has certainly played up to my expectations thus far," said LC coach Sue Finnie. "I saw her score some crucial goals in the state playoffs which helped Cox win the title last year. So, I'm not surprised she has done well for us."

Field Hockey Hangs Tough

Longwood's young but improving field hockey team won two of three games last week to up its record to 4-2. The Lady Lancers will be out to add two more wins this week when Bridgewater visits Tuesday at 4:00 and Duke Saturday at 1:00.

Coach Sue Finnie's squad beat Lynchburg 3-1 Tuesday, downing the Lady Hornets for the first time since 1980. Thursday, William & Mary nipped Longwood 2-1, but LC bounced back Sunday to beat Appalachian State 2-0.

Freshmen from Virginia Beach did all the scoring Sunday. Leading point-producer Laura Goetz had a goal and an assist. She now has eight goals in six games. Diane Brown scored a goal and Liz Annet assisted on Goetz's score.

The homefield win was important, according to coach Finnie.

"Appalachian is coached by Longwood graduate Cathy Lowe ('78)," explained Finnie. "It's a rivalry game for both teams. So it was an important win for us.

"I'm pleased with the season as a whole," said the coach. "Every game is touch because seven freshmen are starting, but we have played with a lot of intensity. We're moving the ball well. We need to improve, however, on pressuring the opposition."

Goetz scored for the Lady Lancers in Thursday's 2-1 loss at William & Mary. The freshman had two goals and junior Traci Strickland contributed two assists in the 3-1 win over Lynchburg. Liz Johnson scored her third goal of the season against the Hornets.

Strickland, who has four assists and two goals thus far, has been the mainstay on the forward line, according to the Longwood coach.

"Claye (Conkwright) and Theresa (Labyak) have played solid hockey for us also," said Finnie.

Filling in a few blanks seemed easy enough to Norman. Probably the only way to get his own credit card.

Longwood College's chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, national professional business fraternity, made a clean sweep of the top awards at the South Central Regional Conference this past weekend in Roanoke.

The Longwood chapter received the "Most Improved Chapter in the Nation" award, the "Most Improved Chapter in the Region" award, and the Monroe T. Landruth Award recognizing the chapter that is closest to "the ideal."

Kristine Harbour, adviser to the Longwood chapter, was named Most Outstanding Adviser in the region. Mrs. Harbour is a member of Longwood's business faculty.

The Longwood chapter also received Honor Roll certification for attaining a maximum of 100,000 chapter efficiency points. Only 14 of the 165 chapters in the nation achieved Honor Roll recognition.

The region's Travel Award, recognizing the chapter with most members attending the conference, also went to Longwood. Twenty-nine of the 35 student members of Longwood's chapter, plus three faculty members, attended the conference.

"So many of our students were able to attend because of the support of the Department of Business and Economics," Mrs. Harbour said. "The department provided partial funding for students' expenses in Roanoke."

Longwood's chapter of Delta Sigma Pi is only five years old. It was chartered in April of 1981. Three years ago, the chapter almost lost its charter because it was not meeting fraternity standards.

"We have made a remarkable turnaround," said Kelley Noe, chapter president. "The regional and national people know about Longwood now. And we'll be there, competing, next year at the national conference in New Orleans."

The South Central Region of Delta Sigma Pi includes colleges and universities in Virginia, North Carolina, and Tennessee. "Many of the chapters in our region are located at large universities," Mrs. Harbour noted. "We are proud to have won over such competition."

The Southside Virginia Literacy Network

In the best educated country in the world, there are some 60 million people who cannot read and fill in a job application.

In the age of computers and space rockets, millions of Americans cannot read the morning newspaper.

In Virginia, one of every five adults is functionally illiterate. That means they cannot read and write well enough to cope with the demands of the modern world. The state spends millions of dollars each year to help the illiterate.

Educators, social workers, employment counselors, court officials, and community service organizations in Southside Virginia run head-on into the reality of illiteracy at every turn. Now, through the Southside Virginia Literacy Network, they plan to make a united stand to meet the challenge.

The Literacy Network is "a collective effort" that involves school systems, social service agencies, and volunteers in 11 counties and the city of South Boston, plus Longwood College and Southside Virginia Community College (SVCC).

The idea for the Literacy Network was "hatched" by Longwood president Dr. Janet Greenwood; Dr. Vera Williams, head of the college's department of education, special education, and social work; and Dr. Patricia Lust, dean of continuing studies at Longwood.

The concept was discussed at the May meeting of Longwood's Superintendents' Network and "met with favorable response," Lust said. "We then schedule a meeting here at Longwood that was well attended by representatives of the public school systems, SVCC, and area social service and volunteer organizations," she said.

A 13-member leadership group was selected to develop a working plan for the Literacy Network. Members of the group are collecting data on populations and educational levels in the 11-county area and have compiled a "digest" of literacy programs already in progress.

"We don't have complete information yet on the dimensions of the illiteracy problem in Southside Virginia," said Martha Hall, Longwood's representative to the Network. "We do know that, according to the 1980 census, a staggering 59.9 percent of those over 25 in the 11-county area did not complete high school."

She added that a high school diploma "does not necessarily indicate the level of skills a person has, so the census figures do not fully reveal the problem."

The first goal of the Literacy Network is "advocacy," Hall said. "We need to focus public attention on the problem of illiteracy and emphasize the relationship between literacy and economic growth for our area."

The Network is initiating a local media campaign, to coincide with state and national television specials to be aired in September and October. "We are asking radio stations and newspapers in our communities to help us spread the word that illiteracy is a tough problem, right here at home, but that together we can do something about it." Hall said.

Plans are being made for a conference on literacy, with Mrs. Gerald Balies as the keynote speaker.

The illiterate person lacks "basic survival skills," Hall said. The Virginia Literacy Coalition defines a functional illiterate as one who "cannot read a highway sign, cannot read a ballot, cannot read prescription directions, cannot read a menu, cannot fill out an application, cannot read labels on food, cannot write a check, and cannot read a newspaper or magazine."

My Page

"Here we go again..." That's the way I had initially intended this editorial to begin — so I went with it anyway. However, the body of this piece has changed from the original subject of the fights that occur between the Hampden-Sydney males and our own to something a little more noteworthy and far more serious. That subject is domestic violence.

Why do I want to talk about domestic violence? Well, the first of three reasons is because I don't think it gets talked about enough. (For example, one in every five women involved in an intimate relationship with a man is beaten repeatedly by that man. "Virginians Against Domestic Violence" newsletter, August 12, 1986.) The second reason is because starting next Monday (October 6), a local organization called DAY (Domestic Assistance for You) is sponsoring a "Domestic Violence Awareness Week" that runs until October 12. The theme for this year's event is "Love Should Not Hurt." During this week, various activities will take place to make people more aware of the fact that domestic violence does occur all around us — spouse abuse, child abuse, etc. One of these activities will be held next Tuesday night (October 7) at 6:30 p.m. in the Red, White and Green rooms and all Longwood students are encouraged to attend. This event will be a movie and panel discussion held by various persons active in this campaign and will feature a special guest — a woman who was-is the victim of spouse abuse.

The final reason I want to talk about this issue is because running an organization like DAY takes people who care enough to help and money to keep things going. "The Rotunda" is doing its part by asking local businesses for a tax deductible contribution of $25 to help raise money. In return, they will receive a business card sized ad in next week's "Rotunda". Students, faculty and administration members are also encouraged to make contributions. All participants will also be rewarded with space in the newspaper.

I know that the support is out there. I saw donations being made to restore one of America's great symbols of freedom — the Statue of Liberty. Now I'm asking you to invest in another great institution — the family.

To the Editor:

For the past week, the fraternity women on this campus have endeavored to extend to many rushees the friendship and happiness which they experience in sorority life.

The week began with Open House Parties when the sororities introduced themselves to the girls going through rush. "What's your major?" "Where are you from", "Where do you live on campus?" echoed throughout Stubbs.

But as the week went on, conversations got a bit more entailed. Inspirationals, parties attempting to reveal the true essence of each sorority, were the culmination of an exciting week. At this time, the rushees narrowed their choices to one or two. After this party, preference cards were signed by the rushees listing their top three choices. Their list was matched with the sororities preference lists, at 6:30, the Rushees lined up in Lankford and when their name was called, they walked, or ran, to their new sorority.

Congratulations to all new Sorority initiates.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Apologies, Appeals and Awareness

Dear Dr. Greenwood,

I am sick about the unspeakable "quote" in the Hampden-Sydney student newspaper about a Longwood (or, rather, the) Longwood girl. I apologize to you and to all who are members of the Longwood community. You can be sure that I shall act to assure that such things do not happen again. I hope you will remember that the sentiment expressed is not only profoundly unworthy of this College, but that it is a sentiment shared by no one whom I know of beside the "author."

It is my responsibility, however, as president, and I ask you to forgive me for this failure in its exercise.

Josiah Bunting III
Pres. Hampden-Sydney

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Among my colleagues out here at Hampden-Sydney I pass for an unreconstructed adolescent. I suppose that puts me in the best possible place to know just how dumb, just how cruel adolescents can be to each other. So maybe, before the inevitable howls of execration ring down this latest and silliest episode in the Longwood-Hampden-Sydney lovehate thing, you will let me say this, not on behalf of any agency or for any constituency, just for me: I'm sorry. I wish it hadn't happened. I hope it doesn't again.

Alan Farrell
Professor of French

To The Editor:

As the saying goes, "better late than never." In the case of the "unspeakable quotation," I'm not sure if this holds true.

Isn't it strange that the apology from the Editor in Chief of the Hampden-Sydney Tiger came more than a week after it was printed — and just as The Rotunda was going to press with their response to the quotation? How did Maloney allow this to be printed? Is he really the editor? Doesn't he know what is going into his newspaper?

Strike one up for the scum-sucking preppie southern boys for the really know how to maintain "happy and peaceful relations." We knew this would happen again, but boys, so soon?

Marna Bunger

To The Editor:

Printed in last week's issue of the newspaper there was a joke about the sexual practices (or lack thereof) of Hampden-Sydney "men". The implication was that Longwood women follow Hampden-Sydney guys around after they use them but toilet bowls don't. Are we supposed to infer from this statement that the seemingly well-educated men at Hampden-Sydney use women as they do toilets? In an appeal for common sense, where is the dignity, not to mention logic in that rationale?

Does the freshmen orientation booklet on etiquette also include proper bedside manner as well? Is this before or after getting wasted? Perhaps you "men" are fooling yourselves about the level of a woman's intellect, her wants and her needs. You pride yourselves as "experts" in those areas.

As you pick up your forks and knives according to the etiquette guide, perhaps you should pick up and look more closely at the highly emphasized honor code booklet as well. There are statements included about lying and cheating. These offenses are serious and subject to dismissal. Should not these ethics be included in your private lives — in the end you will be the ones to be dismissed. A liar or a cheater has no one to reproach but himself. (In the spirit of equality the above statement is generalized and we use "him" in a neutral sense.)

In closing there is the reminder that as Hampden-Sydney is an institution for higher learning so is Longwood. The standards for your newspaper are running neck and neck with that of a bathroom wall — zero to nil. Let's keep it clean boys — your toilets may take your crap, but Longwood women won't. "Welcome to the real world."

To the Editor:

Is the Rotunda legally or morally obligated to accept advertising that subverts the aims and values of the college and encourages students flagrantly to violate the honor code?

From Chairman Mao's China to Southside Virginia

It's a long way, figuratively speaking, from Chairman Mao's China to Southside Virginia and Mo-Xi Mi couldn't be happier.

Mi, who is from the People's Republic of China, is a graduate student and research assistant at Longwood College. He can put behind him the persecution his family suffered during the 10-year cultural revolution, the communist government's former dogmatism, and the overpopulation and poverty oif the world's most populous country.

"I like a small school like Longwood," he said recently. "I can make friends, exchange information, discuss ideas. I find people here very kind and friendly. And the teachers have been very helpful."

Mo-Xi is Chinese from Moses — he is a third-generation Christian — and his last name is pronounced "me."

Mi, a 34-year-old bachelor, arrived in the United States June 7. Last year, he received a B.A. degree in English literature from East China Normal University in Shanghai. He wrote to Longwood after seeing one of the college's catalogs in the university library.

"When I finished my undergraduate program, I thought it would be good to go to an English-speaking country and learn to write and speak (English) better," he said.

He plans to obtain a master's in English and work as an interpreter-translator, which he did in China. He is taking two English courses this semester and doing research for faculty members of the English, Philosophy and Modern Languages department.

Mi grew up in Shanghai, China's biggest city (12 million people) and leading port. His father is a retired hospital pharmacist.

Mi's family suffered during the brutal, purge-filled cultural revolution from 1966 to 1976, probably because his parents and both sets of grandparents are Christians. China officially is an atheist state. The major religions are Buddhism, Taoism and Confucianism.

During the cultural revolution, family members were insulted on the street by neighbors. His grandmother, who had owned land before the communist takeover, was forced to work as a laborer. Members of the Red Guards, a heavily indoctrinated police force, went to their house to see if they had any gold or religious books, which were forbidden at the time.

Mi knew people who were jailed and even executed. Some people committed suicide after being harassed continually by the Red Guards, which have since been disbanded.

In 1966, when Mi was 14, all schools in China were closed. He stayed home the first two years, then went to work at various jobs — he was a mechanic, an assembler, and a machine-operator. Schools didn't reopen until 1978, and some are still closed, he said.

MO-XI MI

Mi called the cultural revolution "terrible, a disaster, a catastrophe. Nobody liked the cultural revolution, especially young people . . .Chairman Mao was a great and wise person. But after the liberation, he did a bad job. He was evil. He was like Satan. A lot of people suffered under his leadership."

Mao-Tse-tung ruled China with an iron fist from 1949 until his death in 1976. "During his cultural revolution, tens of thousands were executed," said a recent issue of U.S. News & World Report. "Millions of the best and brightest — a whole intellectual generation — were exiled to rural labor brigades. Doctors sweated in rice paddies, poets mucked out cesspools."

The revolution was an attempt "to oppose pragmatism and bureaucratic power and instruct a new generation in revolutionary principles," according to the 1986 World Almanac. Mao's widow and three radical allies — the "gang of four" — were later sentenced to life imprisonment for their role in the revolution's excesses.

Before the cultural revolution, said Mi, "there was no freedom at all. Following the revolution, there was more freedom. But we still have a long way to go. I like my country but I also like America very much."

Mi was the first person in his family to come to the U.S. "At first, my parents were worried about some things. But now, they realize that I'm grown up. And, also, I traveled much in China when I worked as an interpreter-translator for the technical department."

Students in China have to pay for their elementary and secondary education, but college is mostly free. College students pay only for textbooks and meals; tuition and housing are free. Only about five percent of students who apply to a college are accepted, he said.

In high school, Mi was interested in math, "but I have always read novels. I started studying English by myself after the schools were closed."

At the university, Mi read such British writers as Shakespeare, Chaucer and John Milton, and American writers Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Edgar Allan Poe.

One aspect of American culture took some adjustment, recalled Mi with a smile.

"I had a hard time at first getting used to American food. For example, at every meal you Americans eat bread and butter, which was new to me. In China, we eat just rice and vegetables and some shrimp. But now I'm getting used to your food. Not only do I get used to it, but I like it. I like sandwiches, hot dogs, everything."

Mi speaks English fluently but with an accent. "English is no problem to me." He added, however, that Americans are difficult to understand when they use slang. He also reads Japanese and some German but doesn't speak either language.

Young people in China are interested in American culture, and the government — which once condemned Western culture as decadent — is tolerant of that, said Mi. "Recently there have been good relations between the two countries," he said, citing a trip U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger made to China this spring. More and more Americans are traveling to China, he noted.

"Ten years after Mao Tse-tung's death," said U.S. News & World Report, "his successors have committed a billion Chinese to a new revolution. Domestic reforms range from unprecedented touches of personal freedom to experiments with capitalism."

Mi, a slightly built man whose conversation often is animated, already thinks of himself as an American. "I regard myself as an American. People here like me, and I like them."

Rugby Club Crushes Catholic University

By DAVE LARSON

Longwood Rugby Club started their season off on Sept. 13 in Richmond against T.C. Williams Law School. Longwood came out on top 30-0. This victory marked the first time Longwood has ever won a season opener.

The next game was played at home against a tough VA Beach men's club. Longwood played an excellent game. At the half Longwood had held the VA Beach Club to a 0-0 tie. Longwood went into the second half with a very positive attitude and desire to win. The attitude and desire, however, was not enough. The men's club wore down the Longwood Club with about 20 minutes to go in the game. The final outcome was 19-0, VA Beach.

Longwood traveled to Washington, D.C. this past weekend to play Catholic U. With no idea how the Catholic team plays, Longwood went into the game with a very optimistic attitude. By the end of the first half Longwood had racked up 19 unanswered points. The Longwood team went back out in the second half and scored another 24 pts. to Catholic's 3. The final score of the game was 43-3.

Dave Grant started out the scoring for Longwood and by the end of the game, T-Rhea, Will Randalls, Tim Seymour, Dave Larson, James (Duck) Jackson and Billy Sturgill all had scored tries for Longwood. Tim Seymour added a 3 pt. drop kick and a few point conversions after tries, to wrap up the scoring. This was a very impressive win for Longwood and they're looking forward to a season filled with victories.

Also enjoying a victory was Longwood's B-side over Catholic U. The final score was 7-4. Brian Liming scored a 3 pt. penalty kick and Tony Lindsay scored a try to add up the points for Longwood.

The next game will be this weekend against Washington and Lee away. If anyone will be in the vicinity they are encouraged to attend.

The next home game will be Oct. 11 against ODU. Everyone come out and support the team.

ROTC Getting Off to a Good Start

By CATHY GAUGHRAN
As Reported By FRED GRANT

The Military Science Department has gotten off to a strong start this semester. There are two reasons for this success: The military science IV Cadets' completion of Advanced Camp, and the arrival of three new and energetic Cadre members.

Fourteen MS IV's spent six weeks this summer at Fort Bragg, N.C. attending Advanced Camp. Upon returning to school, they were promoted to Cadet Officer Grades as follows: Kimbra Patterson became Cadet Lieutenant Colonel, Kate Scanlon, John Wright, Don Strickland, and Billy Howard became Cadet Majors, Alicia Ashton, Scott Estes, Fred Grant, Paul Griffin, Mike Hamady, Randy Hart, Bill Hedge, Ted Treece, and Kevin Wilkins became Cadet Captains, and Bobby Arnold became Cadet Sergeant Major. Three of these cadets also attended Jump School at either Fort Braff NC or Fort Benning, GA. These cadets are Kim Patterson, Don Strickland, and Scott Estes. Two of the cadets, Fred Grant and Kim Patterson were stationed with regular army units for three weeks with the Cadet Troop Leader Training Program, where they were able to work with second lieutenants in daily routines.

Due to excellent performance at camp and outstanding academic records, Kim Patterson, Katie Scanlon, John Wright and Don Strickland were bestowed with the title of Distinguished Military Students, an honor enjoyed by very few cadets.

The 3 new Cadre dept. members are Major S. Nally, airborne ranger; Captain M. Fox, helicopter pilot; and Seargeant Major MSG Smearengen, recipient Silver Star in Vietnam.

Some of the activities the department will be conducting this semester include various camp trips, a field leadership exercise from Oct. 31 - Nov. 2nd, and a Rangers' Repelling at Fort Pickett on Oct. 10.

Kim Patterson, with her Department of the Army "Superior Cadet Decoration Award", was selected as the top cadet in the MS III class due to her academic and military excellence.

'Morris Site Could Have Been Agricultural Village' Students Find

The Buckingham County site that Longwood College archeology students began excavating last summer has proven to be a good "find" in itself.

Students in Longwood's Summer Field School in Archeology have found more artifacts, recovered more pottery fragments and the fragments have various design motifs, and are locating artifacts in a more concentrated area than at any of the former sites they have dug since the first field school started work in 1980.

"We have lucked or researched our way into a good site," said Dr. James Jordan, field school director.

"We believe the Morris Site was a settled agricultural village, whereas our other sites were transitory base camps dating from the Archaic Period — 8,000 or 9,000 years before the present — right down to modern times," Jordan said. "This site was probably used during the Archaic Period, but the bulk of the artifacts are from 2,000 years before the present or more recent. It was not on the outskirts but was 'downtown,' so to speak. People stayed here generations after generations, raising families."

This year's field school should yield even more artifacts than last year's, said Jordan. "Last summer we spent considerable time trying to figure where to dig. We found 1,761 artifacts last year. I expect that we'll find more than 2,0000 artifacts this year."

Each summer two five-week field school sessions are held. The second session began July 14. Students in Anthropology 595 — the advanced course for those taking part in their second "dig" — have to complete independent projects. Both courses, 495 and 595, are worth six credits.

Carole Metz and Janet Wiggins

An area in the middle of the excavation site apparently was a trash pit. "We think it was a trash pit because we're finding small pieces of charcoal and a lot of organic matter," said student Dave Grant. "You usually find flakes of lithic material, which is debris from the manufacture of stone tools. Like this one, the pits were usually circular and had a diameter of about 3½ feet. The two biggest shards (fragments) of pottery that we've found have come out of this pit."

It also may have been a burial site, said student Julie Gorniak. "We haven't found any bones, but the soil discoloration indicates this may have been used for burial," she said. "It appears that bones had been there in a pile, which is called a 'disarticulated burial.' Of course, it could have been a stack of animal bones. A soil sample from the pit will be tested for calcium content."

Gorniak showed two matching pieces of hardened, orange-tinted clay that were found in the trash pit-burial site. "This is 'Prince George Roughened Pottery' and it dates to 1,700 years before the present. It could have been a 'grave good' or part of a vessel."

Jordan thinks the excavation site was a living area and that Indians grew their crops closer to the Appomattox River, which is only 125 yards away. Asked what they may have grown, he said, "Probably the trilogy of corn, pumpkins and beans, because that's what Indians in this area grew. But that's just a guess."

Many pottery shards have been found at the Morris Site and the shards have various design motifs, said Jordan. "All different kinds of vessels are represented. They tinkered with pottery, perfecting it over time."

Interestingly, the students are using a modern device to learn about prehistoric man. A flotation device — consisting of a plastic tub, a hose and an engine with two pumps — enables them to retrieve tiny artifacts such as shell and bone artifacts that normally would be lost, Gorniak said. It was purchased from a New Jersey company that specializes in archeology equipment.

"The pumps pull water from the river up here to the tub," explained Gorniak, who operated the device for the first session. "The larger artifacts remain on the screen here and the smaller ones go through a hole into a cotton bag."

Last year, a flotation device was made from an oil drum, but it wasn't as effective as the new device, said Gorniak.

Items recovered by the flotation device — plant remains, parts of roots, seeds, a bug wing, small pieces of charcoal — will be tested by the state Division of Mineral Resources and Economic Development in Charlottesville. "If the phosphorus levels are high, that means humans inhabited the area," Gorniak said.

The largest pottery shard found this summer, which measures about three inches by four inches, contains horizontal markings inside and outside and on the rim. "This could be from a large vessel often buried along with the human burial," said Barbara Solenberger. A projectile point found this year dates the site at least 6,000 years before the present.

Field school students have taken turns excavating two other sites, one of which is a few miles east of the Morris Site off Route 636. The wooded site features a low rectangular wall, made of dirt and rocks, that is about 600 feet long and 20 to 30 rock piles just outside the wall. The site's function is unknown, but it is thought that it was used for ritual or ceremonial purposes.

"The site has been a mystery so far," said Tom Richards, who dug there this summer and in the spring. "We haven't found any artifacts, which is consistent with what we've read about similar mound sites in Alabama and Kentucky. At ceremonial sites, all mundane materials had been taken away."

Denise Rast and Barbara Sollenberger

At the other site, on the Dan River near Turbeville in Halifax County, a "celt" — a sharpened stone tool used for cutting — and a hoe blade were found. Both sites probably will be excavated again next year in conjunction with the field school.

"What we're always trying to discover is: what would it be like to have been prehistoric?" said Jordan.

SAM Wants You!

In 1972, the followers of Frederick W. Taylor (the father of "scientific managements") together with a group of collegues, founded SAM — the Society for Advancement of Management.

SAM's early professional managers recognized the need to develop future manager, and hence, the year 1932 witnessed the birth of the first SAM collegiate chapter.

Today SAM boasts many senior chapters composed of practicing management professionals worldwide — as well as 160 highly successful campus chapters which prepare their student members for top management roles in every field.

As a SAM member, you will receive the following:

— Quarterly issues of SAM ADVANCED MANAGEMENT JOURNAL

— Certificate of Membership

— Membership card

— Invitations to INTERNATIONAL and REGIONAL CONFERENCES where you can meet with professionals and other student members

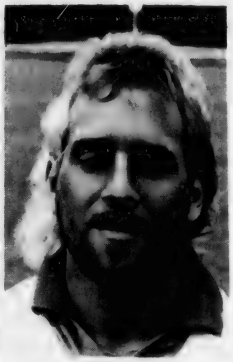
Lancer Soccer Takes Fifth Shutout

Longwood's soccer team notched its fifth shutout of the season Saturday with a 1-0 win at Guilford, but the injuries are beginning to mount for coach Rich Posipanko's 14 ranked team.

The Lancers will take a 6-0-1 mark into Saturday's game at Lynchburg, ranked seventh in Division III last week. The Hornets, historically a Division III powerhouse, could provide Longwood with its toughest test of the season.

"It will be Parent's Weekend at Lynchburg," said Posipanko, "so, they'll probably have a big crowd on hand. There's no question it will be a tough game for us, particularly with all the injuries we've had."



Freshman Chuck Rankin is the latest to join the ranks of the injured. Rakin scored the winning goal with eight minutes left at Guilford Saturday, but was taken out by the Quaker goalkeeper. The first-year back suffered a broken ankle. He had a cast applied Saturday night and is out for the season. Braswell, the Guilford keeper, reportedly suffered a broken leg in the collision.

Posipanko was upset at the rough tactics employed by Guilford and poor field conditions. The Quakers had upset Division I Wake Forest at home earlier this season.

"It looked to me like their keeper didn't even try for the ball," said the Longwood coach. "He just tried to knock Chuck out of the play. Chuck made a great play to score, but it's too bad he had to get injured to do it."

Rankin took a lead pass from Erick Karn and got off the shot at about the same time the keeper ran into him. The ball rolled into the net as both players lay on the ground.

Starting forward Mark Kremen who had been out with a sprained ankle, has been diagnosed as having a stress fracture in his foot. Kremen, a vital cog in the Longwood attack, had seven assists in the first three games of the season. He may now be out for the year, however, and could be red-shirted.

Eric Karn trying to keep injury free.

Starter Shawn McArdle and reserve Bill Moore remain on the sidelines indefinitely with knee injuries.

"We're still okay because of our depth, but if we have any more serious injuries it will really hurt," said Posipanko.

Lady Goflers Take Another Tournament

Winning tournaments is getting to become a habit for Longwood's talented women's golf team. Sunday, the Lady Lancers clipped host James Madison by six strokes to win the James Madison Invitational for the third year in a row.

Even more impressive is the fact that it was the fourth straight tournament title for Longwood dating back to spring, 1986. Coach Barbara Smith's squad finished up last spring with victories in the William & Mary and Penn State Invitationals and won the Longwood Invitational two weeks ago.

Longwood shot 320-324-644 to best second place Madison (332-318-650) and 11 other Division I teams. The 36-hole tournament was played at Spotswood Country Club in Harrisonburg, a par-73, 6,100 yard layout.

Lancer leader Tina Barrett came within a playoff of taking first place out of over 70 golfers. Barrett tied Appalachian State's Angie Ridgeway for the top spot as both players shot 75-77-152. Ridgeway, however, took the crown when she beat Barrett on the second hole of a playoff.

Freshman Ashley Warren playing as an individual, finished in a five-way tie for 12th place with an 84-80-164. Tammy Lohren shot 82-84-166 to tie for 18th. Leigh Russell carded an 86-83-169 and Gretchen Pugh shot 88-88-176.

Next up for Longwood is the Duke Invitational October 10-12 in Durham, North Carolina.

Women's Volleyball; Frustrated But Learning

By RICK RIVERA

Longwood's women's volleyball team participated in the Liberty Open Volleyball Tournament last weekend. According to coach Linda Elliott it was a frustrating but educational experience.

The Lady Lancers travel to Virginia Union Tuesday for a 7:00 contest and then to Mary Washington the following Tuesday (7:00) before coming home to host the Cindy Smith Invitational October 11.

During the weekend's action the Lady Lancers could only muster one win versus five defeats. Despite the losses, coach Linda Elliott left the tournament feeling like she accomplished something. Longwood finished the two-day event with an overall record of 6-10.

At times during the tournament Elliott did not recognize her own team. In five of the six matches the Lady Lancer grabbed a first game win, but could not keep the momentum throughout the match. "They seemed to fall apart during the second and third games," stated Elliott. After a very relaxed first game the Lady Spikers played not to lose instead of applying the pressure.

Despite the disappointing weekend, Longwood had several outstanding players. Perhaps the two most impressive were Kris Meyer and Annette Easterling. Although they did not have great statistics, these two were in the thick of the action, playing team volleyball.

Staci Dillon had another good night serving as well as setting the ball. According to Elliott, Lanette Ezell was the most consistent player during the tournament. Joanna Marquez again fulfilled her role as a utility player filling in several positions during the day.

Stephanie Coukos was sidelined midway through the tourney with a sprained ankle but is expected to return to action this week.

Overall the Lady Lancers were not guilty of laying down but were guilty of trying to do too much. As Elliott put it "The team gave a 110 per cent effort physically but only 70 per cent mentally and momentum is captured throught the mental aspect."

Field Hockey Splits Two

By KIRK BARNES

Longwood's steadily improving field hockey team split two games at home last week to move its record to 5-3. The Lady stickers will try to boost their record when Randolph-Macon comes to town Thursday for a make-up game starting at 4:00 and Maryland Baltimore County visits Saturday for a 2:00 confrontation.

The Lady Lancers completely destroyed Bridgewater Tuesday 11-0. Saturday coach Sue Finnie's team came up on the short end of a 1-0 score against Duke.

The defense played a tough game Saturday, while the offense had its troubles. Margie Kernen was the defensive player of the game with 18 interceptions-tackles. Claye Conkwright had 21.

"The offense was not cutting towards the ball and we did not get into the game early," said Finnie. The loss marks the first time this season Longwood has been shutout. Finnie explained, "There was no real offensive involvement in the second half, the ball just went back and forth."

Finnie said her team was frustrated by Saturday's loss.

"We seem to be having a problem early in most games," said the coach. "Duke got its goal only 2:25 into the game. We shut them out after that."

Statistically the game was close. The Lady Blue Devils outshot the home team 17-16 and had 5 goalie saves to Longwood's 6.

Freshmen Laura Felch and Terri Pugh were responsible for half of Longwood's output in an 8-0 shellacking of Bridgewater Tuesday. Patty Boyle, another freshman, passed her way to a new school record with four assists.

The defense stole the ball at will and kept the visiting team pinned in its half of the field much of the game.

Members of the Longwood junior varsity team got in some valuable playing time.

Statistical leaders for the 5-3 Lady Lancers are freshmen Laura Goetz and Liz Johnson in goals with eight and four, respectively. Conkwright has a whopping 121 interceptions-tackles in eight games.

Coach Finnie has been pleased with the progress of this young but enthusiastic team.

Player of the Week

CHUCK RANKIN

Chuck Rankin may not get the chance to play another soccer game for Longwood this season, but the 5-7, 155-pound freshman went out with a bang Saturday in a 1-0 win over Guilford.

Rankin scored the winning goal with eight minutes left to keep Longwood (6-0-1) unbeaten, but he suffered a broken ankle on the play. Rankin has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for his performance. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

A reserve back who had played in all seven of nationally-ranked Longwood's games this season, Rankin took a pass from Erick Karn in front of the Quaker goal. As he booted in the winning shot, the Guilford keeper crashed into him and both players went down.

Called "Slugo" by his teammates, Rankin is a health-fitness major and perhaps the best-conditioned athlete on the Lancer team.

"Chuck came through with a great play for us Saturday," said coach Rich Posipanko. "I'm just sorry he had to get injured in the process. He had been doing a real good job for us off the bench, but it looks like he's probably lost for the season. We'll miss him."

Longwood was ranked 14th in the national Division II poll last week.

Rankin is a graduate of Upper Dublin High School in Maple Glen. He earned second team All-Star and first team All-League honors and was captain of the Upper Dublin team.

SIXTY-SIXTH YEAR | TUESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1986 | NUMBER THREE

'Does The Honor Code Still Work In The 1980's?

When Joe McGill was assistant dean of students at American University, a student paid an employee in the registrar's office several hundred dollars to make extensive changes in her grades. She was suspended.

At Wake Forest University, where he was director of residence life, a student acquired the answers to an exam ahead of time. The student was caught, and later dismissed, because he absent-mindedly typed the answers in a blue book.

"I have long since stopped being surprised by what students will do," said McGill, now director of student services at Longwood College. "If it's doable, students will do it. But sometimes they'll also surprise you with their sense of honor."

McGill administers Longwood's academic honor system, which will be the focus of a two-day conference in Richmond. The Education for Honor Conference will be held Oct. 10 and 11 at the Sheraton Midlothian. Some 30 selected students, faculty and administrators will attend.

"It's an opportunity to talk through some questions on honor and the Honor Code." said Dr. David James, a Longwood philosophy professor who is putting the conference together.

Guest speakers will include Walter Ulmer, executive director of the Center for Creative Leadership in Greensboro, N.C.; Richard Kast, assistant attorney general of Virginia; and Dr. Robert Rogers, a religion professor at Hampden-Sydney College. There will be workshops and small and large group discussions.

Dr. James, a member of Longwood's student life committee, said questions about the Honor Code arise during committee meetings. "A lot of people wonder, 'Does the Honor Code still work in the 1980s?'"

The Honor Code requires students to pledge, "I have neither given nor received help on this work, nor am I aware of any infraction of the Honor Code." The Code specifically forbids cheating, lying, stealing and plagiarism.

The Code asks students who have witnessed violations to approach their classmate and give him or her 24 hours to report it. If the student does not do so, the accuser is expected to report the alleged violation to the Honor Board chairman or the dean of students. Students are not to report suspected violations to the faculty member.

The nine-member Honor Board, composed of students elected by the student body, hears these cases and makes recommendations to the dean of students. Sanctions for those found guilty range from "admonition" (a letter in the student's file) to dismissal. The dean of students, Dr. Sue Saunders, then either accepts or rejects the recommendation; she can lower or increase the penalty.

Accused students can appeal the Board's recommendation and, if it differs, the dean's final decision. When a student is found "not responsible" — innocent— that recommendation is automatically accepted by the dean of students.

The Honor Board has heard five cases so far this semester. Three students were found not responsible and two were placed on "disciplinary probation." Three more cases will be heard soon.

The sanctions, in order of increasing severity, are admonition, restitution, educational assignment, probation, suspension and dismissal. All dismissal decisions must be approved by the president. No student was dismissed last year, though several were suspended.

One year after a convicted student's last semester at Longwood, his or her file is expunged for public purposes.

"I think our honor system has a few wrinkles—such as procedure and implementation—that can be ironed out," said Michael Clements, chairman of the Honor Board. "We want to educate the students and the entire college community about the honor system."

Clements, a junior from Mechanicsville, said the biggest problem is a lack of awareness and understanding of the system. "Too many people claim ignorance. They say, 'I didn't know that was an honor code violation. I didn't understand that.'"

A major effort in recent years has been made at orientation to inform students of the honor system. "Many students, especially freshmen, don't know what's expected of them concerning the honor system," said Dr. James.

Common violations involve plagiarism ("many students don't know how to footnote properly"), homework assignments in computer classes, and leaving the room during an exam, Clements said. "Sometimes the professor will leave the room during a test and a student will get up and go to the bathroom. That's an Honor Code violation, but many students don't know that."

McGill said that plagiarism cases are difficult to resolve, particularly when they involve

The Emily Clark Scholarship Dinner

NELITA TRUE

The Longwood College department of visual and performing arts will sponsor the Emily Clark Scholarship Dinner and a guest recital by pianist Nelita True on Friday, October 10.

The dinner will be held at 6 p.m. in the Virginia Room, followed by the recital at 8 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium. The cost for the dinner and reserved seats for the recital is $15 per person ($4 of this amount will go to music education scholarships for Longwood students).

To make reservations for the dinner, call Longwood's music office at 392-9368 by October 6. The recital alone is open to the public at no charge.

Nelita True has toured throughout the U.S. and Europe. She has been a soloist with the Chicago Symphony and has performed at Lincoln Center and on French national television.

Her academic degrees are from Juilliard, the University of Michigan, and Peabody Conservatory. She was artist-teacher at the International Piano Workshop in Hawaii (1985) and Bolzano, Italy (1986). Recently, she was named distinguished professor at the University of Maryland.

Dr. True will conduct a master class for college and high school students on Saturday, October 11, at 9:30 a.m. in Wygal Auditorium, followed by a luncheon at noon in the Virginia Room. Persons who wish to observe the master class and-or attend the luncheon may make reservations by calling 392-9368.

The Emily Clark Scholarship Dinner recognizes the contributions of an outstanding member of Longwood's music faculty from 1946 to 1972. Miss Clark was an innovator in her music education courses and in emphasizing the importance of group instruction in piano. Since her retirement, she has helped to fund scholarships to benefit music education students at Longwood.

10th Anniversary Of Co-Ed

Eric L. Robinson, of Farmville, and Walter J. Payne, Jr., of Pamplin, were officially recognized recently when Longwood College celebrated its 10th anniversary of residential coeducation.

Robinson, senior vice president and area executive officer for Sovran Bank, was recognized for being the first male president of the Longwood Alumni Assoication. Payne, a retired educator, was recognized for being the college's first male graduate.

Robinson and Payne received plaques during a picnic Sept. 20 outside Longwood House. President Janet Greenwood presented the plaques.

Former Longwood basketball star Jerome Kersey, who now plays professional basketball, was recognized for bringing national prominence to Longwood, but he was unable to attend. Head basketball coach Cal Luther accepted on his behalf.

Robinson, a Farmville native and graduate of Cumberland County High School, was graduated in 1954. He is serving a two-year term as president of the Alumni Association. He is a former rector of the Longwood Board of Visitors.

Payne, a Pamplin native, was graduated in 1934. He taught, among other places, at the old Farmville High School. He retired in 1970 following a 36-year career.

Kersey, who plays for the NBA's Portland Trailblazers, set 19 career, season and game records while playing at Longwood from 1980 to 1984. He is a Clarksville native.

Other activities also were held in conjunction with the celebration of residential coeducation, including golf and soccer tournaments, an alumni-student baseball game, fraternity receptions and an outdoor mixer.

Renovation Of South

By MARNA BUNGER

The renovation of South Cunningham has been talked about, but due to the aging plumbing this action will finally take place.

According to Rick Weibl, Director of Housing, the overall plumbing system in South must be replaced. This means residents can expect new faucets, sinks, toilets and showers for the Fall 1987 semester.

Residents of S. Cunningham will have to move out by January 19, 1987 in order for the work to begin. Mr. Weibl expects enough rooms to open up in January so that South's residents can be relocated. He will be able to avoid putting people off-campus because rooms will be available through normal attrition (2nd semester student teachers, interns, December graduates, transfers and withdrawals).

All residents of South are encouraged to attend transition team meetings which should be starting in the next week to ten days. Residents will be able to make recommendations to the Director of Housing as to what other repairs they feel the building needs, possible relocation processes and any other worthy suggestions to help with the transition. Weibl feels that if students get involved and protect their interests the South Cunningham transition will flow smoothly.

Longwood College this fall has the largest number of students in its history — a total of 2,789, up 126 over last fall.

Enrollment figures announced today also show the largest entering freshman class, 766. The College received a record number of applications — 3,095, up 15 percent over last year, and also rejected a record number — 26 percent of all applicants.

College officials are especially pleased with Longwood's success since there is a continuing drop each year in the number of high school graduates in Virginia and in the nation. "Consequently, many colleges are seeing decreased enrollments," said Admission Director Robert Chonko. "It's nice to be among the select few colleges that seem to be highly appealing to prospective students," he said.

While business administration continues to be the most popular major at Longwood, education (teacher preparation) is the choice of almost half of the freshmen.

A total of 309 freshmen chose elementary education as their major, an increase of 48 percent over last year. Thirty-six freshmen plan to major in special education, a 33 percent increase.

There has been a resurgence of interest in the teaching profession nationally, and Longwood is feeling that impact, according to Dr. Robert Bartos, dean of Longwood's School of Education and Human Services. He attributed increased student interest in becoming teachers to "the response of local and state governments to teachers' needs, better salaries, and an excellent employment outlook."

He said that school systems already are having difficulty finding teachers in such areas as special education, foreign languages, mathematics, and science.

Longwood Players Present 'Ah Wildnerness

The Longwood Players will present Eugene O'Neill's Ah! Wilderness on Wednesday through Saturday evenings, October 8-11, in Jarman Auditorium on the Longwood College campus.

Curtain time each evening is 8 o'clock. Admission is $4 for adults, $2 for young people and senior citizens. Longwood students will be admitted free with college ID.

The play is O'Neill's only comedy and depicts his ideal of the American family.

Set on the Fourth of July, the play is "a celebration of growing up in America," said Dr. Douglas Young, director of Longwood's theatre program. "It shows the delightful pasage of a boy into manhood in the serene bosom of an ideal family."

The comedy is "a rare piece of work for O'Neill, who usually looked at life rather tragically," Young said. The playwright's own family life was troubled, and O'Neill revealed that experience in his most famous work, A Long Day's Journey Into Night.

The cast and crews of Ah! Wilderness include Longwood students and residents of the Farmville community. Young is directing the production.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor:

I've been observing with a certain degree of irritation, the growing controversy over the so-called "joke" printed in The Tiger a couple of weeks ago. What I haven't been able to understand is your insistence on taking The Tiger so seriously. After all, the paper in question is not The New York Times. So to cut a long story short, who the hell cares what it prints in its humor section.

We don't create a scene over the graffiti discussing the sex life of the Queen of England or the sexual practices favored by Ronald Reagan, scrawled all over the place in public bathrooms. So what's the big deal if a small newspaper with negligible circulation wants to play the maverick. Maybe, it might even help it in recovering from its burgeoning financial problems and staying afloat.

Nadeem A. Kizilbash.

To the Editor:

Hundreds of Latvians were refused admittance to the conference at Yurmala, in Latvia, on superpower relations on September 18. In spite of a very tight ring of Soviet Secret policemen, many Latvians succeeded in reaching the U.S. participants at this conference. A Latvian said, "We are waiting for freedom and you are our only hope."

White House adviser Jack Matlock told the conferees that the U.S. has never recognized and will not recognize the legitimacy of the forcible incorporation of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia into the Soviet Union. His declaration has twice been carried on local television and has spread through the capital of Latvia, Riga. Matlock became a national hero in Latvia.

It should be noted that during the independence of the Baltic States the Latvians, Lithuanians and Estonians believed that their countries constituted the outposts of the civilization of the West, and that East of the boundaries of the Baltic States, the European civilization ended. They consider the Soviets barbarians. This feeling has become intensified because the family graves of the strong man of independent Latvia, President Karlis Ulmanis, was destroyed by the Soviet barbarians. The graves and even cemeteries of many other prominent Latvians, Lithuanians and Estonians have likewise been destroyed by those vandals of the 20th century.

Nevertheless, the Russian authorities fail to see that no hangings and other barbaric actions cannot stop the movement to restore the independence of the Baltic States. This movement is under the leadership of the young Latvians, Lithuanians, and Estonians who were born in exile and who have obtained their education in the best universities of the U.S., Canada, Australia and Western Europe. They strongly believe the independence movement of all the captive peoples of Eastern Europe will cause the fall and disintegration of the declining Soviet Union — the last colonial empire — the prison and concentration camp of peoples.

Sincerely yours,
Dr. Alexander V. Berkis

New Ambassadors

Congratulations to Longwood's newest Ambassadors:

Elizabeth Allen, Shel Bolyard, Theresa Campbell, Mary Jane Carney, Betsy Chalfaut, Amy DeJarnette, Patty Fishback, Mary Beth Friga, Mike Grey, Tim Hale, Amy Harrell, J. Paul Hurt, Debbe Malin, Cathy McCoy, Angela Oliver, Lisa Redding, Janet Robertson, Kris Rose, Tim Sheridan, Ginny Silveira, Anne Smith, Debbie Strouth, Jane Taylor, Ellen Tilghman, Robin Totty, Bonita Turner, Martha Vaden, Sandy Wade, Kat Watkins, Cynthia Wood, and Robin Yarbrough.

What's Free?

By GLORIA CLIFF and MARNA BUNGER

— It's already paid for with your Student Activity Fee ($30).

— It's an event you probably won't come and see because it's free and, therefore, probably bad. It's easier to pay a few bucks at the door to get your money's worth.

— It's happening often. Oct. 14 — Dave Rudolph; Nov. 4 — Spanky McFarland; Nov. 14 — Jim Hawley.

On Sept. 10 S-UN sponsored the comedy and magic of Doc Dougherty. He was paid $550 and a crowd of about 50 people showed up. On Sept. 25, Daryle Rice was paid $650 to play her contemporary-pop music. About 30 people came to that show.

Keep your eyes open for upcoming shows — they are free and oftentimes entertaining.

Poetry Reading

Katherine Soniat, award-winning poet and faculty member at Virginia Tech, will give a poetry reading on Wednesday, October 8, at 8 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium, Longwood College.

Ms. Soniat will read from Notes of Departure, which won the 1984 Camden Poetry Award given by the Walt Whitman Center for the Arts and Humanities.

Her poems have appeared in numerous journals, including The Southern Review, The New Republic, The American Scholar, Poetry, The New Virginia Review, and College English. She was a Bread Loaf Scholar and a winner in the Chester H. Jones National Poetry Competition.

Her reading at Longwood is sponsored by the department of English, philosophy, and modern languages and is open to the public at no charge.

Math Contest

The Mathematics Department is sponsoring a Mathematics Contest. There will be two levels — Level I: mathematics below calculus; Level II: calculus and above. The contests will be held November 6 from 12:15 — 1:45 p.m. on 3rd floor Grainger. Students must register from October 22—31, 1986 in Grainger 301. First prize at each level will be $75; 2nd prize $40 and 3rd prize $25. Plan now to participate.

Plunky Plunks

James Plunky Nkabinde-Branch, a musician and leader of the critically acclaimed African-jazz fusion group "Oneness of Juju," will present a one-hour lecture-demonstration on Tuesday, October 7, at Longwood College.

Nkabinde-Branch will speak on "Rhythms, Energy and Improvisation: An Introduction to African Music" at 5:30 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium. The program is open to the public.

The lecture is part of Longwood's African studies course, which is being offered this semester by the English, Philosophy and Modern Languages department. Longwood faculty and others lecture each Tuesday evening on a different aspect of African culture.

Nkabinde-Branch, a frequent traveler to West Africa, will talk about the basic principles, functions and components of African music. He will display and demonstrate some of the traditional instruments.

Plunky — as he is known to friends and followers — has toured on behalf of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and has lectured at many colleges and universities, including Virginia Commonwealth University, Virginia State University, and Virginia Union University.

The African studies course is part of Longwood's International Studies Program which is directed by Dr. Jill Delly. For more information, call 392-9356.

Three's A Crowd

By MARNA BUNGER

In an effort to let homes remain nice and maintain safe living conditions in neighborhoods, the Farmville Planning Commission is trying to create an ordinance to decrease crowded living conditions in dwelling units by Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students.

The current definition of a family in Farmville permits four unrelated persons to reside in the same dwelling unit. The new definition of a family, which Farmville would like to adopt, calls a family a group "of not more than three persons not related by blood, marriage, adoption or guardianship."

According to Gerald Spates, Town Manager, this ordinance was created because students create health and safety risks when they overcrowd. Noise pollution in residential neighborhoods is also a contributing factor to this decision.

This ordinance will be referred to at the Farmville Town Council meeting Thursday, October 9 at 1:30 p.m. At this time a public hearing will be scheduled. The public hearing will be advertised two weeks in advance. Spates predicts that this modified ordinance will be approved and will be effective "whenever town council decides, but probably July 1, 1987."

Students who are thinking of living off-campus next year or are currently living off-campus are encouraged to attend the public hearing.

Last Chance

Looking for one last fling before the cold winter weather starts to roll in? This may be just the ticket you are looking for.

The first two weekends in October along the Banks will feature wildfoods and waterfowl.

The October Marsh and Sea Fest, dubbed "wildfoods weekend," will be held October 3 to 5 at the North Carolina Marine Resources Center on Roanoke Island. Participants will engage in a full menu of activities, including a foraging expedition for unusual foods, before preparing the "wildfoods" banquet, a variety of culinary concoctions not found on the typical seafood platter.

Interested parties should contact the Marine Resources Center for information and an application form: P. O. Box 967, Manteo, N. C. 27954; (919) 473-3493.

From October 10 to 12, the 8th Annual N. C. Waterfowl Weekend will attract exhibitors from near and far who will display decoys, paintings of wildlife, cross stitch and a variety of handmade articles.

paraphrasing. "The Board has to grapple with this. Sometimes the student will admit it but will say, 'But these are still my thoughts.' Often it can depend on how vehemently the accused student takes a stand. Some professors have no problem with this, but others view it as plagiarism."

The second part of the Honor Code—"nor am I aware of any infraction"—is a stumbling block, said McGill.

"The students don't want to police violations. They feel like they're walking on thin ice in that area. It's hard to convict a student, and they don't want to face peer pressure for turning someone in. They would rather have the Honor Code simply say, 'I have neither given nor received help on this work period. They feel they're mocking the Honor Code by agreeing to abide by the second part. They don't want to get involved."

Dr. James agrees. "The biggest single problem is that it asks the students to police themselves. And when they don't, faculty members get frustrated. Many faculty members flunk a student they suspect of cheating. So, in effect, there are two honor systems—a formal one and an informal one."

He added, "Although students are reluctant to turn others in, the number of student-initiated cases has increased since I've been here (since 1982) and especially in the past year."

About 60 percent of the cases were initiated by faculty members, estimated Clements, who was a member of last year's Honor Boaard. Only about three to five percent involve a student turning himself or herself in, he said. The remaining cases are initiated by fellow students.

Another common problem is consistency of sanctions. "All of us have our favorite 'war stories' about a serious violation in which only a slap-on-the-wrist was administered, and other cases when the actions were much more severe," Dr. James said.

"The Board is trying to be consistent," said McGill. "That's been a problem in the past. But on the other hand, each case is different and each should be handled on a case-by-case basis. Two cases could look similar, but one factor could change everything. If we had a system that didn't take into account personal circumstances, students would probably complain about that."

Added McGill, "A decision not only has to be fair, it has to appear fair. Students can smell unfairness."

Some professors unwittingly tempt students by leaving the room during an exam, especially if they've let them take their books with them to their seats. "We should have an environment that encourages maturation and personal development and doesn't tempt them. Some professors say they don't want to do anything that might indicate distrust of them, but students say they don't get that feeling at all."

"The concept of honor has changed over the years," he noted. "Twenty-five years ago, very few people went to college, and it was considered an honor. But now, a lot of people attend college. That's why there's so much peer pressure. The vast majority 25 years ago were still at home or at work. The family and the church were the biggest influences then; peers were not the factor they are today."

"I went through the files in this office and you wouldn't believe the cases that were heard then. In one case from the 1940s, a student was suspended for going to the movies without permission."

Clements said the Board's decisions provide an education benefit to the accused student, regardless of the decision. "In every case that we deliberate on, we feel that our decision is an educational experience as opposed to a punitive one. That's true even in dismissal cases."

Ford Foundation Fellowships For Minorities

The National Research Council plans to award approximately 35 Ford Foundation Postdoctoral Fellowships for Minorities in a program designed to provide opportunities for continued education and experience in research for American Indians and Alaskan Natives (Eskimo or Aleut), Black Americans, Mexican Americans-Chicanos, Native Pacific Islanders (Micronesians and Polynesians), and Puerto Ricans. Fellows will be selected from among scientists, engineers, and scholars in the humanities who show greatest promise of future achievement in academic research and scholarship in higher education.

In this national competition sponsored by The Ford Foundation, citizens of the United States who are members of one of the designated minority groups, who are preparing for or already engaged in college or university teaching, and who hold doctoral or other terminal degrees may apply for a fellowship award of one year's duration.

Awards in the Ford Foundation Postdoctoral Fellowships for Minorities Program will be made in the behavioral and social sciences, humanities, engineering, mathematics, physical sciences, and biological sciences, or for interdisciplinary programs comprised of two or more eligible disciplines. Awards will not be made in professions such as medicine, law, social work, library science, and such areas as business administration and management, educational administration, curriculum development and supervision, teacher training, and personnel and guidance. Tenure of a fellowship provides postdoctoral research experience at an appropriate not-for-profit institution of higher education or research of the Fellow's choice. Appropriate institutions include universities, museums, libraries, government or national laboratories, privately sponsored not-for-profit institutes, government chartered not-for-profit research organizations, and centers for advanced study. The deadline for submission of applications is January 16, 1987.

The enclosed program announcement, which contains detailed information about the scope of the program and the terms of the awards, may be used to publicize the competition. All inquiries concerning application materials and program administration should be addressed to the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington, D. C. 20418.

Polymer's Project- Only One Like It In The World

Chemical research underway at Longwood has potential application for space and aviation uses. The research also enables chemistry students to get "real, hands-on lab experience" in three areas — polymers, crystals, and organic chemicals from pine trees.

"NASA, for example, is interested in the development of polymers that will not melt but will remain flexible and strong at high temperatures," said Dr. Patrick Barber, director of Longwood's chemistry program. "We're trying to achieve that," he said.

Polymers are compounds with high molecular weights. Some polymers — like cellulose, DNA, and proteins — are made naturally in biological processes. Others — like nylon, plexiglass, and polyurethane — are synthetically made.

Longwood's polymer work is funded in part by NASA. Dr. Barber, along with Dr. Maurice Maxwell, Leonard Klein, and chemistry students, work in cooperation with NASA scientists at the Langley Research Center.

"Our research breaks ground for NASA," said Greg Chiles, a 1986 chemistry graduate from Keysville. "Their chemists will take it one step further and determine if our polymers have potential for their purposes."

The recent acquisition of seven state-of-the-art instruments is "a tremendous boon to the research," Greg said. "Our ability to determine how a polymer is shaped and structured has increased at least a thousand percent with the new instruments."

The new instruments, valued at more than $100,000, were funded as part of the million-dollar-plus appropriation by the 1984 General Assembly for renovation and modernization of Longwood's science facilities.

There are various ways to create polymers. In Dr. Maxwell's research, he is using an unusual organic acid as the basic starting material. It is combined with other compounds to form the polymers.

Dr. Barber and his student associates are doing research on crystal growth and structure. They are "growing" lead tin telluride crystals, which could be used to measure infrared radiation.

Dr. Barber's project is apparently the only one like it in the world.

Dr. Robert Lehman and students Donna Donkle (Highland Springs) and Tamara Marshall (Richmond) are "evaluating pine foliage as a potential source for naval supplies and fine chemicals." They are extracting resins and other organic chemicals from several species of pine trees that grow in southside Virginia.

They shred needles, wash, separate, evaporate, grow crystals, filter, and analyze the compounds by liquid and gas chromatography.

Student researchers work one-on-one with their professors during each phase of the projects. "The professors tell us what needs to be done next. We have to learn how to do it and then do it," Greg Chiles said.

"We're in the lab every afternoon, Monday through Friday, until dinnertime," Donna Donkle said. "This experience is really going to pay off for us. I visited Consolidated Laboratories in Richmond recently. They were impressed because I knew what they were talking about, and I knew how to operate their instruments."

Norman Simpson, a 1985 chemistry graduate, says his research experience was the key to getting a position as chemist in nuclear medicine at the National Institutes of Health. He is involved in making and testing radioactive pharmaceuticals that may help victims of brain tumors, Parkinson's and Alzheimer's diseases, and AIDS.

"To get this position, I had to have excellent lab technique," Simpson said. "In this work, if your technique isn't perfect and careful, you could contaminate an entire lab."

He estimates that he "beat out about 200 people" for his job.

Other 1985 graduates of Longwood's chemistry program are now in graduate school at the Medical College of Virginia and at the University of Virginia.

Lancer Soccer Takes First

Embarrassed by a 3-0 defeat at Lynchburg Saturday, Longwood's 15th ranked soccer team faces a rugged three-game stretch this week highlighted by a contest at second-ranked Lock Haven (PA) Saturday.

The Lancers will take a 6-1-1 mark into a Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association match at Mary Washington Wednesday at 3:30. The game pits a pair of VISA Eastern Division teams with state title aspirations. The Blue Tide beat Lynchburg 4-3 last week.

Saturday, Longwood plays the highest ranked team it has ever faced in Lock Haven, currently 7-0-2 and ranked second in last week's ISAA-Adidas Division II rankings. The game begins at 12 Noon. Sunday at 1:00 the Lancers face another tough Division II Pennsylvania foe in Bloomsburg University.

A fired-up Lynchburg team handed injury-plagued Longwood its worst defeat in two years Saturday 3-0. The Hornets, who have been nationally ranked in Division III all season, were the first team to score three goals on Longwood since November, 1984 when Mary Washington and LC tied for the VISA crown 3-3.

The loss was Longwood's worst since a 4-0 defeat to Virginia October 2, 1984.

"Injuries crippled us at midfield, but we didn't play hard enough to win the game and Lynchburg did," said Lancer coach Rich Posipanko, who was disturbed by the loss. "It was embarrassing. We just weren't into the game and Lynchburg was really gunning for us."

Playing before a Parent's Day crowd Posipanko estimated at over 1,000, Lynchburg battled the visiting Lancers to a 0-0 halftime deadlock. The Hornets got three goals early in the second half to decide the outcome.

Longwood played without starting midfielders Mike Edge, who was injured, and Jim DiModica, who was home on personal business. To make matters worse, senior midfielder Craig Reid went out early in the second half with a rib-cage injury.

Player of the Week

Setter Staci Dillon had a serve percentage of 100 in a victory over Virginia Union last Tuesday. For her performance, the freshman volleyball player has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period September 28-October 5. Player of the week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

STACI DILLON

Dillon, who was known for her serving accuracy at Stonewall Jackson High School, has been Longwood's most consistent performer all season, according to coach Linda Elliott. The Lady Lancers, much improved over 1985, are 7-10.

"Staci was perfect against Virginia Union and has a serve percentage of 92 for the season," said Elliott. "She runs our 5-1 offense and is the quarterback of our team. Staci has an assist percentage of 58, which means that 58 percent of her sets have ended in kills. She has been the glue of our team."

Dillon, who lives in Haymarket, Virginia, is majoring in physical education at Longwood with intentions of becoming an athletic trainer.

She was MVP at Stonewall Jackson last season in volleyball while earning honorable mention All-District and Albemarle All-Tournament honors. She also broke the school record for points served.

A member of the National Honor Society, she ranked eighth in a graduating class of 462. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dillon.

Field Hockey Bounces Back

The Longwood field hockey team bounced back from a loss to Duke to pick up two victories at home last week and improve its record to 7-3. Longwood will travel to Richmond Wednesday for a 4:00 contest, and will be home Friday to take on Georgetown at 4:00. Saturday morning, LC visits Eastern Mennonite for an 11:00 contest.

Liz Johnson led the offensive charge Thursday with two goals as the Lady Lancers pounced on Randolph-Macon 5-0. One goal was all the offense the lady stickers needed Saturday as they downed Maryland Baltimore County 1-0.

UMBC proved to be a worthy opponent Saturday. "The game was tough," explained coach Sue Finnie. "They committed a lot of fouls by blocking the ball with their bodies which kept us from scoring."

KIM HOWELLS

Statistically Longwood dominated the game. UMBC managed to get off only five shots to Longwood's 36, and the Lady Lancers had 15 corners while UMBC had three.

Traci Strickland scored the only goal at the 27:48 mark of the first half of an assist from Laura Goetz. Goalkeeper Kim Howells was credited with the shutout, her fourth of the season.

Coach Finnie was pleased with the overall performance of her team.

The passing abilities of Longwood proved to be one of the key factors in Thursday's contest with Randolph-Macon. The lady stickers completely dominated all phases of the game. The defense played extremely well.

Strickland, with a goal and an assist, was named the offensive player of the game, while Claye Conkwright, with 17 interceptions-tackles, was named the defensive player of the game.

Howells was credited with still another shutout. Longwood managed to get 11 corners while the Lady Yellow Jackets were kept from attempting any. The Lady Lancers out-shot Randolph-Macon 30-1 with the Jackets' only attempt coming at the five minute mark of the second half.

"We try to score within the first five minutes of each half," explained Finnie. Longwood scored at the 3:56 mark in the first half and the 1:45 mark of the second half.

Posipanko To Coach State Team

Longwood soccer coach Rich Posipanko has been selected to coach the Virginia Youth Soccer Association under 17-and-a-half State Team for 1986-87. The Lancer coach is one of five coaches from around the state chosen to work with age groups ranging from under 18-and-a-half to under 14-and-a-half.

Posipanko will be responsible for conducting a series of tryouts in the fall and spring to select the State under 17-and-a-half team. The team will participate in a series of regional and possibly national competitions next summer.

In his eighth season at Longwood, Posipanko has guided the Lancers to a pair of state titles and has a record of 81-37-17 including a 6-1-1 mark in the 1986 campaign. Longwood is currently ranked 15th in NCAA Division II.

Rugby Club Keeps Crushing!

By DAVID LARSON

The Longwood Rugby Club upped their record to 3-0 in their division and 3-1 overall. They traveled to Lexington this past weekend to play the men from Washington and Lee.

These two teams were very evenly matched as far as size was concerned. Longwood got off to a real slow start. The first try was scored late in the first half by David Larson. Tracy Kilby followed close behind with a blocked kick converted into a try. Tim Seymour added the kick after try to make the score 10-0. Right before the end of the half Washington & Lee scored a penalty kick to end the half with a score of 10-3.

What seemed to be a close game turned into a rout. Longwood came out in the second half ready to play Rugby. The game turned into a very physical and aggressive type of game. Longwood started their scoring early with a try by Tim Seymour. The next score was a drop kick by Tim Seymour. This made the score 19-3. With 15 minutes left in the game Billy Sturgill and Steve Jones added a try a piece with the points after made by Tim Seymour. This ended the scoring and the game 31-3, putting yet another mark in Longwood's winning column.

The Longwood B-side also played a good game. It was a very low scoring game with only one try scored by Pat Harvey late in the second half. The game ended in a tie with a score of 4-4. This takes Longwood's B-side record to a 1-0-1 record in the division and a 1-1-1 overall.

Longwood's next game is this weekend at home against a tough Old Dominion team. Longwood needs to win this game in order to go into the State Championships with a high ranking. We ask everyone that can, to come out and support the team.

Don't forget the First Rugby Tournament ever, during Oktoberfest. Longwood will open up that morning against their all-time rival Hampden-Sydney.

Barrett Nominated For Broderich Award

Longwood junior Tina Barrett, a two-time All-American and the defending National Small College Tournament champ, has been nominated for the Broderick Award in women's golf for 1985-86.

Barett had a 77.4 stroke average last year and was named to the National Golf Coaches Association and the GTE-CoSIDA Academic All-America teams. She also won the Baltimore city championship in June.

Others nominated for the Broderick Award in golf are Holly Anderson of Methodist, Kay Cockerill of UCLA, Karen Davies and Page Dunlap of Florida, Robin Hood of Oklahoma State and Jenny Lidback of Louisiana State.

The Broderick Award winners in the various sports will be eligible for the Broderick Cup which carries with it the title of collegiate woman athlete of the year. Voting for the Broderick Awards and the Broderick Cup, perhaps the most prestigious awards available for women collegiate student-athletes, is carried out by the vote of women athletic directors across the country.

Golf Team Takes Second Place

Senior Mark Marshall and junior Richard Hardy led the way as Longwood's men's golf team notched a second place finish out of 10 teams in the 36-hole Hampton University Invitational Tournament last Monday and Tuesday at Deer Run Golf Club in Newport News. This week the Lancers take part in the Ferrum Invitational Tournament at Groundhog Mountain, Virginia Monday and Tuesday.

Longwood scored a 312-318-630 to finish just behind tournament winner Christopher-Newport (308-320-628) at the Hampton Tournament. Coach Steve Nelson's squad has had its best fall season in history to date with two fourth places and a second place in tournament play.

Marshall had a career-best 78-79-157 to finish fourth, after coming in second in a playoff which broke a three-way tie for third. Hardy rebounded with a second round 75 to go with his first round 83 for a 158 and sixth place out of over 60 golfers.

Lady Spikers Host Invitational

College volleyball action will be an all-day affair Saturday when Longwood hosts the sixth Cindy Smith Invitational Tournament in Lancer Hall. Action begins at 8:30 Saturday morning.

Longwood will be joined by Liberty, Bridgewater, Virginia Union, Randolph-Macon Woman's College and Bridgewater's junior varsity in the six-team tournament. The tourney format calls for round-robin play followed by single elimination. The finals are scheduled for 7:30 Saturday night.

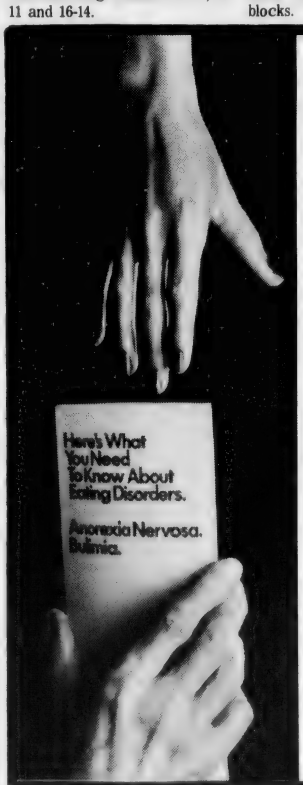
The Lady Lancers will take a 7-10 mark into a three-team match at Mary Washington with Catholic Tuesday night in Fredericksburg. Longwood plays its first match at 7:00.

Longwood swept a best-of-five-games match at Virginia Union last Tuesday night, beating the homestanding Panthers 15-10, 15-11 and 16-14.

LC coach Linda Elliott credited her team's tough defense as the key factor in earning the win over a tall Virginia Union squad.

"We had good teamwork Tuesday night," said the coach. "Our problem has been hesitation, but our players really took charge of the balls in their territory against Virginia Union."

Longwood also got a rare comeback victory in the final game. After the Panthers had rallied from a 12-9 deficit to go ahead 14-12, captain Mary Beth Friga served two points to pull the Lady Lancers even at 14-14. Then Joanna Marquez served two points to clinch the match.



Elliott praised Lanette Ezell, Staci Dillon and Kris Meyer for their outstanding play in the match. Ezell was seven of nine on kills, Dillon served 100 percent of her chances, and Meyer had three blocks and two assist blocks.

after colliding with the Hornet goalkeeper.

"The injury situation is getting serious," said Posipanko. "Out of 22 field players who began the season, we had just 14 available Saturday. We hope we'll have several of the injured players back this week. Wednesday's game at Mary Washington is extremely important."

Posipanko praised senior back John Anderson for his play in Saturday's defeat. "John played with intensity and didn't make mistakes," said the coach.

Some People Are Dying To Know The Facts About Eating Disorders.

The truth is, bulimia and anorexia nervosa are being diagnosed at an almost epidemic rate. An estimated 15 to 20 percent of all college women are bulimic, and approximately one out of every 100-250 young women suffer from anorexia.

People with bulimia go on periodic eating binges, only to force up or "purge" their food later. Anorectics typically starve themselves to as little as 65 percent of their normal body weight—or even less.

Eating disorders are illnesses, ones that can take over your life. But it doesn't have to be that way—effective treatment can turn your life around.

Don't wait. Get the facts now. Clip and mail this coupon, or call Dominion Hospital at 536-2000 for a free booklet.

THE ROTUNDA

SIXTY-SIXTH YEAR | TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1986 | NUMBER FOUR

By KIM SETZER

Last week, the Rotunda published an article dealing with the Honor Code and the Conference that was to be held dealing with important issues. This conference, Educating for Honor, was held last weekend at the Sheraton Park South in Richmond. The purpose of the conference was to define the problems, address the issues and find solutions. The thirty who attended were made up of students, faculty, administrators and members of the Board of Visitors. The representatives from the student group were Ambassadors, Resident Assistants, Peer Advisors, members of the Student Government, and members of the Honor Board. Also included in this category were students who expressed interest in the honor board. Many of these were freshmen who were being educated about the system, so, as upperclassmen, they can hold student leader positions.

The students worked with the faculty, administrators, and board members as equals to resolve many of the kinks in the Honor Code system. Many of the problems established were apathy, lack of education about the system, and the need for stiffer sanctions due to rampant cheating. The input came from all age groups and all points of view.

Many solutions were compromised on. These included an Honors Week in which forums will be held. Selected students will be invited to share their input. Also, an Honors Committee was selected to work with the Board. The Rotunda will be publishing periodically to inform the public about the state of many cases. This will include the offense and sanction received.

An issue discussed at the conference was the need for harsher sanctions. Many thought that all offenses should receive automatic suspension. This included the exception of special cases in which counseling should be prescribed. Also, students who are in their first semester should receive special consideration. One of the most important issues is the need for more participation in elections. A wide range of students should be selected to be on the Honor Board. The elections will be held next month and all students are encouraged to run for positions in every aspect of student government.

Oktoberfest Is Coming

Oktoberfest, Longwood College's annual celebration of school and class spirit, will be held on Saturday, October 25.

A variety of athletic contests, performances by student groups, activities along the midway, and an evening concert by the rock group "The Bangles" will mark this year's celebration.

New events include a field hockey match between alumni and current players — this is the 60th anniversary of Longwood field hockey — an alumni soccer game and an alumni golf tournament, and a four-team rugby tournament. Squads from Longwood and Hampden-Sydney College will square off in the rugby tournament.

The midway, which will be open from 1 to 4 p.m., will be on Lankford Mall for the first time. For the past several years, it had been on Pine Street in front of Lancer Hall. "We're moving the midway to provide a larger area and to allow more space for parking," said alumni director Nancy Shelton.

The Oktoberfest Parade will begin at 12:15 p.m. The Dance Company will perform at 12:30 and 1:30 in Lancer Hall dance studio. The Catalinas' water show will be at 12:45 and 1:30 in Lancer pool.

The Concert Band will play at 1 p.m. on the midway, the Concert Choir will perform at 1:30 and 2:30 in Jarman Auditorium, and the Lancer Edition (a show choir) will give performances at 2 and 3 p.m., also in Jarman.

In the rugby tournament's first game, set for 9 a.m. on Iler Field, Longwood and Hampden-Sydney will oppose each other. The American University will play a Richmond city team. The championship game — between the two winners — will begin at 2 p.m.

The field hockey team will play LaSalle at 10 a.m. on Barlow Field, after which an alumni squad will oppose a team of varsity and JV players.

The soccer team, currently ranked 14th in the nation in Division II, will take on the University of the 'District of Columbia at 2 p.m. at First Avenue Field. A game pitting soccer alumni against each other will take place at 11:30 a.m.

"The Bangles," an all-female rock band known for their hit "Just Another Manic Monday," will perform at 8 p.m. in Lancer Gym. The concert is open to the public, but a Student Union spokeswoman said it probably will be a sell-out. Therefore, tickets will have to be purchased in advance. For information or to purchase tickets, which are $8, call the Student Union at 392-9346.

Admissions and financial aid information will be available in the Lankford Building from 9 a.m. to noon. Alumni from the past four years are invited to a social at 6 p.m. in the Alumni House.

Oktoberfest is coordinated by Geist, the college's honorary leadership fraternity, and many clubs and organizations are involved. All events are open to the public.

Rugby Rolls On

By DAVE LARSON

Rugby Club crushes ODU; faces Hampden-Sydney next.

The men from ODU came down in anticipation of ending Longwood's undefeated record. Both teams went into the game undefeated but when it was over Longwood came out with the unscaffed record.

What turned out to be a blow-out started as a very close game. The first half of the game was a real tough battle for both teams. The ball was being passed back and forth from one side of the field to the next. At the end of the half the score was 3-0 Longwood. The only score was by Tim Seymour.

Whatever was said at halftime must of worked for the Longwood team. They came back out in the second fired up and ready to win. The second half was marked with very physical abuse to both teams. Seymour scored a dropkick early in the second half to start off the scoring. With only 20 minutes left in the game the score was locked at 6-0. Then from a broken line-out Dave Larson scored the first try. After that the game was turned around. Tony Lindsay busted through the pack for the second try and then Dave (ole ranger) Rackley scored back to back tries. Seymour added a dropkick and a few point after tries to end up the scoring. When the dust cleared Longwood had crushed yet another opponent 31-3.

The B-side also enjoyed another win. They too had a tough battle with O.D.U. The Longwood team was just too fired up after the A-side game. The first score came from John Hunt late in the first half. Mike Sheear added a penalty kick and Billy Magee took the ball 60 yards for the last score of the game. Final score was 11-0 Longwood.

A special thanks goes out to all the supportive fans that showed up to cheer the team on. Another special thanks goes out to the Tailgaters for their support.

The next game will be during Oktoberfest. The game will start at 9 a.m. on Iler Field. Longwood will be facing Hampden-Sydney. Then at 10:30, American University faces Richmond City. Come out on Oktoberfest and support the undefeated Longwood Club.

MY PAGE

So Who Cares?

You know those surveys you take all the time where the surveyors almost always inveritably ask the question "how many weekends do you spend a month at Longwood"? I guess the purpose of that is the see if our school is actually the suitcase college that it has been labeled.

Anyway, the reason I ask is because I always answer that I, personally, spend at least four weekends a month (if not more) here. But I lied. I was gone this weekend.

Now I know you're saying to yourself, "who cares?", but I guess that's what I was originally trying to get at.

You see, the reason I wasn't here this weekend was because there was a very special event that went on in Richmond and I was lucky enough to be a part of it. That event was a gathering of Longwood Administration, Faculty and Students that got together to discuss the Honor Code-Honor System. We were trying to establish whether or not the Code works (or even if it exists at all) and what we can do to improve it — if anything.

Again, you're asking, so what?" But I think that again reaffirms the focal point of the whole thing. Most students could really care less.

And that's sad. Firstly, because the Honor Code really means a whole lot more than just signing a meaningless pledge after every test or on every written paper, and secondly, because if you don't care about something like the Honor Code, then you probably don't give too much of a damn about anything else at Longwood as a whole.

And that's really sad, because if you don't care enough about a small environment like the immediate world around you, then how can you care about larger issues like your community, your nation, or even your world? For that matter, how can you even care about yourself?

Hedonism is a good word here. So is apathy. (For those of you who haven't got the time to look those words up hedonism is basically living for the day and not worrying about tomorrow and apathy is a general lack of interest or concern.) And I suppose, while I'm at it, I may as well include the word hypocrite. Sure I like to have fun and certainly I've screwed up just about anything that I've ever done; but at least I'm trying my best.

And that's the real issue here. I may not be perfect, or for that matter, even close. But at least I'm trying — and that's all that anybody can ever ask of you. In fact, that's all that you can ever ask of yourself.

Case in point. My role at the conference was basically to listen to the issues at hand and bring those back to the people who couldn't be there. I was to be one of the many links between those who make the rules and those who live by them, and obviously I've screwed that up pretty good. But if I do that, then that's exactly what we have — a group called "they" who makes the rules and a group called "we" who is supposed to live by them.

And that's not what "they" want, nor is it what "we" want.

So if "I" sit here and tell you what "they" decided, then "we" don't get much out of it. But if "you" reach out to find what's really going on for "yourself", then "they" and "we" becomes "US" — both on the individual level and for the group as a whole — and that makes the entire system much more productive.

One last bit of advice. Simply going to class does not prepare you for life after college. You've got to question the system; you've got to question your peers; and most importantly, you've got to question yourself. If you care enough to even bother reading this, then maybe you care enough to do something about it — even if that something is writing me a note that says, "Mick — you're full of shit!" At least then I'll know you'll question things. And I'll also know you care enough to take some action.

Like I said before, I'm not perfect — but at least I'm giving it a shot. You don't need any more of an invitation than that....

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor's Note: The following is a letter to Rick Miller who was quoted in both the Hampden-Sydney Tiger and the Longwood Rotunda. I think you remember the quote . . .

Rick Miller:

I have just read with disgust and complete disdain the "humorous" question that you put in the Hampden-Sydney Tiger's September 19 issue. I am 66 years old, have been through grade school, high school, college, the Air Force, and a full career in business; and to be perfectly honest and truthful with you, I don't know when I have ever read anything that so completely sickened me. If this type of humor is indicative of Hampden-Sydney students, our educational system has come to a pretty low point. I can understand you being so stupid, insensitive, and without character or principles as to make such a statement and put it in the paper, but I cannot understand how the Editor-in-Chief of the paper ever let it get published and printed.

I assume you realize that your action has proved to be an embarrassment to the newspaper, to the College, and to our collegiate journalistic system in general. I would really hope that all of the alumni of Hampden-Sydney have an opportunity to read this "clever" question that you posed and see what their reaction to it would be. I happen to be a graduate of Washington & Lee University and I am sure that somewhere along the line students have made errors and taken actions that may have upset me. However, if I were an alumnus of Hampden-Sydney and this type of quotation appeared in a publication printed by "my college", I think I would be embarrassed forever.

I have seen an apology from the President of Hampden-Sydney and I have seen an apology from John Maloney, the Editor-in-Chief of the paper, but I don't recall having seen any statement that you have made concerning the inappropriate question and answer. I presume you have resigned from the newspaper, if you were on the staff; but I don't know what other action you may have taken to try to remove this black mark from the journalistic efforts of the Hampden-Sydney publication. I really would like to know what your personal comments are concerning this situation and what sort of explanation or corrective action you have attempted to make.

As you must know, I am in the retail business in Farmville, Virginia; and I happen to serve on the Board of Visitors of Longwood College, and that is how I came upon the comment

Comprehensive Fee?

Compiled by CATHY GAUGHRAN

You know that little thing that you pay every semester called the Comprehensive Fee? Did you ever wonder exactly what it was or even what it was for?

The Comprehensive Fee covers the costs of salaries and supplies for various organizations and activities that can be taken advantage of at Longwood. Here's a list of things that the money goes towards:

Student Union	$ 118,101
Lancer Cafe	1,000
Counceling services	74,604

Recovery — Faculty-Staff Housing	5,494
	$2,519,319

Some of the terms cited are a bit ambiguous, so here's a few definitions:

Recovery fees — for building and maintenance

Fiscal services — budgeting costs

Institutional services — uneducational necessities such as the dining hall, etc.

Fringe benefits — for employees of the College

Debt service — in this case, still paying off the construction of Lancer Hall.

Faculty-Staff housing — the College owns four houses in the area (besides Longwood House) that are rented to newly relocated professors. This part of the fee covers upkeep and maintenance of these houses.

you were doing when you inserted it in the paper. What kind of response did you get from your mother, grandmother, sister(s), or any other females with whom you are associated?

I have not shown this comment to many of the Hampden-Sydney alumni in and around our area, but I feel certain that when the Board of Trustees and the Alumni Association of Hampden-Sydney see this they will be concerned that this might be an example of a typical statement of a typical Hampden-Sydney student.

What is your feeling in this matter?

By MATT PETERMAN

The pre-summit summit quickly turned into what tends to look like the last Super Power Summit that will take place until Reagan is out of office. Though there is great potential for many agreements like massive cuts in intermediate and long-range nuclear weapons along with extension or new form of the ABM Treaty, the price was apparently too high.

As a gambler knows, a roll of the dice can bring great winnings or great losses. In the case of the Iceland summit, both leaders left empty-handed. Clearly frustrated and angry at each other, the super-powers remain dead-locked on what became the central issue, Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). But, it must be noted that both sides failed and the notion that the Iceland Summit collapsed because of S.D.I. is ridiculous.

The clear goal of the Soviet Union was to get rid of S.D.I., because to them it is a symbol of the technological capacity that the U.S. can attain. Premier Gorbuchev claiming he will cure the ills of the Soviet economy, cannot afford an economic race with the U.S. in the development of new weapon systems; particularly S.D.I. Though the Soviet Union is immune to world-wide opinions as well as from its people, Premier Gorbachev will not be looked on as favorably with his colleagues and this will spell trouble as he tries to centralize his power even further. In the meantime, the Soviet people, who live comparable to Americans at the turn of the century, will continue to suffer, for military spending is the last cut ever made in the Soviet budget.

The goals of the U.S. seems to point to deep reduction in all long and intermediate range missiles. The U.S. also wanted to question the validity of the ABM treaty and what steps it would take to make it better suited for the times. This would all have to be done without abandoning S.D.I., which the Soviets insisted the U.S. do. The U.S. is also having economic problems and the failure of this summit clearly is not good. The President will be supported by the U.S. citizens for the most part and criticized in many other circles. The failure of Reagan's theory that, the U.S. must build up before it can build down has failed and is a great set-back for him. The failure to hammer out any agreements will also be viewed in the world arena as tragic and the Soviet Union will capitalize on this as they will start a massive public relations campaign against the U.S.

With this negative media blizt, the Soviets will attempt to change public opinion everywhere. It will be mostly aimed at U.S. citizens, congress, and its allies. Hopefully, the U.S. press will screen their propaganda from the Soviet Union, not just repeat the communist line verbation.

The relations between the Soviet Union and the U.S. will revert back to cold war status, nor will an arms rule in space begin. They have certainly not moved forward or backward which brings one to conclude that relations are the same as usual and to panic would be foolish.

All and all, the President's performance was no surprise and should be commended. He laid it on the line for the Soviets and they resisted and the converse is true in the Soviet perspective. In the U.S., the trend that has developed with respect to summits, is that success is downplayed and failure is over emphasized, which will probably be the case of this summit. We must look at this summit in positive light and believe in the President that has been elected and trusted to make decisions for this country.

In conclusion, the fact of the matter is: both sides failed. Both sides were compromising, but equalibrium could not be reached, thus the summit failed. The U.S. and Soviet Union must co-exist on the same planet and both sides realize this. The possibility of another Reagan, Gorbachev summit seems slim, but normal relations between the two countries will continue. Both countries do agree that there is still great opportunity for progress, but the question remains, when?

Flute!

The Longwood College Flute Ensemble will present a concert on October 16, 1986, at 8 p.m., at the Wygal Recital Hall, on the Longwood Campus. Pieces by Faure, Boismortier, Hindermith, Blank, Telemann, Beethoven, and P.D.Q. Bach will be performed. The concert, which is free and open to the public, is sure to hold something that everyone will enjoy.

Lost And Found

Six (6) caps; six (6) umbrellas; three (3) watches; one notebook and folder (belongs to Andrea Jacka); one (1) jacket, lightweight; one (1) bracelet; one (1) necklace; one (1) key, not on key ring; assorted textbooks; one (1) gym bag; two (2) pair prescription glasses; one (1) jacket, winter weight, reversible; various hand gloves for women and men.

If you have any students that may have lost any of these items please have them come by the Campus Police Department to identify those items that may belong to them.

SAM

The Society for Advancement of Management (SAM) will be holding an organizational-informational meeting on Thursday, October 16, at 6 p.m. in Hiner 105. This meeting is definitely not restricted to Management Majors.

Ballet

The Series of the Performing Arts will open with a concert by the Richmond Ballet on Wednesday, Oct. 15, in Jarman Auditorium. The program features four works. "Who Cares?" by George Balanchine is a tribute to George Gershwin, with favorites like "I Got Rhythm," "Strike Up the Band," and "Embraceable You." "Mantodea," a contemporary pas de deux by Yugoslav choreographer Vassili Sulich, explores the eternal battle of the sexes. Charles Czarny's "Concerto Grosso" mixes jazz, modern and classical ballet in a dynamic salute to sports and gymnastics. The final work, "Vales Fantaisie," is the perfect example of classical Balanchine. Longwood students will be admitted free; college employees and family members, $4.00; general admission, $5.00.

Player of the Week

Junior Marcia Melone shot a 76-82-78-236 to place in the top 10 at the Duke University Invitational over the weekend and has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period October 5-12. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood Sports Information Office.

Melone led Longwood to a third place finish out of 12 teams in the Duke Tournament as the Lady Lancers trailed only the Blue Devils and North Carolina in the team race. Her 236 total gave Melone a spot in the top 10 out of over 70 golfers in the 54-hole tournament at Duke University Golf Course.

A three-year member of Longwood's top five, Melone earned second team All-American honors in the 1984-85 season, her first with the Lady Lancers. Her top performance last season came in the Penn State Lady Lion Tournament when she shot a 75-77-152 to help Longwood win the tourney.

MARCIA MELONE

A physical education major at Longwood, Melone intends to become a golf coach. She was a co-captain on last year's team.

Cindy Smith Invitational Volleyball Tournament

By RICK RIVERA

Saturday, Longwood's lady Lancer volleyball team hosted the sixth Cindy Smith Invitational Volleyball Tournament. Liberty University captured the championship with a two game sweep of Bridgewater College.

The Lady Lancers travel to Hollins Tuesday for a 6:00 appointment with Hollins and visiting Roanoke. Following Tuesday's match Longwood, 9-15, will not play again until October 24 in a home match with Bridgewater.

STEPHANIE CAUKOS

In Saturday's action Longwood suffered through a long afternoon as they could only muster a win over Virginia Union. According to coach Linda Elliott the Lady Lancers showed spurts of greatness but could not keep the consistency needed to win. As in past games Longwood played a good first half then lost the intensity to hold the lead.

Although the tourney did not sky rocket the team's progression, Elliott does feel like her team is moving in the right direction both attitude and skill wise.

"We're inching along, but we are moving," says Elliott. "Our players have all the tools but not the experience."

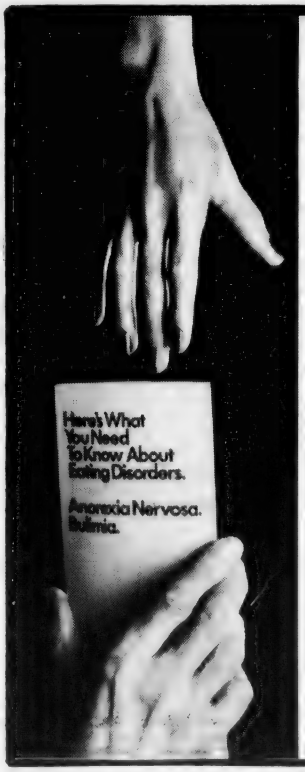
Making exceptional use of their tools were Stephanie Caukos and Kris Meyer who were named to the All-Tournament Team. Both players displayed great hitting throughout the tournament to earn their spots on the list. This marked the first time in tourney history that two Longwood players made the team.

Prior to the tournament the Lady Lancers spent last Tuesday night at Mary Washington. Longwood came home with a victory over Catholic and a loss to Mary Washington.

In the first match LC defeated Catholic 15-9, 15-6. Meyer again showed off her talents with an overall 9 for 11 kill ratio. Annetee Easterling served five straight points including two aces. Sarita Thurman also had a good night at the serve line with nine straight points of her own.

In the loss to Mary Washington, (15-8, 15-7) Longwood lost its composure after gaining early leads. There were a lot of dropped balls. Meyer and Coukos enjoyed a good night blocking with two and three blocks respectively during the first game.

KRIS MEYER



Riding Team — Smooth As Silk

Longwood's riding team gained 14 ribbons October 5 in an intercollegiate horse show at Mary Washington. Mary Washington was high point college and Christopher-Newport reserve high point college in the season-opening show.

Gaining ribbons for Longwood at Mary Washington were Mike Carey 4th intermediate flat, 5th intermediate fences; Kimberlee DeShazo, 4th novice flat, 1st novice fences; Ann Lawson, 6th novice flat, 3rd novice fences; Liz Shivik 4th intermediate flat, 4th intermediate fences; Wendy Weaver, 5th novice flat; Robin McGowan, 6th advanced walk-trot, Kirstie Rothague 6th advanced walk-trot; Robin Walker, 5th advanced walk-trot-canter; Laurie Wilkins, 3rd beginner walk-trot-canter, and Jennifer Wynn 4th beginner walk-trot-canter.

Some People Are Dying To Know The Facts About Eating Disorders.

The truth is, bulimia and anorexia nervosa are being diagnosed at an almost epidemic rate. An estimated 15 to 20 percent of all college women are bulimic, and approximately one out of every 100-250 young women suffer from anorexia.

People with bulimia go on periodic eating binges, only to force up or "purge" their food later. Anorectics typically starve themselves to as little as 65 percent of their normal body weight—or even less.

Eating disorders are illnesses, ones that can take over your life. But it doesn't have to be that way—effective treatment can turn your life around.

Don't wait. Get the facts now. Clip and mail this coupon, or call Dominion Hospital at 536-2000 for a free booklet.

Sports Wrap Up

Soccer

Longwood's soccer team, ranked 14th last week in Division II, may find itself out of the rankings this week after falling to second ranked Lock Haven and unranked Bloomsburg over the weekend.

The Lancers, who started last week with a 3-2 overtime win over Mary Washington Wednesday, dropped a hard-fought decision to Lock Haven 2-1 Saturday and went flat Sunday falling to Bloomsburg 2-0 Sunday.

Longwood, now 7-3-1, is off until Saturday when it visits VISA Eastern Division foe Virginia Wesleyan for a 2:00 contest.

"We just about eliminated ourselves from the NCAA Playoffs with Sunday's loss," said Lancer coach Rich Posipanko. "We played well against Lock Haven, but we came out flat Sunday. We'll have to point toward making the state playoffs now."

The Lancers, behind a great performance from goalkeeper Rob Liessem, led Lock Haven 1-0 going into the game's final 14 minutes Saturday. Liessem had 13 saves to help off-set a 21-4 Lock Haven edge in shots on goal.

Lock Haven, playing before a home crowd of around 3,000, scored its goals on headers at 76:22 and 82:33 to take the victory.

In Sunday's loss, Bloomsburg got two early goals and held Longwood scoreless. Bloomsburg scored on a penalty kick at 14:57 and headed in a shot at 16:49. Both teams had 10 shots and four saves.

Women's Golf

Longwood had four golfers shoot in the 70's in Sunday's final round of the Duke University Women's Golf Invitational and finished a respectable third out of 12 teams with a 324-326-311-961.

The final scorecard showed only Duke (301-310-305-916) and North Carolina (324-314-293-931) ahead of the Lady Lancers. Freshman Ashley Warren led Longwood's Sunday showing with a career best 77. Marcia Melone, Tina Barrett and Gretchen Pugh all shot final round 78's.

Melone was Longwood's most consistent golfer in the tournament with a 76-82-78-236 which placed her in the top 10 out of over 70 golfers. Barrett was right behind with an 81-78-78-237.

In finishing third at Duke, Longwood beat such Division I teams as Nebraska (981) and Penn State (979). The Lady Lancers next action is October 24-26 in the Lady Tar Heel Invitational.

Men's Golf

Longwood's men's golf team placed sixth out of 11 squads in the Ferrum Invitational Tournament last Tuesday, shooting a 336-324-660 at the par-72, 7,100 yard Olde Mill Golf Course in Groundhog Mountain, Virginia.

Greensboro won the 36-hole tournament with a 313-329-642. The Hornets were followed by Wingate 328-318-646, Methodist 331-316-647, Carson-Newman 330-319-649, Mount Olive 328-331-659 and the Lancers.

Ty Bordner shot 84-76-160 to pace the Lancers and tie for fifth place out of over 60 golfers. Also for Longwood, Kevin Haskins shot 79-84-163, Tony Good 87-81-168, Richard Hardy 90-83-173, Mark Marshall 87-80-167, and Ron Hatch 86-93-179.

Longwood will host Radford, VMI and Washington & Lee Wednesday in a four-team match at Longwood golf course.

Women's Tennis

Longwood's women's tennis team ended fall play with a 6-3 victory over Randolph-Macon Thursday. Coach Bill Moore's squad had a 2-4 mark in the fall.

The lady netters had dropped a 9-0 decision at Washington & Lee last Monday, but bounced back to trim the Yellow Jackets Thursday.

"We feel we will have a competitive team in the spring," said coach Moore. "We have a number of young players who gained some valuable experience this fall."

Field Hockey

The Longwood field hockey team's lack of scoring caused the young squad to lose two of three games last week. The 8-5 Lancers will take on VCU in Richmond Tuesday at 4 p.m. and host Radford Thursday for a 4 p.m. contest.

Longwood was shut down by Richmond 2-1 Wednesday, but bounced back to defeat Georgetown 1-0 Friday. Eastern Mennonite downed the Lady Stickers 1-0 Saturday.

Coach Sue Finnie's team out shot Eastern Mennonite 24-14 Saturday, but could not manage to put the ball in the goal. "We were a little flat after an emotional and hard-fought win over Georgetown Friday," explained Finnie. Eastern Mennonite is the defending Old Dominion Athletic Conference champion.

The game was tied 0-0 at the half, but home standing EMC scored around the two minute mark into the second half. Traci Strickland and Claye Conkwright played well in the contest.

Liz Annet scored the only goal of the game as Longwood shut out visiting Division I Georgetown 1-0 Friday. Strickland was credited with the assist.

"We were brilliant, and we hustled the entire game. This was the best game we've played all year," Finnie boasted. "The loss at Richmond really motivated our players."

Richard defeated the visiting Lancers 2-1 Wednesday. "We played horrible," moaned Finnie. Richmond out shot the Lady Lancers 15-2 in the first half and 21-13 for the game. Again, Liz Annet scored the lone Longwood goal.

Diane Bingler and Laura Felch played well defensively.

Tickets Are Still On Sale

By SUSAN THOMPSON

Yes! It's true! The Bangles are coming to the 'Wood for Oktoberfest, October 25. Why you may ask? Well, why not, if the price is right. Longwood College has a commitment to the Student Union for additional funding for special events, and in a survey conducted by SUN last year, a big name concert was what the students wanted. In the past, the only prohibiting factor was the price. Other bands that were considered by SUN were R.E.M. and the Outfield. Having the Bangles play here will cause a drain on available funds for the rest of the year, but it shouldn't prove harmful. Besides, SUN feels that a small loss is worth it to have a big name band play here. A loss is not predicted, however, as long as Longwood College students show their support and turn out for the show

Three thousand tickets are on sale as of October 1, and until Octobner 6, those tickets are being sold exclusively to Longwood College students, faculty, and staff. There is no limit to the number of tickets one can buy, at $8 a ticket. After October 6, though, tickets go on sale to the general public. The concert is being advertised in areas in about an hour and a half radius, with concentration in Richmond, Charlottesville, and Lynchburg. The capacity of Lancer Hall is 3500, which means that the gym won't be overcrowded. The concert is general admission with 500 chairs on the floor plus bleacher seats. The gym floors will be covered with tarps, but due to the danger of damage to thr gym floor, dancing will not be permitted. Food, beverages, and smoking will also not be allowed. These rules must be adhered to or else this will not only be the first concert of this size here at the 'Wood, but the last.

It's no joke — the Bangles will be here for Oktoberfest.

The doors will open at 7 p.m., and the opening at 8 p.m. will be a band called EIEIO, who is currently touring with the Bangles. Playing time for both bands is flexible. Special parking for the concert is being worked out between campus police and the Student Union. The fact that the Oktoberfest booths have been moved from in front of Lancer to Stubbs Mall is helpful.

Student Union asks for student input both before and after the show, and on any other matters concerning the student body. SUN meets every Monday night at 6:15 in Lankford and everyone is welcome. If you are unable to attend, you can leave your comments or letters at the SUN office located upstairs in Lankford. Please address all letters to the Student Union board or Jay Fitzhugh. The next concert will be Wild Kingdom on November 21. SUN needs suggestions on where you'd like to see this concert (ie: lower dining hall, Iler field, etc.).

Student Union is hoping for a sold-out concert as tickets are already selling quickly. Hopefully the Bangles concer will be the start of something here at Longwood that will catch on. Longwood College administration has shown tremendous help and support and should be congratulated. Special thanks to those who made it possible to use Lancer Hall despite the risk to the gym floor. Get your tickets, show your support, and enjoy the Bangles!

Something New

Tau Kappa Epsilon, a fraternity colony at Longwood College, has chosen a novel approach to raising money for charity.

TKE members will take turns pushing a hospital gurney bed from Cumberland County High School to Longwood the morning of Saturday, Oct. 25. They plan to arrive on the campus in time to take part in the Oktoberfest Parade. The money they are raising will go to the United Way of Prince Edward.

"We hope to raise at least $1,500," said colony president John Pastino. "We've already received more than $1,200 in pledges. So far, 300 people have pledged contributions."

A fraternity colony is a group of male students on its way to becoming an official fraternity.

People have been pledging so much per mile or simply pledging one amount, Pastino said. Contributions also will be accepted during the 20-mile trip from Cumberland to Longwood.

The event will begin at 4 a.m. TKE members will work in seven-man shifts, each of which will be responsible for covering five miles. Pastino estimates that each mile will take about 20 minutes, based on a test run.

A van carrying Pastino and other colony members will follow closely behind. For the first eight miles, a fire engine or a rescue squad vehicle also will follow, with its lights on. Most of the trip will be along Route 45.

The Oktoberfest Parade will begin at 12:15 p.m.

This is the TKE colony's first major fund-raising project. Last year, colony members visited people once a week at the Senior Citizens of Prince Edward (SCOPE) center and picked up and delivered clothing for Domestic Assistance for You (DAY) clients.

TKE became a colony — which requires at least 15 interested males — on Feb. 8. The colony has 37 members. A colony can become a full-fledged fraternity after one year. TKE should gain official fraternity status by next April, said Pastino, a junior from Albany, Ga.

Those who wish to make contributions should send them to Box 1129, Longwood College, Farmville, VA 23901. Checks should be made payable to United Way.

Playboy magazine is now accepting entries to its annual College Fiction Contest, open to all registered college undergraduate and graduate students. The writing competition offers a cash prize of $3,000 and publication of the winning short story in the October 1987 issue of Playboy magazine.

The contest will be judged by the editors of Playboy magazine. The entry deadline is January 1, 1987.

Contest rules and other details are being made available to students through mailings to the English and creative writing departments of some 1,300 colleges and universities nationwide. Details also appear in the October 1986 issue of Playboy, along with the winning entry of last year's contest, "Night Vision," by Philip Simmons. Simmons is a graduate student at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

The College Fiction Contest reflects Playboy's editorial policy of providing readers with the finest in cointemporary fiction by recognized writers as well as talented newcomers. Playboy received the prestigious National Magazine Award for fiction in 1985.

Address all entries to: Playboy College Fiction Contest, 919 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Say It Isn't So!...

Editor's Note: The following is an opinion from a person who identified his-herself to me simply as "A Friend". This person realized that "it is not routine journalistic practice to accept unsolicited and unsigned works for publication..." but the theme is all too true and the implications of "date rape" are devistating. Therefore, I thought I'd print it as a guest editorial to give you all something to think about. Space will be provided in future issues of The Rotunda for comment, rebuttal or support. Thanks for listening....

BHB

I read the story and thought...it cannot be true! Surely for this to be happening something has to be very wrong. Maybe it was simply a misunderstanding!

I was wrong...the facts are there and the stories are real, too real at that!

Did you know that:

* 54 percent of all women survey experienced some form of sexual victimization!
* One in every seven women were victims of rape, according to the prevailing legal definition!
* One in thirteen men admitted to having fulfilled the prevailing definition of rape or attempted rape, yet virtually none of those men identified themselves as rapists!
* Of the women who were raped, almost 75 percent did not identify their experience as rape!
* 57 percent of the rapes reported in the study were perpetrated by first dates, and 84 percnet were perpetrated by acquaintances!
* 75 percent of the women raped were between the ages of 15 and 21; the average age at the time of the rape was 18!

These are the facts from a study involving 7000 students at 35 institutions of higher education, amongst our best and brightest.

Guys, they are talking about us, you and me, our friends, the people we see in the hallways and in the dining hall. Friends (men) are hurting, exploiting, and destroying relationships with friends (women) and these women are our friends, sisters, and classmates. The averages reported in the study would suggest that on our campus no matter where you live, at least two people on your residence hall floor have been involved in such an act. Worse yet, it implies they see nothing wrong with their behavior!

These facts cause me to wonder if I would-could ever do such things? Why should I be exempt?

Would I ever force a kiss on a reluctant or resisting date?

Have I ever "copped a feel" thinking it was no big deal?

Would I use my strength, size, or quickness to trap a woman and prevent her from leaving a situation in which she was feeling uncomfortable?

Do I think a woman is "asking for it" by a style of dress or talk, by being in the wrong place, or just by being?

If my date said no more, even after some "making out" would I insist on more...and more...and?

Would I stand by, watch, and maybe laugh as my roommate, suitemate, or anybody for that matter, was forcing himself on a woman despite her objections?

How loud must a cry for help be until I am going to do something?

Well, I think I've begun to become tired of it all. I am sick of the things I am reading about that are occurring on our campus. I am sick of women being scared of me and my friends, and now I am going to do something about it all!

No more laughing at the sick jokes that degrade and make fun of women, no more sitting by while others are being scarred for life by the actions of the few, while the rest of us sit around and watch!

But what can I do, after all I am only one person? Will these acts on my part help? I hope so because I too am scared of the problem and want it to stop!

I will be sure my friends know that I have changed, no big announcement just the truth from now on. I'll tell people that I think it is wrong what has been happening and that now we must act to stop it. I'll write President Reagan, Senators Trible and Warner, Representative Daniels and ask them to give back the night. I will tell Governor Baliles, he has daughters, he must care!

I'll post articles on the subject around on the bulletin boards and in the classrooms, I'll donate one night's worth of beer money to the D.A.Y. Center. Most of all I am going to care and let people know that something is wrong!

Honewell Announces Futurist Competition

On Sept. 15, Honeywell launched its fifth-annual Futurist Awards Competition, an essay contest that asks students to predict technology advancements 25 years from now.

Honeywell wants college students to imagine the year 2011 and write essays about the technological developments they foresee. This year's contest will offer 10 winners $3,000 each and the chance to work for Honeywell next summer.

Last year, 450 students, representing 325 colleges and universities in 47 states, entered the competition.

The contest is open to all full-time students at any accredited college in the United States. Students are asked to leap 25 years in the future and write an essay predicting developments in one of six technological areas: electronic communications, energy, aerospace, computer science, manufacturing automation or office automation. A second essay must address the societal impact of the technological predictions. Each essay must be no longer than 1,500 words.

Students can receive contest rules by writing Futurist Rules, Honeywell Telemarketing Center, Honeywell Plaza MN12-4164, Minneapolis, MN 55408, or calling toll free 1-800-328-5111, ext. 1581. Requests for entry material must be received by Dec. 31, 1986.

Completed essays must be postmarked no later than Jan. 31, 1987. In February, a panel of top Honeywell scientists and engineers will judge the essays on the basis of creativity, feasibility, clarity of expression and legibility.

Winners will be announced in early March, and each of the 10 winners will receive a two-day, all-expense-paid trip to Honeywell's headquarters in Minneapolis.

Honeywell is a Minneapolis-based international corporation that works together with customers to help them achieve their goals through the application of computers, communications and controls. The company has 94,000 employees worldwide, with 1985 revenue of $6.6 billion and net income of $281 million.

The Catalinas will be performing for Oktoberfest in Lancer Hall. Also performing will be the Dance Company in the dance studio just down the hall. Don't miss them.

Study In Innsbruck

The University of New Orleans will sponsor its 12th annual session of UNO-INNSBRUCK, an International Summer School program in Innsbruck, Austria. This educational-travel experience will involve over 250 students and some 30 faculty and staff for the summer of 1987.

"UNO's popular Alpine summer school attracted students from 35 different American universities and colleges and several foreign countries for the summer of '86," says Carl Wagner, Associate Director of the Office of International Study Programs at UNO. "As a result, UNO-INNSBRUCK is now one of the largest overseas summer schools offered by an American university."

Applicants are already lining up for the 1987 session. Part of the secret may be that more than 70 courses in many different academic subject areas are offered in this magnificant and scenic Alpine Innsbruck setting in the "Heart of Central Europe". While participants can earn up to ten semester hours of credit, their classrooms are surrounded by the towering Tyrolean Alps, whose peaks are always snow-capped.

Naturally, courses offered with UNO-INNSBRUCK focus on the cultural, historic, social and economic issues of Europe. But, during the 1987 session courses in business and science will also be taught. All instruction is in English, and faculty from the University of New Orleans, guest professors from other American universities and from the University of Innsbruck will participate. All college credits earned are fully transferable. A very special feature of the 1987 program will be Governor Richard Lamm of Colorado who will teach several history courses concerning the great issues of today that Western nations must face.

During the session, students are housed in the Studentenhaus at the 300 year-old University of Innsbruck. The school is a five-minute walk from the many inns, cafes, and beer gardens in the "Old Town" of Innsbruck. And, three-day weekends offer ample time for students to travel, hike in the Alps, or ski on the nearby glaciers.

UNO-INNSBRUCK-1987 will convene with gala opening ceremonies on June 28th and end on August 8th. An optional three-week tour of Western Europe and a one month work-study castle restoration program in Belgium are available to interest students.

Registration for UNO-INNSBRUCK is already underway. Enrollment in the program is limited, so interested applicants should apply as soon as possible. Information and a full color brochure describing the program in detail can be had by writing to UNO-INNSBRUCK-1987, c-o International Study Programs, Box 1315-UNO, New Orleans, LA 70148. Or, you can call (504) 286-7116. Don't delay!

A.M.A. Goes To Richmond

The keynote speaker at the meeting was Paul Cragin, Vice-President of BAI, who lectured on Market Positioning, or "the communication from a company concerning a product or service that allows the consumer to judge how it compares to competitive offerings."

One problem that Cragin cited in repositioning a product is that consumers sometimes filter out problems because they are "givens." One such example is a computer log on that takes a long time or is complicated. "I was interviewing someone once," said Cragin, "who wanted me to see his new computer. So we went to look at it and he just started pushing buttons and waiting, etc., until I finally said, 'What are you doing?' He had accepted the fact that in order to get the system to work, you had to wait five to ten minutes. As soon as people started to realize that this was a waste of time, they developed a two-step log on process and the software sold like crazy. Bingo! This was something they had overlooked before. "This was just one example that Cragin used to demonstrate how important it is for companys to listen to consumers."

Overall, the meeting was successful. However, the student turnout from Longwood was somewhat disappointing. "I think mid-terms had a lot to do with that," stated Baker. "Hopefully, we'll be able to take a bigger group to the November meeting."

Any students who are interested in joining the AMA should contact Burt Brooks in Hiner.

Peterman's World

By MATT PETERMAN

During this week or the next, President Reagan will sign into law a bill that will provide the Nicaraguan freedom fighters with $100 million in military and humanitarian aid. The long delayed aid is greatly needed as the Soviet Union has supplied communist Nicaragua with over a billion dollars of mostly military aid. The Soviets support has greatly increased in 1986, as the Gorbachev Doctrine, which states, whenever the west tries to liberate a country, the Soviet bloc will push back twice as hard, has kicked into full gear.

The Sandanista regime is rewarded with weopons like helicopter gunships, tanks, and an array of sophisticated missles for their repressive governing of the Nicaraguan people. The Soviet Union has also provided the Sandanistas with Cuban military advisors whose experience gained in Afghanistan and Angola are a great help to them.

Many Americans would rather give the Contras nothing and be passive. They scream, as a scare tactic, that it will be another Vietnam which for the most part is false. The undeclared war that the U.S. carried on in Vietnam is so deeply complex and involved that the analogy is weak. The U.S. Congress has even passed legislation that orders all Americans to stay out of a 30 mile area close to any Nicaraguan border and discourages any travel close to these areas. It must also be noted that until the aid bill is signed, no governmental agency will give any funds or resources to the Contras.

On the other hand there are many Americans who could not wait for Congress to make up their mind. Recently a C-123 transport plane was shot down with a sole survivor, who happened to be American. Though the U.S. government is not involved in this particular or any facilitating of supplies to the Contras, it does not discourage this type of activity. Had Congress passed this aid more quickly, tragic incidents like this plane crash could have been avoided.

As the Gorbachev Doctrine begins to penetrate Central America, the U.S. must be strong in repelling so as the true heirs of the Nicaraguan revolution, the Contras, can triumph. Though the Sandanistas claim Nicaragua is a great democracy, they forget that the system they have installed is a communist dictatorship. With or without U.S. pressure, Nicaragua will continue to import arms for what future devious actions remain to be seen. One look at Cuba gives one a picture of what Nicaragua will become in the years to come: anything but free.

Though the Gorbachev Doctrine applies to the entire world scene, a win for it in vunerable Nicaragua could give rise to the entire collapse of Central America. The U.S. must be strong in the face of a dangerous threat that could disrupt peace in the decades to come.

Love Will Find A Way

By ROBIN MARTIN

Mike and Michelle Estes met the very first day of their freshman year. They were married July 25, 1985, the summer before their sophomore year. They are now Juniors, and had their first child, Brandon Todd Estes, this summer on July 31, 1986.

How do two college kids manage to pay their own way through school, juggle classes, marriage, and have a 2½-month-old child? It's not easy, as Mike put it. "It puts a lot of stress on you, that a lot of people don't see." Mike and Michelle live at the Alumni House. It is also their job. They have the responsibility of making sure the 3-story, six bedroom house is clean, that the various guests have what they need, and act as host and hostess of the Alumni Association. They must represent Longwood College at its highest regard.

This simply puts a roof over their head. Mike is also Head Student Supervisor for the dining hall. Michelle was a student supervisor last year. In addition to this, Mike was awarded a $3,000 scholarship by ARA on April 23, 1985. They also have several financial aid loans.

College is now paid for, but how do they work their schedules around a baby? Mike is an accounting major, taking fifteen hours this semester. Most of his classes are in the afternoon. Michelle is a special education major, taking nine hours. Her classes are in the morning. They have only one conflict on Mondays and Wednesdays from 1:30-2:20, when a friend sits for Brandon.

Not only do these exceptional 20-year-olds work all this into their busy schedule, but they also have extra-curricular activities that they are involved with. Mike is a member of TKE and a coach for a local youth REC football league. Michelle has dropped most of her activities since the baby was born, but she is still a member of a local Council for Exceptional Children.

Mike and Michelle have had a lot more responsibilities than most college kids their age. They have had a lot of help from the administrators at Longwood and especially Nancy Shelton, the Director of the Alumni Association. They said that without the school's help, one of them would have to have dropped out, especially after the baby arrived. "Longwood has been very good to us," Michelle stated.

Their future is looking great as well. Michelle will be certified to teach both emotionally disturbed children and learning disabled children when she graduates. Mike already has a possibility of a job with ARA, but he is also thinking about moving up North and starting his own business.

Was Brandon a mistake? Michelle and Mike looked down at him and smiled. "No," Michelle said, "He was a whoops!"

CAMPUS NOTES

Longwood's Brandnew Drill Team

By ROBIN MARTIN

What is the Longwood Drill Team? The Longwood Drill Team, or the Lancer Line as they are called, is a group of 23 girls who are enthusiastic about spreading spirit at school. These girls work very hard for two hours two nights a week at dance routines to be performed before at least 10 home men's baseball games, and halftime at at least 3 women's basketball games. The style of dancing is a mixture of variety, jazz, high kicks, and props.

The captains of the Lancer Line are Bonita Turner and Wanda Carter, who performed on the drill team at Caroline High School in Milford, Va. Bonita was the captain and Wanda was the co-captain of their team in high school. Both Bonita and Wanda have a lot of experience with drill team and teach the routines that they knew in high school and learned this summer at the Superstar Drill Team Camp at George Mason University. They, along with Tracey Tolliver, who is also on the Drill Team, attended this camp for three days. They attended classes from 8 in the morning until 9:30 at night learning 10 new routines.

The girls that make up the Lancer Line are a variety of not only black and white girls, but freshmen, sophomore, and juniors as well. Some are involved with sororities, some with dance company, and others are just interested in being involved in spreading spirit at Longwood. Annah Duff is a junior and a new girl on the team. When asked what she thought about the drill team so far she said that they were "great girls with lots of enthusiasm and spirit and I'm really excited about it. Gina Marks, also a junior, remarked that the drill team was "going places, and the girls have lots of determination."

Bonita and Wanda wanted to emphasize that the drill team was hoping to help the cheerleaders bring spirit to the basketball games and that they were totally supporting them. "The drill team has a lot of potential and we are really excited about the future," stated Bonita. "We think that we have the talent to perform and the faculty and students should be impressed." Wanda said, "We're coming along well, with lots of hard work, and if we stick together, we'll make it." Both added that they also wanted to give the players support as well.

Robert Clater, Promotional Director of the Longwood Basketball teams, saw the drill team's first practice. He claims, "Without a question the drill team is made up of leaders and workers, willing to work and learn. The potential is there to become a major part of the spirit at Longwood. A new tradition? Maybe. With a little work and support from the college this group may reach levels not yet seen at Longwood. With this, Longwood's basketball teams will receive a shot in the arm and, who knows, maybe a full gym."

So if you are getting curious about the Drill Team, come to Oktoberfest and see their first performance, then come to the basketball games. As a member of the Lancer Line myself, I think that you will be impressed.

Apatheid Debate

The debate, scheduled from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., is part of R-MWC's African Symposium Day. A bus will leave from Longwood at noon and return at about 4:45 that same afternoon.

There also will be lectures at the day-long symposium, for those who wish to attend on their own. African wildlife will be discussed from 9:30-10:30 a.m., African politics from 11 a.m. noon, and Hunger, Education and Medicine from 4-5 p.m.

The bus trip is in conjunction with the one-credit Introduction to Africa course, which is part of Longwood's International Studies Program. The class, which normally meets at 5:30 each Tuesday evening, is free and open to the public.

For more information about the trip to the R-MWC symposium or the class, call Dr. Jill Kelly at 392-9356.

Can Ya Spare A Dime?

Any student desiring to change their meal plan for the Spring semester may do so by contacting the Housing Office. It is necessary for students to do this in person as they will be required to complete an authorization form. The deadline for submitting changes is 5:00 p.m. October 24th!

Renaissance Dinner

The 1986 Longwood Christmas Renaissance Dinner will be held in the Blackwell Dining Room on Saturday, December 6, and Sunday, December 7. This special evening features singing, dancing and feasting, patterned after Advent Season celebration in Tudor England. Tickets are available at the office of Public Affairs for $17.95 per person.

AAW

Longwood College has proclaimed October 20-26, 1986, and November 3-9, 1986, as Alcohol Awareness Weeks here. (The National AAW is Oct. 20-26; and our local AAW is Nov. 3-9).

The declaration coincides with National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week (NCAAW), a nationwide effort sponsored by the Inter-Association Task Force, which represents all college personnel staffs across the country, held Oct. 20-26.

Alcohol Awareness Week is intended to make alcohol education and information available for students, to emphasize prevention through education as a viable means of helping to solve problems associated with alcohol misuse and abuse and to increase awareness of the individual as the one ultimately responsible for decisions regarding alcohol.

Alcohol Awareness Week at Longwood is intended to not only promote responsible decision making regarding alcohol, but to emphasize that it is ultimately an individual's responsibility to make those decisions. The program emphasizes that only a personal commitment to making responsible decisions regarding alcohol will make an impact on the problems associated with its misuse and abuse.

Alcohol Awareness Week will include various workshops, displays, and activities across the Longwood campus, all aimed at promoting prevention through education and individual responsibility in connection with the use of alcohol.

Buttons, posters, and bumper stickers will be available the first part of Alcohol Awareness Week, October 20-26. In addition, booths, literature, and contests will be held. The follow-up week of November 3-9 will involve various speakers, presentations, videos, and more contests and prizes.

For more information, contact Joseph McGill, Director of Student Services, 1st Floor Tabb, 392-9210.

Dance A Jig

Scottish Dance classes are being offered to interested faculty and students every Wednesday night from 5:30 to 6:00 p.m. in the dance studio at Lancer Hall. The cost is free.

Miss Longwood

The 1987 Miss Longwood Pageant is calling for contestants. Applications are due November 24th and are available at the Public Affairs Office, second floor east Ruffner. For further information, call 392-9371.

Have Art

The annual exhibit of work by Longwood's art faculty will open Friday, October 24 and continue through November 21 in Bedford Gallery. There will be an opening reception on Saturday, October 25 from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Gallery.

Moving?

Please keep in mind that when home addresses have been changed it is the responsibility of the student to notify the college. The Housing Office is the official address changing location at Longwood and all such changes should be reported to them.

Student Exchange

Host Families are being sought for 25 high school students from Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Switzerland, Germany, Spain, France, Italy, Ecuador, Australia and Japan for the School Year 1987-88 in a program sponsored by the American Intercultural Student Exchange (AISE).

The students, age 15 through 17, will arrive in the United States in August 1987, attend a local high school, and return to their home countries in June 1988. The students, all fluent in English, have been screened by their school representatives in their home countries and have spending money and medical insurance.

Host families may deduct $50 per month for income tax purposes.

AISE is also seeking American high school students age 15 through 17, who would like to spend a high school year in Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Germany, Switzerland, France, Spain or Australia or participate in a five week summer host family stay throughout Western Europe.

Families interested in this program should contact the person named above or telephone toll free: 1-800-SIBLING.

Iranian Hostage Speaks At Longwood

The United States and other Western nations will not curb terrorism until they are "consistent in making terrorists pay each time they strike," a former hostage in Iran told a Longwood College audience recently.

Col. Charles W. Scott, who was one of 52 Americans held hostage at the American Embassy in Tehran from Nov. 4, 1979 until Jan. 20, 1981, spoke at Longwood Oct. 2. He is an authority on international terrorism.

The lecture was sponsored by the Student Union.

Terrorism will continue "until the civilized nations of the world can be brought to realize that terrorism is clearly an international threat and an international problem; that it will require a concerted, cooperative effort by all nations if we are to deny terrorists the sanctuary, safe passage and support they now enjoy, and without which their operations can't succeed," said Scott.

At the same time, the U.S. should not over-react to the threat of terrorism. "The greatest threat posed by the terrorist is that we may be provoked into an excessive reaction, adopting liberty-limiting legislation and oppressive counter-measures. So far the actual injury caused by terrorism against the U.S. has been relatively light."

"We need to remember that fear, distrust and the feeling of government impotence are the tools employed by the terrorist to force radical change in a society, or even cause a government to collapse. When we over-react, we play into the hands of our avowed enemies."

America has been at war for almost six years, although we are "reluctant to face reality," he said.

"The murder, torture and kidnapping of innocent Americans by terrorists, on orders from any state that sponsors and controls them — providing them training, arms, money, safe passage and sanctuary — constitutes a direct act of war against the U.S. by the sponsoring state."

"Our failure to consider state-controlled terrorism an act of war in the past has served only to embolden terrorists and their masters in countries like Libya, Iran and Syria, among others. Unfortunately, even after the April 14 strike against Libya, most Americans are not willing to concede that we are at war. And the performance of our 'allies' gives no cause for optimism that we will win the fight against state-controlled terrorism any time soon."

Our country's experience in Vietnam "infected Americans and our European allies with a kind of moral paralysis against the use of military force, even in response to blatant acts of carnage against our citizens and our nation."

Terrorist acts have increased 10-fold in the past decade and more than 90 percent of them have achieved their objectives, said Scott. Last year, there were more than 800 terrorist operations worldwide and 928 men, women and children were killed by trerrorists — only 23 were Americans.

"So, contrary to what the terrorists preach — that we are the prime targets because we are universally hated — terrorism is clearly an international problem, not a threat unique to America."

The major sponsors of terorism are Libya, Iran and Syria, said Scott. Unfortunately, some Western nations "bow to their own short-term financial and political interests in lieu of opting for an effective policy to fight terror."

These countries include Italy (which has a $5 billion annual trade with Libya), Austria (which sells chemicals to Iraq for the production of poison gas), West Germany (which is a major trading partner with Iran), Greece and, surprisingly, Israel.

"We've all heard the cliche: One man's terrorist is another man's freedom fighter. To me, this is the ulitmate example of our moral confusion. But it's exactly what the terrorist would have us believe. They also persist in calling themselves guerrillas. They are neither freedom fighters nor are they guerrillas . . .Guerrillas are irregular soldiers that fight regular military forces. Terrorists almost never engage regular military forces; their prime targets of choice are weak and defenseless civilians, women, children and old men included."

Scott said that Israeli Ambassador Netanyahu provided the best definition of terrorism — "the deliberate and systematic murder, maiming and menacing of the innocent to inspire fear for political ends."

"There is a popular myth that terrorism is a natural outgrowth of the frustration and anger of the downtrodden masses, especially in the Third World. Although this kind of terrorism does exist, it is not widespread, nor is it a major threat."

"The kind of terrorism that has menaced the world over the last decade is state-sponsored — it's also, by definition, state-controlled — terrorism. Without state sponsorship, international terror would be extremely difficult, if not impossible."

We need to adopt new and bolder methods to eliminate terrorism, Scott proposed.

"Until recently, we fought the war against terrorism by not fighting it at all. We insisted on following a rigid list of nearly impossible-to-satisfy rules of engagement — prohibiting direct punitive action unless we could positively locate the individual terrorists involved in an attack and catch them alone, totally isolated from 'innocent civilians', so noncombatants would not be in jeopardy."

"Had we fought World War II with this kind of self-imposed restrictions, we'd all be marching the goose step today. We've fought this tedious, and in my view, unnecessary moral battle agianst ourselves for years because we failed to grasp the essence of terrorism, that it's a sneaky, unconventional form of warfare, but nonetheless it is war!"

Scott gave tips that reduce the chances of Americans becoming a terrorist victim — keep a low profile, stay away from airports with poor security records, don't wear expensive clothes and jewelry, don't stay in airports longer than necessary, look around for suspicious characters and actions, and, as you travel, look for cover where you'll be protected if shooting breaks out.

Scott said he "fully supports" President Reagan's air strike against Libya in retaliation for its support of a terrorist act in West Germany.

"It should have been our policy all along. We are at war and you can't win a war that is forced on you by rolling over and playing dead. If we can convince the terrorists and their sponsors that we will be consistent in making them pay each time they strike, we will finally be in a position to curb terrorism by making it high-risk, expensive and less effective than has been the case."

"We would like to thank them for their kind and generous support."

OKTOBERFEST Sports

Longwood College's Oktoberfest Weekend features competition involving alumni in men's golf, field hockey and soccer Saturday morning, plus Longwood varsity field hockey and soccer games.

The Oktoberfest sports schedule tips off at 10:00 at Longwood Golf Course when the current Lancer team will join with alumni for the Dick Williamson Memorial Alumni Match. The competition is being held in honor of the late Dick Williamson, Longwood's first men's golf coach who started the program in 1977.

Alumni expected to participate in the match are All-American Tim White, now assistant pro at Brandermill, Glenn Bugg, Robert Boyd, David Moore, Stan Edwards and Bryant Reese among others.

Also beginning at 10:00 on Barlow Field is the Longwood versus Lasalle field hockey game. Celebrating the 60th year of hockey at Longwood (1926-86), the Lady Lancers will be shooting for the 100th victory in coach Sue Finnie's career.

Alumni games in field hockey and soccer begin at 11:30. The hockey alumni will face Longwood's current varsity and junior varsity players at Barlow Field. Among the alumni are expected to be two members of the 1926 team, plus numerous standouts from recent teams.

The soccer alumni contest at First Avenue Field will match stars from the 1982 State Champion squad against standouts from the 1984 State Champion team. Two-time All-American Mark McArdle and All-State goalkeeper Brian Sprinkle are expected to play for the 1984 team, while oldtimers Mike McGeehan and Joe Parker, and possible all-time leading scorer Gus Leal, will play for the 1982 squad.

Longwood's varsity squad, currently ranked 13th in Division II, will take on District of Columbia at 2:00 on First Avenue Field.

All of Saturday's games and contests are open to the public at no charge.

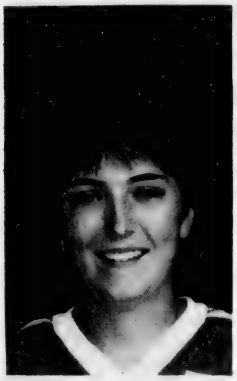
Thurman Spurs Spikers



After splitting a pair of matches at Hollins last week, Longwood's women's volleyball team is idle until Friday when a strong Bridgewater squad will visit for a 6:00 doubleheader in Lancer Hall.

Longwood, now 10-16, fell to Roanoke by a 15-10, 7-15, 15-1 count and beat host Hollins 14-16, 15-7, 15-0 in action last Tuesday.

"She played well in a starting role," said the coach of Thurman. "Sarita served well and hit well. She had several stuff blocks and assist blocks, and was a real leader for us."

In Bridgewater, Longwood will be playing a team that had split squads finish second and third in the sixth Cindy Smith Tournament October 11.

Smith To Coach In Japan

Dr. Barbara Smith, women's golf coach at Longwood for 20 years, has been chosen to lead the NCAA women's golf contingent which will play in Japan December 10-12. Dr. Smith is the first coach of a non-Division I team to be selected in the six years that the NCAA has fielded a women's team in the competition.

Previous coaches chosen fo the NCAA-Japan competition were from Oklahoma State, Tulsa, Texas Christian, Miami and Florida.

"Naturally, I feel quite honored but also very surprised," said Dr. Smith, coach of Longwood's NCAA Division II program. "There are so many good coaches out there I couldn't imagine why I was selected."

Dr. Smith was recommended for the post by the NCAA Women's Golf Committee of which she is a member. The recommendation was approved by the NCAA Council.

One of the top college coaches in the country, Dr. Smith was named LPGA Coach of the Year in 1983 and NCAA Mid-Atlantic Region Coach of the Year in 1985. She has led Longwood to second or third place finishes in national tournaments in four of the past six seasons. Seven LC golfers have been named All-Americans in that same span.

Dr. Smith will work with Page Dunlap of Florida, Caroline Keggi of New Mexico and Kate Rogerson of Kentucky, the top three undergraduate finishers in the 1986 NCAA Women's Golf Tournament. Wake Forest coach Jesse Haddock will coach the six-member men's team in the NCAA-Japan competition.

The U.S. contingent will meet in Los Angeles December 5 and arrive in Tokyo December 7. After two days of practice, the teams will engage in three days of match play and return to the United States December 14.

Men's Golf Concludes Season

Longwood's men's golf team concluded its best fall season ever last Wednesday, winning a four-team match at Longwood Golf Course. Led by senior Ty Bordner, the Lancers shot 305 to beat Radford (309), Virginia Military (320) and Randolph-Macon (348).

Longwood finished with a match record of 5-1, an overall mark of 44-13 (including tournaments) and a best-ever team stroke average of 317.6 for 10 rounds.

Wednesday, five Longwood golfers shot in the 70's for the first time ever. Bordner carded a 75 to finish second overall, and Ron Hatch shot 76 to end up third. Tony Good, Mark Marshall and Richard Hardy wound up with 77's. Kevin Hare contributed an 81.

Longwood's overall mark of 44-13 includes matches and tournaments. The Lancers had a second place, two fourths and a sixth place in four fall tournament appearances.

The Lancers played without one of their top golfers Wednesday. Sophomore Kevin Haskins was critically injured in an auto accident October 11. Haskins, who was rushed to Duke University Hospital, finally regained consciousness late last week. He was showing marked improvement at last report, according to coach Steve Nelson.

Haskins had the second best stroke average on the team for the fall with an average of 79 for eight rounds. His best showing was a 77-72-149 in the Franklin & Marshall Tournament in which he finsihed second out of more than 80 golfers.

Bordner edged Haskins for low stroke honors. The senior had an average score of 78.5 for 10 rounds. His top showing came in the VMI and Washington & Lee Invitational where he shot 72-78-150 to tie for fourth place.

Hardy had an average score of 81.3 for 10 rounds. His best was a 79-73-152 in the VMI and W&L Tourney. Marshall averaged 81.5 for 10 rounds with a best of 78-79-157 in the Hampton University tournament. Hatch, a veteran, averaged 82.5 for eight rounds and first year golfer Tony Good was jsut a shade behind at 82.6.

Coach Nelson feels his team should be a definite threat for the Virginia College Division State Title in the spring.

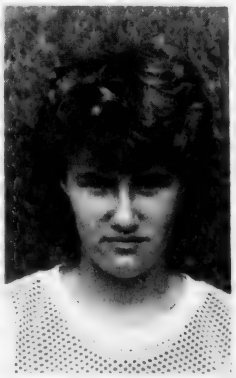
"We've had an excellent fall, but we can do better," said the coach. "If we could develop some consistency we might have an outside chance of qualifying for the Division II National Tournament."

The men's golf season will resume in March.

Player of the Week

Kim Howells

Freshman goalkeeper Kim Howells notched her sixth shutout of the season Thursday in Longwood's 1-0 field hockey win over Radford. For her performance, Howells has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period October 12-19. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.



Howells had six saves in the Radford victory, which gives Longwood a 9-5 record. Coach Sue Finnie credited her with one of the game's key plays when she stopped a shot right in front of the goal by Radford All-American Sue Neal.

"Kim made a beautiful save on that shot," said Finnie. "It was a big play, but she has been making those kind of plays for us all season."

Howells has a fine goals against average of 1.3 for the season. Take away Longwood's 9-1 loss to James Madison on astro-turf and her goals against average is a stingy 0.7. Her play has been a key factor in Longwood outscoring the opposition 38-17 in 14 games.

A gifted athlete, Howells played four sports at Upper Moreland High School. She participated in softball, swimming and basketball in addition to field hockey. Also a standout goalkeeper in soccer, she had several scholarship offers in both hockey and soccer, before deciding to attend Longwood.

An All-Suburban performer in hockey, she was team MVP in softball and Upper Moreland's Female Athlete of the Year.

Field Hockey Celebrates 60th

To say that Saturday will be a big day for Longwood's field hockey program would be an understatement. Not only will the College be observing its 60th Anniversary of hockey, Lady Lancer coach Sue Finnie could get her 100th career coaching victory if LC can defeat LaSalle.

Longwood brings a 9-5 record into the LaSalle game after beating rival Radford 1-0 last Thursday. A game at Virginia Commonwealth Tuesday was rained out and will be played Monday, October 27.

The win over Radford gives coach Finnie a career mark of 99-81-8 in 13 years. She has a record of 20-9, counting this season, since coming from Widener to Longwood in 1985. Finnie led Longwood to an 11-4 mark in her first year.

Longwood has extended a special invitation to all alumni who played hockey to come back and play in an alumni game at 11:30 Saturday, after the LC-LaSalle contest. A reception will be held at 1:00 in honor of the 60th Anniversary celebration.

The current Lady Lancer edition notched its seventh shutout of the season in the win over Radford Thursday. Freshman Laura Goetz scored late in the second half on an assist from Diane Bingler to provide the margin of victory.

Coach Finnie awarded defensive player of the game honors to goalkeeper Kim Howells. Offensive honors went to forward Traci Strickland.

Junior Claye Conkwright had 20 interceptions-tackles to break the season record of 214 set by Tammy Marshall last season. Conkwright now has 221 interceptions-tackles this year.

Soccer- Making A Comeback

Longwood's soccer team won its only game last week, beating Virginia Wesleyan 2-1, and will take an 8-3-1 mark into home games with Virginia Miliatary Wednesday at 3:00 and District of Columbia Saturday at 2:00.

Ranked 13th in NCAA Division II last week, the Lancers are simply glad to be back at home after an extended six-game road swing. Longwood went 3-3 on the road stretch, playing at three homecomings and traveling over 2,000 miles. "It will be great just to play a game on our field," said coach Rich Posipanko.

Longwood has not had a home game since September 21 when the Lancers beat Greensboro College 5-0 to win the Southside Virginia Soccer Tournament.

Junior Dave Goerke came up with nine saves from his goalkeeper position.

"Goerke played well, though he made a couple of mistakes," said Posipanko. The coach also praised Lim and senior Mark Kremen for their play in the contest.

The victory gives Longwood a 2-0 VISA Eastern Division record with division games still remaining against Christopher Newport, Averett, and Randolph Macon. If the Lancers finish first or second in the division, they will qualify for the VISA State Playoffs in November.

Artists Of The Month Announced

Deborah McClintock, of Hampden-Sydney, has been chosen Artist of the Month at Longwood College.

Her winning work was a drawing titled "My Garden," which was done with a flair pen. She received a $50 cash award, and her work is on display in the Bedford Building at Longwood.

Mrs. McClintock, a part-time student, is attending her first semester at Longwood. In fact, this is the first time she has gone to school since graduating from Mary Washington College in 1968.

"I've been raising kids since then," said Mrs. McClintock, the mother of four children. She has lived in the Farmville area since 1975.

Second place in the Artist of the Month competition went to Kelley Coggsdale, of Suffolk, for her mixed media work, "The Silver Screen." The third-place finisher was Susan Hilton, of Richmond, for her pencil drawing, "The Illusion of Dream."

The Artist of the Month competition is open to all students enrolled in art classes at Longwood. The winner is selected by the art faculty.

More than 800 students from area high schools and other schools from as far away as the Richmond area attended a special matinee of Ah! Wilderness at Longwood College recently.

The Oct. 10 performance in Jarman Auditorium was attended by students from Prince Edward County Elementary and Prince Edward High School, Prince Edward Academy, Amelia County High School, Appomattox County High School, Varina High School in Henrico County, Fluvanna High School, and Mecklenburg Academy.

Residents of Brookview Lodge in Farmville, Charter Oaks I in Charlotte Courthouse, and Charter Oaks II in Blackstone also attended. Some 816 students and others were in attendance.

The Longwood Players' production of Ah! Wilderness, Eugene O'Neill's only comedy, played Oct. 8-12. It was directed by Dr. Doug Young, professor of speech and theatre.

Longwood has provided matinee performances of several of its plays for area high school students.

Business Innovation Center

By MADONNA ORTON

Longwood College is announcing the Open House of its newly created Business Innovation Center on Tuesday, October 28, 1986. Two very distinguished visiting guest speakers for today's ceremony are Governor Gerald L. Baliles and state senator Howard P. Anderson. The Longwood Business Innovation Center, located across from the Cunningham dorms in the Hiner Building, is a unit of the School of Business and Economics reporting to the Dean.

The basic purpose of the Center is to strengthen the region's business and industrial competitiveness in domestic and international markets. It will serve as a resource and educational outreach unit in support of programs which inspire economic development, entrepeneurship, and human resource development.

Why would students want to get involved in this? "To paraphrase something Jack Jacques (Dean of the School of Business and Economics) once said," stated Barrett Baker, Management Intern for the Innovation Center. "Southside Virginia is our home and if we don't take care of it, who will? And even though I'm from Northern Virginia I don't view the state in two separate parts, so whatever I do here effects all of Virginia. If we can make a difference here, maybe we can make a difference on a larger scale — possibly even on an international level." Longwood business students will especially benefit from the services that LBIC has to offer. The Center's director, Dr. Larry C. Minks, is very excited about the new program and says that his key interest in the center is to create a way for the college to connect higher education with economic development.

So far, there are six students working under Larry Minks as interns: Laura Cason, Barrett (Mick) Baker, Matt Church, Lynn Harmon, Kelley Noe, and Deborah Amos. However, the center hopes to expand its number of interns as things get busier.

MY PAGE Gone- But Not Forgotten

In what may have been the first of its kind in Longwood history, Lancer Gym was invaded last Saturday night to spark some sunshine in what turned out to be a dreary Octoberfest weekend. That invasion, of course, was the Bangles, and with the help of Paul Striffolino and the rest of the Student Union, the Rotunda got a chance to get back stage and talk with them for a while. And this is how it went:

ROTUNDA: Let me ask the inevitable first so I can satisfy my curiosity. Why in the world did you agree to come to Longwood?

BANGLES: Why not? (Laughing) I just had to say what you were expecting. (Serious) I don't know — it seems to me that places like this have the best crowds you could find anywhere. We seem to have our best luck in places where the people don't get exposed to big bands much and seem to be starving for something to come their way. When it finally happens, the fans really go out of their way to support it.

ROTUNDA: The students were warned before going in to the show that there would be no drinking, no smoking and no dancing. Did that present any problems for you personally?

BANGLES: No dancing!! Why not?

ROTUNDA: I think it had something to do with messing up the gym floor.

BANGLES: Actually, one of our road people came up to me in the middle of the set and said, "I know you really don't want to do this, but the police want you to ask the crowd to sit back down' and I just said, "right." There is no way I'm going to say anything like that to a crowd that's having a good time — there's no way.

ROTUNDA: Have you ever had any problems with rowdy crowds?

BANGLES: We've had a few shows in Europe that have gotten out of control and there have actually been moments when we've been frightened, security-wise. In fact, at one show the crowd rolled into one of the lighting trees and it came crashing down on the stage — killer trees, if you will (laughing). But for the most part, it really hasn't been a problem.

ROTUNDA: Let me ask you this then. Would you ever come back?

BANGLES: Oh yes! Definitely!

ROTUNDA: Great — then we'll expect you this time next year.

BANGLES: We'll be there. We are trying to finish this leg of the tour first and then we'll take some time off. Actually, this is the fifth leg of the tour — we had two tours in Europe and one small Japanese tour — but yeah, we'd come back.

ROTUNDA: It seems that your career has pretty much blossomed over night. Is there any truth to that?

BANGLES: No, not really. Before the first album came out, we had released an E.P. During the year and a half between the release of the E. P. and the album we did some song writing, etc. I think success has been a respectable long time in coming.

ROTUNDA: Do you feel that being an all female band has presented any extra barriers to that success?

BANGLES: We have experienced working with certain people that have given us some problems, but we've never had to fire anyone over it — we just don't work with them again. For the most part I think people can accept us as a band, or at least they are learning to, and that's really all we're asking. I think that society is becoming open-minded enough so that it really isn't a problem.

ROTUNDA: Is that the official story?

BANGLES: (Laughing) Actually, we have this joke about how we do a press conference and tell the press exactly what they want to hear . . . well, we formed the band because we thought it was a good gimmick. We figured, "hey, we'll get four chicks together — yeah, yeah that's it. That'll get 'em to come see us . . ." No, we're just kidding. Actually we really got together because we wanted to be the next Go Go's. (Rolling their eyes in unison.) Heaven help us!

ROTUNDA: Actually I have to admit that I was surprised by some of your music. I didn't think you really got into as much of the rock oriented stuff.

BANGLES: Right. A lot of people are surprised at that, and that's one thing that we eventually need to put down on an album. There are so many people who have heard of us now that have heard "If She Knew What She Wants", "Walk Like an Egyptian" and "Manic Monday" — and that's their knowledge of the Bangles. And that's only one facet. It is true that we do a lot of songs with that sweet kind of vocalizing and whatnot, but we also like to make a lot of noise, too!

ROTUNDA: Moving away from that quickly, how did you all ever get together?

BANGLES: I don't know. (Laughing) It was such a long time ago.

ROTUNDA: How long?

BANGLES: I guess about five years now — almost six. We basically formed because Debbie and I are sisters and that helped. We played together some in high school and eventually put an ad in the newspaper for a base player and a lead singer. That's about the extent of it.

ROTUNDA: How did you come up with the Bangles for a name?

BANGLES: We were originally the Bangs . . . (laughing) but that was kinda nasty and one syllable names are just not commercial enough, so we sold out and added another syllable. I think it sounds better like that anyway.

ROTUNDA: How well do you get along when you're on tour?

BANGLES: Considering that we have been pretty much forced to be together since January or February, we really don't have much choice. Like the kids from the same family — we've learned how to make each other laugh. And that's really the best kind of remedy for any kind of problem.

ROTUNDA: So what's next?

BANGLES: After we finish this tour, we're going home to L.A. to try and reacquaint ourselves with boyfriends, family, etc. We need to take some time off to write some songs for the next album that we'll start working on in late January.

ROTUNDA: So you do write most of your own music?

BANGLES: Oh, yes!

Scholarship For Education

The Longwood College Foundation has announced establishment of the Louise Brightwell Watson Memorial Scholarship by W. A. Watson, Jr., of Farmville.

Interest from the scholarship endowment of $25,000 will fund annual scholarships to students enrolled in Longwood's Teacher Education Honors College.

Recipients will be chosen on the basis of financial need and academic merit. The amount of the scholarships may vary according to the recipient's need. One to five scholarships will be awarded each year.

Preference will be given to student applicants from Prince Edward, Buckingham, Cumberland, Nottoway, and Charlotte Counties.

Each scholarship recipient will be identified as a Louise Brightwell Watson Teacher Education Honors College Scholar.

President Janet Greenwood said that Longwood "is deeply grateful to Mr. Watson for his most generous gift. This scholarship will be a lasting memorial to Mrs. Watson, who was a member of the class of 1920, and will help many deserving students achieve their goals."

Mrs. Watson, a native of Prospect, taught in Hot Springs and in Prince Edward County before her marriage to W. A. Watson, Jr. in 1924. The couple had two sons — W. A. Watson, III and James M. Watson, both of Farmville — seven grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

She was an active member of Farmville Methodist Church, particularly the missions circles, and a member of the DAR. With her husband, she helped organize the Farmville, Pamplin, and Cartersville chapters of the A.A.R.P.

W. A. Watson, Jr. has been a business and civic leader in Farmville for more than 50 years. He opened his insurance agency here in 1926. He helped to organize the Farmville Area Development Corporation.

He has been a Mason and a member of the Lions Club and the International Order of Oddfellows for 50-plus years.

A lifetime member of the Prince Edward County Democratic Committee and the only lifetime member of the 5th District Democratic Committee, Watson attended two National Democratic Conventions as a delegate from Virginia.

He is one of two life deacons of Farmville Baptist Church. His activities there during more than 50 years of membership included serving as Sunday school superintendent and teacher, church treasurer, church trustee, and chairman of the deacon board.

Afghanistan: Not A Soviet Vietnam

By MATT PETERMAN

The world today looks at Afghanistan with little more than indifference. Many people are quick to falsely point out that Afghanistan is what the Vietnam war was to the United States. If this were true such indifference could be justified and the Soviets after great expense would realize that something is not working and discontinue the war.

For the Soviet Union, continuing the war with what is left of the Afghan resistance, the Mujahideen, it makes great geo-political sense to stay. The Soviets have immense possibilities of improving their strategic position in a part of the world which is far from stable. A close inspection of the situation should tell the West that support of governments fighting the Soviets there should be stepped up.

First of all, the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan puts them about 300 miles away from a warm weather port in the Indian Ocean, which would leave them in position to disturb the Persian Gulf oil shipping routes at their will. The mere 300 mile buffer zone to the Indian Ocean is in a part of Pakistan that could try to secede from that country in the near future. A secession would bring into existence a country that would be called Baluchistan and strangely enough it is the Soviet Union aiding the secessionist movement in every way.

Unfortunately for the West, the present leader in Pakistan reminds them of Ferdinand Marcos and his type. He is Gen. Zia Ul-Hag and too much support to him makes the West nervous. This factor alone could not be good, for when a secessionist challenge is waged, his ability to quell it would be limited, thus giving the Soviet Union the gift of Baluchistan and all of the strings attached.

Second of all, the Soviets cannot retreat from Afghanistan even if they wanted to. Besides being a blow to their near and Middle East agenda, a victorious mujahideen would quickly find abundant aid from the United States, China, and many other nations with a stake. The Soviets could not tolerate a government hostile to theirs in Afghanistan, a primary reason for their invasion in 1979. The Soviets cannot even offer the Mujahideen a part in the puppet government for such a move would stir the already suppressed Soviet Moslem population.

Finally, if one must look for an accurate comparison to the Afghan-Soviet conflict, he must only look back 50 years to the Spanish Civil War. Spain in 1936 was Hitler's testing ground for future wars, as new weapon developments were viciously used against the Spanish people. This is what the Soviets are doing in Afghanistan with new developments in chemical weapons and the devising of new tactics for their war machinery. Are the Soviets preparing to use these new tactics for a non-nuclear invasion of Western

Longwood Senior Awarded SBEA Scholarship

Paula Wood Hauenstein, a Longwood College senior from Bracey, has received a $500 scholarship from the Southern Business Education Association.

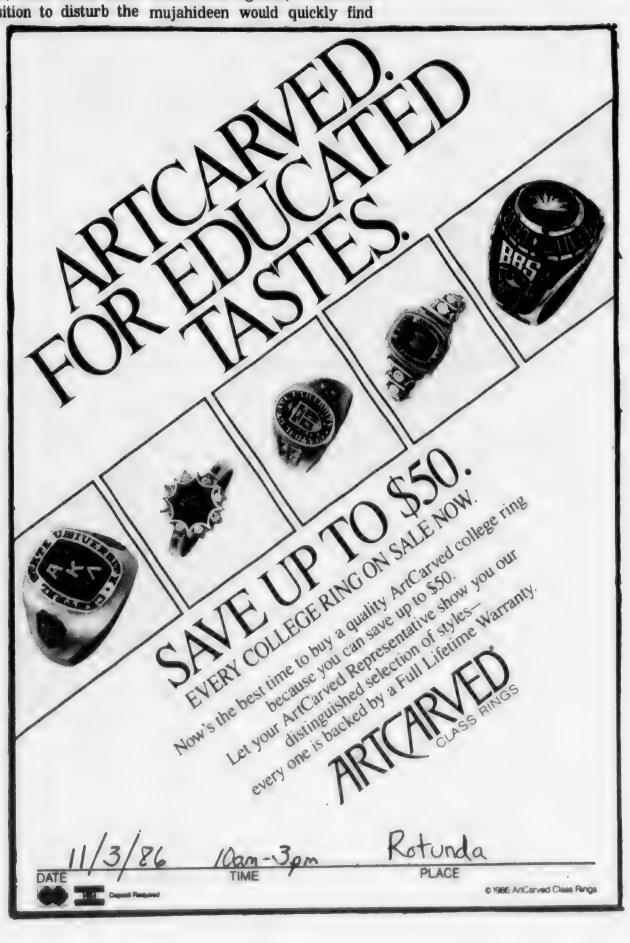
The award is one of five scholarships SBEA gives each year to outstanding business education students from the many states in the southern region.

Mrs. Hauenstein has a near-perfect academic record (3.95 grade point average from a possible 4.0). She achieved this record while maintaining a home for her husband and two teenage children and driving a round trip of 160 miles each day to attend classes at Longwood.

She will complete requirements for the B.S. degree in business education in December. She plans to teach business subjects, particularly accounting and data processing, on the high school level.

Her student-teaching practicum was completed last spring. She taught for 10 weeks at Nottoway Senior High School, under Mrs. Juanita Yates.

"I had wanted to go to college for a long time," Mrs. Hauenstein said, "but there were family factors that prevented me from doing so."



When her children were old enough that she "could feel comfortable leaving them" and her husband's business was established, she began taking classes at Southside Virginia Community College at Alberta.

In January of 1984, she became a full-time student at Longwood, transferring some credits from SVCC.

Single-minded dedication to her goal has kept Mrs. Hauenstein going. "This is where my heart is now," she said. "I've cut out many other things until my education is finished."

But the most important factor in her success is "the support and cooperation of my family," Mrs. Hauenstein said. "When I graduate I should give them a gift."

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Bangles

ROTUNDA: I've always wondered how a person can spend ten months on the road, bouncing from town to town, and still be able to get up on stage and perform when the time comes. What do you do that keeps you in such good physical condition?

BANGLES: Just performing itself — that's a lot of it. However, we have also been great supporters of Jane Fonda. Jane Fonda is our guru — she rules our lives.

ROTUNDA: When do you ever have time for scheduled exercise?

BANLGES: Somewhere between the midsts of things — before breakfast, after lunch, whatever — usually in the hotel room. We always try and make the time.

ROTUNDA: I understand that you are putting together a new segment for MTV. When can we expect to see that?

BANGLES: We will be taping it at the end of this month. It's going to be an hour long concert, but I'm not really sure when it will air. In fact, they did the audio taping right here at Longwood so they could get the timing down for various segments, etc. but the video portion will be shot in Pittsburg.

ROTUNDA: Do you make it a practice to tape shows and critique them later?

BANGLES: (Laughing) We try not to, no . . .

"A concert like this is something that Longwood really needed," stated Longwood Alumni Sherry Massey shortly after the show. "The school has been doing a good job of building up their image as far as academics goes, but an event like this is something the students really needed — a boost in their morale."

"I'll agree with that," added another Alumni, Mark Mitterer. "This is the most school spirit that I have ever seen at this school. I hope they plan to continue on in this tradition."

Special thanks, again, go to Paul Striffolino and all the members of S-UN who made this concert run smoothly, and especially to Jay Fitzhugh who had the vision to make the whole thing possible. Hopefully this is the start and not the finish of a great new tradition for Longwood.

Got a story?

SPECIAL NOTES

Registration Appointments: Registration appointments will be assigned for all students who are continuing undergraduates. Registration forms will be distriButed through academic advisors. Students who change majors after the forms are printed will need to pick up their forms from the former advisor before going to the new advisor.

Delinquent Accounts: All library fines, parking fines, unpaid damage deposits, or other delinquent student accounts must be cleared before the student can preregister. This includes degree applications for those students who have accumulated 90 or more credits, including transfer credits.

Academic Probation-Suspension: This policy provides for automatic (immediate) suspension for those students whose cumulative averages (at the end of any grading period) fall below certain required averages, which increase according to the total number of hours attempted (including transfer work). The complete table of required averages may be found on pages 32-33 of the 1986-87 Longwood College Catalog (available in the Admissions Office).

PREREGISTRATION PROCEDURES

1. No student should cut classes to preregister. The Registrar's Office will honor a student's registration appointment at any time during preregistration hours (on or after the printed appointment time) through the end of the preregistration period.
2. To be permitted to preregister, each student must bring the following documents to the Registrar's Office: (a) a pre-printed registration form signed by the academic advisor and showing sufficient alternate courses to allow the student to obtain a complete schedule; (b) a form giving permission to enroll in a closed course, signed by the advisor and appropriate department head, if applicable; (c) receipts showing payment of any charges for which registration stop codes have been imposed.
3. The advising process is an integral part of preregistration. Be sure to allow sufficient time to meet with your academic advisor and discuss your degree requirements, as well as any academic difficulties you might be having. If you are in academic difficulty, remember that the fastest way to improve your GPA is by repeating courses in which you need to pull up your grades; think of C as the break-even or equilibrium point. For every grade you have that is below C, you need a comparable one above C to balance it. That is, for every D, you need a B in a course of the same or higher credit value; for every F, you need an A or two B's in courses of the same or higher credit value.
4. Each student is expected to complete the preregistration process in one transaction. Come prepared by planning alternative courses ahead of time. Daily Space Available supplements will be printed, and a terminal will be available in the Rotunda area. Use these to determine what courses or sections are likely to be closed, and make your plans accordingly. Students who must return for additional processing (overrides, additional courses, alternatives, etc.) may do so only on Fridays.
5. Preregistration hours are limited to 1 p.m. until 6 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and 1 p.m. until 5 p.m., Friday, for the preregistration period. This is necessary so that the office staff can continue routine office work and prepare enrollment reports to facilitate the process.
6. Alphabetical master lists of registration appointment times will be posted in convenient locations across campus. Be sure to check one of these to find your appointment time.
7. Undergraduate students who fail to preregister during the preregistration period must register on Monday, January 12, 1987, in the Lower Dining Hall. Schedule changes may not be made until drop-add begins on Tuesday, January 13, 1987.

Please do not hesitate to come to us if you have questions or problems.

CAMPUS NOTES

Renaissance Dinner

The 1986 Renaissance Christmas Dinner at Longwood College will be held on Saturday and Sunday, December 6 and 7.

A tradition at Longwood for 11 years, the Renaissance Dinner offers singing, dancing, and feasting (prime rib of beef) patterned after Advent Season celebration in Tudor England.

The entertainers are members of Longwood's Camerata Singers, under the direction of Dr. Louard Egbert who portrays the "Lord of Misrule."

The evening begins at 6:30 with an opening ceremony in Longwood's Rotunda, followed by the dinner and entertainment in the Blackwell Dining Hall.

Reservations for the Renaissance Dinner are now being accepted by Longwood's Public Affairs Office, located on the second floor of East Ruffner. The cost of the dinner is $17.95 per person.

For more information, call 392-9371.

How 'Bout Givin' Me A Ring?

The U.S. Post Office in Farmville has found a class ring that was discovered loose in the mail. Partial description is as follows: Women's size 6-6½, Gillham High School, Class of '86. A more complete description will be required in order to claim the ring.

Please notify the Post Office in Farmville for details or to claim the ring.

China Awaits You

The American Association of State Colleges and Universities is pleased to announce the 1987-88 competition of the AASCU-Taiwan Scholarship Program.

Applications are welcome from undergraduates at AASCU member institutions to study in Taiwan during the 1987-88 academic year. The AASCU-Taiwan Scholarships, made possible by the Ministry of Education in Taiwan, are offered to those students wishing to begin Chinese language study in Taiwan, as well as those wishing to improve their Chinese language capabilities and knowledge of Chinese culture. Applicants must demonstrate a serious desire to study Chinese language and should be capable of living independently in another culture.

The 15 available scholarships will provide tuition, miscellaneous fees, and a monthly stipend of approximately $175 (U.S. currency) from September, 1987 through August, 1988. Transportation to and from Taiwan is the responsibility of the student. Students having the required language proficiency may take courses of their choice at appropriate universities in Taiwan. Beginning and intermediate students will study at the Mandarin Training Center at Taiwan Normal University in Taipei, and, depending on proficiency, may enroll in nonlanguage courses.

Applicants will need to submit application-recommendation forms as well as the following materials:

A letter from the applicant including a statement of approximately 800 words about his-her background and the relationship of the proposed study to career interests.

An official copy of the applicant's transcripts (including 1986 fall semester grades).

A letter from a teacher of Chinese language certifying the language capability of the applicant who wishes to take courses other than beginning language courses.

Need Aid?

College students in need of financial aid for this academic year were urged to investigaste private foundation sources by Steve Danz, Director of The Scholarship Band.

According to the director, there are over 500 million in private financial aid sources that oft-times go unused. This imbalance is due to the fact that college students until now have not had a reliable method of finding out about the numerous private aid sources. The Scholarship Bank has computerized this information and will send each applicant a personalized print-out of private aid sources that appear just right for each applicant.

College students can find funds based on major, occupational goals, geographic preferences and approximately 30 other criteria. Financial need is not stressed as heavily in private aid as in government funding. Numerous new grants exist this year for business, liberal arts, health care, law, and humanities. Students are also urged to investigate well-paying corporate internships as part of their over-all financial package.

Students interested in supplementing their current financial aids should send a stamped, self-addressed business-sized envelope to The Scholarship Bank, 4626 N. Grand, Covina, CA. 91724.

Not Just Tobacco

Are you creative and looking for marketing experience? Enter the Philip Morris Marketing-Communications Competition. For the 18th consecutive year, Philip Morris Companies Inc. invites students currently enrolled in accredited universities or junior colleges to research any of its non-tobacco products-operations and submit a marketing-communications proposal that could succeed in today's competitive business world.

To enter, student committees must prepare projects under the supervision of a faculty member or a recognized campus professional society. Committee size should be three or more students at the undergraduate level and two or more students at the graduate level. Student ideas must relate to the non-tobacco products or operations of Philip Morris, which include General Foods Corporation, Miller Brewing Company, Lindeman Wines, and Mission Viejo Realty Group.

Winning teams in both the graduate and undergraduate categories will receive first place awards of $2,000, second place awards of $1,000, and third place awards of $500. Representatives from the winning teams will be invited, with their faculty advisors, to be guests of Philip Morris in New York City, where they will present their projects to the judges and Philip Morris executives.

Projects can focus on marketing, advertising, public relations, cultural affairs, economics, etc. For example, student teams may wish to develop a new advertising campaign for Lowenbrau beer or one of the specified General Foods products, design a new import-export plan for Lindeman Wines, prepare a corporate image program for Philip Morris, arrange a series of public relations community events for Mission Viejo, market a new product within the product lines of present Philip Morris companies, or focus on a related issue of interest to the team.

Participation in the competition offers students valuable business experience while they are still in school. The written proposals, layouts, storyboards, videotapes or cassettes that they produce will be excellent portfolio entries and will illustrate their talents and motivation to prospective employers. Ronelle Siegel of the Parsons School of Design, first place undergraduate winner of the 17th annual competition, commented: "As an aspiring creative director in an advertising agency, I have never delved so deeply into the marketing aspect of a product before and, therefore, found it to be a tremendously rewarding experience."

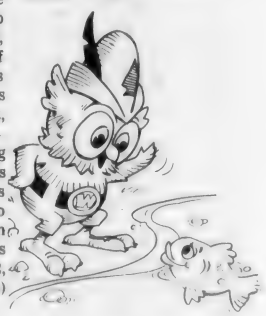
Entries, due on January 9, 1987, are judged by a distinguished panel of communications experts: Mary Wells Lawrence, Chairman, Wells, Rich, Greene; Frank L. Mingo, President, Mingo-Jones Advertising Incorporated; William Ruder, President, William Ruder Incorporated;

John W. Rosenblum, Dean, Colgate Darden Graduate School of Business Administration, University of Virginia; Richard R. West, Dean, Graduate School of Business Administration, New York University; John A. Murphy, President and Chief Operating Officer, Philip Morris Companies Inc.; William I. Campbell, Executive Vice President of Marketing, Philip Morris USA; Stanley S. Scott, Vice President and Director of Corporate Affairs, Philip Morris Companies Inc. and James Tappan,Group Vice President, General Foods Corporation.

Students interested in entering the 18th Annual Philip Morris Marketing-Communications Competition should write to Susan Mannion, Competition Coordinator, Philip Morris Companies Inc., P.O. Box 7722, Woodside, NY, 11377, or call (212) 880-3525.

Raquetball, Anyone?

By LISA WEAVER



In September of last year, the architectural and engineering firm was selected to begin blueprints for the reconstruction of French gym for raquetball courts. The final design will be approved by the state next month. Construction, however, will not begin until April. The reason for this delay is because the state must approve every step Longwood makes in its plans for the courts. But nevertheless, the courts should be available for use August 15, 1987.

The total cost of the four raquetball courts is $428,477. This money was taken from a reserve fund that is built up every year from a portion of student's comprehensive fees and room and board.

There is not a direct fee to the students. However, Mr. Rick Hurley says that he feels that raquets and balls will be available for use by the students, at no extra cost.

The equipment will probably have to be signed in and out like basketballs, baseball bats and gloves, etc. But at this point, equipment is pretty much ahead of the game since the courts are not open yet.

There will be four separate courts enclosed with glass. There will be two viewing areas, one on the upper level of the gym and one on the lower. There will be no handicapped access to the upper level, but the lower level will be so that handicapped students may also engage in viewing this sport. In addition to the courts and viewing areas, the locker rooms in French gym are being renovated, and they are scheduled to be finished by January of 1987.

Help keep America looking good.

Get Dizzy

Jazz trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie and his band will apear in concert on Saturday, November 1, at 8 p.m. in Longwood College's Jarman Auditorium.

A musical legend for almost half a century, Gillespie's unique trumpet style helped define modern jazz.

He earned his nickname years ago for his "effervescent hijinks" on stage and off. But his fame is based on his love of music and his ability to create "jazz that cooks."

The jazz concert is the second program in this year's Series of the Performing Arts at Longwood.

General admission to the concert is $7.00. For senior citizens (over 62), young people up to 18, and Longwood employees and their families, the ticket price is $6.50. Longwood students will be admitted free with college I.D.

Tickets will be available at the box office in Jarman lobby prior to the performance.

Henry IV

The Longwood Players and The Speech and Theatre Program of the Department of Visual and Performing Arts will be presenting their second production of the year, Luigi Pirandello's Henry IV, from November 19 through November 22. Performances will begin at 8 p.m.

Pirandello, one of the most significant playwrights of the twentieth-century, tells the tale of a madman, a man who has strayed from reality and believes he is the German King, Henry IV. Friends and foes of this "alleged Henry IV" Masquerade as counsellors, monks, queens, and guards to fulfill his fantasy. The consequences of this "charade" are sometimes amusing, sometimes tragic.

The mystical Henry IV is played by Walter Alford. Opposite him is the marchioness Matilda Spina, played by Laura Boyett. Her daughter, Frida, is played by Sandra Clayton. Frida's fiance', Carlo Di Nolli is played by Doug Shambien. Tito Belcredi, the present lover of the marchioness is played by Ed Phaup. The pompous doctor is played by Glen Gilmer. The four make-believe privy counsellors are played by Scott Koenigsburg, Dale Clark, John Boatwright, and David Miller. A manservant is played by Glenn Banton, and a guard is played by James West. The drama is being directed by Dr. Patton Lockwood.

ROTC: Staying Active

Written by Cathy Gaughran as reported by Billy Howard

The ROTC Program has been keeping busy lately with projects such as their canoe trip on Sept. 24 and repelling ("descent off a vertical surface through the use of ropes") exercises on Oct. 10. Oktoberfest displays went way beyond a booth. They included helicopter flights, National Guard display, riggers (parachute) display, colorguard, and repelling exercises off Bedford.

Some future happenings with the program are Field Land Exercises (FLX) on Oct. 31 and Nov 1, which include land navigation, M16 assembly and reassembly, movement techniques, and physical training (P.T.), and an information table in the New Smoker on Nov. 4 and 5. ROTC will also be hosting a party with Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity on Nov. 7 in the ABC Room in Lankford.

What are some of the advantages students enjoy as a result of being a part of ROTC? ROTC members are challenged by the program, enjoy simply being involved with something constructive, and have an opportunity to enhance their leadership skills and patriotism. ROTC opens doors to scholarship money during college, and to a good paying job with the military after college.

There is no service obligation attached to taking an ROTC class. For more information about the ROTC Program, please stop by 3rd floor, East Ruffner, or call 392-9259.

Honor System Discussed

An Honor Code forum was held at 3 p.m. in the Gold Room last Friday. There were about thirty people attending. Janet Greenwood and the Honor Board led a panel. Many were students, faculty and administrators who had attended the Honors Conference in Richmond. There were others there from all aspects of Longwood's life who came to express their views and share input.

Many issues about the honor system were discussed in the forum. This included the apathy, enforcement, sanctions, and effectiveness dealing with the Honor Code. One of the issues discussed was the need for an investigative committee to investigate the validity of the cases. Currently, the only member with prior knowledge of the case is Mike Clemments, Honor Board chairman. He has no vote in any of the cases. There is some hope for this investigative commitee. This commitee would consist of four people and the Honor Board chairman. It has taken a while to devise it because of Longwood's apathy. Because of the conference, the apathy has alleviated some. The committee would meet at least once a week, be responsible for confidentiality, investigate cases and there is an obligation of 2-3 hours per week.

Elections will be held at the end of November for the two unfilled positions on the Board. The Honor Board meets one night a week to discuss cases. A student needs a 2.0 GPA and at least be a sophomore to be eligible. There is a harsher attendance policy for members. A member cannot miss more than 25 percent of the meetings. If a member is negligent three times unexcused, a letter is put in his or her folder that says that he or she is not in good standing.

One of the most pertinent questions asked was about the validity of the reporting of cases. Jeff Martin, a member of the Board replied, "I deal with facts, not with rumors." The next forum will be held on the testing of drugs when a person applies for a job. Many companies do this without a person's prior knowledge. The Rotunda encourages students to participate in elections, running and voting, and to also participate in forums. This is your chance to voice your opinions.

OCPP

The Office of Career Planning and Placement provides a variety of services to assist students with their career-life planning. These services include the following:

— Provide career information

— Individual counseling and group seminars to assist students with career decisions

— Provide job search strategy workshops (resume writing, interviewing skills, etc.)

— Offer experiential learning extern program, Project ASSET

— Coordinate Challenge Liberal Arts Career Fair and the Minority Student Career Fair

— Arrange for on-campus recruiting

— Maintain a Career Resource Center

— Announce job vacancies (permanent-summer)

— Prepare statistical placement reports

— Maintain credentials files on seniors and mail to prospective employers

All these services and others are designed to enhance the employability of our students and give them a competitive edge in the job market. To request a special program, students, faculty, clubs and organizations need only contact OCPP at ext. 254. OCPP activities and programs are regularly announced in the Campus Bulletin.

Europe or any unfavorable bordering countries? The answer remains to be seen, but Hitler did.

At the present level of indifference over the outrages committed to Afghanistan by the Soviet Union, it remains to be seen what future conquests the Soviets will attempt. Afghanistan should not be viewed as an isolated case, but as a warning against the abilities of the Soviet conventional forces. The Soviets are in Afghanistan for as long as it takes to completely control it, be it this year, or 10 years and must not be viewed as a Soviet Vietnam. Such references draw false conclusions and discount the seriousness of the Soviet invasion into a region that is about as stable as bullets in a fire.

Take It From Me, Kid...

By WES SMITH
Chicago Tribune

The strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" will soon fade away. The rental company will quickly repossess your cap and gown. And your graduation gift money will hardly cover the security deposit on a studio apartment beside the elevated tracks.

There ain't no spring break in the Real World friends. Christmas vacation starts the night of Dec. 24 and ends shortly after the wrapping paper comes off. You may get a week of relief each year from the Real World, if you are lucky.

It is a painful course that you are about to take; the lessons come unannounced. Your next final is Final.

To aid you upon your entry into the Real World, a few of those who have gone before you have compiled some sage advice. Heed the following words well. Paste them to your refrigerator, or your forehead. Write them on your wrists. They will do you much more good than all those French adverbs.

And take some consolation in this: The Spanish-American War hardly ever comes up in Real World conversations.

In the real world:

— Insurance premiums do not work like stock premiums. You pay them. They don't pay you.

— They aren't kidding when they say, "Wash whites separately."

— The rate of interest is what kills you, not the down payment.

— Never answer an advertisement seeking a "liberal roommate." You probably are not that liberal.

— Having a drink with the boys every night after work is a bad idea. Notice that the boss doesn't do it. That's why (s) he's the boss and they are the boys.

— Nobody cares anymore that you drank a six-pack last night without throwing up.

— Your new neighbors are not likely to share your enthusiasm for the Violent Femmes at full volume at 1 a.m.

— Cars need not only gasoline, but oil, antifreeze, brake and transmission fluid and about one-third of your annual wage.

—Instead of buying a new stereo for your city car, skip a step. Buy a window sticker that says, "It's already stolen."

—Parallel parking is a survival sport.

— Never play racquetball with an old guy who has played handball for 40 years. He will destroy your youth.

—Buy an alarm clock that works.

— Grocery coupons are not socially unacceptable.

— Harvey wallbangers might be a poor selection for a business lunch.

— Never date a woman whose father calls her "Princess." Chances are, she believes it.

— Never date a man who still goes shopping with his mother.

— "Heat included" does not mean "Heat guaranteed."

Life insurance is for married men; otherwise, your chief beneficiary is the life insurance company.

— Toothpaste will cover up holes in plaster, but only small holes.

— Buy good stuff. It lasts longer.

— If you don't like your job, quit. Otherwise, shut up.

— Soon people your own age will be having children and buying garbage disposals. Learn to fake an interest in both.

— If you get invited to the wedding, send a gift. Otherwise, don't expect a crowd when your turn comes.

— There is no such thing as a self-cleaning oven.

— Be nice to the little people. You are still one of them.

— Your feet will continue to grow. Be willing to go up a shoe size.

— Shower curtains are replaceable.

— You are going to need silverware.

— Never assume that the telephone company is working in your best interest.

— Never date someone you work with. Especially the boss.

To The Editor

To the Editor:

Like most other students on this campus, one day I want to get married and have children. But now, I wonder. I went home for Fall Break, and, of course, the first thing that I do is turn on the news. You know, to catch up on Richmond. I get so far behind in the booming metropolis of Farmville. Well, Richmond is up to its 65th homicide. I think we are third somewhere behind New York and Chicago. I wasn't too stunned at the murder of this nineteen-year-old. Yes, I have taken an apathetic attitude toward the slayings. I guess I will until it is somebody I know.

The next news item was about a Petersburg pastor who had been brought up on sex charges. This is what shocked me. Clyde Johnson, 51, is a city councilman and the pastor of two Baptist churches. He had been indicted on 39 felony moral charges. Twenty-nine were for aggravated sexual battery by use of force, threat, or intimidation, four counts of statuatory rape, four counts of having sexual intercourse with a fourteen-year-old girl, one count of forcible rape, and one count of attempted rape.

This man is definitely sick. Who can you trust your children with if you can't trust them with the pastor of your own church. This person is suppose to represent God, goodness and morality. Hopefully, when I have children, there will be more background research into individuals such as teachers, clergymen, policemen, etc. I don't know, last week a Richmond pastor was accused of sodomizing an eleven-year-old girl.

Field Hockey

By Kirk Barnes

After dropping a tough 2-1 decision to visiting La Salle Saturday morning, Longwood's field hockey team will be on the road for its final two regular season games this week. The Lady Lancers will be facing VCU Monday at 3:30 and Mary Washington Wednesday at 3:00.

Saturday's loss, which came in overtime, dropped the Longwood record to 9-6. The defeat was a disappointing one for the team and the coach, denying coach Sue Finnie a chance to pick up her 100th career win at home.

Liz Annet and Carla Voorhees were named the offensive players of the game while Margie Kernen captured the defensive honors.

"The ball took a bad bounce on the winning goal," explained Finnie.

The game was close in all phases. La Salle out-shot Longwood 26-22 and had 12 saves to LC's 10. "We played well. It was one of our better games. We knew it would be close," the Longwood mentor stated.

The game had rivalry potential. La Salle's coach, Donna Partin, used to be an assistant to coach Finnie at Widener University. Finnie was happy with the team's effort.

Luther Inducted

Longwood basketball coach Cal Luther was one of five people inducted into the Murray State University Athletic Hall of Fame Thursday night at the college's Hall of Fame Banquet.

Luther, who has compiled a 70-60 mark at Longwood in five seasons, was the coach who built the foundation upon which Murray State's modern'day basketball tradition rests. He is the only coach to have led the basketball Racers to the NCAA Tournament, and three of his teams were ranked in the top twenty.

In his 16 seasons as MSU head basketball coach, Luther piled up 241 wins, the second highest total in Murray history. He guided his teams to one outright Ohio Valley Conference title and shared two others. His squads also finished as the league runner-up or champion seven of 10 seasons, 1964 to 1974.

He receivced OVC Coach of the year honors in 1964, 1969 and 1971, which were the seasons Murray advanced to the NCAA playoffs. During his coaching tenure, 17 of his players earned All-Ohio-Valley Conference honors a total of 28 times. Three players received OVC Player of the year honors four times.

Luther's popularity with Murray State fans was enhanced by a 27-game winning streak in Racer Arena, from November 27, 1968 to February 21, 1970. That success string, which still stands, helped establish Racer Arena as one of the toughest home courts in the OVC. Luther's 808 home-court winning percentage is second only to the undefeated one-year record of current Racer head coach Steve Newton.

Thanks to his shrewd eye for talent and his ability to teach the game of basketball, three of Luther's recruits advanced to a career in professional basketball. Among them was Dick Cunningham, who also is a member of the 1986 Hall of Fame induction class.

Accepting the additional responsibilities of MSU athletic director in 1967, Luther helped keep the Racers strong in the OVC, winning the coveted All-Sports Trophy in 1973 and finishing in the top three in All-Sports competition in eight of Luther's 11 years as athletic director. During that span, MSU claimed nine conference championships in various sports.

Luther became Longwood coach in 1981 and has led the Lancers to four winning seasons in five years. His teams have finished second in the Mason-Dixon Conference regular season race two of the past three years.

Volleyball

By Rick Rivera

Longwood's lady volleyball team split a pair of matches Friday with two very tough Bridgewater squads which placed second and third in the Cindy Smith Tournament October 11. Longwood improved its record to 11-17.

The next match will be Thursday night when the Lady Lancers host Mary Washington and Liberty. The first match will begin at 6:00.

Longwood dropped three straight in a best three out of five by a 15-10, 15-4, 15-8 count to Bridgewater I. Although Longwood served at an 87 percent clip it lacked consistency in other aspects of the game.

One spiker who proved to be very consistent was Kris Meyer. On the night, she accumulated eight stuff blocks and six stuff assist blocks. Meyer hit at a 70 percent kill-to-hit ratio and as coach Linda Elliott stated "held the offense together." Joanna Marquez chipped in with a pair of ace serves.

In the second match Longwood was pitted against a second Bridgewater squad which placed third in the Cindy Smith Tourney. Bridgewater took Longwood the distance but fell 15-9, 11-15, 15-13.

Elliott said it felt good to win because Longwood lost to the same team in the tournament. The Lady Lancers showed some character in a come-from-behind match clinching third game.

Those showing off their talents were Linda Swe who replaced the injured Staci Dillon and Stephanie Coukos. Swe did a fantastic job setting. Over the course of the year Elliott feels she has improved tremendously. Coukos again hit at a consistent pace as she has done all year long.

Golf

Longwood finished with a respectable showing in the 11th Lady Tar Heel Invitational Tournament Sunday in Chapel Hill, NC, shooting a 322-322-318-962 for 13th place out of 16 teams. In the process, the Lady Lancers finished the fall season with their lowest team stroke average in history — a 318.8.

At UNC's Finley Golf Course Friday through Sunday, Longwood played in a field which featured the best Division I women's golf teams on the east coast. Miami (FL) shot a 301-300-298-899 to edge rival Florida (303-305-294-302) for the title.

Also competing were: Furman 303-303-301-907, Georgia 303-308-307-918, Texas 310-308-303-921, Duke 317-304-306-927, South Carolina 300-322-305-927. Kentucky 311-307-315-933, Minnesota 314-314-307-935, North Carolina 319-309-317-945, Auburn 328-322-303-953, Wake Forest 308-332-314-954, Longwood 322-322-318-962, Penn State 324-315-327-966, William & Mary 332-334-332-998 and James Madison 339-354-329-1022.

Playing for Longwood were: Tina Barrett 80-75-81-236, Marcia Melone 78-82-77-237, Gretchen Pugh 79-83-82-244, Ashley Warren 85-84-78-247 and Leigh Russell 86-82-87-255.

In winding up its most successful fall ever, Longwood grabbed two tournament titles and a third place finish. Coach Barbara Smith's squad had a record 33-14 based on four tournament appearances.

The Lady Lancers' highest team round of the fall was a 326 in the Duke Invitational.

Top individual scores were turned in by Barrett and Melone. Barrett, a two-time All-American, had a stroke average of 77.9 for the fall. Her 77-75-77-229 was the lowest 54-hole score for Longwood. Melone was close behind with a 78.8 stroke average. All her 54-hole scores were in the 230's in a strong display of consistency.

Pugh (82.4), Warren (82.5) and Russell (82.8) were also consistent scores for the most part. Junior Tammy Lohren averaged 81.5 for six rounds, but was knocked out of action by an injury.

Soccer

After splitting games with VMI and District of Columbia last Wednesday and Saturday, Longwood's soccer team will take a 9-4-1 record into a pair of road contests on tap in this week's action.

The Lancers visit rival Hampden-Sydney for a 3:00 game Wednesday afternoon and travel to Newport News for a 2:00 showdown with nationally ranked Christopher-Newport Saturday. Both the Lancers and Captains are hopeful of winning the VISA Eastern Division crown and reaching the state playoffs.

Longwood handled VMI with ease Wednesday, winning by a 6-1 count, but was upset by District of Columbia 3-2 Saturday afternoon in the rain. The Lancers had 24 shots to eight for UDC, but failed to convert enough opportunities. Late in the game Longwood failed to hit a penalty kick, which might have brought on overtime.

"We played well," said Lancer coach Rich Posipanko. "We knocked it all around the field. We just didn't finish. We missed too many shots."

Senior Mark Kremen had a goal and an assist and Tim Ford also scored in Saturday's defeat. Ford's goal put LC up 2-1 in the second half before UDC scored twice to take the win.

Posipanko, whose team has been ranked 13th in Division II the last two weeks, said the loss to UDC would knock the Lancers out of the rankings.

In Wednesday's win over VMI Kremen had a goal and an assist, Scott Gittman two goals and soph Kenny Lim two goals.

Kremen has 3 goals and 9 assists for the season. One more assist will tie the record for assists in a season (10) which was set by Gus Leal in 1982 and tied by John Kennen in 1985. Gittman has totaled 7 goals and 3 assists.

Gymnastics

Longwood's gymnastics team, prepping for a regular season which begins in early December, will put on an exhibition Wednesday night in Lancer Hall, starting at 8 p.m. The performance is open to the public at no charge.

Coach Ruth Budd will have perhaps her most experienced team ever in 1986-87 with nine veteran performers on hand. Led by co-captains Tammy Zeller, a junior, and Debbe Malin, a senior, the Lancers are looking for an outstanding season.

Longwood is scheduled to have a home intersquad meet November 19 and opens the season December 6 at Radford with William & Mary.

Player of the Week

Freshman Kris Meyer had eight stuff blocks and six stuff assist blocks in a pair of Longwood volleyball matches Friday, and for her performance, Meyer has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period October 19-26. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

"Kris has been our most consistent performer all season and Friday night was no exception," said coach Linda Elliott. "She held our offense together."

Meyer was credited with a 70 per cent (9-14) kill to hit ratio as the Lady Lancers fell to Bridgewater I and defeated Bridgewater II in a pair of matches in Lancer Hall. It was just two weks ago that Meyer was named to the All-Cindy Smith Invitational Tournament team.

An art major who aspires to be a photo journalist, Meyer was an All-League and team MVP performer at Downers Grove High School. She was also a co-captain in basketball.

A member of the National Honor Society in high school, Meyer received an academic scholarship to attend Longwood.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Meyer who resides in Roanoke, Virginia.

Longwood gearing up for 150th Anniversary

Longwood College will celebrate its 150th anniversary in 1989 with a series of events that are currently being planned by eight committees made up of Longwood faculty, students, and staff members.

President Janet D. Greenwood announced that H. Donald Winkler, associate vice president and executive director of public affairs, will chair the Sesquicentennial steering committee.

Other members of the steering committee are: Dr. Eleanor Bobbitt, professor of health and physical education; N. Burton Brooks, Jr., instructor in business; Evelyn Coleman, confidential secretary to the president and the Board of Visitors; Richard Hurley, vice president for business affairs; Dr. Chuck McCarter, head of the department of visual and performing arts; Dr. John S. Peale, professor of philosophy; Anna Prow, a junior who is chair of the Longwood Series of the Performing Arts; Nancy Shelton, director of alumni relations; Virginia Silveira, president of the sophomore class; Ricky Stanfield, a sophomore who is in the Arts and Sciences Honors Program; Paul Striffolino, Student Union director; and Dr. Vera Williams, head of the department of education, special education and social work.

The steering committee and all other committees welcome suggestions for Sesquicentennial activities, Winkler said. He added: "Give free rein to your imagination, and make your suggestions as detailed and persuasive as possible."

The Sesquicentennial observance has several purposes:

— To symbolize the closing of Longwood's first century and a half, and the launching of the second.

— To enhance the presence of Longwood in Virginia and the region;

— To provide a thoughtful balance of events of quality; and — To provide something of lasting value, so that Longwood will be a better institution that it was before the celebration.

Winkler said that "the Sesquicentennial should be a year that students, faculty, and staff will enjoy, appreciate, benefit from, and remember fondly for the rest of their lives."

The observance will be of "special significance" to current sophomores, Winkler said, because they are the "Class of 1989—the Sesquicentennial class." A number of sophomores have been appointed to various subcommittees. These committees also include students from the freshman, junior, and senior classes.

All class presidents and the Student Government president are on the "Campus Beautification Student Project Committee." This committee is expected to develop a project that "will enhance the aesthetics of one area of the campus, perhaps turn it into a spot of beauty that anyone would enjoy strolling through," Winkler said. Each graduating class through 1990 will be asked to consider contributing its class gift to the project. Members of that committee are Mr. Hurley, chair; Joe Bowman, postal assistant; Dr. David Breil, professor of biology; John Colangelo, SGA president; Richard Couture, assistant professor of history; Dr. Elisabeth Flynn, professor of art; Bubba Moonie, senior class president; Ellon Padgett, freshman class president; Tim Seymour, junior class president; Ms. Silveira; Dr. Sue Saunders, dean of students; Dr. Sue Shaw, associate professor of business; and Dr. Nancy Vick, associate professor of education.

Each sesquicentennial committee includes or will include a faculty member from each school, a Student Affairs staff member, a member of the classified staff, several students, and others.

In addition to the above committees, there are committees on: "Arts Weekend," "Symposium," "Historical Reflections," "External Events," "Opening Birthday Party," and "Specialty Promotions." Their members are:

Arts Weekend—Dr. MrCarter, chair; Betty Bryant, public information officer; Randy Edmonson, director of the art program; Shirley Everett, Lankford building manager; Susan Gates, a freshman; J. Paul Hurt, a sophomore; Dr. Bruce Montgomery, director of the music program; Dr. Nelson Neal, associate professor of physical education, health and recreation; Anna Prow; Mr. Striffolino; Margaret Terzin, instructor in business and economics; Debbie Turco, a sophomore; and Dr. Douglas Young, director of the speech and theatre program.

TKE's Gurney It Up

Tau Kappa Epsilon members push gurney, with fellow member Rob Clater on it, in Oktoberfest Parade.

Members of Tau Kappa Epsilon, a fraternity colony at Longwood College, pushed a hospital gurney bed 20 miles last Saturday to ráise money for the United Way of Prince Edward County.

"Everything went fine, everything went as scheduled," said colony president John Pastino. "There were no major problems."

The 37 members of TKE took turns pushing the gurney from Cumberland County High School to the Longwood campus. They left Longwood at 3 a.m. and proceeded from the high school at about 3:45, Pastino said.

The trip, most of which was along Route 45, went faster than expected, "There wasn't much traffic until 9 or 9:30, when we got close to town," said Pastino. A van carrying TKE members followed closely behind the walkers.

After arriving back in Farmville, the students went to Longwood House, the residence of Longwood President Janet Greenwood, and then returned to the campus at about 10 a.m. TKE members marched in the Oktoberfest Parade, which began at 12:15, pushing fraternity brother Rob Clater in the gurney.

"We found out that it was easier to push with someone on it, because the wheels would vibrate otherwise," said Pastino.

Pastino estimates that the project raised about $1,500 for the United Way. Persons pledged so much per mile or just made a contribution.

A fraternity colony is a group of male students on its way to becoming a full-fledged fraternity. TKE should gain official status by next spring.

MY PAGE Guest Editorial

"Yeah, Longwood's got the second highest drinking rate in the state," said the sophomore, half proudly.

"Well that's a dubious honor of sorts, don't you think?" said I.

"What I wanna know is, who's number 1?" asked the new freshman.

Indeed, there seems to be much ado about drugs around the country nowadays and with reason enough, but the reputation for drug use at Longwood College appears to be little match against our reputation as a beer drinking capital of the state.

Now, however, with the adoption of the state's grandfather clause banning alcohol sales to persons born after July 2, 1966, the college might have to look elsewhere for claims of fame. But to what extent will the victims of the state's new drinking ban accept their fate philosophically?

One of the nation's most outspoken advocates of the new drinking ban, Joan Carboy, director of the Washington, D. C. chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving says the law will encourage young people to alter their attitude toward drinking. "I think that in 10 years you'll see a whole different picture. Young people will find they can live without getting drunk." But will the new law make drinking worse, as some believe? Will there be an increase in alcohol-related accidents and deaths? Is it true, as rumored, that many, if not most, students have just simply carried on drinking ("life-as-usual") and it doesn't much matter that the laws have changed?

And what about fraternity and sorority parties? As one 19-year-old put it: "We have to be a little more careful; we call it 'being discreet.' We essentially do as we want. It's not so much that everyone knows we are anyway, it's that everyone expects us to. That's why all the partying will just continue as usual."

Well, maybe — and maybe not. Local, regional, and state authorities all seem to indicate that personal civil liability can be connected to "social-host" responsibilities. "If people are being served alcohol at a fraternity party and then go out and get in an accident or cause some sort of damage, then the fraternity itself would be wise to prepare for a lawsuit. Particularly should there be any minors involved . . ." said a D. C. educator who is also an attorney. And colleges must also worry about what is referred to as the "deep-pockets" scenario. This is when the plaintiff tries to show negligence by any and every organization connected to the defendant(s) thus making them liable also, hoping to get money out of their "deep-pockets" too. A college, if sacked by just 2 or 3 successful lawsuits, can prepare to close its doors. Quite simply, colleges can ill afford to be vulnerable.

One Longwood administrator feels that the new drinking ban, "is just one more example of how society teaches young people that they can break the law and get away with it. That is what this will teach. Students will go off campus to drink, as they already are, they will ride around in cars, fake I.D.'s will become a cottage industry."

Another administrator feels the dilemma goes farther than that, "the main problem connected to drinking in our society is not one of enforcement but, rather, existential. It is a problem of emptiness, pain, boredom, loneliness, compulsion, addictions, and disconnection. In our culture it is easier to have sex with someone than to get to know them. In such a convoluted society, is it really such a puzzlement why young people would turn to a little liquid courage to get through their everyday life?"

Historically, alcohol has not always been misused through time. Beer was the nectar of the greek god Zeus. But, if sales can be used as a modern day indicator, alcohol consumption has become an institution in America. Ma, apple pie, and a Micelob. In matters of individuality and choice there aren't always a lot of right answers. But, as if it's any help, some answers are more right than others. It's enough to make you STOP and THINK: Do you want a drink.

Faculty Art Exhibit

Works by 10 members of Longwood College's art faculty are on exhibit in the college's Bedford Gallery through November 21.

Drawings, photographs, paintings, mixed media works, stained glass "windows," ceramics, and a basket are included in the show.

The wide diversity in themes, media, and sophisticated techniques makes the exhibit a showcase of the possibilities in contemporary art.

Mark Baldridge is showing "Angel Wings," two stained glass windows hung side by side. Baldridge, who is best known for his jewelry creations, has been working with stained glass for several years. This is the first time he has shown stained glass works locally.

Barbara Bishop is showing eight photographs, including a series of five studies of Briery Church in Prince Edward County. The artist used Polaroid film and manipulated the emulsion to enhance images and textures. She also is exhibiting a handmade paper, wood and fiber work entitled "Dream Fish."

Christy Crews Dunn's two drawings have American Indian themes. She used pen and ink with a frottage technique.

Carol Edmonson is showing one of her large willow baskets and a handmade paper work.

Randy Edmonson's contributions to the exhibit are three ceramic "pots" and an acrylic painting.

Tray Eppes' two works — a wall hanging and a pot — are of vapor-glazed clay. The striking circular wall piece is aptly titled "Window to Another World."

Elisabeth Flynn is showing eight color photographs, including scenes of fiords, mountains, and a village in Norway.

Chuck McCarter's two paintings are mixed media on canvas and paper. He uses a technique of color over color, sometimes five or six layers of colors, that produces a gem-like quality.

Amie Oliver is showing 10 large graphite and mixed media drawings.

Homer Springer's 11 works include drawings in pencil with gold and silver leaf, mixed media collages, and "icon" assemblages that combine leather, wood, fur, tintype, and handmade paper.

The Art Faculty Exhibit is open to the public during the following Bedford Gallery hours: 9 a.m. to noon and 2 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday; 7 to 10 p.m., Monday through Thursday; and 2 to 6 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Strategic Planning Work Groups

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

Longwood's future is being planned right now — today — as we live and breathe on its very campus. "Where? By whom?" you ask. By a series of Strategic Planning and Issues Management Work Groups, I answer.

The Board of Visitors has drafted six broad goals to work at while trying to set the directions of Longwood's future. These include (1) student life quality enhancement, (2) development of centers of excellence (for example, the three schools that were singled out last year: education, business and arts), (3) quality of living and learning environments, (4) enrollment management and gradual increases in enrollment, (5) effective and efficient resource management, and (6) increasing support for the college from alumni, the community, etc.

Strategies by which these goals can be achieved are in the process of being developed. Some of the guidelines to be followed in doing so are identification of trends and issues that might effect the college, such as birth rate and fund availability, trying to predict them and deal with them and their consequences, and ranking them in importance to LC.

The next step in the process of securing a confident future for the college is to make predictions about the future, to be compared and discussed.

Participation of the college body in this project is essential for a full-rounded view of certain aspects of the school. Some student organizations will be involved just by the nature of their responsibilities on campus, such as our Student Government, but any and all students and faculty are urged to become involved. There are to be eight study groups to review separate areas of importance. These will include groups working on teaching, curriculum and student outcome qualities, quality of student-faculty relations and environments, centers of excellence, admissions-related issues, such as the marketing of the school and its image, why do or don't students stay here and how can students and faculty become involved in this, college involvement in the community and vise-versa, enhancement of private and public support, and resource development.

These issue study groups are still in the process of being put together, so now is the perfect time to get involved in them. Anyone interested in being in one of these groups please contact Mr. John King on 3rd floor East Ruffner, or at 392-9397.

WLCX

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

This past weekend marked a milestone for the Longwood College radio association. As of Nov 1, 1986, the campus radio station was no longer to go by the call letters of WVTA, but would henceforth be known as WLCX.

Why the change? When the station was originally organized way back when, it was just assigned its call letters, which were essentially picked out of a hat. Nobody took the notion into their head to come up with some clever four-letter arrangement (Beginning with a 'W', of course) at the time, so we ended up with Double-You Yoo Tee Aye: A Bit Of A Tongue-Twister for nervous new DJ's (and some old pros, too).

The idea of changing the call letters was brought up at a radio station general meeting, and checked into by general manager Sonny Merchant. The Disc Jockeys thought it'd be something fun to do, and it wouldn't cost them a dime. Of all the possible combinations, after elimination by the Federal Communications commision of ones already in use elsewhere, WLCX won out.

The "new" station hopes to get bigger and better in the semesters to come, so give it a listen!

Sittin' Pretty

By MICHELLE HAMMER

One of Longwood College's most recent graduates, Kym Nance, is already making a name for herself in and around Farmville. She is the manager of the newly opened 'Forever Tan' Tanning Salon in the Farmville Shopping Center.

Originally from Virginia Beach, Kym came to Longwood with hopes of following in her mother's footsteps in marketing. Soon after her summer graduation, however, Kym married and settled in Farmville where she found the job market in a rural area much different from that of the Beach. "It was very hard finding a job in Farmville," Kym said. "(Someone) has to die around here before a job opening comes." She jokingly suggested checking the daily obituaries instead of the help wanted ads. She was offered the managerial position at 'Forever Tan' by a family friend and anxiously accepted. Along with the daily tasks of making appointments and running the three tanning beds, Kym is responsible for the advertising which is where her background in marketing is useful.

Kym had this advice for all students, "You definitely have to experience college life, but you have to keep your goals in perspective." As for the future, Kym would like to open a high-fashion boutique in Farmville. For now though, that will have to wait - at least for nine months!

On The Road

The Dining Hall Committee will visit UVA for a comparative study of dining hall services. All students are welcome to go. We will meet on Wednesday, November 5 at 12:30 in the balcony of the Blackwell dining hall to discuss plans for the visit. If you have grips about the dining hall service then now is the time to get involved. This year the dining hall committee will try to visit at least two or three other schools to compare services and make recommendations for Longwood's dining service.

Dining Hall Committee
Chairperson, Cynthia Peery

Spanky Speaks

Spanky McFarland, star of the Little Rascal—Our Gang comedies, will speak at Longwood College on Tuesday, Nov. 4, at 8 p.m. in the Gold Room of Lankford Building.

McFarland takes his audiences on a trip down memory lane with film clips from The Little Rascals and Our Gang, reminiscences on his career, an update on the lives of other Gang members, and a question-and-answer session.

Now a grandfather, McFarland retired from a successful, 30-year business career in 1985. He is now in demand for club and festival programs, grand openings, parades, and on college and university campuses around the country.

He makes his home in Texas where he is involved in numerous charitable functions and hosts his own celebrity-charitable golf tournament in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

McFarland's visit to Longwood is sponsored by the Student Union and is open to the public at no charge.

Senegally Speaking

A French teacher will discuss her recent travels to Senegal during the next African studies class at Longwood College on Tuesday, Nov. 4.

Elaine Danford, a high school French teacher from Lexington, will present a program titled, "Senegal, A Land of Contrasts." She will show slides of her trip to Senegal as a Rockefeller Foundation fellow last summer. Senegal is a former French colony in western Africa.

The class, which meets at 5:30 p.m. each Tuesday in Bedford Auditorium, is open to anyone in the community.

Ms. Danford will discuss the traditional ways of life and values as found in the tales of Birago Diop. Diop collected tales told by griots from the oral tradition and wrote them in French in the 1960s. He was part of the "Negritude" movement of the 1930s and '40s in France.

Ms. Danford will meet with French classes at Longwood on Nov. 5. For more information about the class, which is part of the International Studies Program, call Dr. Jill Kelly at 392-9356.

Did You Know?

Did you know that less than 300 students vote in SGA elections? Did you know that SGA controls student activity fees which is in charge of about $30,000 of your money? If the students don't take charge of issuing this money the Administration will. Which means with no input form the students at all.

On November 20 SGA elections will be held in the New Smoker. All major and minor offices are up for election. There are also two positons open on the Honor Board and ten on the Judical Board. In the next issue of the Rotunda a blank petition will be published for anyone who wants to run for an office. Simply fill out the petition, sign it and turn it into the information office. It must be typed and turned in before Nov. 15.

Out Of Africa

The Ezibu Muntu African Dance Company, of Richmond, will present a lecture-demonstration at Longwood College on Tuesday, Nov. 11, as part of the International Studies Program.

The lecture-demonstration, at 5:30 p.m. in the Lancer Hall dance studio, is open to anyone in the community.

The dance company — whose name translates loosely to "the universality of all people" — presents traditional African dances, rhythms and rituals. Its members have been described as "lively performers and enthusiastic instructors."

Ezibu Muntu, Virginia's only professional African dance ensemble, has performed at the Festival of the Arts in Dogwood Dell, at the Virginia State Fair, and at The Mosque in Richmond. The company also gives workshops and master-classes.

"What we do is traditional dance, rhythms and rituals and pieces based on African folklore to communicate a wide range of messages," said the company's artistic director, Faye Walker. "Our mission is to 'edutain,' that is, to explore a cultural art and have lots of fun doing it. We celebrate in the spirit of community..."

Sports Calendars

Longwood College cheerleaders, drill team members and sports information student assistants will be distributing winter sports schedule calendars, cards and basketball ticket information to all residence hall rooms Tuesday night, November 4 between 7:30 and 8:15.

Additional calendars or cards can be picked up at the sports information office, room 266, East Ruffner.

VCU Classes

Trained American nannies are in demand locally and nationally. The Certified Nanny Program offered at Tidewater Community College, Frederick Campus, is a ten-week comprehensive program that prepares students to care for children in a family setting. The next class will begin Janauary 5 and end on March 13. Applications are being accepted now; completed application packets must be submitted by November 28. For more information, call 804-484-2121, ext. 340.

The Certified Nanny Program was introduced at the Frederick Campus in March 1986. In the eight months since, nearly 200 calls have been received from persons interested in hiring a nanny.

Tuition for Virginia residents is $510.00. Students successfully completing the program earn 30 college credits and receive a Career Studies Award. Graduates of this program are considered child care professionals. TCC's program meets the standards of the American Council of Nanny Schools.

Nanny students are trained in all areas of child care. They are taught to be alert to developmental stages and to provide opportunities to meet the child's physical, intellectual, and emotional needs. Nannies are trained to communicate effectively with both the parents and the child and to be able to make decisions relative to the child's care in the absence of a parent.

American nannies have many employment options including live-in, live-out, and part-time arrangements. Some positions include the opportunity to travel with the family both in this country and abroad.

REC 375

RECREATION 375 "Leadership Development Through Wilderness Pursuits" There will be a unique slide presentation in Bedford Auditorium, Thursday, November 6 at 6:30 p.m. for anyone interested in learning about wilderness travel, technical rope skills, and becoming a leader in the out-of-doors.

It's The Law

The Library Committee would like you to know that 12 months in jail and $1000 fine, either or both is the punishment for a Class 1 misdemeanor. This is what would happen if you are convicted of writing on, tearing, mutilating or in any way defacing library books, such as larcency if you conceal books so you don't have to check them out; it doesn't matter that you intend to bring the books back.

Students may check out a book for 30 days and renew it for two more 30 day periods before it must be returned. This period, 30 to 90 days, should be more than enough time to complete research, a report, or a reading assignment. PLEASE, be considerate of others who need to read the same book or periodical, keep it in good condition and return it on time or earlier. THANK YOU to all of the Longwood students who are considerate of library property.

Campus Escorts

On campus escorts are provided after dark when available. Campus Police also are available upon request to speak about self defense, crime prevention, rape prevention, safety, security of vehicles, dorm rooms etc. An engraver is available to engrave ID's on personal property for identification. Approximately 65 percent of larson committed at Longwood is a direct result of having doors unlocked, so lock your doors. Students may report any suspicious activity to campus police confidentially. Campus police numbers are 392-9321 or 392-9358. The standard Emergency, Fire & Rescue number is 911.

Miss Longwood

The deadline for entering the preliminaries of the Miss Longwood Pageant is Friday, Nov. 14. Applications forms are available in the Public Affairs Office, second floor of East Ruffner Building.

The Miss Longwood Pageant is an official Miss America Pageant. Preliminaries (not open to the public) will be held on Sunday night, Nov. 30, and Monday night, Dec. 1. Contestants may choose either night. In the preliminaries, contestants will compete in private interview, talent, and swimsuit. The top 10 finalists will perform in the Pageant on March 21.

The winner of the Miss Longwood Pageant is expected to receive a $1,000 scholarship, a $500 cash award, and an all-expense paid week to the Miss Virginia Pageant in July. The first and second runnerup also will receive major scholarships. The Miss Longwood Pageant is regarded as one of the best-produced local Miss America pageants in Virginia.

To compete, contestants must be single and never married, between the ages of 17 and 26, a citizen of the United States, a registered student at Longwood, and in good academic standing.

Contestants must have a campus sponsor, which can be an organization, a residence hall floor, or an individual. The sponsor must pay the $15 entry fee by Nov. 19.

The Miss Longwood Pageant has become one of the College's major events, attracting an audience of more than 1,000 each of the past three years.

The current Miss Virginia, who is First Runnerup to Miss America, is among the special entertainers who will appear at the pageant on March 21.

SEX

"Sex and the Supreme Court" is the topic of the next Faculty Colloquium Lecture at Longwood College.

Dr. David S. Calihan, associate professor of government, will give the lecture on Wednesday, November 5, at 7:30 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

In his lecture, Calihan says he will explore "recent sex-related caselaw and its progeny," touching on such subjects as prostitution, sterilization, so-called sexual deviance, sexual discrimination, contraception, pregnancy, and pornography.

Calihan states that American society "has always had — and seemed to enjoy — an awkward ambivalence about sexual activities, about sexually affected associations, and even about thoughts and discussions of recreational and occupational sex."

He added that "our courts also have been frequent and not altogether consistent contributors to the Sex Wars."

A member of Longwood's faculty since 1981, Calihan taught previously at Manchester College and served as a municipal judge in North Manchester, IN. He is a graduate of Earlham College and holds a J.D. degree from the Ohio State University College of Law, a master's degree from Ohio State, and the Ph.D. in political science from Miami (Ohio) University.

Glamour Contest

Longwood College students are invited to participate in GLAMOUR Magazine's 1987 Top Ten College Women Competition. Young women from colleges and universities throughout the country will compete in GLAMOUR's search for ten outstanding students. A panel of GLAMOUR editors will select the winners on the basis of their solid records of acheivement in academic studies and-or extracurricular activities on campus or in the community.

The 1987 Top Ten College Women will be featured in GLAMOUR's August College Issue. During May, June or July, the ten winners will receive an all-expenses-paid trip to New York City and will participate in meetings with professionals in their area of interst.

Anyone who is interested in entering the search should contact Kiki Fallis, in the Office of Career Planning and Placement for more information. The deadline for submitting an application to GLAMOUR is December 19, 1986.

DAY

By VERONICA TYLER

Do you know how many people have been a "domestic assistant." Well, Domestic Assistance For You, Inc. (DAY), a non-profit organization located in Farmville, Virginia, can tell you that lots of your friends and associates have helped DAY move ahead during its three years of existence. Many of them are Longwood students and faculty, along with residents of Farmville. I hope that you will want to follow in their paths and help DAY move closer to a decade of non-violent communities.

Listed below are some of the wonderful people that have contributed to DAY's progress: Sarah Gager, Holly Hawthorne, Stan Hull, Dawn Johnson, Rebecca Auerbach, Deliese Gendron, Jill Joyner, Teresa Jones, Tanya Ninneman, Fay Johnson, Linda Compton, Carla Lightfoot, Marsha Glass, Mary Ford, Susan Tiskiewic, Tracy Callaway, Jody Wickouski, Pam Warren, Carla Tapp, Cathy Tapp, Alicia Saunders, Nancy Harbough, Michele Hummer, Jo Ann Morgan, Mark ? "artist," Karen Raymond, Frank Tennyson, Janet Terry, Frances Verniel, Melanie Lee, Charles Tony Jones, Vince Lee, Adrian Armstrong, Katie Pridgen, Linda Berry, Barrett "Mick" Baker, dr. J. Marvin Pippert, Peggy Epperson, and Sarah Young.

Seven Longwood students have been appointed to an advisory committee for the Visual and Performing Arts Department.

They are: Bruce Cooke of Alexandria, Glenn Gilmer of Lunenburg Courthouse, Betsy Main of Farmville, Melanie Moore of New Canton, Terry Peele of Norfolk, Debbie Stephens of New Kent, and Shawn Williams of Matoaca.

The Student Advisory Committee to the Visual and Performing Arts Department will address "student concerns on programs, curriculum and anything that affects students," said Dr. S.C. "Chuck" McCarter, head of the department. Its members are drawn from the four areas within the department: art, music, theater, and speech pathology.

Basketball

— Fans of Longwood men's and women's basketball will be in for a big surprise when they attend their first game in Lancer Hall this season. The College is embarking on its first marketing campaign for basketball, and several new wrinkles will be in place for the upcoming season.

New ticket and concessions policies, the addition of a wide variety of halftime promotions-activities, and a series of "special nights" for student and community groups will give basketball in Lancer Hall a new look.

The biggest change in the ticket policy is that Longwood students will now have to pick up tickets at a designated student entrance. LC students will still be admitted to all games at no charge, but they will have to pick up a free ticket to get in. The new policy will allow for improved record keeping of attendance and will give the students an opportunity to participate in halftime giveaways and contests.

Thanks to major sponsor Domino's Pizza, tickets are being printed for each Longwood men's and women's home basketball game. A reduced price coupon for a Domino's pizza will appear on each ticket and numbers on the tickets will be used for halftime contests and giveaways.

Adult tickets remain $2.50 per person and all non-Longwood students will be charged $1.00 for admittance.

The revised concessions policy will allow fans to bring food and drink purchased at the concession stand into Lancer Hall. Plans also call for hawkers to sell refreshments in the stands for the first time ever.

"Special Nights" are planned for the Women's Clubs of Farmville, High School Students, LC freshman halls, faculty and staff, local merchants, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Army ROTC, Hardee's, the Lancer Club, Senior Citizens, and Boys and Girls Dixie Youth Baasketball-Elementary and Junior High Students. All "special groups" will have designated seating, free admission and-or special contests and recognition.

Halftime activities will include performances by the Longwood cheerleaders, Lancer Line drill team, gymnastics team, Lancer Edition and various outside groups. Contests will include Perini's Pizza Shootout, dollar grab night, lucky ticket giveaways, fraternity and sorority tug-of-wars and banner night.

The new basketball season tips-off November 21-22 with men's basketball in the fourth Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament at Lancer Hall. Tournament sponsor Par-Bil's Food Store will be providing a prize for Freshman Hall Night and prizes for halftime giveaways both nights of the tournament.

The second night of the Par-Bil's Tourney will be Longwood Faculty-Staff Appreciation Night. All faculty and staff and their families will be admitted free of charge.

Longwood's women's basketball team will make its home debut Monday, November 24 with High School Night for the Hampton University contest. All area high school students will be admitted free of charge to the game. The Lancers cagers will host Guilford the following night (November 25) with High School Night in effect once again.

Perhaps the biggest night of the year will be January 21 when the Longwood men host Virginia State. Hardee's Fan Appreciation and Pack The Gym Night will be observed. A major effort will be made to fill every seat in Lancer Hall to help the Lancers gain their first win over the Trojans who have won six previous meetings.

The marketing and promotions effort is designed to increase attendance at Longwood home basketball games, according to Lancer sports information director Hoke Currie.

"We feel that our men's and women's teams play an exciting and entertaining brand of basketball," said Currie. "We wanted to do some things to give more community residents and Longwood students a reason to come to the games. Once they see what Longwood basketball has to offer, we believe they will want to come back.

"Many things have come together this year and many people have been working behind the scenes to make the upcoming season a success. I'd like to thank student assistants Rob Clater and Jamie Motley for their work in setting up the promotions schedule over the summer."

Longwood marketing professor Burt Brooks and student-interns Sherri Clemmons and Sherry Massey really got the ball rolling last year with a study about college faculty and student awareness of home athletic events.

"We learned from the study that many faculty and students were not that aware of home athletic events," said Currie. "We have tried to put into motion many of the recommendations made by Massey and Clemmons designed to increase attendance.

"We've tried to broaden the base of our fan support by involving groups from the community as well as the college. We're going to attempt to have something for everyone," he said.

Longwood men's and women's basketball teams have attractive home schedules for 1986-87. The Lancers have 15 home contests on tap, while the Lady Lancers have 12 home dates.

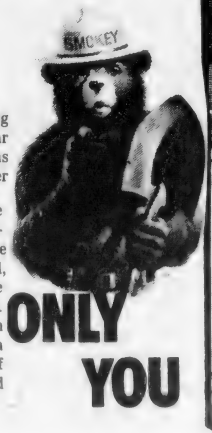
For more information about Longwood basketball, phone the sports information office (392-9391) or the athletic office (392-9323).

Leadership Development

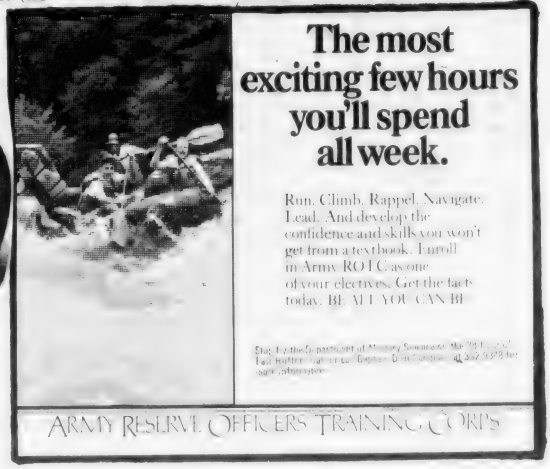
Recreation 375: Leadership Development

Beginning in the spring semester, the Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Department will introduce a new course, Recreation 375, "Leadership Development Through Wilderness Pursuits." The course will offer students a unique opportunity to enhance their leadership potential through a variety of outdoor experiences and challenges to personal growth. Although this course emphasizes a specialty area, it produces an element of adventure and excitement to leadership development by using the outdoors as the setting that will benefit and appeal to many types of professional fields and career options.

Along with classroom sessions, a large percentage of course time will be spent in the outdoors. Students will learn technical skills (i.e., rappelling, rockclimbing, orienteering, backpacking, initiatives and ropes course activities) in addition to actively participating in a leadership capacity. Through a variety of experiences, situations, and decision making processes, students begin to develop a leadership style that displays self confidence as well as a commitment to the role. The focus will be on group interaction skills as well as individual competencies as both areas are dependent on each other when successfully leading groups safely into the wild outdoors.



No previous experience is necessary upon entering the course. Students who are genuinely interested in this 2 credit credit leadership course are required to be in good academic standing and to participate in an interview process before registering for the course. Any student, faculty, or staff members who have questions regarding the course, may contact Ms. Rena Koesler, Lancer Hall-Rm. 131, or call 392-9266. A special slide presentation will be shown on Thursday, November 6, in Bedford Auditorium at 6:30 p.m. This 25 minute slide presentation will provide you with a visual explanation of what you can expect from this unique leadership course.



Player of the Week

Junior forward Traci Strickland notched her eighth assist of the year in a 1-1 field hockey tie with VCU last week to break the Longwood record for assists in a season (7). For her performance, Strickland has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period October 26 - November 2. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Strickland, who displays excellent stick-work game in and game out, has also scored five goals in helping Longwood ring up a 10-6-1 record. A three-year starter for Longwood, Traci has scored 16 goals and has 11 career assists.

A foreign language major, she was nominated for Academic All-America last spring. She competed in hockey, basketball, softball and track at Bayside High School in Virginia Beach. She was Most Valuable player in hockey, basketball and track as a senior. Traci is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Strickland of Virginia Beach.

Sports Wrap Up

Volleyball

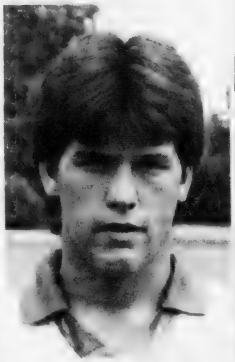
By RICK RIVERA

Longwood's lady volleyball team suffered two setbacks at home last Thursday night. The Lady Lancers (12-18) are entering their final week of action with matches at Chowan Monday (6:30), Randolph-Macon Woman's College and Christopher-Newport at home Wednesday (6:00) and at Liberty (6:00) Friday.

Thursday's matches proved to be disheartening for coach Linda Elliott and her team. Against Mary Washington the squad had a season high 17 kills, five of which were credited to Teresa Carr.

"The team just wanted to win too much," stated Elliott. Inconsistency on the court again spelled disaster for the Lady Lancers. Longwood played excellent in spots and terrible in others as mistakes were made one right after the other.

The story was the same in the match with Liberty, which won 15-3, 15-8. Overall, it was perhaps the best hitting night Longwood has enjoyed. Besides the 17 kills, Longwood also got some great shot-blocking from Kris Meyer with five blocks. Stephanie Coukos had another profitable evening hitting the ball extremely well.



Elliott praised both Mary Washington and Liberty for having strong and disciplined teams. Consistency on their part made the difference.

Soccer

Longwood's soccer team beat Hampden-Sydney Wednesday 1-0, but fell to nationally ranked Christoper-Newport 3-1 Saturday as the Lancer record moved to 10-5-1 for the season.

Coach Rich Posipanko's squad, ranked 15th last week in Division II, is just one win away from clinching second place in the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association Eastern Division and a berth in the VISA playoffs. The Lancers visit Averett Wednesday at 3:00 and host rival Randolph-Macon Saturday at 2:00. A win in either game will give Longwood a playoff berth.

Three out of four spots in the VISA Playoffs have already been determined. In the Western Division (4-0-1, 8-5-2) is in first place while Lynchburg (2-1-2, 13-3-3) has nailed down second place. Christopher-Newport (5-0-0, 17-3-0) is the Eastern Division champ and will play the Hornets in the first round of the playoffs.

JOHN ANDERSON

Longwood will play at Liberty Wednesday, November 12 if the Lancers can beat Macon (1-3-0, 7-8-1) or Averett (0-3-1, 8-8-1). Should the Lancers qualify for the playoffs, next Monday's regular season game with Liberty in Farmville will be canceled.

The Lancers are still in contention for a berth in the NCAA Division II Tournament. Bids are expected to be announced Sunday.

Longwood played hard in Saturday's loss at Christopher-Newport, according to Posipanko. He singled out goalkeeper Dave Goerke, back Jeff Robinson, forward John Barone and midfielder Craig Reid for their play in the loss.

The Captains led 1-0 at the half, but Longwood tied the game at 1-1 on a goal by Reid, asissted by Barone 66 minutes into the game. CNC got a goal when the linesman ruled a shot had broken the plane of the goal cage as Goerke knocked it out. The host team added another score with about a minute left.

"We had a chance to win the game," said Posipanko. "He played pretty well." Each team had nine shots on goal. Goerke came through with seven saves for the Lancers.

Barone scored in the second half on an assist from Mahfoud Kyoud Wednesday to lead Longwood over Hampton-Sydney.

Longwood out-shot the Tigers 17-7 and got six saves from Goerke who went all the way to earn the shutout.

Heading into the end of the regular season, Barone is the top scorer with 8 goals and 5 assists. Scott Gittman is second with seven goals and three assists. Mark Kremen has 9 assists and 3 goals while Mike Edge has 6 goals and 2 assists.

Field Hockey

Ending the regular season on a positive note, Longwood got a 5-0 victory over Mary Washington Wednesday in field hockey, finishing with a fine 10-6-1 record and getting coach Sue Finnie her 100th career hockey win. The Lady Lancers extended a string of winning seasons to five in a row.

Freshman Melissa Gwinn had 2 assists and a goal, and Diane Brown 2 goals to pace the victory. Laura Goetz and Traci Strickland scored once each.

"It meant more to get our 10th win of the season than for me to get number 100," said Finnie. "I wouldn't have felt the season was a success without getting win number 10. As for my 100th win, it just means I've got a long way to go to 200 wins.

"I feel real good about the season, particularly in light of the fact that we'll have everybody back for next year," said the coach. "This is a close-knit group. They are aware of the future potential we have."

Finnie also singled out link Diane Bingler for her "high pressure" game. The junior had 19 interceptions-tackles for the afternoon. Goalkeepers Kim Howells and Susette Stone combined on the shutout.

Goetz got the goal and Strickland the assist in last Monday's 1-1 overtime tie with Virginia Commonwealth. Margie Kemen had two goal line saves for the Lady Lancers.

Goetz ended up as Longwood's top scorer with 11 goals and three assists. Strickland set a new record with eight assists and also scored five goals as did Brown. Freshman Liz Johnson totaled six goals and an assist.

Rugby Wins State Title

By DAVE LARSON

Longwood traveled to Norfolk this past weekend to play in the Ed Lee Cup of Virginia State Championship.

Longwood played Fredericksburg Men's Club first, Saturday morning at 11:00. Fredericksburg was the team picked to win the tournament. Longwood ended up with a 18-7 upset over the men's club to advance to the semi-finals match Saturday afternoon at 3:15 Longwood faced the Newport News mens club. This was probably the roughest game Longwood has played all year as far as physical abuse. The Longwood club dominated the whole match, Longwood even played one man short in the second half and still crushed the men's club 23-0. After winning both games on Saturday this put Longwood in the Championship game on Sunday morning against the William and Mary Old boys.

The game started at 11:00 a.m. The first half was a very exciting one. Both teams were playing real tough Rugby. At the end of the half Longwood was on top 12-10. All year Longwood has been known as a second half team. They came out into the second half and did what they do best, run down their opponents and score points. The game ended with a Longwood victory and a state championship 25-14.

The Rugby Club would like to recognize Billy Sturgell on his excellent performances this weekend by scoring 6 tries.

This is the second tournament Longwood has won in the last two weeks. We would like to thank everyone who has supported us both directly and indirectly. After this weekend Longwood has put their record at 10-1 with only two games left in the season. They play Mary Washington College on Nov. 8 in Fredericksburg and then Va. Tech on Nov. 15 in Blacksburg. If anyone will be in these two places on these weekends come by and support the newly crowned Division III State Champions.

Way to go Longwood Rugby.

Go Team!

So How Do You Start A Club Here?

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

There are over 80 student-run clubs and organizations on our campus. Have you ever wondered how they got there or how YOU could start a club? It's simple! Before you do anything else, read the section on student organizations in the student handbook (pg. 64 of the 1986-87 calendar). Once you know what the purpose of the organization will be, go see Paul Striffolino in the Lankford Student Center Building and talk about it with him. He'll help guide you in the right direction as far as choosing potential advisors and writing up a constitution.

The purpose of your club will play a large part in who your advisor should be, and what needs to be included in your constitution.

Choices for advisor should include faculty and-or staff members who will know how to help the club in a number of ways, including giving intelligent advice, helping find new activities to undertake, and finding additional money sources and incomes.

Not all constitutions will be exactly alike, but they will have some basic similarities. All club constitutions name and give the purpose of the club, state qualifications for and responsibilities of members, give details of offices necessary in such an activity, and define the objectives of club meetings. Beyond this, constitutions vary from club to club; for example, the Foreign Language Club needs to define aspects of their club that may not pertain to other clubs, such as the Rugby Club or the College Democrats Club. You can obtain a copy of guidelines for drawing up a constitution from Paul Striffolino in Lankford or from Phyllis Mable in the Rotunda.

Once you have a constitution, submit it to the Student Government so they can approve it. The only real reasons they might have for not approving a club's existence on campus might be (1) we have a club that does the same thing already, or (2) there is no reason why anyone in the world would ever want to join it; a javelin-catching club, for example....

Registering your club with the Student Government gives you the rights to reserve space on campus for meetings and activities and apply for student activity fee funds, and your events can be advertised in Campus Bulletins and other campus publications.

Clubs on campus include academic clubs as well as special interest clubs. Some, like Tau Kappa Epsilon Franternity, are just being formed. Some, like the radio station and the yearbook, have been revived within the past few years. Some, like the Rugby Club, are clubs because they cannot be anything else. The Rugby Club is a club instead of a team because "the sport is dangerous—we're supported by the school, but not sponsored by the school", remarked coach-president Tim Seymour.

Although there are over 80 clubs on campus now, there could be 80 more—all we need is someone to start them!

Folk Ensemble

The James Madison University Folk Ensemble will give a performance of international folk dances on Tuesday, November 18, at 7 p.m. in the Lancer Hall Dance Studio at Longwood College.

The Folk Ensemble, directed by Janet Sponheim, will perform dances from Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary, England, and the United States. The group emphasizes authenticity of costumes, dances, and music from each geographical area.

A participation session will follow the performance. Members of the ensemble enjoy sharing dances, so those who wish to learn a few folk dances are encouraged to join in.

The performance is funded by the Longwood College Arts Council and sponsored by the dance program of the Department of Physical Education, Health, and Recreation.

The public is invited to attend the performance at no charge.

A.M.A.

After a weekend of exhausting meetings and roundtable discussion panels, the Longwood Chapter of the American Marketing Association returned recently from the 1986 Northeast Regional American Marketing Association Conference held at Penn State University.

The "Making it Happen in Marketing" Conference, which was held November 14-16, hosted over 300 students and advisors representing 40 different chapters of the A.M.A. The Longwood Chapter was represented by Chapter President, Barrett Baker, Executive Council Member, Robert Turner, and Chapter Advisor, Mr. Burt Brooks.

Several different programs were offered in five different sessions so that each individual would have a chance to attend the programs they wanted to see most. The programs included topics such as: Time Management, How to Kill an Idea, Understanding Your Leadership Style, Women and Other Minorities in the Workplace, Marketing Research, and Learning About the A.M.A., just to mention a few. There was also separate roundtable discussions for all Chapter Presidents, all Financial Officers, and all Chapter Advisors which was mostly an informational exchange between Chapters to see what other schools were doing and what could be done to improve individual Chapters.

Plans to attend the International Conference in New Orleans were also discussed. This event will take place April 9-11. Longwood hopes to send some representatives to this conference as well so that they can start to get more recognition for the School and for the Chapter.

A great deal of good ideas were generated from the Regional Conference. The Longwood Chapter hopes to bring these ideas home and implement them in a manner so that members are not just there for resume purposes, but to get actively involved and to learn some skills that they can take with them after graduation. If you would like to get involved with the A.M.A. in one way or another, please contact Burt Brooks in Hiner or Barrett Baker at 392-9909. It is never too late to get involved.

MY PAGE Guest Editorial

On Sunday I went to see "The Wall" as it seems to be called. You know the one, it is in Washington, D. C. and honors the men and women who died in the Vietnam War. Have you ever really seen it, not just on TV but up close? Did you see the people, family and vets?

Again, I found the stories I had heard to be true! It is a very moving experience. More than that I found it to be a frightening and horrible experience. I also watched the movie on television about Agent Orange and the position of our government that there is no relationship between illnesses affecting Vietnam veterans and Agent Orange.

War is a horrible waste and some have said they feel it to be necessary. War is a waste of the men and women who inevitably die. War is a waste of our valuable resources that could be better used to feed the hungry and develop cures for the illnesses plaguing our world. War is most frequently caused by men trying to prove they are right, more right, and-or stronger than other men. What's the point?

I want to be sure it is understood that I am not being critical of our veterans, they have been pawns in our own ignorance.

In recent elections less than 40 percent of the eligible voters cast ballots. Does this mean it was not an important election or does it mean that people are too caught up in themselves to bother with it? Don't tell me you couldn't go home...they do have absentee ballots even in Virginia! Don't tell me you didn't know it was Election Day...it was in all the papers, the news, the radio, and even on my door step.

You may think that little was happening in the world that needed your vote. Can this be true? Our U. S. Congress recently approved a new tax bill that is NOW affecting your financial aid, it is affecting investments and donations to Colleges and other not for profit groups, the laws of the 99th Congress have even reached in to the food you eat and the clothes you wear.

This same Congress "allowed" the President to spend money in South American in order to "bring freedom" to the people. This is being done with guns and bombs that are designed for killing...that is all! The Congress "supported" the President in his effort to build the biggest gun of them all (SDI) despite the advise of our best and brightest scientists that it cannot be done.

In the late 1950's and early 1960's it was fashionable to think that we were at peace and that the conflicts in such far away places as Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia did not really impact on our lives. I believe we are doing the same thing now in such places as Nigaragua, El Salvador, and the Honduras. We have troops, guns, money, and people in those countries and sooner or later someone is going to kill one too many "Americans" (in Vietnam it was a fake killing of sorts: remember the Gulf of Tonkin).

Wake up people, the tragedy of Vietnam should never be repeated again. Vote, read, understand the people in other worlds. I don't wish to cry for more who have needlessly died.

Quit It!

Don't forget that November 20 is the American Cancer Society's "Great American Smoke-out" Day. This is a national campaign directed towards people who currently smoke in order to try and get them to quit. For tips on how to quit smoking, having a non-smoker adopt a smoker, or other details surrounding this campaign, please contact Niki Fallis in the Office of Career Planning and Placement.

Good Tidings

The National Boychoir of America will present a Yuletide treat for the entire family on Thursday evening, December 4, at 8 o'clock in Longwood College's Jarman Auditorium.

The concert is part of Longwood's Series of the Performing Arts. General admission is $6. For young people under 18, senior citizens, and Longwood employees and their families, admission is $4. Longwood students will be admitted free with ID.

The National Boychoir has given standing-room-only performances throughout the U.S. and Canada. Their Christmas season concerts feature well-known and not so well-known Yuletide music from around the world.

Founded by Brahmachari Keith, a conductor, pianist, and composer, the National Boychoir made its New York debut in 1980 at Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Hall. That same year, they appeared in the Concert Hall of the Kennedy Center in Washington, DC.

At the invitation of President Reagan, the choir performed at the White House during the 1982 Christmas season. The following year, they participated in the Metropolitan Opera Company's Centennial celebration with a concert at the Met's "Villa Pace" Museum and Arts Center.

The choir has recorded three albums under the Vantage label and is scheduled to record a fourth album upon return from the current tour.

Buy A Car

A new book published by Ford Motor Company is designed to help consumers become smarter new car shoppers, especially first-time buyers — many of whom are college students. "Car Buying Made Easier" is a reference guide that takes buyers through all the steps of the car or light truck buying process. "This is an objective book which will help people make an informed choice about any vehicle, regardless of who produces it or sells it," said James D. Donaldson, executive director of Marketing for Ford's North American Automotivve Operations. "It fits right in with our customer-driven philosophy, which gives customer satisfaction a top priority in everything we do.

"We have high confidence in our products," he added. "We believe that a better-informed public making knowledgeable comparisons will buy more of our cars and trucks."

The guide is designed to help prospective buyers narrow vehicle choices as they read through it. It starts with a quiz to help buyers identify the vehicle size that best fits their needs, and a quick comparison chart of new cars and trucks that include price ranges, features, uses and powertrains.

Other sections cover body styles, engines, powertrains, options, getting the best deal, financing and how to take delivery of a new vehicle. Also included is a glossary of automotive terms, and a guide to using the service department correctly.

"We believe this guide is especially effective for college students who probably are buying a car or light truck for the first time," said Mr. Donaldson. "In addition to detailed product comparisons, the guide also explains what is involved in the buying process, describing such things as price negotiations, financing, trade-ins and credit in easy-to-understand terms."

Sweet Briar Exhibit

"Landscape in Photography," an exhibition of 19th and 20th century original prints on loan from the Virginia Museum, will open on November 18 in Pannell Center Gallery.

The collection of 40 photographs surveys the history of the medium while focusing on the environment, a primary subject for photographers since the mid-19th century. Early photographers desired to express visually what words could not. The Sweet Briar exhibit includes 19th-century examples of straightforward documentation of the American West and exotic faraway places in Europe. Other cameramen, like Henry Peach Robinson, rigorously followed traditional lighting and compositions of artistic convention. He dressed and posed professional models and manipulated them to serve as focal points for his landscapes.

At the turn of the century, photographers controlled the printing process to obtain romantic soft edges. This prompted a reaction against mechanical control of the image. Ansel Adams refined this appreciation for a technically pure approach in his majestic landscapes. Today's photographers appear to shift from the purist approach, picking and choosing from a broad and varied legacy to create fascinating and thought-provoking images like those by Linda Connor and Jerry N. Uelsmann.

The photographers mentioned above are among more than 30 artists, including Edward Steichen, Eugene Atget and Edward Weston, represented in the exhibition at Sweet Briar.

The exhibit is open to the public free of charge, through January 29, 1987, Tuesdays-Fridays 10-4, Saturdays 10-1 and Sundays 1-4. For further information on these and other art exhibits at Sweet Briar College, call Carma Fauntleroy, Director of Galleries, at (804) 381-6248.

Estudiantes

Intercambio International de Estudiantes, A.C., a student exchange program, is offering local families the opportunity to share their home life with a young boy or girl from Latin America. Students will arrive in November, December, or January for a two month stay.

Founded in 1959, the Intercambio Program has successfully arranged for well over 50,000 students and families to meet and experience one another's cultures. Intercambio is designed for younger students, ages 11 to 16, who are looking for a home which has a youngster of the same age, sex and of similar interests.

These students are sponsored by their own parents, are covered by insurance for health and accident, and will bring their own spending money. Besides the goal of personal formation for the student, Intercambio is taking a big step toward establishing international friendships.

Families interested in providing room, board, and sharing their activites can learn more about Intercambio by calling toll free the Coordinator of Placement's office at 800-437-4170, or writing INTERCAMBIO, 3122 Broadway, Fargo, ND 58102

Sex and the Supreme Court

U.S. Supreme Court decisions in pornography, homosexuality and other sex-related cases generally have been inconsistent, reflecting an "awkward ambivalence" about sex, a government professor told a Longwood College audience recently.

Dr. David Calihan, associate professor of government at Longwood, spoke on "Sex and the Supreme Court" in a Faculty Colloquium Lecture Nov. 5. He discussed cases involving sexual activities that have been adjudicated by the U.S. Supreme Court, state supreme courts and various lower courts.

"Justice Hugo Black said in a dissenting opinion in a case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1966, 'Sex is a fact of life. Its pervasive influence is felt throughout the world and it cannot be ignored . . . It is a subject which people are bound to consider and discuss whatever laws are passed by any government to try to suppress it.'

"Nevertheless," added Calihan, "western society seems to have — and enjoy — an awkward ambivalence about sex and sex-related activities . . . As Justice Black observed, a lot of people regard a lot of varieties of sexual experiences as matters to be avoided by other people, as matters to be ignored or better yet suppressed in public, and often as matters to be punished."

In cases involving sexual deviance, "the courts have been all over the ballpark — some judges going in one direction and some judges going in another direction. Another factor which causes confusion is that there are a relatively large number of statutory and Constitutional principles which the courts have been asked to juggle."

There is also an apparent inconsistency in cases involving homosexuality, Calihan said. "Judges have been uncertain about how to deal with it. The courts have been heterogeneous in their decisions regarding homosexuality, seeming to have gone 'both ways.' And the Supreme Court, in particular, hasn't been of much assistance."

The problem of defining pornography "has vexed the Supreme Court from the 19th century until even today," said Calihan. Until the late 1950s, most American courts observed an antiquated definition dating back to an 1868 case in England.

The first attempt by the Supreme Court to define pornography came in 1957, in Roth vs. the United States, when the Court ruled that obscenity and pornography were not protected by the First Amendment. Justice William Brennan, writing for the majority, said that obscenity is that which "to the average person, applying community standards, had as its dominant theme, taken as a whole, an appeal to prurient interests." It was not protected by the Constitution because it is "utterly without redeeming social importance," he wrote.

In just seven years, from 1957 to 1964, the Supreme Court devised three separate tests of pornography — "prurient interest," "patent offensiveness," and "utterly without redeeming social importance," said Calihan.

In a 1964 Supreme Court case, Justice Potter Stewart had said of hard-core pornography: "I know it when I see it." Curiously, however, he dissented from the majority two years later when the Court upheld the conviction of magazine publisher Ralph Ginzburg, who had been charged with distributing pornography through the U.S. Mail. "Censorship reflects a society's lack of confidence in itself. It is a hallmark of an authoritarian regime," he wrote.

Said Calihan, "The Court continues to recognize a right, in principle, to possess pornography and even tolerates selling and purchasing and exhibiting and viewing (pornography). However, the Supreme Court majority has quickly cooperated, in several recent cases, with zoning boards and other local government bodies to invidiously discourage such businesses from doing business. . ."

Among the Supreme Court rulings Calihan cited were:

— Bowers vs. Hardwick, issued last June 30. After being caught having oral sex with another man in 1982, Michael Hardwick of Georgia was charged under the state's sodomy law. The local prosecutor decided not to prosecute, but Hardwick wanted to make a test case. The federal Court of Appeals agreed with Hardwick that the law was invalid, but Georgia Attorney General Bowers took the question to the Supreme Court.

The Court, in a 5-4 vote, found the law constitutional. Justice Byron "Whizzer" White wrote the majority opinion, saying that the Constitution did not explicitly recognize a "fundamental" right to privacy in all sexual relationships between consenting adults. The decision was criticized by gay-rights activists and civil libertarians.

— Kelly vs. Johnson, 1976. Kelly, the police commissioner of Suffolk County, New York, had instituted a hair code for officers — there were strict regulations on sideburns and moustaches, and beards and goatees were forbidden. He said the regulations were designed to make the officers more recognizable to the public and to promote espirit de corps among the police force. Patrolman Johnson challenged the hair code, saying it violated the 14th Amendment guarantee of equal protection.

The Supreme Court upheld the police chief's regulations. William Rehnquist, who recently became Chief Justice, wrote the majority opinion.

— Skinner vs. Oklahoma, 1942. Arthur Skinner challenged Oklahoma's Habitual Criminal Sterilization Act, which was for persons thrice convicted of crimes of "moral turpitude." Skinner had been convicted of stealing three chickens and was twice convicted of armed robbery.

The court decided in favor of Skinner. Justice William Douglas, in the majority opinion, said the law violated the equal protection clause and substantive due process. Armed robbery didn't qualify as an act of moral turpitude (incredibly, embezzlement and "political offenses" were not included in that category).

What's Next?

By Cathy Gaughran

Some people said it couldn't be done — "The Bangles at Longwood? Never!" Well, it WAS done and it worked out pretty well.

Work for the Oct. 25 show began in June for Paul Striffolino, head of the Student Union Board, when he put in the original bid to have the band appear on our campus. Performance night went "very smoothly", commented Mr. Striffolino. In addition to campus police and administration cooperation there were 35-40 students who helped out with security, headed by Jim Brown. There were EMT's on hand just in case of medical emergency, but fortunately they were not needed.

The band's production crew arrived at 7:30 AM the day of the shindig to start setting up. The Bangles were on campus and in their dressing room at 4:30, did a sound check at 6, played from 9:15 to 10:25, and were on their way again at 11:30 PM. Their roadies finished packing up and bid Farmville farewell at 2 AM, almost 18 hours after arriving.

All parties involved were very happy with the way things turned out. Campus response in general was very positive, and there were no problems with the crowd beyond alcohol confiscation and having to ask a few people to put out cigarettes. The PE department was happy because the Student Union Board bought tarps to cover and protect the whole gym floor during this and possible future performances. The students involved with preparations for the show found out how much time and effort really goes into a campus concert. Although it was a demanding experience, most of them would be willing to do it again.

Happiest of all, though, is probably the Student Union, who broke even on the financial end of the event. It cost $10,000 to bring the Bangles themselves to Longwood, and another $9,500 in costs of the actual production: publicity, agents' costs, sound and light rentals, security, meals for all involved, and costs of the opening band, EIEIO. When you figure that 2,400 tickets were sold at $8 apiece, that's not too bad! Had there been a gain or loss of funds as a result of the concert, it would have effected future SUN campus programs accordingly.

On most campuses where concerts of this sort are held, there is a concert reserve fund of about $10,000 to fall back on in case it becomes necessary. Money made on a concert would go into this fund to be used towards future shows. Longwood does not have a concert reserve fund, but the Student Union hopes to start one before planning any more blowout events like the Bangles concert. (Don't worry- the money would come from student goverment fee allocations. . .). Perhaps there will be more concerts of this proportion in the future, but not before next fall- it all depends on the availability of a "cheap" band that people will be eager to see. Just for comparison's sake, the Bangles cost $10,000 to bring to a campus, while a band like, say, Huey Lewis and the News would cost $70,000- a bit beyond our budget.

Some campus events coming to us next semester from SUN include America, appearing in Jarman Auditorium early in January, comedians, and lectures on subjects such as rock music, AIDS, and one entitled "Who Slew the Dreamer?" on Martin Luther King.

The Student Union Board meets every Monday night at 6:15 in the Conference Center in Lankford. There are some openings for officers on the board at the present time, soon to be filled. All students are more than welcome to attend these meetings and help to plan SUN events.

To the Editor:

It is a shame that Longwood College does not see fit to adequately serve its students. The increasing tuition that we students pay demands that, in return, we receive the highest quality in services to all of Longwood's facilities. One facet of campus continues to be neglected; that is the issue of access to buildings for disabled students. A percentage of all campus buildings are supposed to have ramps and other means of access for the disabled population, according to the law. It doesn't take much effort on the part of Janet Greenwood, other administrative faculty and staff, or the students to see that the only buildings with adequate access are Lancer Gym, Student Health Center, and Curry and Frazer Dorms. Some of the other buildings have elevators, but that still does not solve the problem of entering the building. The rest of the buildings have nothing but stairs. Even the library, a building utilized by the entire student body is not adequately accessible.

Longwood can find money to hire additional faculty, establish more parking, increase dining hall hours (which means more money to pay employees to work additional hours), etc., to make life better for students, but it can't find the funds to help the disabled of the campus.

At the beginning of this semester, I dislocated my knee in the Lancer Cafe and had to use crutches. At one point, I needed to use a wheel chair to get to my classes on time and keep up with my college schedule, but I was unable to do so because none of the buildings in which I had classes had ramps. I was forced to use crutches and the stairs. (I almost fell many times!)

Since my accident, I've encountered many students on crutches, canes, using braces, etc. I have become more sensitive to this issue than I was in the past and I think it's high time we do something about it.

Many people say that it's not an important or pressing issue because so little of the college's population falls into this "disabled minority." To them I say: "Never pass judgement until you've walked a mile in the shoes of those faced with this terrible dilemma!"

To the Editor:

Recently there has been a lot of talk on how Longwood should get rid of Family Style Dining. There are some good reasons to get rid of Family style, but most people don't take the time to think of the many good reasons to keep it. Without Family style there would be a long wait for a table because most students don't fill the tables up with eight people and that would mean a lot of wasted space. Then you would have to wait for one of the dining hall employees to clean the table since most students are just too lazy to take their trays to a truck or the window. The dining hall currently employees about 200 students and most of them would lose their jobs and there aren't enough jobs on campus to replace the jobs lost. One thing that most students don't realize is that one of the major holdups is the mess that they leave on the table, and the fact that they sit and talk for about 10 minutes while the line out the door grows. If Longwood wishes to get rid of Family style dining then the students are going to have to start picking up after themselves.

To The Editor:

Recently, I was exiting through a door in the Rotunda area (the location shall remain unnamed for confidential reasons), and I had to dodge a few piles of boxes that were obviously intended to go out with the trash. I bumped into a small pile, and as I bent over to pick up some papers which had teetered out, I happened to notice that they were computer print-outs of confidential student information. These listings included the students' G.P.A.'s, social security numbers, birth dates, and financial aid information. You can bet that I quickly found my listing and tore it out. I was personally outraged that the college would be so careless about confidential information. Even more upsetting is the fact that, last year, I encountered this same situation, except it was at the Science Building. I don't think that any student's confidential records should be made available to the public, even if it is through the trash. The college owes it to its students to seal such listings and dispose of them somewhere other than in boxes at a public exit. After all, I don't remember seeing confidential information about faculty lying about anywhere. Please, give the students a little deserved respect — our privacy is at stake here. Thank you.

Sports

Wrestling

Longwood's wrestling team got its 1986-87 season off to an outstanding start last Wednesday night with a resounding 41-2 victory over Newport News Apprentice before a vocal home crowd in Lancer Hall.

This week the Lancers will compete in the Elon College Tournament Friday and Saturday in Burlington, North Carolina. Following the trip to Elon, Longwood won't resume action until December 3 when they visit William & Mary.

Potentially the best Lancer team ever, Longwood lived up to its advanced billing by winning nine of 10 matches and tying one Wednesday night.

Heavyweight Jesus Strauss and 190-pounder John Kelly recorded pins and 118-pounder Tim Fitzgerald blitzed his foe 23-5 in match highlights. Tommy Gilbert also won in overwhelming fashion with a 19-4 technical fall at 142 pounds.

Also gaining wins for the Lancers were: Ben Bartlett at 126, 7-3 decision, John Stukes at 134, 11-6 decision, Billy Howard at 158, 11-5 decision, Matt Meurer at 167, 10-8 decision, and David Taylor at 177, 13-12 decision.

Longwood's Pete Whitman battled Kevin Olinger to a 7-7 tie at 150 pounds.

"The hustle was great," said Lancer coach Steve Nelson. "I was pleased with the effort, but technique was lacking. Our freshmen did a real good job. That was the best performance we've had in Lancer Hall in a long time."

Claye Conkwright

Longwood junior Claye Conkwright received honorable mention on the recently announced Penn-Monto College Field Hockey Coaches Association All-South Region Team. The team was dominated by players from Division I powers North Carolina, James Madison and Old Dominion.

Conkwright has been a three-year starter for the Lady Lancers. She set a season record for interceptions-tackles while helping Longwood to a 10-6-1 record during the past season. A co-captain for Longwood, she is an education major.

A graduate of Frank W. Cox High School, Conkwright was named Field Hockey Player of the Year in the Virginia Beach area in her senior season.

Player Of The Week

Junior goalkeeper Dave Goerke played a key role in Longwood's 2-1 victory over Liberty Saturday in the VISA Playoffs, and for his efforts, Goerke has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period November 9-16. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Goerke had four game-winning saves as the Lancers doused the Flames on penalty kicks to advance to the State title game for the third time five years. Longwood plays at Christopher-Newport Wednesday afternoon for the title.

Goerke had seen only spot duty until keeper Rob Liessem was knocked out of action with an arm injury several weeks ago. Longwood has a 6-2 record since Goerke moved into the starting lineup. The junior has notched two shutouts and has a goal against average of 1.20 in 1 appearances.

"Dave put on one of the top performances ever by a Longwood goalkeeper Saturday at Liberty," said coach Rich Posipanko. "He was unbelievable."

Goerke was a starter at Rider College before transferring to Longwood two years ago.

Entertainment

Henry IV

The Longwood Players will present Henry IV, the tale of a madman who thinks he's "royal," on Wednesday through Saturday evenings, Nov. 19-22, in Jarman Auditorium. Written by the 20th-century playwright, Luigi Pirandello, the play explores the life of a man who "has strayed from reality" and believes he is the German king, Henry IV. The consequences of his charade are sometimes amusing, sometimes tragic. The cast includes friends and foes of the make-believe monarch, who masquerade as counsellors, monks, queens, and guards to fulfill his fantasy. The production is directed by Dr. Patton Lockwood, Professor of Speech and Theatre. Curtain time is 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday; 8:30 p.m. on Friday. Admission is $4 for the general public; $2 for Longwood faculty-staff, senior citizens, and students; Longwood students free with ID.

The Camerata Singers, Longwood's premier mixed choral group of 34 singers, have been chosen to sing at this year's Virginia Music Education Association convention in Roanoke, Nov. 21. The group will perform three pieces by Emma Lou Diemer (a California composer who was guest composer for Longwood's Contemporary Music Symposium in 1983); Hor che'l ciel e la terra by Claudio Monteverdi (from his 1638 book of madrigals about Love and War); Six Chanson by American Paul Hindemith (on selected poems by Rainer Maria Rilke); three nativity anthems by British-born William Mathias; and Solfeggio by a contemporary Russian composer, Arvo Pyart. The Camerata Singers will perform at E.C. Glass High School in Lynchburg en route to the convention. Dr. Lee Egbert; Associate Professor of Music, directs the Camerata Singers; accompanist is Nancy Sherman. The singers, selected by audition, are from numerous academic fields: physical education, history and government, prelaw, art, theatre, business administration, psychology, home economics, elementary education, biology, and music.

Women's Basketball Preview

Longwood College women's basketball coach Shirley Duncan approaches the upcoming season with mixed emotions. The Lady Lancers will be more experienced, but youth still dominates.

"We're more experienced than we were last year, but we're young," said coach Duncan, whose team finished 8-17 after back-to-back 16-win campaigns. "We also have a very tough schedule with five Division I opponents, but we're looking to improve on last season's record."

While the 1986-87 edition of Lady Lancer basketball will have eight returning squad members, just four of those players have considerable experience. Only seniors Caren Forbes and Karen Boska and juniors Angie Hill and Barbara Burton have played more than one year.

Co-captains on this year's team, the 5-7 Forbes and the 6-1 Boska have been starters for three seasons. Forbes averaged 13.6 points and handed out 126 assists last season. She is Longwood's all-time leader in assists with 371 and has scored 1,046 points. Boska has been consistent over the years. She averaged 9.9 points and 7.3 rebounds in 1985-86. She has 741 points and 580 rebounds for her career.

"I'm looking for outstanding seasons from Forbes and Boska," said Duncan. "They have been an important part of our program since arriving on campus."

Hill, a 5-7 guard, started 18 games last season and played in 24, averaging 5 points per contest. A 6-2 center, Burton played in 18 games after regaining her eligibility at mid-semester. She scored 3.8 points and pulled down 3.8 rebounds.

Missing from the lineup will be 5-11 Melanie Lee, last year's leading scorer (14.5) and rebounder (9.0). Lee chose to pass up her senior year of basketball because of commitments to an academic internship.

Four sophomores, who got their feet wet in 1985-86, appear to be ready to make big contributions. Center Sandy Rawdon, 6-1, guard Angee Middleton, 5-6, forward Kita Chambers, 5-10, and forward India Walton, 5-10, are improved and should help.

Newcomers include junior transfer Jill Everett, a 5-10 forward who will be eligible in January, and freshmen Jennifer Crusade and Deirdre McDaniels. Coach Duncan says Everett's presence will give the team a boost in January. Both Crusade, 5-7, and McDaniels, 6-0, had standout prep careers.

"We should be a much stronger team when Jill Everett becomes eligible at the end of the first semester," said Duncan. "We'll be playing with just 10 players for our first six games."

"Our returning players came back to school greatly improved," said the coach. "They worked hard over the summer to get ready for the season. Plus, coach (Loretta) Coughlin's conditioning program this fall is beginning to show excellent results on the floor."

Longwood, which tied for fourth in the Mason-Dixon Conference last season, has been picked fourth by league coaches and third by the MDAC sports information directors in pre-season polls this fall. With the addition of Randolph-Macon to women's MDAC play, the league will have five teams once again. Mount St. Mary's, Liberty and Pittsburgh-Johnstown are also members.

Tip-Off Tournament Begins Friday

Six weeks of pre-season practice will come to an end Friday night at 7:05 when Longwood's men's basketball team takes to the floor for its regular season opener. Three newcomers will likely be in the starting lineup for coach Cal Luther's squad.

Longwood plays Division III Newport News Apprentice in the fourth Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament opener. Division II's Queens and Bloomsburg will square-off in the second contest at 9:00 with the winners meeting for the title at 8:30 p.m. Saturday. First round losers play at 6:30 for third place.

The Lancers, who have made two trips to the tournament finals, will be looking to win the Par-Bil's event for the first time. Luther is sure of only one thing as the season approaches. Longwood has basically a new team and will make mistakes early.

"With so many new players on the squad, we'll make mistakes early in the season," said the coach. "I just hope we can make progress as things develop."

Expected to be in the starting lineup Friday are 6-3 senior Kevin Ricks and 6-0 junior Art Monroe at guard, 6-6 Quintin Kearney center and 6-4 Darryl Rutley and 6-4 Kevin Jefferson at forward.

Ricks and Kearney were starters on last season's 14-13 squad, which ended up second in the Mason-Dixon Conference. Kearney averaged 11.9 points and 7.6 rebounds while Ricks scored 7.4 points and led the team in steals (63) and assists (114). Both have played well in pre-season scrimmages.

Luther has been real pleased with the play of Jefferson, who will be the first freshman to start for Longwood since Ricks in 1983-84.

"Kevin (Jefferson) has been slowed by a bad ankle, but he has been a pleasant surprise," said Luther. "He has come along real well and earned a starting spot."

Luther is counting on Rutley and Monroe to pick some of the scoring slack left by the departure of last year's top two scorers Lonnie Lewis and Kenneth Fields. Both Monroe and Rutley have scored well in pre-season play.

The Longwood coach expects senior Eric Pittman and red-shirt freshman Doug Poppe to be his top players off the bench. Pittman and Ricks are Lancer co-captains.

Par-Bil's Food Store of Farmville is sponsoring the tournament for the fourth year. Par-Bil's also plans to donate $500 to the Longwood athletic scholarship fund in honor of a Longwood Player of the Tournament.

Previous Par-Bil's Tournament winners have been Shippensburg, High Point and West Virginia Tech.

Soccer Beats Liberty

Playing for the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association state title has become a habit with the Longwood soccer team and 1986 will be no exception.

Longwood, will meet Christopher-Newport (18-4) Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 in Newport News with the state title on the line. The Lancers advanced to the title tilt with a 2-1 win over Liberty Saturday on penalty kicks, while Christopher-Newport beat Lynchburg 1-0 to reach the finals.

The Lancers won the state crown outright in 1982 over Lynchburg and tied Mary Washington for the title in 1984.

Christopher-Newport lost a 1-0 decision to Bethany in the NCAA Playoffs last week. The Captains, who beat Longwood 3-1 November 1, have allowed just 14 goals in 22 games thanks in part to goalkeeper Rick Longobardi. Wednesday's game will match the first (CNC) and second place (LC) teams in the VISA Eastern Division.

Longwood, which has won four of its last five games, was ranked 14th in the final NCAA Division II poll last week. The Lancers dominated Saturday's game at Liberty with 25 shots to the host team's 15.

Liberty got on the board first on a penalty kick by Sam Johnson. Freshman John Barone tied the count at 1-1 on a break-away from 20 yards out mid-way through the second half.

After two overtimes left the teams deadlocked at 1-1, penalty kicks were called for to decide the berth in the VISA finals. Barone, Jeff Robinson, Mike Edge, Rich Venere and Mark Kremen made their one-on-one attempts for Longwood. One miss by the Flames was all it took to give the Lancers the win.

"We have been playing well the last three games," said Lancer coach Rich Posipanko. "We missed at least five good scoring opportunities, but the defense was tremendous."

Posipanko praised goalkeeper Dave Goerke crediting the junior with four game-winning saves. Longwood has a 6-2 record since Goerke began starting. The Longwood coach feels his team can win Wednesday if it plays with the intensity displayed Saturday in Lynchburg.

Longwood landed seven spots on the All-VISA Eastern Division teams announced last week. Robinson, a back, Edge, a midfielder, and Barone, a forward, were named to the first team.

Barone is Longwood's top scorer with 10 goals and six assists while Edge has collected six goals and two assists. Robinson has three goals and two assists. Edge and Barone are freshmen.

Making the All-Eastern Division second team from Longwood were Goerke, sweeper Erick Karn midfielder Mahfoud Kyoud and Kremen at forward.

Goerke, Robinson, Karn, Edge, and Barone will play for the East in the VISA All-Star game December 6 at 1:00 in Farmville.

PLAYOFF CELEBRATION — Lancer players had reason to be happy after upsetting Liberty.

Men's Basketball Preview

Coach Cal Luther and his Longwood basketball team enter the 1986-87 season facing a major rebuilding year. Five seniors, who were members of last season's top eight, must be replaced.

"We lost two All-Conference players and several top reserves off last year's team," said coach Luther. "We will be very young and inexperienced this season with only three seniors on the squad."

The two All-Conference players gone from last season were forwards Lonnie Lewis and Kenneth Fields who averaged over 36 points per game between them.

"On the other hand, we're encouraged by the potential of the young players who have joined us," said the Lancer coach. "We're hopeful that they'll be able to develop by the time league play rolls around to make us competitive in the Mason-Dixon Conference again."

Longwood ended up 14-13 overall and 7-3 in the Mason-Dixon a year ago to place second behind nationally ranked Mount Saint Mary's. This season in pre-season polls the Lancers were picked to end up last (fifth) in the league by the coaches and fourth by the MDAC sports information directors.

Top returnees are seniors Kevin Ricks, a 6-3 guard, Quintin Kearney, a 6-6 center, and Eric Pittman, a 6-2 guard. In 1985-86 Ricks led the team in steals (63) and assists (114) while scoring 7.4 ppg. Kearney averaged 11.9 pts. and 7.6 rebs. Pittman scored 4.6 per contest.

Also back are sophomore guards Bobby Dobson 5-11, and Robert Pierce 6-1, who saw limited action in '85-86. Among the newcomers are 6-8 red-shirt freshman Doug Poppe and 6-4 sophomore transfer Darryl Rutley, who sat out last season. Junior college transfer Art Monroe, 6-0, has shown much potential. Sophomore guard Tony Good 6-0, made the squad this year as a walk-on.

Lancer freshmen include 6-4 Kevin Jefferson, 6-6 Greg Holloway, 6-2 Dale Shavers, and 6-0 Gary Austin, who will be eligible in January. Austin was a starter on one of Cumberland High's Class A State Championship teams.

While Longwood's newcomers have considerable potential, the key to the upcoming season could be how well the rookies are able to blend in with the returning veterans.

"We have to come together as a team," said Luther. "With eight new players on a squad of 13, we've got to get used to playing with each other. We're hoping to develop as the season progresses."

Longwood's beefed-up schedule includes Division I's Alabama-Birmingham, North Carolina, Charlotte and East Carolina. In addition, coach Luther expects the Mason-Dixon Conference to be as strong as it has ever been from top to bottom.

SIXTY-SIXTH YEAR | TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1986 | NUMBER TEN

Survey Says . . .

The nation's college students are more conservative in their attitudes about a wide range of subjects than the generation which preceded them, according to the most penetrating survey of college student attitudes ever undertaken.

Student Watch '86, conducted by Simmons Market Research Bureau for the College Stores Research & Educational Foundation, provided for the first time an in-depth look at a separate and important force in America's social-political-economic picture — 12.5 million students with over $20 billion in discretionary annual spending.

The Foundation that funded the $250,000 survey is the research arm of the National Association of College Stores, a trade association with more than 2,700 college store members and 1,000 associate members across the U.S., Canada and other countries.

Fifty-six percent think sex before marriage is always or sometimes wrong, while 95 percent believe sex outside marriage is always or sometimes wrong, and 69 percent prefer postponing marriage until they have achieved other goals.

Seventy percent believe that cigarettes are harmful and 48 percent indicated they would not even date someone who smokes.

Eighty-four percent think cocaine is harmful and 62 percent believe marijuana use is also unwise, but only 10 percent feel that way about alcohol.

Seventy-three percent favor the death penalty, and 69.9 percent think abortion should be legal.

Respondents expressed their political views and alignments; 37 percent considered themselves Republicans, 31 percent independents, and only 28 percent listed themselves as Democrats.

Doctors, scientists, and professors are highly respected by students. But reporters, government workers, and politicans had better mind their "public image," because 60 percent, 47 percent and 70 percent, respectively, of students

Creative Dramatics

Plans are underway at Longwood College for a "creative dramatics" program for children, to be offered for five weeks in Febrauary and March.

The program will be directed by Melanie Moore, of New Canton, a 26-year-old mother of two who has returned to Longwood to major in theatre.

A stage veteran, Moore is active in the Waterworks Players and had major roles in their recent productions of Cabaret and The Most Happy Fella'. She also appeared in high school productions and has worked with other community theatre companies.

"I want to give children an idea of what it's like to be on stage," Moore said. "I want them to realize that anyone can be in the theatre. It doesn't require special talent, just dedication and self-confidence."

She is designing the program for first through sixth graders. Enrollment will be limited to 10. The fee is $35.

Sessions will be held on Saturday mornings, February 7-March 7, from 10 a.m. to noon, Moore said. The "little theatre" in Jarman Hall is being renovated to provide space for the children's activities and close-to-the-action seating for the audience. The program will include get-to-know-each-other exercises, improvisations, pantomime, and short skits. "We'll probably make up our faces in clown make-up in one or more sessions," Moore said. "Behind make-up or a mask, it's easier to be somebody else."

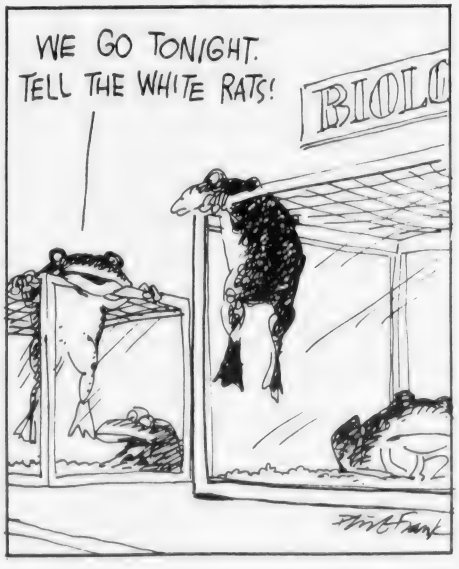
The final session will be a "showcase" to which family and friends will be invited.

"I think the children will have a great time and will come to love the theatre," Moore said. "That's my goal."

Moore says she was "an Army brat. I've lived all over the U.S. and in Germany. I started school in a real kindergarten in Berlin." (Kindergarten is a German word that, literally translated, means "children's garden.")

When she attended Longwood the first time, Moore majored in music. "I sing — and play the piano a little," she said. All of her interests have come together now in the theatre major.

Dr. Chuck McCarter, head of Longwood's department of visual and performing arts, said the children's program is "exactly the kind of thing I'm interested in developing. The department has resources and talents that can be used to meet the needs and interests of community residents of all ages."



The Creative Dramatics for Children program is part of Longwood's Community Arts School and will be coordinated through the Office of Continuing Studies (non-credit section), in cooperation with the department of visual and performing arts.

To receive more information and registration forms, call Longwood's Office of Continuing Studies at 392-9256.

Dr. Chuck McCarter, Melanie Moore, and Dr. Pat Lust make plans for Longwood's program in "creative dramatics" for children. Moore (center) will direct the program.

To All Fall Graduates

Letters

And one to grow on

To the Editor:

The United States Government has declared war on drugs. All drugs, that is, except alcohol. Yes, it's true, and marijuana just so happens to be one of those drugs. To be frank, I am rather partial to it myself but politically speaking I feel that we're starting to get a might too close to my civil liberties. At the same time I think that some of our officials are getting somewhat self-righteous. It was quite a relief to discover that our President had agreed to take a urinalysis. We all had been quite worried that in a free-basing state of mind ol' Ronnie would push the button.

Our military will be used to combat the "recent" problem of drugs, however, our lawmakers don't trust them enough to let them go without regularly taking urinalyses. This battle is going to cost the government a bundle (1.7 billion dollars has been estimated), but our children will still be ignorant about alcohol and drugs and their effects. How about being a little more intelligent about this situation and help both the American people and their government out of a jam.

The American farmers need a cash crop and could grow marijuana if they could morally accept it. Organized crime could be undersold if pot was a controlled substance. People who sell it would have to get a real job and pay taxes. The controlled substance could be sold in a government managed store, taxed accordingly, and sold at a price more reasonable than today's. You now have another revenue generating controlled substance, and richer farmers, poorer mobsters, and happier citizens.

Revenue generated could then be used to construct a program to better and more realistically help our children to decide why they should or should not use marijuana, alcohol, and other more serious drugs. The Drug Enforcement Agency could then use their extra time to combat crack, heroin, and the everchanging varieties of drugs which appear on the streets.

In closing I would like to say that no one has proved to me yet that marijuana is any more dangerous than alcohol. I also feel that as an adult I am entitled to choose whether or not I would like to smoke pot. Decide for yourself, readers.

Fed up with this Tradition:

An ARA Dilema

By MATT PETERMAN

Traditions are very important for a college because it gives the students something to look forward to and something to make them feel good about the school. A tradition at Longwood that produces the exact opposite effect is family style dining and should be discontinued for that same reason.

The basis behind family style dining is to make the student feel as though he or she is at home. The food is brought to the table by a student waiter or waitress and the students serve themselves. Like most "good" plans; they look good on paper, but in reality they are far from it.

The fact of the matter is that students, student workers, and the regular ARA staff think family style dining or waitering as it is called, is a huge hassle.

"It's such a long process. Waiting first of all to get in and then waiting for your waiter to come. When he does come, you have to wait for your food and this whole process doesn't make coming to dinner worth it," commented Tim Oliva, a Longwood sophomore.

This is the typical view of most Longwood students, who in addition to the above mentioned waiting process, also have to face other dilemmas. Besides being forced to eat with students one may not care to eat with, the food is usually cold when it finally arrives at the table.

As Lee Ford, a transfer student from Mary Washington points out: "expectation of a full meal is impossible because the meal comes in parts. Bread, vegetables, and the main course arrive in five minute intervals. Absolutely no coordination exists to have a complete meal at the same time."

This very frustrating to a hungry student who has been forced to wait and wait. The frustrated student usually comes to the conclusion that the server is slow because he or she is slacking off.

"The student server is trapped between an inefficient kitchen and the student who angrily waits for his food," said Steve Evans, a second year student of Longwood.

This seems to bring the obvious problem of ARA's lack of prepared food when the time becomes necessary. If food could be served promptly, the agony for all involved would be lessened. In an attempt to save money, the primary reason behind waitering, ARA tries to prepare the food at the margin. This simply means that in an attempt to eliminate waste, ARA often prepares the food as the seated student waits and the students waiting in line, waits even more.

"Asking for seconds is so slow that I don't even bother anymore," said Steve Evans. Most students do prefer seconds because the initial portions given out are so small. ARA's notion that a 6 oz. portion of potatoes is going to satisfy 8 people is absurd. One pizza every 10 minutes is also just as absurd for 8 people. If one is not fond of Frosted Flakes or Fruit Loops, then supplementing the average ARA family style meal is a problem.

The fact that everyone involved, be it the student or the worker is unnecessarily burdened by a tradition that is more than antiquated is correct. Most families of the 80's don't even participate in such meals at home, as the family is constantly on the run and so are most students.

Instead of coming to dinner to relax, the students are hassled by a series of substantial delays which in turn is followed by frustration. The student workers, doing the best they can, considering what ARA gives them to work with, are hassled by the frustrated students, who leave their tables a complete mess in retaliation for their treatment. This tradition must end, for the only feelings it does produce is that of anger and frustration and this is no way good.

"The only purpose of waitering is to drive students away and as a money saving technique," proclaimed Lee Ford.

The sad thing about the statement above is that it is so true. The only beneficiaries seem to be the ARA accountants as they budget the saved money. To everyone else, family style dining should be a thing of the past.

Though fighting most things in the Longwood bureaucracy is impossible, disposing of this false tradition can be arranged through the use of petitions. If response to this article is great enough, a petition will be organized and implemented. If you feel you would support the petition, write the word "Yes" on anything and through school mail send it to The Rotunda, Box 1133.

CAMPUS NOTES

New Auditor

Longwood College has announced the appointment of J. Hugh Fuller, Jr., of Prince George, as internal audit supervisor.

His responsibilities include audits of the college's financial procedures and records, programs, personnel leave records, equipment and supply inventories, and compliance-efficiency-effectiveness audits.

Fuller will serve as a consultant to the college's senior administrators, work with student organizations to ensure sound financial recordkeeping, and prepare monthly and quarterly reports to the board of visitors. He will work closely with state auditors during their official external external audits.

A graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University with a degree in accounting, Fuller holds Certified Public Accountant (CPA) and Certified Internal Auditor (CIA) licenses.

He has been internal auditor-supervisor at Citizens Savings and Loan, Richmond; Investors Savings and Loan, Richmond; and at VCU.

For four years, he was a senior vice president of Central Fidelity Bank in Petersburg.

Fuller began his duties at Longwood November 17.

Second to One

Longwood College has moved into second place among public colleges and universities nationwide in the percentage of alumni who contributed to the annual fund.

Longwood's alumni donor percentage of 40.69 was second only to that of Southern Mississippi University (41.19). Other institutions in the top five are Virginia Military Institute (40.40), Auburn University (36.43), and Ball State University (33.29).

The rankings are based on the Report to the Council for Financial Aid to Education for calendar year 1985 or fiscal year 1984-85.

A total of $152,929 was contributed to Longwood's alumni annual fund in calendar 1985 by 5,008 alumni.

Paula Clay, director of annual funds, said that 12,305 Longwood alumni were asked to contribute to their alma mater during 1985.

Most of these alumni were contacted by telephone during a nine-week Alumni Telefund campaign. Students who are members of the Longwood Ambassadors made the calls.

"This high percentage of alumni donors could not have been reached without the commitment of the Longwood Ambassadors," Clay said. "The 65 Ambassadors gave a total of 7,800 volunteer hours to the campaign. They all should be commended."

Lost and Found

The hours for the Lost-Found department will be as follows: Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. If anyone needs assistance please come by during these hours. Also we have had more articles turned into the Police Department within the past couple of weeks. We encourage students to please check with us if they have lost any items.

Kappa Delta Pi

This is an invitation to education majors, both elementary and secondary levels. Kappa Delta Pi will be inducting new members into this honor society in January 1987. Induction is open to juniors and sophomores who will have completed fifty credit hours by the end of this semester, Fall '86. You must have an overall F.P.A. of 3.0 to be accepted. The induction ceremony is tentatively scheduled for Tuesday, 27 January 1987 at 5:30 p.m. Please mark your calendars. Support your profession and join your fellow educators as we continue our commitment to excellence in education. We look forward to hearing from you. Questions should be sent to Tammy Woody or Annie McDonald at Box 883.

Artist of the Month

Her winning work is a serigraph (silkscreen print) entitled "Peace Talks."

The work deals with "a conflict of ideas — life-death, peace-war, USA-USSR, Gorbachev-Reagan," Coggsdale said. "The idea of a nuclear war alarms me, and doing this piece shows my concern for the issue."

Coggsdale received a cash award, and her print is on display this month in the first floor hallway of Bedford Art Building at Longwood. Copies of the print ($15 unmatted, $20 matted) may be obtained from the artist by calling 392-9601.

Coggsdale is majoring in art with a double concentration in graphic design and art education. She is president of Artworks, Inc., an interest and service club for art majors, and a member of Longwood Ambassadors, a leadership and public relations organization of students who assist with fundraising campaigns and serve as hosts for college events.

Disney Talent Search

Now hosting well over 21-million visitors a year, Walt Disney World is sending its talent scouts on an eleven-city tour Jan. 24 - March 8 in search of entertainers for the 1987-88 season.

As the Vacation Kingdom continues to grow-major new attractions opening in 1988 include the MGM-Disney Studio Tour, Norway Showcase, 900-Room Grand Floridian Resort and Pleasure Island — the need for dancers, singers, musical-theater performers and college musicians is greater now than ever before. As a result, Disney is casting positions in eight fully staged productions from old-time vaudeville, contemporary Broadway, country and western, mainstream pop and jazz in addition to resort entertainment, convention shows and special events.

Performers, 18-years-old by June 1, 1987, are welcome to audition for a variety of positions in three major entertainment categories including (one-year contract) professional singers, dancers and musical-theater performers; the eleven-week (June -A August) All American College Band and Orchestra Program, or a new nine-month (Sept. - June) Walt Disney World EPCOT Institute of Entertainment Arts internship program seeking dancers, singers and instrumentalists.

Those auditioning should bring a current resume, photograph and letters of recommendation if available.

Dancers and singers should bring dance attire and will be taught at least one dance-movement combination. Singers should memorize short vocal selections (ballad and up-tempo) and bring vocal sheet music in their best key. An accompanist is provided.

Musicians should bring their own instrument and three styles of music for a five minute presentation. Sight reading material, a piano, set, timpani and xylophone will be provided at audition sites.

A detailed audition brochure is available by writing Disney Audition Tour '87, P.O. Box 10, 000, Lake Buena Vista, FL. 32830-1000 or by calling weekdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. (EST) 305-828-1576.

Apple For The Teacher

Apple Computer invites students, faculty and staff affiliated with colleges and universities throughout the United States to compete for Apple's Wheels for the Mind awards and $50,000 worth of prize money.

The awards seek to honor individuals associated with institutions of higher education who have developed outstanding educational applications that run on Apple computers and that are currently in use in at least one school.

"The excellent and innovative applications currently available to colleges and universities are the result of the work of dedicated individuals — most of whom spend their personal time on these projects," said Bud Colligan, Apple's manager of higher education marketing. "These individuals share with Apple a commitment to supply the academic community with products and course materials that specifically address the needs of higher education. The Wheels for the Mind awards are Apple's way of demonstrating our appreciation for these individuals and their dedication to producing products that make a difference in teaching and learning."

Entries will be accepted in the following categories:

In Class Instruction: Applications associated with demonstration and presentation materials — such as demonstrations, simulations, and monitoring — used by an instructor in a classroom.

Teaching Tools: Applications used outside the classroom, but associated with a specific course. Entries can include applications such as tutorials, programming aids, simulations, lab and data analysis.

Study-Research Tools: Application tools for helping students, faculty or staff in areas not associated with a specific course — for example, library searches, word processing, productivity, spreadsheets, desktop communications, desktop publishing, and networking.

Development Tools: Applications that support the development of courseware and other educational tools. Examples include authoring tools, expert systems and presentation aids.

Entries must be received by February 28, 1987. Winners will be announced and honored at the Apple University Consortium (AUC) meeting to be held in the San Francisco Bay Area in June where $20,000 will be awarded to the grand prize winner and $7,5000 each will go to the four runners-up. The AUC is a partnership that brings together 32 leading universities for the purpose of exploring innovative uses for the Macintosh computer, to develop courseware, to share information with each other, and to act as a higher education advisory council to Apple.

The panel of judges will include three faculty members, two individuals from campus computing services, and one student. Bill Atkinson will represent Apple Computer on the panel. Atkinson developed the QuickDraw graphics routines used in the Macintosh computer and is the author of MacPaint.

Little Hope For South Africa

A crumbling agriculture, natural disasters, population explosion and political strife have led to an economic crisis in Africa today that rivals the Depression, an authority on Africa said at Longwood College recently.

"The economic crisis in Africa has been called the most profound in modern history, which may be an exaggeration," said Fred. L. Wettering, National Intelligence Officer for Africa. "But it is definitely the worst since the Great Depression."

Wettering, a 21-year veteran of the Foreign Service, is the top adviser to President Reagan on matters relating to Africa. Before taking his current job, which is with the U.S. State Department, he worked for the National Security Council from 1981 to 1984. He spoke to Longwood's Introduction to Africa class on Nov. 18.

Asked about South Africa, he expressed little hope for major reforms in the immediate future.

"The great revolution that people talk about probably won't occur for at least another five years. There has been a spasm of reforms by the government which I fear is ended. I do not see a plan by the current government which seriously addresses (true reforms). As of now, I'm a little pessimistic."

The fewer reforms are made, the greater the chance of a violent revolution, he said. Wettering also said he fears that revolutionary change would damage the United States' national interests.

Most of his address, though, focused on economic and other problems facing Africa today.

"Africa is losing the ability to feed itself," he said. "Per capita food production is only 80 percent of what it was in 1961-65, when most African states gained independence. Food imports have tripled. Africa is not growing enough of its food. Nigeria, for example, grew all of its food in the 1960s, but imports most of it now."

Sorghum and casaba, two traditional staples of the African diet, are still being produced, but there's been a "taste perference shift" because of the migration to cities, said Wettering. They are less popular among urban residents, while wheat and rice are increasingly popular — neither of which is grown much in Africa.

The population explosion in Africa — the only continent where the population is growing — is "key to most of the other problems." The population was 200 million in 1950, it is 500 million now, and is expected to grow to 1.2 billion by 2020. The average African woman has 6.9 children; the average in Kenya is 8 children. The population of Nigeria will double in the next 20 years, Wettering said.

"There's been a population explosion that has gone completely unchecked. No African government has done anything serious to control population. This has serious political ramifications."

Many young adults won't be able to get jobs, which will result in "political dynamite. They'll be politically aware and disgruntled. They'll organize and agitate and push for change. They won't simply go back to the countryside and grow corn."

The cities, in particular, have grown in recent years. "There's been a tremendous strain in cities for the government to provide services and housing, which they've been unable to meet. Even Western governments, with all their resources, would be hard-pressed to provide the necessary services. Most major African cities are surrounded by shantytowns."

Wettering thinks the solution is to improve life in the country, so that people won't be tempted to move to the city. Unfortunately, government policies have favored city-dwellers, mainly because that's where the founders and leaders of the various states have lived, he said.

"Policies by African governments have completely distorted the economy in favor of the city and against the countryside. Farmers have been penalized for growing food, which is a massive disincentive."

Africa is losing the ability to pay its debt, said Wettering. The debt service ratio is about 50 percent, and it's 100 percent in some African nations. Existing debts have been refinanced — payments strung out and interest converted to principal — but that's not a long-term solution.

Also, there's been "a general disinvestment in the continent of Africa." Investment was $11 billion in 1980; it was $5 billion last year. "It will wind up being pretty close to zero. The major banks are simply stopping investment in Africa. The problem

Trade also has been a problem. "African commodities are bringing 1985-level prices but they're paying 1986-levle prices for what they import," he said. African currencies often are overvalued, which means that their goods go unpurchased. The 1973 Arab oil embargo, in particular, had disastrous consequences.

"Attempts at industrialization have, in general, failed very badly. The good news is that everyone, both the African governments and the U.S. in Africa. Seven countries have major insurgencies, most of which are rural-based. It's easy for people in the countryside to acquire arms and there has been a "breakdown in central authority."

"About half of the African governments came to power through coup d'etats. Most countries have only two real institutions: the security forces (the army and police) and the bureaucracy. There have been 57 incidents of military intervention in Africa since the 1950s. I'm afraid that will continue. And internally, Libya and South government, has recognized the problem. The most important task is to rebuild African agriculture."

Natural disasters — such as the cyclical drought that caused the famine in Ethiopia and Sudan in 1984 — have hurt Africa, Wettering said. Fortunately, a potential locust plague was averted recently, thanks to early detection. "The cycle (of locusts) was stopped for the moment. Over one million people are alive today because of food that would have been eaten by locusts."

Insurgencies, which "look to be a trend of the future," also have hindered economic development Africa have been disruptive influences."

Many African nations, including Tanzania and Mozambique, have rejected the theory of a socialist economy. "Socialist economy is widely discredited among Africans of all political stripes. But Marxism-Leninism is still popular," because it enables countries to receive Soviet and East Bloc assistance.

Five African nations are classified by the Soviet Union as Marxist-Leninist and another 13 are considered "Socialist-oriented," said Wettering.

had little or no trust in these professions.

Sixty-nine percent of the students said religion was important to varying degrees in their lives, and 26 percent said they attended religious services at least once a week; 51 percent attend at least once a month.

The survey also provided an insight into financial habits of students, including the fact that 48 percent live off campus, and in effect run households.

Fifty percent of the respondents get more than half of their discretionary income from their own earnings, and 58 percent of those said they earned over $2,000 last year, while 25 percent earned over $5,000.

When it comes to discretionary spending, 61 percent said they had $100 per month or more to spend. Nineteen percent in that group has between $150-249 and another 19 percent spend $250 or more. Largest dollar expenditures by students during the school year were at the college store, with a median of $248.61.

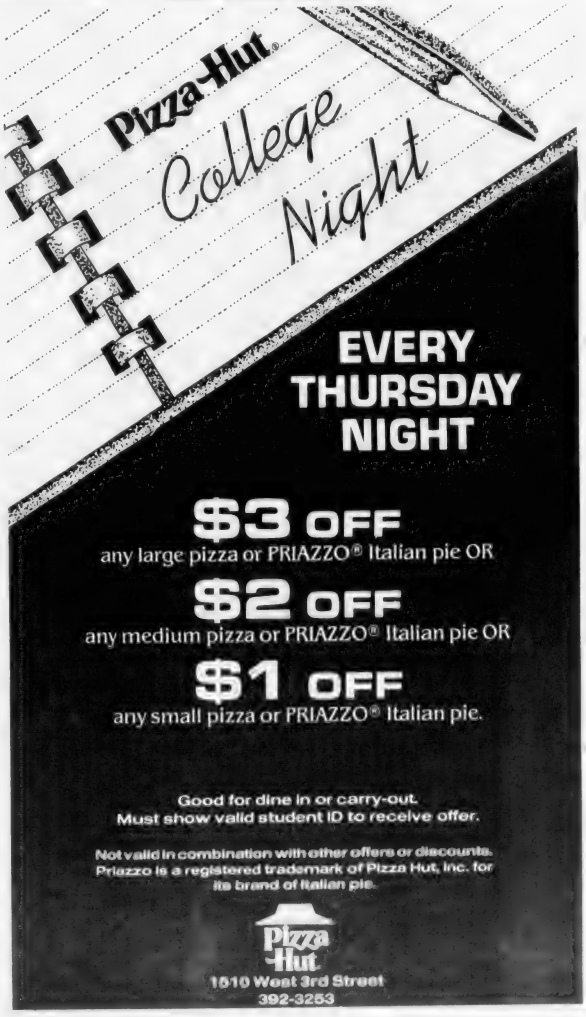
Ninety-six percent said they spent more money on clothing during the past school year than on any other category — with a median expenditure of $187.40. Four percent of all discretionary income was spent on health and beauty aids.

In other survey highlights, 56 percent have and use bank credit cards, 41 percent have borrowed money to attend college, and 86 percent have savings accounts. College students are owners of high-priced items as well: Sixteen percent have a new car, 39 percent purchased a used car; 78 percent own a television set, 66 percent a stereo system; 36 percent a 35mm camera and 17 percent a computer.

Peace Corps Book Drive

The recent book drive for the Peace Corps, sponsored by Longwood College's chapter of Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity, yielded what can only be described as a bounty.

A total of 4,327 usable books were donated, plus some 400 magazines.



"We really appreciate the generosity of the Farmville community and the Longwood organizations and students who supported our project," said Colleen Vaughan, Alpha Phi Omega vice president for service. "The response was just great."

Members of the fraternity have counted, sorted, and boxed the books. Most of them will be shipped to the Peace Corps headquarters in Washington, D.C., to be used by workers in many countries in teaching English.

"The national office of our fraternity will pay the freight charges to send the books by U. P. S." Vaughan said.

Among the books were some that, because of subject and "really excellent condition," will be offered to the Farmville-Prince Edward Community Library. "And we've decided to give some of the magazines to Eldercare, Holly Manor, and other places in the community," Vaughan said.

The books for the Peace Corps drive was a national Alpha Phi Omega project. "It looks like our chapter may be the top book collector in the country," Vaughan said. "Another chapter reports about two thousand books collected, but that's way below our total."

Looking for a few good men

Alumni volunteers can serve their colleges and universities by recruiting students, raising funds and "interpreting the institution's mission" to the legislature and the public, a prominent college advancement officer said at Longwood College recently.

Dr. Robert E. Linson, vice president for university relations at Ball State University, spoke to members of Longwood's Alumni Council and Founders Day Reunion Year committees on Nov. 15.

A 31-year veteran of college advancement work, he was one of the founders of the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). In 1984, he received the Frank Ashmore Award from CASE, the advancement profession's highest honor.

Alumni volunteers can do more than "just stuffing envelopes or selling tickets," he said. "We need to bring alumni together and turn them loose. They have all kinds of talent."

"We have to motivate volunteers. We have to find jobs that reflect credit on the person, as well as simply a job that needs to be done. There's an old saying in this work, 'Use me or lose me.'"

Volunteerism among college alumni is native to the United States and is just starting to catch on in other countries, he said. Yale University formed a class organization in 1792 and Williams College formed the first alumni association in 1821. The University of Virginia was the first public institution to form an alumni association, in 1838.

"We have to challenge more alumni into useful action. It's not a spectator sport but a participatory experience...And we have to get them involved early, because soon their loyalty will be divided among many competing institutions, such as the United Way and the YMCA."

"Many alumni are more than anxious to get involved — but they have to be asked. It's like raising money. If you don't ask for it, you're not going to get it."

Dr. Linson has served many times on the judging team for the CASE-U.S. Steel Foundation Alumni Fund awards. Last year, Longwood received the first place award for "Sustained Performance in Alumni Giving" for public institutions in that competition, and was a finalist in the "Improvement" category.

"Longwood is a good example of a fairly small college that has done a very good job of communicating with its alumni, telling alumni their needs, and bringing them in to look at the future of Longwood College," he said. "It's a pleasure to see that kind of support."

Dr. Beaver visits Longwood

Dr. Daniel Beaver, a prominent military historian, spoke several times at Longwood recently. Dr. Beaver, a professor of American history at the University of Cincinnati, is currently on leave from UC and is doing research for the Pentagon's Center of Military History. Dr. Beaver participated in the Vietnam Seminar Nov. 18 that was sponsored by Dr. David Calihan; he gave a public lecture that evening on "McKinley, Roosevelt and Wilson as Commanders-in-Chief," and he spoke to classes of Dr. Jack Millar and Dr. William Harbour.

Change and consistency could both be key words for the 1986-87 Longwood gymnastics team which opens its season Saturday with a meet at Radford with - William & Mary. Starting time is 2:30.

The Lancers will be competing for the first time under United States Gymnastics Federation sponsorship, rather than under the NCAA. Basically this means that Regional and National championships will be conducted by the USGF, although the change in affiliation will not affect competition rules.

Another change will be characaterized by the absence of two long-time Lancer standouts. Graduates Lisa Zuraw, last year-'s State vaulting champion and the holder of Longwood's all-time scorer for both vault and all-around, and Kelly Strayer, two-time Regional Champion and second highest Longwood all-around scorer, will both be missed in the all-around area, as well as in individual events.

With eight returning gymnasts, however, including two seniors and four juniors, coach Budd is hoping for more consistency in performance. Seniors Debbe Malin and Kerri Hruby have had three years of college competition, and their experience will definitely help.

Both gymnasts, in addition to junior Tammy Zeller and sophomores Lynda Chenoweth and Kim Booth, will be working for all-around spots on the team.

Juniors Leslie Jaffee, Teresa Robey, and Mary Schaefer round out of the group of returnees as event specialists.

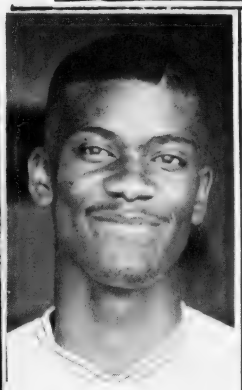
Newcomer Kiersten Artese who has competed in both club and high school gymnastics, could be a big plus for the Lancers as an all-around. Kiersten is especially strong in floor and beam.

Sophomore Kelley Paz, returning to gymnastics after a semester's layoff, is also working all four events, as are freshmen Monique Voehringer and Robin White. The list of newcomers is completed with Amy Spiers, who is concentrating primarily on floor and beam.

Several of Longwood's opponents have changed divisions and will be competing as Division I schools this year, meaning that over half of the Lancers' competition will be against Division I teams. Coach Budd admits that this could make things even tougher for the Division II Longwood gymnasts.

"However," she points out, "last year at the State championships, we surprised everyone (including ourselves!) by defeating both Virginia Division I teams, so that proves the divisional classification does not necessarily indicate success!"

Soccer Wins State



VISA champion Longwood, which beat Christopher-Newport 2-1 November 19 for the state title, has landed three players on the first team and three on the second team in the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association All-State selections.

Junior back Jeff Robinson was the leading vote-getter on the squad with 73 points, while Lancer teammates Mike Edge and John Barone also made the first team. Edge is a midfieldler while Barone plays forward.

Robinson had two assists and three goals, Barone six assists and 10 goals and Edge two assists and six goals as Longwood finished up 13-5-2 and ranked 14th in Division II.

Making the second team for Longwood were goalkeeper Dave Goerke back Erick Karn and midfielder Mahfoud Kyoud.

PLAYERS Of The Week!

Freshman Kevin Jefferson led Longwood's men's basketball team to its first Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament title November 21-22 and for his performance, the 6-4 cager has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period November 16-23. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

The tournament Most Valuable Player, Jefferson scored 24 points in the Lancers' 104-56 win over Newport News Apprentice and came back with 20 points in the team's 78-71 win over Queens in the championship contest.

"Kevin's play was exceptional, particularly for a freshman," said Longwood coach Cal Luther. "He made several excellent moves defensively, adjusting to changing situations on the court. If he continues to improve, Kevin should be an outstanding college player.

Sophomore guard Angee Middleton scored 20 points and hit two clutch free throws to clinch a 60-59 women's basketball win over Hampton University last Monday, and for her performance, she has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period November 23-30. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

A much improved 5-6 cager, Middleton went to the line with no time showing on the clock and Longwood trailing Hampton 59-58. She calmly hit both ends of a two-shot opportunity to give the Lady Lancers a 60-59 victory.

She finished with 20 points, hit eight of eight free throws and handed out four assists in the upset win.

Currently averaging 16 points per game, Middleton has earned a spot in the starting lineup.

Sports Wrap Up

Men's Basketball

Rebound leader Quintin Kearney had 16 points, and 10 rebounds in Longwood's 83-49 loss at Alabama Birmingham Saturday.

Longwood's men's basketball team returns home this week to host the Central Virginia Doubleheader Friday and Saturday nights in Lancer Hall. The Lancers dropped an 83-49 decision at Alabama-Birmingham Saturday night after stopping Guilford 93-82 last Tuesday.

Now 3-1, Longwood will face New York Tech Friday night at 7:05 when Local Merchants Night will be observed, and Liberty University will play St. Thomas at 9:00. Saturday night the two teams will switch opponents with the Lancers playing St. Thomas at 7:05 and Liberty meeting New York Tech at 9:00. Boy Scout Night will be held Saturday with all Weyanoke District scouts coming to the game in uniform receiving free admission.

Coach Cal Luther hopes to use Saturday's loss at UAB as a learning experience for his young team. Longwood was simply outmatched in size and talent by the Sun Belt Conference Blazers.

"I told our players after the game that I was pleased with their effort against UAB," said Luther. "But, the game showed us some areas we need to work on if we expect to improve. I still feel we have the opportunity to do well in our upcoming games."

Longwood trailed 31-21 at the half, but could have been even except for 12 turnovers. Art Monroe scored 10 points in the first period, but was also guilty of several turnovers. The 6-0 junior popped in eight points as Longwood outscored UAB 10-4 to erase much of a 21-9 deficit.

The Lancers trailed by just 25-19 with 2:54 left after a Monroe layup, but UAB got three easy buckets to take a 10-point lead into the lockeroom.

UAB's starters measured 6-9, 6-7, 7-1, 6-4, and 6-4, compared to the Lancer lineup topped by Quintin Kearney at 6-6. Kearney more than held his own with the taller Blazers, but the height disadvantage proved too much for Longwood in the second half.

Kearney operated effectively against 7-1 Alan Ogg, the Blazers' prize freshman, and finished with 16 points, 10 rebounds and four blocked shots. UAB, however, won the battle of the boards by a 47-31 margin.

Lancer forwards Kevin Jefferson and Darryl Rutley, both 6-4, came into the game averaging 21.7 points per contest. Outmatched by the taller Blazers, Rutley and Jefferson scored but five points between them. Rutley fouled out at the 8:20 mark of the second half.

Longwood played well at home in last Tuesday's 93-82 win over Guilford as Monroe (26 points), Rutley (25) and Jefferson (21) led the way. Ricks contributed eight points, 10 assists and six steals and freshman Doug Poppe came off the bench in relief of Kearney to grab 10 rebounds and score six points. The win stretched the current home court win streak to 12 in a row.

The Lancers began their season by winning the Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament title November 21-22 in Lancer Hall. Getting great balance from its starting five, Longwood beat Newport News Apprentice 104-56 and Queens 78-71 to win the tourney title. Queens advanced to the finals with a 74-67 win over Bloomsburg, which beat Newport News 79-70 in overtime to take third place.

Jefferson took Most Valuable Player honros and was joined by three teammates on the All-Tournament team. He scored 24 points in the opening win and came back with 20 in the championship. The freshman also came up with two big steals when Longwood took control of the championship game in the second half.

Kearney dominated play in the first half against Queens, helping the Lancers take a 46-39 lead. The 6-6 senior had 23 rebounds 27 points in the two games. Monroe had 13 points the first night, but really found his shooting touch in the second half against Queens, popping in 16 points and scoring a game-high 26 for the night. The 6-0 junior also fed Jefferson for an alley-oop dunk which ignited the Lancer faithful.

Rutley scored 26 points in his debut and tallied 14 in the championship game. He also had 17 rebounds in the two games. He hit 12 of 15 shots from the floor and grabbed 11 rebounds against the Shipbuilders. The 6-4 junior showed no ill effects from a year's layoff after transferring to Longwood from Monmouth.

Ricks handed out nine assists and made but one turnover in the title game. The 6-3 guard also played excellent defense. Longwood actually held a 78-57 lead over Queens with under five minutes to go, before the Knights closed fast with a 14-0 run at the end.

Par-Bil's Food Store owners Parker Wheeler and Bill Grogan presented Longwood with a $5000 gift to the general athletic scholarship in honor of Longwood Player of the Tournament Kevin Jefferson.

All Region

Four members of Longwood's State Champion soccer team have been named to the Division II All-South Atlantic Region soccer team, voted by the region coaches.

Freshmen John Barone and Mike Edge, junior Jeff Robinson, and senior Erick Karn, were the Lancers named All-Region.

The foursome played a big role in Longwood's 13-5-2 season and 2-1 triumph over Christopher-Newport in the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association title game November 19. Robinson and Karen are backs while Barone is a forward and Edge a midfielder.

Also named to the team were: Sam Johnson and Edward Tetteh of Liberty, Paul Grimes, Andres Larrson, and David Archbold of Davis & Elkins, Jeff Burns of Randolph-Macon and goalkeeper Larry Howley of Mount St. Mary's. Archbold and Tetteh are forwards, Larrson and Burns midfielders and Johnson and Grimes backs.

Women's Basketball

Boosted by a thrilling 60-59 win over Hampton University last Tuesday, Longwood's women's basketball team hosts Navy Tuesday night at 7:30 and plays in the Elon College Tournament Friday and Saturday in action this week.

It will be Faculty-Staff Appreciation Night Tuesday when the Naval Academy comes to town. All Longwood faculty and staff and their families will be admitted free to the contest.

Longwood, now 1-1, will face Concord College in the first round of the Elon Tournament Friday night at 6:30 in Burlington, N.C., with the host Christians taking on Methodist at 8:00. The championship game is set for 3:00 Saturday afternoon with the third place contest at 1:30.

Coach Shirley Duncan got some bad news last week when she learned that junior center Barbie Burton will be out of action from four to six weeks with a badly sprained left knee. Burton, a 6-2 junior from Yorktown High School, injured her knee in last Monday's win over Hampton.

"Losing Barbie reduces our depth inside," said Duncan. "She has been a solid player for us coming off the bench. Dee McDaniels may see more action now."

McDaniels is a 6-0 freshman who has seen only limited playing time thus far.

Tuesday night, Longwood will likely go with a starting lineup of Caren Forbes and Angee Middleton at the guards, Kita Chambers and Sandy Rawdon at the forwards and Karen Boska at center.

Middleton and Boska are averaging 16 points per game to lead the Lady Lancers thus far. Boska is pulling down 11 rebounds per contest and Chambers is averaging 10 points and eight rebounds.

Longwood's final game before exams will be at Virginia Commonwealth next Tuesday (Dec. 9).

Riding Team

Eight members of the Longwood riding team earned ribbons at an inter-collegiate horse show November 23, in Lynchburg. The show was hosted by Randolph-Macon Woman's College and Lynchburg College.

Placing for the Lancers were: Mike Carey, 6th intermediate over fences, Karen Clark, 3rd open flat, Kimberlee DeShazo, 2nd novice flat, Robin McGowan, 4th advanced walk-trot, Elizabeth Shivik, 4th intermediate flat, Robin Walker, 4th advanced walk-trot-canter, Laurey Wilkens, 5th beginner walk-trot-canter and Jennifer Winn, 4th beginner walk-trot-canter.

Wrestling

By Kirk Barnes

Eight of Longwood's ten wrestlers placed in the top four November 21-22 at the Elon Tournament in Burlington, North Carolina. No team standings were kept, but the Longwood grapplers placed more wrestlers than any of the other eleven teams participating.

The grapplers next match is Wednesday when they travel to William and Mary for a 4:00 confrontation with the Tribe and Hiram.

Tim Fitzgerald and John Stukes captured first place honors in the 118 and 134 pound class, respectively. Tim won 7-3 in the finals while John defeated his opponent 4-3.

Tommy Gilbert, 142 pounds and Billy Howard, 158 pounds placed third in the tournament. Pete Whitman, 150 pounds, Chris Burton, 167 pounds, John Kelly, 190 pounds, and Jesus Straus, heavyweight captured fourth place honors.

Longwood has been ranked third in Virginia among college division teams.

Longwood Students Study Abroad

Some Longwood College students did something last summer other than work a temporary job or acquire a tan.

Several went to a bullfight and the famous Prado art museum in Madrid, others visited the Black Forest in Germany, and one picnicked in France's cave region and toured the Louvre in Paris.

Eight students took part in a four-week program at the University of Madrid in Spain. Two others studied at the Goethe Institute in West Germany for eight weeks. Another studied at the University of Toulouse in France for about a month.

The study-abroad programs, which focus on language and culture, are part of Longwood's emphasis on international awareness.

"Everybody should go to a foreign country at least once," said Laurie McManaway, a senior from Bedford who went to Madrid. "You'll learn to appreciate this country even more, because we're so fortunate here."

Students at the University of Madrid, among them sophomore Rick Osborn of Farmville, took two courses, which included language, art at the Prado, and international public relations. They also went to a bullfight in which a matador was hurled into the air, toured the Prado — which has works by Picasso, Goya and El Greco — and went to villages in southern Spain. In Granada, they saw the Alhambra, a famous 14th-century Moorish palace.

Spaniards are a friendly, sociable people who like to go to discotheques and bars in the evening, but public drunkenness is almost unheard of, the students say.

"They're carefree," said Susan Alonso, a junior from Miami. "Whatever happens tomorrow, happens tomorrow. They care only about today. They're not ruled by the clock like we are. They might go out partying and get only three hours' sleep before having to go to work the next day."

One cultural difference is that Spanish women almost never wear shorts or jeans. "That's why I stuck out like a sore thumb; I was wearing jeans," said Alonso, whose grandparents were native Spaniards and whose parents immigrated to the U.S. from Cuba. "In Spain, even if you're poor, you dress well."

When she wore shorts one day, McManaway was scolded by an elderly Spanish woman who considered her "very immoral." Oddly, though, topless sunbathing is commonplace. "At an apartment pool one day, only myself and another American were wearing tops," McManaway said. "We were stared at because we were different. We felt weird."

Dr. Maria Silveira, a Longwood Spanish professor, has taught at the University of Madrid the past two years and is one of the program's directors. Her brother-in-law, Dr. Jorge Silveira, who teaches at Hampden-Sydney College, also has taught there and also is a director.

Chris Jacobs, who has since graduated, and Kerri Hruby studied at the Goethe Institute. It's in Staufen, a small, picturesque town in southwest Germany, about 20 miles from the French and Swiss borders.

"The people there were very friendly and eager to please," said Hruby, a senior from Ellicott City, Md. "I went horseback riding, saw a jumping competition and watched the World Cup soccer final (West Germany lost to Argentina) in a German home...The local wine was excellent, because Staufen is in a wine-growing region."

While the Madrid students stayed at a dormitory with other American students, Hruby was lodged in a German home with an international flavor. She shared a room with a Brazilian girl; two students from Togo and Panama lived in the basement; and the German host and hostess didn't speak English.

Hruby also visited Austria, Belgium, France and Switzerland, staying in elderhostels. She saw her fiance, a Longwood graduate who is an Army officer stationed in Bitburg, West Germany. After graduating next year, Hruby will marry in July and move to Bitburg.

Craig Hardy, a senior from Midlothian, studied at the University of Toulouse, located in a city of 900,000 in southern France. Longwood is one of three American colleges that has an exchange agreement with the University.

"Toulouse is kind of like the (American) South," said Hardy, one of only five students in his class. "People are friendly and open and hospitable. They have less exposure to Americans than people in Paris. They're not sick of us."

With fellow Americans and French citizens, he went on picnics in the nearby Lot River Valley, which is famous for its caves that contain prehistoric artwork. He spent three days in Paris, went to Lyon to meet a pen pal he had corresponded with for four years, and visited a family in Montargis he stayed with during a trip to France in 1982.

All but one of the students are fluent in their chosen foreign language and they were pleased with their ability to communicate. There were some minor problems, though.

Debbie Jessup, a senior from Richmond, said the taxicab drivers in Madrid were difficult to understand because they use a lot of slang. Osborn has some trouble shopping for clothes because all the measurements are in metric.

"One day I was shopping for a sweater and I couldn't remember the verb for 'to put on,'" he recalled. "I used the wrong verb — 'to take out,' or something like that. Eventually, the saleslady understood what I was trying to say and corrected me."

Osborn missed American food. "Spanish food has a lot of garlic and we got sick of French fries, which they served us every day. I ate at McDonald's two or three times. They also have a Burger King, a Wendy's and a pizza parlor in Madrid."

Patty Fishback, a senior from Lovingston who went to Madrid, speaks little Spanish but picked some up. "It comes to you, because you hear it all the time," she said. "I tried to communicate in Spanish — and that helped."

By going to a foreign country, said Osborn, "you definitely catch an ear for the language. Even if you don't improve your speech, you improve your comprehension."

McManaway credits the international public relations course she took with giving her a new perspective. "You learn not to judge other cultures, you learn to understand other cultures. The first week there, I went through culture shock. I made the mistake of judging their culture. It was kind of bumpy at first, but I had a wonderful time."

A Word From The New Editor

First of all, I would like to express how excited I am to be the new editor of the Rotunda. I hope to innovate many new ideas into the paper that will satisfy the needs of the students, faculty and administration of the college. Next, I want to explain a simple principle of life: Things do not change, unless you make them change. The administration and faculty can't read the minds of the students, nor can the students read their minds.

Surveys are not another way to add to your pile of monotonous work. Ms. Mable and her staff do not make up these things as a new form of cruel and unusual punishment. It isn't to keep you from soap operas or partying. If a complaint or suggestion isn't heard, nothing can be done about it. An example of this is the dining hall service. I have only been here two and a half years, but the dining hall has improved immensely. I was so excited to have chunky blue cheese other than the kind that squirts out like ketchup. These changes occurred because students voiced their opinions. If you don't like family style, tell them. If you do like family style, tell them.

Last week Sheri Nunn, Longwood's nutritionist and lower dining hall manager, came to the Ambassador meeting and spoke on nutrition. She asked for suggestions about the dining hall, and she got them. Maybe all the suggestions won't materialize (I don't think Bob Smith will get his sushi bar), but maybe some will.

Janet Greenwood holds open forums concerning different issues to receive input from everyone. Only a handful of students show up to voice their opinions, and this does not represent the school. S.G.A. is another vice. Meetings are held every Thursday night at 6:00 p.m. at Lankford in the Leadership Conference Room. Remember, the students elected the members of S.G.A. Writing editorials to the Rotunda is another way to voice views for everyone. If you don't like something, say so, and maybe it will change. If you do like something, say so, and it might stay.

CAMPUS NOTES

Delta's Honored

By JEFF ALLGOR

This past weekend Skip Winchester, Jamie Faison, John Dennis, Jeff Allgor and Bob Smith from the Zeta Mu Chapter of Delta Sigma Phi attended the East Coast Leadership conference at N.C. State in Raleigh, N.C. The conference included a chartering of a new colony and seminars on issues such as legal liabilities and anti-hazing.

At the awards banquet, Longwood's Greek Man of the Year for 1986, Bob Smith, was awarded Delta Sigma Phi's Outstanding Active of the Year. This award is given to only two brothers across the country out of all current actives (12,000). Bob also was honored with an Order of the Sphinx Medallion for service to his college and his fraternity.

The Zeta Mu chapter announced that they will host the Spring Conclave here at Longwood College. Delta's from all over the east coast will attend this gala weekend event. The Deltas expect approximately 300 brothers to participate in this Leadership Retreat.

Silberman

Photographs and mixed media works by Rebecca Silberman are featured in the Showcase Gallery (1st floor hallway, Bedford) through Dec. 12. Ms. Silberman completed requirements for the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree, cum laude, from Longwood this past summer. She is now taking advanced courses in French at the College and plans to begin graduate school next fall to pursue the Master of Fine Arts degree in painting. Her exhibit includes more than 30 recent works, many of which are for sale.

Math Winners

Ty Bordner and Kevin Spencer were the winners of two math contests sponsored recently by the Mathematics and Computer Science department.

Bordner, a math major from Herndon, won the contest for students in calculus and above, which was the higher-level contest. He received a check for $75.

Kevin Spencer, an elementary education major from Lexington, Ky., won the contest for the level below calculus. He also took home a $75 check.

The two contests, held Nov. 6, drew 28 participants and were designed to generate interest in mathematics. They featured challenging problems posed by math professors. A similar contest was held last spring.

In the contest won by Bordner, Philip Sprinkle was second, Grace Vanhouten was third and Jennifer Swann was fourth.

In the other contest, Allen Fountain and Pat Holland tied for second, Mary Dickerson was fourth, Vicki Francis was fifth and Matt Morgan was sixth.

Concert Choir

Longwood College's Camerata Singers and Concert Choir will give their traditional Candlelight Concert on Tuesday evening, December 9, at 8 o'clock in Farmville Baptist Church.

The program will feature sacred music of the season. The Concert Choir will sing "Carol of the Bells," "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," "The Virgin's Slumber Song," and others.

The Camerata Singers' program includes "What Is This Lovely Fragrance?" three pieces by William Mathias, "Coventry Carol," and others.

The concert will conclude with a choir and audience carol sing.

The Candlelight Concert is open to the public at no charge.

Glamour

Longwood students are invited to participate in GLAMOUR Magazine's 1987 Top Ten College Women Competition. Young women from colleges and universities throughout the country will compete in GLAMOUR's search for ten outstanding students. A panel of GLAMOUR editors will select the winners on the basis of their solid records of achievement in academic studies and-or extracurricular activities on campus or in the community.

The 1987 Top Ten College Women will be featured in GLAMOUR's August College Issue. During May, June or July, the ten winners will receive an all-expenses-paid trip to New York City and will participate in meetings with professionals in their area of interest.

Anyone who is interested in entering the search should contact Niki Fallis, Office of Career Planning and Placement, for more information. The deadline for submitting an application to GLAMOUR is December 19, 1986.

On His Toes

By Marna Bunger

Through an exchange-grant program, Dr. Nelson Neal and his family recently spent time teaching at Jyvaskyla University, Finland.

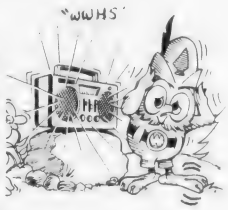
Neal, who has been Longwood's Dance Company Director for the past four years, was in Finland January 28-August 28 teaching modern dance, dance choreography and dance in education. Mrs. Marna Neal taught conversational English to sophomores while their 10-year-old daughter attended the Normal School.

Jyvaskyla University has the only physical education major in the nation. Dr. Neal found the university students were hard workers. They were more skilled in dance because they were P.E. majors; unlike Longwood's dance classes which have various majors fulfilling general education requirements.

The current members of the Dance Company are Kelly Shannon, President, Sandi Dovel, Amy Harrell, Kim O'Conner, Kim Cecil and Taddy Espigh. New members include Allison Cole, Alison Miller and Susan Hanks.

Next semester Tammy Tipton will take over as Dance Company Director. She plans to hold tryouts January 19-21 from 3:30-5 p.m. in the dance studio. All interested males and females should watch for upcoming information on the Company.

After finishing at Jyvaskyla, Dr. Neal spent 12 weeks at the Normal School teaching 2nd-6th graders modern dance. He also taught four dance workshops for kids in another small city.



After finishing teaching, the Neal family spent the last two and one-half months sightseeing in 14 European countries before returning to Longwood.

Longwood Football?

By MICHELLE HUMMER

Longwood Football 10-0. You have seen the bumper stickers and, of course, the Longwood Football jerseys. It's a big joke, Longwood vs. UCLA, home, be there! It takes a lot more than stickers and t-shirts to make a football team, though.

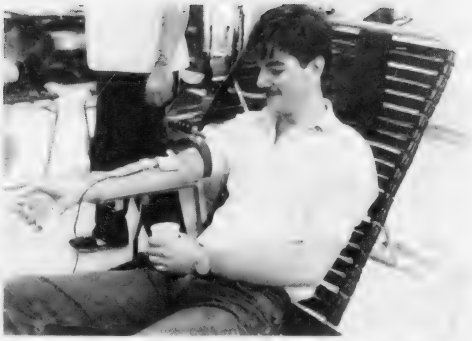
In order to form a football team, Longwood must institute a five-year plan for athletes. The plan is being considered by the Intercollegiate Athletic Committee which began reviewing the college's athletic program last spring. Since the addition of men to the campus in 1976, however, the subject of football has not even been formally discussed as a possibility. The plan is being considered more for the existing sports at Longwood.

Along with the five-year plan, Longwood needs a stadium, not to mention a place to put one. The soccer field could be transformed into a multi-purpose stadium, but parking would be a major problem. Longwood has limited parking already.

Finally, in order to get a football team at Longwood off the ground, a mere 2 million dollars must be raised through private gifts and increased student fees. With only 2,789 students, a football program will increase tuition by more than 700 dollars.

If, by some small miracle, we do get the funds, stadium, and the approval for a football team it will take a number of years to get a full schedule of games. The college's size and location limit it to Division II and Division III. If a Division II team, Longwood will offer football scholarships, requiring more funds. Most likely, the team will be Division III, offering no scholarships, but traveling great distances for games. Most Division III teams in Virginia are in conferences and are locked into schedules for up to five years. So as a Division III team, Longwood will play teams from nearby states. In the end, scheduling could be the biggest headache.

The decision to create a football team at Longwood College will come only after a careful study of the value of such a major step. As you see, the sides are about even:

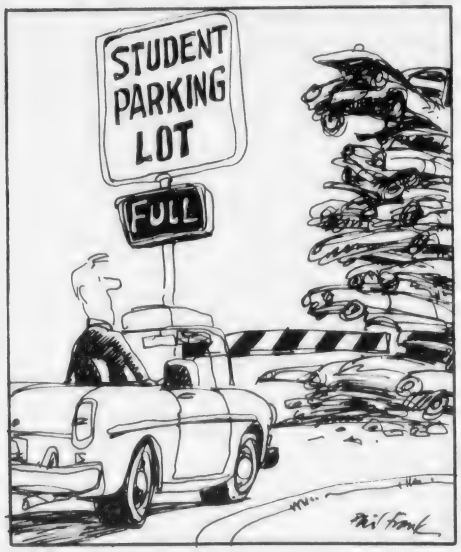


Pros

+ positive effect on enrollment
+ increased school spirit
+ profit from home games

Cons

+ increased tuition
+ parking problems
+ loss from home games



At this point, the fate of Longwood College Football is in the students' hands. It will take much work, money, and time, but in the end, the addition of football could put Longwood College on the map.

This Longwood student was among 149 persons who gave blood during a recent bloodmobile in Lankford. The six-hour bloodmobile, held Dec. 3, was sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, a service fraternity. The group sponsors a bloodmobile every year. Longwood faculty, staff and students were among the donors, who included 23 persons giving blood for the first time.

Merry Christmas!

T'was the night before Break
And all through the college,
Every student was stirring,
At least to my knowledge.
All the rooms were set up in Holiday cheer,
In hopes that the decorations would bring Christmas more near.
The books were stacked up under everyone's beds
And visions of real sleep and food danced in their heads.
When suddenly there arose such a noise,
Every girl ran to the window to see if there were Hampden-Sydney boys,
They opened the windows — and what should appear?
But 20 hungry Deltas coming too near.
"My God, my hair!", all the girls screamed in fright.
And they ran to the mirrors to see their sight,
While the Deltas just stood there singing in line
Wondering just what the girls had in mind.
Not a word said the girls, but they went straight to work.
They flew back to the windows and decided not to flirt!
They closed the windows and pulled down the shades,
But even with this action
The Deltas were not phased.
Together they went and ascended the stairs
And came face to face with the girls' glares.
The girls cried, "We want respect, more than a one night stand.
We want conversations not just the feel of your hand!"
So out with you boys, out with you all
Dash away, dash away, dash away all!"
Dumfounded the boys left, (they decided not to fight)
They went back to their rooms
Alone for the night.
And as they walked the girls heard them cry,
"Gee, Longwood girls have feelings too,
And not just nice thighs!"

Smith in Japan

Longwood women's golf coach, Dr. Barbara Smith, left Friday for Japan and the 12th NCAA-sponsored United States-Japan golf competition.

Dr. Smith will be coaching the U.S. team of Florida's Page Dunlap, New Mexico's Caroline Keggi and Kentucky's Kate Rogerson. The U.S. contingent, which also includes a men's team coached by Wake Forest's Jesse Haddock, arrived in Japan Sunday.

After two days of practice, the teams will engage in match play against their Japanese opponents for three days and return to the United States December 14.

Dr. Smith is the first coach of a non-Division I team to be chosen to lead the U.S. Women's group in the competition. She is recognized as one of the top women's golf coaches in the country.

Chenowith Paces Gymnasts

By RICK RIVERA

The Longwood gymnastics team traveled to Radford Saturday to participate in a tri-meet along with the Highlanders and William & Mary. The Lancers placed third, but coach Ruth Budd expected the outcome under the circumstances.

Being Division I schools, Radford and William and Mary were able to compete under different rules. For the two Division I colleges the competition was basically a scrimmage. Radford and William & Mary were able to enter all their gymnasts and then choose the top six scorers to represent them. Longwood, on the other hand, had to designate six representatives beforehand.

The Lancers top scorer was Lynda Chenoweth with an all-around score of 32.75 for seventh place out of 14. Chenoweth placed third on the beam with 8.6 and was Longwood's highest finisher on bars with an 8.05.

Kiersten Artese had a good showing, capturing fourth on the vault with an 8.55 and was the Lancers' top floor gymnast with a 7.95. The judges, as a rule, were not very generous on floor exercise.

Overall, coach Budd felt that it was an excellent opportunity for the Lancers to see exactly how much work they must do.

Lynda Chenowith

"It gave our freshmen their first look at collegiate gymnastics and I think that will help us work harder," said Budd.

Coach Budd said that due to limited access time in the gym to work on these skills, Longwood goes into meets with schools that can practice five days a week on the floor as compared to the Lancers' two.

Coach Budd was not surprised with the outcome of the meet and expects her team to improve. She was pleased with all the performances and is looking forward to the upcoming meets.

Longwood opens its home slate January 16, hosting William & Mary.

"Coach of the Year"

Longwood soccer coach Rich Posipanko has been voted Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association "Coach of the Year" for the second time in his career. The honor was voted by the VISA coaches.

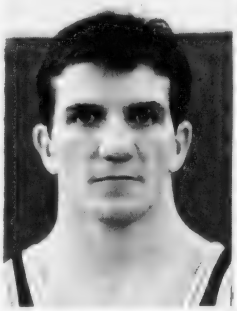
Posipanko, who led Longwood to its third state title in five years this fall, has an outstanding 88-41-18 record in eight years with the Lancers. He guided LC to a 13-5-2 mark and a 14th place national ranking in Division II. Longwood upset Christopher-Newport 2-1 in the VISA title game November 19.

Also picked as VISA's top coach in 1982, Posipanko led Longwood to state titles in 1982 and 1984 when the Lancers tied with Mary Washington for the crown. He was also named Mid-Atlantic Division II Coach of the Year in 1982.

A native of Levittown, PA, and a graduate of Slippery Rock University, Posipanko had coached several All-Americans and numerous All-Region and All-State players over the years.

Fitzgerald Still Undefeated

By KIRK BARNES



Senior Tim Fitzgerald won his weight class and Longwood finished a respectable fourth out of eight teams in the York College Invitational Wrestling Tournament Saturday in York, Pennsylvania.

Five Longwood grapplers placed in Saturday's tournament. Fitzgerald finished first at 118 pounds with a 3-0 record, John Stukes, 134, was third, Billy Howard, 158, was second, David Taylor, 177, was third, and Jesus Strauss, heavyweight, finished second.

Coach Nelson was extremely satisfied with Fitzgerald's performance. The senior's record stands at 9-0. Longwood's 55 points was good for fourth out of eight teams competing in Saturday's tournament.

"Tim turned in a sensational performance," said the coach. "He wrestled well against some tough opponents. He has gotten off to a terrific start in his last season."

Aided by four forfeits, the Lancers ripped Hiram 35-14 and fell to William & Mary 34-9 in a pair of matches Wednesday at Williamsburg. The Tribe handed Longwood its first loss of the season. The Lancers' dual match record stands at 2-1.

Tim Fitzgerald

In Wednesday's contest Fitzgerald defeated Mark Zapf (W&M) 13-8 and got a forfeit from Hiram at 118 pounds. Stukes defeated Thierry Chaney (W&M) 4-3 and gained a forfeit at 134 pounds. Howard defeated his opponents 6-4 and 14-2 at 158 pounds.

Other Longwood winners Wednesday were Pete Whitman, 150, and Matt Meurer, 167, against Hiram.

"We lost some close matches against William & Mary," said Nelson. "We wrestled well in spots, but didn't have quite enough to beat William & Mary."

Longwood's next match will be January 14 against Hampden-Sydney and Davidson. The next home appearance will be in the Tiger-Lancer Duals January 30-31.

Boska Leads Lady Netters To Victory

Sparked by the outstanding play of center Karen Boska, Longwood's women's basketball team won two of three games last week. The Lady Lancers split two games in the Elon Tournament, losing to eventual champ Concord 82-67 Friday and clubbing Methodist 70-49 Saturday. Longwood beat Navy 70-65 last Tuesday.

This week Longwood visits Virginia Commonwealth Tuesday night at 7:30 to complete the 1986 part of the schedule. The Lady Lancers won't play again until January 10 when Pembroke visits.

Boska's play has been a highlight of the season thus far and last week was no exception. The 6-1 center has had double figures in both points and rebounds in four of Longwood's five games.

Against Navy she had 16 points and 15 rebounds, against Concord 15 points and 10 rebounds and in the win over Methodist she had 18 points and 16 rebounds. Boska is averaging 16.4 points and 12.6 rebounds while shooting an eye-popping 58.7 percent from the floor.

"She is playing the best of her career," said coach Shirley Duncan. "She has been extremely consistent in sustaining a high level of play."

Duncan attributes Boska's play to maturity and to the senior co-captain's desire to be a leader.

"Karen is undertaking the leadership role that she must take for us to be successful," explained the coach. "She had also been working hard to improve her game."

It was Boska and sophomore Sandy Rawdon who led the victory over Navy. Rawdon scored a career high 26 points and pulled down six rebounds. Forward Kita Chambers added 14 points and eight rebounds.

Against Concord Friday night in the first round of the Elon Tournament Longwood trailed by just 39-35 at the half before losing 82-67. Second half foul problems and inexperience off the bench hampered LC in the second period.

Karen Boska

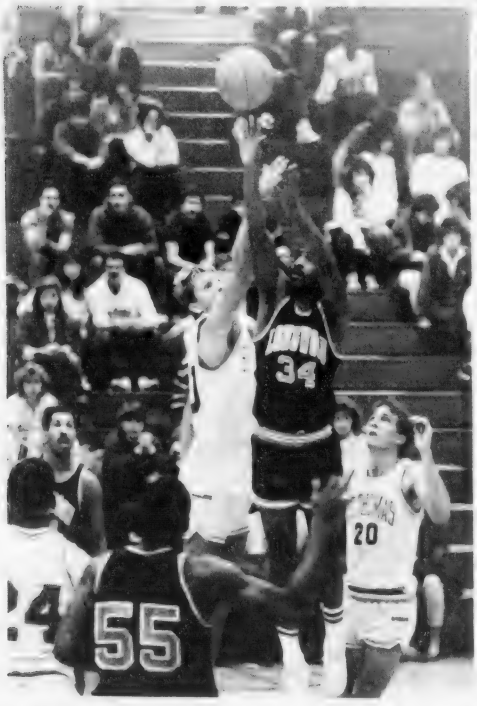
"We didn't shoot very well," said Duncan. "We had problems from the free throw line (5-12) and the floor (31-75). We missed a lot of layups and short jumpers."

In addition to Boska's 15 points and 10 rebounds, Longwood got 16 points from Angee Middleton, 14 from Caren Forbes and 10 points from both Rawdon and Chambers.

Backing up Boska in Saturday's win over Methodist were Forbes with 10 points and six assists and Middleton with 10 points. Concord defeated Elon 70-61 to win the tournament championship.

Men's Basketball Ties Record

Longwood's men's basketball team tied the school record for consecutive homecourt wins over the weekend, beating visiting New York Tech 94-55 Friday and St. Thomas 86-76 Saturday in the Central Virginia Doubleheader.



The 5-1 Lancer cagers are off to their best start since the 1979-80 team began the season 12-0. The '79-80 club ended up 28-3 and fourth in Division III. Saturday, Longwood tied the record for consecutive home wins (14) set by the '79-80 and '80-81 teams. Longwood has not lost at home since December 9, 1985.

Liberty University also won its two games in the second Central Virginia Doubleheader, beating St. Thomas 87-61 and New York Tech 74-48.

This week Longwood closes out its 1986 schedule, hosting Pembroke Monday (today) and visiting Virginia Wesleyan Wednesday for a 7:30 contest. The Lancers will break for exams and Christmas before resuming play January 3 at home against Tiffin.

A practice injury suffered by guard Bobby Dobson has weakened Longwood's bench. Dobson, a sophomore, cracked a bone in his right wrist last week and is questionable for this week's action. He is one of the team's top ball-handlers.

The Lancers got solid contributions from all five starters and the bench in beating New York Tech and St. Thomas. Leading scorer Art Monroe pumped in 26 points, Darryl Rutley had 20 and Kevin Jefferson 18 in a hard-fought win over St. Thomas Saturday night.

LONGWOOD LEADER — Lancer cager Art Monroe (34) goes high for 2 of his 26 points Saturday night against St. Thomas.

Center Quintin Kearney dominated the inside with eight points, 11 rebounds, four blocked shots and ifve assists. Senior guard Kevin Ricks had another solid game with 10 points, four assists and three steals.

Longwood led most of the way against St. Thomas, but had to survive a 28-point performance by Bobcat guard Mike Dean. The Lancers led by just 68-65 with about seven minutes left, but went on an 8-1 tear to go up 76-66 with three minutes remaining.

Monroe, in his top performance to date, had six assists, five rebounds and made seven of eight free throws. Monroe, Ricks, Rutley and Jefferson played 39 minutes each.

All 10 Lancers scored in Friday's 94-55 win over New York Tech. Jefferson led the way with 24 points, followed by Monroe with 18 and Kearney with 14 points (7-8 field goals), 10 rebounds and four blocked shots. Monroe scored eight points in a 17-3 Longwood run at the beginning of the game which pretty much settled the issue.

Ricks, who is averaging nearly six assists and more than three steals per game, had seven assists in 28 minutes against New York Tech. The 6-3 guard has made just over two turnovers per game. Eric Pittman and Doug Poppe came off the bench to score eight points each.

Monroe is Longwood's scoring leader at 19.8 ppg., followed by Jefferson (18.7), Rutley (14.8), Kearney (11.7) and Ricks (5.8). Kearney is pulling down 9.8 rebounds per contest and has blocked 14 shots.

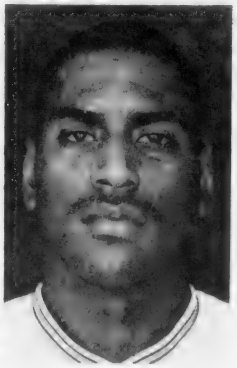
"We've made some mistakes, but we're working hard and improving," said the coach. "In the St. Thomas game we had to make some shots and play tough defense under pressure. It was a good test for us.

"Kearney has done a tremendous job for us inside," continued the coach. "He has blocked 12 shots in our last three games and has dominated the boards also."



Player of the Week

Junior guard Art Monroe scored 44 points in two Longwood basketball victories last week and led the Lancers to their 14th straight win at home, tying a school record. For his performance, Monroe has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period November 30 - December 7. Player of the Week is picked by Longwood sports information.

Monroe scored 26 points in Saturday's 86-76 win over St. Thomas and 18 the night before in a 94-55 triumph over New York Tech. For the week, the 6-0 guard hit 18 of 34 shots from the floor, seven of eight free throws, grabbed 11 rebounds, handed out 10 assists and collected six steals.

"Art played super over the weekend," said Lancer coach Cal Luther. "WHe hit some really big shots for us, particularly in the win over St. Thomas. He has made tremendous improvement in his defense since the season began. His scoring has been a key factor in our early season success."

Longwood's leading scorer with 19.8 ppg. average, Monroe has scored 26 points on three occasions thus far. He has also accumulated 22 rebounds, 18 assists, and 12 steals.

LONGWOOD'S WEEK IN THE FREEZER

By MATT PETERMAN

A second large snowstorm buried the Longwood Campus after more than 10 inches of snow fell Sunday night and Monday morning. The college subsequently closed cancelling all classes on Monday and early classes Tuesday.

The problem of clearing the snow remained critical, but difficult because of the amount of snow that had fallen. The parking lots were left unplowed as the main arteries of the campus were cleared in an attempt to connect it to the rest of the town. The crews received some encouragement as the sun came out late Monday afternoon.

The first snowstorm began Wednesday night and continued into Thursday morning. It was classified as one of the major storms to hit Longwood this decade causing the closure of the college.

The snowstorm stranded many students who ordinarily would have ventured home for the weekend. The record number of students burdened the dining hall and other services because of the shortage of employees able to come to work.

For many students who missed classes on Friday, for whatever reason, relaxed with a five day weekend which was mixed with snowball fights, football, and parties that in one instance left Par-Bils void of beer. Having so much time on hand many students caught up with school work that somehow had piled up in days past.

The year 1987 will be remembered by many as a year that began with bad weather. That would seem accurate for the college again is preparing itself for yet another snowstorm expected to hit toward the end of the week. The fun that was accompanied with the first storm is dying down with each additional storm that comes turning the expected snow into a new nightmare.

Editorial

Many issues were discussed in the President's Advisory Committee last Wednesday morning. One of these topics concerned changing the name of Longwood College to Longwood University. I disagreed with the fact that it should be changed. As an Ambassador, I find that many of the prospective students who come to Longwood for tours, spring weekend or Oktoberfest, come here because of the fact that we are a "small college." This is one reason why students pick Longwood over JMU or Tech. Of course, the size of the school will not change because of the name, but the word "university" gives an implication of this. I, as many other students did, chose Longwood because it is small.

Another problem with this name change is Alumni. When I call alumni for donations, many older women will not donate because Longwood is now co-ed. Changing the name is going to add to this problem. Since we are only given 40 percent of our funds by the state, we can't afford to lose anymore money. A point was brought up that it will look better on transcripts and resumes. This may be true to some extent, but an employer is more interested in your G.P.A. and extra-curricular activities.

This change will cost students money because of the changes that have to be made, such as the name changed on books, manuals, handbooks, paperwork, etc. Longwood is a small college in a small town, that is the way it should remain.

To The Editor:

This letter is in response to the article on S-UN. My main concern is what was written in bold print that read "HELP US BRING THE TYPES OF ENTERTAINMENT THAT STUDENTS WANT TO SEE!" What's the use? Most of the students in S-UN will listen and try to accomplish something when an idea is presented, but their director, Paul Striffolino, doesn't seem open-minded enough to try new ideas or even old ones which are still good.

For example, the Voltage Brothers are a good dance band who can pack the Lower Dining Hall. They will no longer be here because of too much exposure. If they draw a large crowd year after year and S-UN makes money on them, why cancel? The Romantics were booked for Longwood last year. No one knows for sure what happened, but S-UN members have told me that Mr. Striffolino cancelled them because Longwood students wouldn't like them. How does he know? He does deserve credit for booking of the Bangles, but much more needs to be accomplished. He's asking for leaders to take charge of the "REFRIGERATOR COMMITTEE"? Who wants to work with refrigerators? Not I. Bands like False Dimitri that play in the Lancer cafe are great. S-UN won't talk to them. They pack Lancer cafe almost every time they play. They could possibly even make S-UN a little money. Has anyone seen any surveys asking for advice on bands, mixers, etc.? Maybe when then S-UN decides to listen or ask questions themselves, more students will probably be willing to offer their help.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

Do you wonder, as I do whether we will get through the 80's without a major war? Great powers as well as small powers are now locked into hostile "action-reaction" cycles that threaten deadly games of military "chicken" where no side could say there is a winner. But the thing that worries me most about recent world geopolitical events is that people are starting to get nationalistic again.

Nationalism divides, it infuriates, it causes blindness and righteousness . . . it creates the nonsense that God is on our side. It is an illusion of sacredness. Nationalism is cultic in nature. And like any pseudo-religion, it demands the avoidance of reason in favor of faith that there needn't be any reason.

But in the recent re-birth of patriotism a new mentality has emerged. Grandpa used to say he went off to World War I just so my father would not have to go off to war. Then my father went off to World War II so my brother would not have to go off to war. And my brother went off to war perhaps so that his son will not have to go off to war. A terrible, vicious cycle and I ask when will it all end? Somewhere though, in the last decade things have become confused and somehow, unexplainably, the contention has now reversed. Today, I hear fellows say they will go off to fight because their grandfather, father, and brother have fought. Somehow these young people feel ashamed that they might miss their own chance to experience war as a right of passage. How could this be happening? How could the young people so directly miss the point of those who have seen war, know it, and abhor it? Could a father actually want his son to go experience war simply because he chose to? Have we learned nothing?

Nationalism is actually worship of the dead. The alive and the unborn are sacrificed on the holy alters of the nationalistic. The modern nationalist pledges his allegiance to the past and contempt for the future.

Do not get me wrong. This country is a sort of oasis in the world, but nevertheless it is a weird place too. We are one of the richest and most democratic nations in history. But what have we done with our money? There are millions of malnourished people in our own country, there are thousands of pockets of poverty, there are hundreds of horrible ghettos. How many people are pathetically dying; and others bearing children on soiled bedsheets, how many are crying, feeling hopeless, lost and afraid in our own country? Is there no time for them? People are suffering every day from problems which are barely even recognized, much less attended to. Nationalism creates the illusion that we can control the momentum of the globe, when we cannot even control the plight of our own inner cities. We convince ourselves that "inner cities" are not the problems we should be worrying about and that domestic affairs halfway across the globe are.

And what of democracy? We have systematically mistreated every minority group that has come to America hoping to find democracy. We have allowed the general interest of all citizens to fade away in the face of private and government interest steadily polluting our water, our air, our land, our rights and our minds.

Nationalism bends reality, distorts the world and creates illusions. Nationalism allows room for paranoia and paranoid-types to roam openly and argue "doomsday scenarios" until they have set the agenda for the rest of us. We begin to feel the fear and then we too embrace the self-fulfilling prophecy.

Today's nationalists are flag prostitutes. They blame their over consuming prosperity on their country when it is a result of greed. "Patriotic sacrifices" are not made out of love or pride, but out of hate and fear. It seems to me the nationalist's vision has been too narrow.

I realize that it is naive to think our society will ever be perfect. That is not the challenge. But we should hear the call of the Impossible Dream and take it seriously. We should be striving to make our society as perfect as possible. Perfection may not be attainable, but through nationalism, violence and world disintegration are. I urge you to be on the look-out for the flag prostitute. They are fanatical, irrational and unpredictable. And they are armed.

The Rotunda has decided to try to include an advice column in its pages on a weekly basis. The only problem is, we need problems to give advice on — send 'em in! No problem is too big or small. All letters received will be treated with respect that knows no bounds, and will be kept in strict confidentiality.

Please send all letters to The Rotunda, box 1133 (Attn.: Advice), or drop it in the envelope marked Features on the Publication Office door (opposite the mailboxes).

The following week Delta Sigma Pi will be having a bowling social on Monday, Febraury 2 at 8 p.m. in Lankford. On Tuesday, February 3 Dr. Peale will be speaking to them at 4:45 in the Virginia Room of the Blackwell Dining Hall. On Wednesday, February 4 there will be a social in the snack bar. Hope to see you there!

"U.S. government agencies responsible for weather and related communications have used girls' names to identify major tropical storms since 1953. A U.S. proposal that both male and female names be adopted for hurricanes, started in 1979, was accepted by a commission of the World Meterorological Organization."

The names to be used for Atlantic storms in 1987 are: Arlene, Bret, Cindy, Dennis, Emily, Floyd, Gert, Harvey, Irene, Jose, Katrina, Lenny, Maria, Nate, Ophelia, Philippe, Rita, Stan, Tammy, Vince, William.

The Longwood Fine Arts Center and Department of Visual Arts is presenting selected works by Jasper Johns. His work will be displayed in Bedford Gallery from January 19 to February 20. His prints feature mysterious and complicated art work that hints at interpretation that only the individual can measure.

Longwood's gymnastics team will swing back into action Friday night when Georgia College visits for a two-team meet at 7:30 in Lancer Hall.

The Lancers, 0-1, were scheduled to host James Madison and Navy last Friday, but the tri-meet was postponed because of snow. Coach Ruth Budd wasn't sure if the meet would be re-scheduled later in the season.

If you want to gain experience in planning and developing activities, learn more about yourself as you get to know others, and develop skills that will make you more marketable to future employers, consider becoming a Resident Assistant (RA).

Selections of RA's for the 1987-88 school year will begin next week. Information meetings will be held on February 3 from 6-7 p.m., February 5 from 1-2 p.m. and February 10 from 6-7 p.m. Locations will be announced, so check posted information or see your REC or the Dean of Students.

Besides experience and skills that can make a difference in your future, RA's receive renumeration equal to the cost of room and board.

You can make a difference. Be an RA.

The Health Lecture Series is sponsored by Longwood's department of physical education, health, and recreation, in cooperation with the Virginia chapter of the American Cancer Society and the Virginia Department of Health.

The remaining two lectures will deal with AIDS (February 18) and the effects of being overweight (April 2).

Dylan Pritchett, director of the Black Studies Program at Colonial Williamsburg, will speak to the Introduction to Africa class on Tuesday, Jan. 27.

The program will be held at 5:30 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium. It is free and is open to all students and the public.

Mr. Pritchett will discuss "African-American Culture of the 18th Century." His presentation will include African and African-American music, storytelling and interpretations to enhance understanding of that period and its culture.

The Introduction to Africa course was begun last semester. It is part of Longwood's International Studies Program. For more information, call Dr. Jill Kelly at 392-9356.

Mr. Pritchett will be assisted by Rex Ellis, assistant director of African-American Interpretation at Colonial Williamsburg.

Reagan Says Leave Lebanon

By MATT PETERMAN

▶ The Reagan Administration advised strongly again that all United States citizens still remaining in Lebanon should leave. This amid a series of hostage takings witnessed in recent days.

Though Reagan will not issue an Executive Order to force them out, he did stress that should one be taken hostage in Lebanon, The United States is very limited in what it can do to secure the safe release of a hostage. The Sec. of State, George Shultz stopped issuing passports to Lebanon citing the same reasons.

Americans still remaining in Lebanon are there at their own risk, even though the United States will not abandon them. Attempting to lessen the value of the American in Lebanon, the Reagan Administration reiterated its pledge not to give into terrorist groups and urged that all western nations do the same. It is also policy to give free helicopter service to those wishing to leave including all their worldly possessions, when they are ready.

This seems to relieve the pressure off The White House which in reality caused it to deal with the Iranian government. It also wants W. Germany to press on with the extradition process of Hamadi, a suspected terrorist, and not negotiate with the captors of two W. German businessmen.

The Broncos held the Giants during the first half leading 10-9 at halftime. Near the end of the second quarter, the Giants sacked Broncos quarterback, John Elway, for a two point safety, thus arriving at the score of 9 for the Giants at halftime.

The Giants in the second half rallied, scoring an additional 30 points to the Broncos 10. Near the end of the game, Head Coach, Bill Parcells, was covered with gatorade to report the victory tradition they kept through the season.

▶ An attempted coup was foiled Tuesday as about 500 military men loyal to former President Marcos tried to seize an armory, a helicopter base, and T.V. stations. One T.V. station was captured, but no broadcast was aired.

President Corazon Aquino ordered troops into the streets and they neutralized most of the uprising. Gen. Fidel Ramos told the rest of the rebel troops holding out in the T.V. station to give up for there was no hope for their success.

This all happening only days before the Philippine people will vote on a new constitution. It shows some serious splits in the country that was done in direct defiance to President Aquino and Gen. Ramos.

AIDS Victims Increasing

By MELISSA GIBBS

Can AIDS victims transmit the disease through casual contacts such as food handling, sharing a swimming pool, coughing, or sneezing? In a symposium on Tuesday, January 20, Doctor Richard Keeling, Director of Student Health at the University of Virginia and head of the Task Force on AIDS Education, dispelled the above and other myths about the seemingly mysterious disease which entered the United States in 1981. Though AIDS poses a serious, threatening problem with its 30,000 and rising cases in the U.S., Keeling emphasized that the public should not resort to panic and hysteria.

According to Keeling, one cannot contract AIDS through casual contacts. Rather, the means of exposure to AIDS include sexual contact of any kind, needle sharing, and transfusion of contaminated blood products. About 66 percent of AIDS victims are men who have had sex with other men at least once since 1977; however, Keeling warned that the rate of heterosexual transmissions is rising rapidly. A main danger lies in the fact that many carriers do not know that they have been exposed to AIDS because AIDS shows no symptoms during its most contagious phase. As a result of AIDS long incubation period of six months to six years, college students may be exposed to the disease and infected, developing symptoms much later. Keeling suggested that condoms provide some protection but maintained that honesty with one's sexual partner gives the best assurance of preventing AIDS' spread.

Keeling also discussed the treatment of AIDS patients and the search for a vaccine. Doctors currently administer the drug AZT to stabilize the illness and prolong the victim's life. While intensive research suggests that scientists will develop a vaccine within five or six years, pharamaceutical companies will refuse to manufacture the vaccine instead of risking the possibility of lawsuits with enormous monetary awards.

Parking Lot Monoply

By MATT PETERMAN

The growing parking problem at Longwood College is forcing Administrators to drastically search for solutions, that will last in the years to come. With enrollment to increase next semester, the problem promises more complication if something is not done in the near future.

The proposed parking lots planned for Franklin and Race streets had to be put on hold after residents voiced their complaints. "Questions were raised by town and college officials about whether we ought to approach ... (the parking problem) in a piecemeal process," said Mr. Hurley, Vice President for Business Affairs. The school is in the process of acquiring the necessary property, but it seems a monopoly must be attained before the school can build.

The Town of Farmville is eager for the work to begin on new parking lots also. The Police Department is receiving, by residents, many complaints of cars parked in various places to handle the overflow from the College. Students will leave their cars parked on streets, store parking lots, and spots not designated for student use.

The town also wants to supply the labor for the building of the parking lots. The College would supply all supplies which mostly amount to many tons of crush stone. The main hinderence to the building of the parking lots are the residents who refuse to be bought out or have lots placed next to their houses.

The students that drive are becoming increasingly frustrated by the parking situation at Longwood. "Parking at night during the week is nearly impossible and most of the time you have to park illegally, if you want to park on campus," said Keith Darrah, a Longwood sophomore. The campus police are then quick to ticket the violator's car the next morning, passing the expense of lack of parking onto the student.

The parking lots in the planning stages are becoming increasingly necessary as the number of cars on campus grows larger by each semester. "If the College were to build one or two parking lots immediately, the problem could be solved at least for now, and now is when we need it," said Steve Evans, a Business Major at Longwood. Until something is done to solve the parking problem, it would appear it will only get worse.

American Heart Association®

Governor Gerald L. Baliles is pleased to announce that the Governor's Fellows program, created in 1982, will be repeated in 1987. Fellows will serve during the summer of 1987. A.E. Dick Howard will serve as chairman of the program's coordinating committee.

Purpose. The purpose of the program is to offer talented and highly motivated young people firsthand experiences in the processes of state government. As a result of their experience, Fellows may well be attracted to careers in government or public service. In addition to giving Fellows valuable experience, the program is designed to bring fresh ideas into the Governor's Office. Moreover, the program should serve to strengthen ties between state government and Virginia's academic community, building a mutual sense of understanding and rapport.

Eligibility. Applicants must be graduating seniors or enrolled as degree candidates in a graduate or professional school. Students enrolled in Virginia colleges or universities, public or private, may apply, regardless of state of residence. Virginia residents enrolled in out-of-state institutions, public or private, may also apply. In the equal opportunity selection process, there will be no distinction based on a candidate's political affiliation, race, religion, or gender.

Duration of Fellowship. An applicant selected as a Fellow must be willing to commit at least two months to full-time work in the Governor's Office. The normal period of the Fellowship would be from the first week in June to the last week in July, 1987.

Assignment of Fellows. Fellows will be assigned to work with members of the Governor's Cabinet or personal staff. The nature of the assignments will depend partly on the official's needs and partly on the background and experience of the Fellow.

Funding. No state funds are available to support Fellows. However, in previous years, colleges and universities proved willing to offer summer grants to Fellows selected from those institutions. In 1986, institutions from which Fellows are selected will again be urged to make summer grants available.

Screening of Applications. A panel of distinguished Virginia educators will be selected to screen the applications. Personal interviews may be requested, at the discretion of the panel.

Application Procedure. Applicants should write a letter of application and include:

(1) A resume.

(2) Transcripts of undergraduate grades and of graduate school grades, if any. Be sure to indicate GPA.

(3) Two or three letters of recommendation.

Applications should include, either in the letter or the resume, the following information:

(1) Name, address, and telephone number (both present and permanent.)

(2) Schools attended (with dates) and degrees, if any.

(3) Extracurricular activities.

(4) Awards and recognitions.

(5) Work experience.

(6) Voluntary community activities.

Applicants may submit such other information as they deem relevant, such as list of publications, leisure interests, etc.

DEADLINE: APPLICATIONS MUST BE RECEIVED BY FEBRUARY 1, 1987.

Send applicationns to: The Honorable Gerald L. Baliles, Governor's Fellows Program, State Capitol, Richmond, Virginia 23219

If additional information is needed, please call Rose Marie Fewell at (804) 786-2211.

BILLY C. CLARK and DON WINKLER

Clark edits 'Virginia Writing'

The premiere issue of Virginia Writing, a statewide journal for the best writings and art by high school students and teachers, was published in December by Longwood.

The journal contains the works of 54 students and 11 teachers from throughout the state. Selections were made from several hundred submitted.

Virginia Writing is edited by Billy C. Clark, Longwood's writer-in-residence. Clark founded a similar journal in Kentucky before coming to Longwood in 1985, but the Kentucky journal also included material from community college students.

The journal is the first statewide literary magazine in the nation devoted entirely to the best writings, art and photography by high school students and teachers. Its stated purpose is to publish "promise." Two issues will be published each year.

"Out there, somewhere, are young Faulkners and Weltys, Warrens and Clarks," General Samuel Wilson, a member of the journal's Board of Directors and vice rector of the Longwood Board of Visitors, wrote in the introduction. "The statewide outreach of Virginia Writing offers them — wherever they are — encouragement and the incentive of being published."

All of the contributors received copies of Virginia Writing autographed by Governor Gerald Baliles. Some 32 of them attended a luncheon Dec. 18 in Richmond where they received their copies forom Virginia's Secretary of Education, Dr. Donald J. Finley.

Virginia Writing includes poetry by Carole Montgomery, daughter of Dr. Bruce Montgomery, associate professor of music; art by Chris Hlad, son of Dr. Larry Hlad, assistant professor of sociology; and poetry by Michael Lemish, son of Don Lemish, vice president of institutional advancement. The younger Lemish is a freshman at Longwood.

Alcohol Awareness

Longwood has received a statewide award for its alcohol awareness program of last fall.

Longwood received the 1986 Excellence Award for small colleges from the Virginia A.I.M. Council. That group is made up of executives from the Department of Motor Vehicles and the Alcoholic Beverage Control board, which sponsor an alcohol awareness week on Virginia college campuses.

The plaque cites Longwood for "developing and conducting an outstanding public education program during the 1986 - Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week."

Among the activities were a slogan contest, a poster contest and a residence hall bulletin board contest, and buttons and bumper stickers were made that bear the winning slogan. That slogan — "Stop and think. Do you want a drink? — was the idea of Rita Moore, a student from Brookneal.

Penny Dodson, of Danville, came up with the winning poster. The residence hall bulletin board contest was won by Pat Holland of Fork Union, who lives in North Cunningham. Drew Hudson of Culpeper (French) came in second, and Anne Smith of Midlothian (Main Cunningham) was third.

"The idea of alcohol awareness programs is not to ask students to abstain from drinking, but to ask them to think about what they're doing," said McGill. "Whatever you're doing, it's a choice. The activities emphasized non-use among those too young to drink and responsible use among those who are of age."

"We need some kind of a counter-program in the area of drinking," he added. "There's so much pressure by the alcohol industry and our culture to be irresponsible. To be sending no counter-measure is to support that."

McGill said he has been "pleasantly surprised by how well the slogan has caught on among students. Sometimes, I'll be talking with a student and I'll say, 'Stop and think.' And they'll say, 'Do you want a drink?' I think the slogan is good because it stays away from preaching."

Although the alcohol awareness programs generally last only one week, Longwood program was spread out from the beginning of October until Thanksgiving, "so that it would be more visible," McGill said. The award for large colleges was won by Virginia Tech, which has an office devoted to alcohol and drug education, he said.

National Player Of The Week

CAREN FORBES

Caren Forbes of Longwood College has been named AWSF Fast Break National Player of the Week for the week ending Jan. 18.

Forbes received the honor in College Division NCAA II.

In a three-game week, Forbes sparkled as a scorer, playmaker and defender. Against Towson State, she had 20 points and 8 steals. Against Randolph-Macon, she had 13 assists (a school record) and 4 steals to go with 14 points. Against Pitt-Johnstown, she had 28 points, 8 assists and 8 steals.

For the week she averaged 20.6 points, 7.7 assists and 6.7 steals.

Forbes is a 5-6 senior co-captain from Rio Grande, New Jersey and a graduate of Middle Township High School. She is currently averaging 15.4 points, 5.8 assists and 3.1 steals per game.

Longwood's third best all-time career scorer, Forbes has accumulated 1,261 points and a record 452 assists in four years as a starter.

IAA Update

All full-time undergraduate students are eligible to participate in the activities sponsored by the Intramural Activities Assoc. The purposes of the IAA are to promote and provide opportunities for participation in the intramural and recreational activities; to promote participation through the members of the student body; and to stimulate wholesome school spirit.

The IAA conducts tournaments in the following activities during spring semester: tennis, coed volleyball, swimming relays, basketball, ping-pong, spades, anything-goes relays, frisbee golf, foul shooting, innertube water polo, badminton, softball, team superstars. In several sports there are A and B leagues so every student can participate at his-her skill level.

The majority of these tournaments are organized so teams from residence halls, sororities, fraternities, and off-campus students can compete against one another.

The IAA sponsors weekend tournaments for those students interested in staying on campus. Students on these teams can be from difference residence halls, sororities, fraternities. Included in the spring semester weekend sports are the following: coed bowling, basketball shoutout, coed whiffle ball, basketball, coed tennis doubles, softball, soccer, coed ultimate frisbee.

Lady Lancers Fourth In Foxy Lady Tournament

Longwood's women's basketball team managed a fourth place finish in the eight-team Foxy Lady Tournament in Florence, South Carolina over the weekend and senior co-captain Caren Forbes (Rio Grande, NJ) was named to the All-Tournament team.

Longwood, 6-8 overall, 1-1 in the Mason-Dixon Conference, is scheduled to play at St. Paul's Tuesday night, weather permitting, before returning home to host Mason-Dixon foes Liberty Thursday night at 7:30 and nationally ranked Mount St. Mary's Sunday afternoon at 3:00.

There will be a girls' Dixie Youth Basketball preliminary game starting at 1:15 Sunday before the contest between Longwood and Mount St. Mary's. Sunday's game will be free for all elementary and junior high students in the Farmville area.

Longwood began last week with two impressive wins. The Lady Lancers knocked off 20th ranked Virginia State 72-68 Tuesday night as Kita Chambers (Bladensburg, MD) and Karen Boska (Alexandria) combined to score five points in the last minute and a half.

Baska scored 18 points, Forbes 16, Jill Everett (Emporia) 13, Barbie Burton (Arlington) 12 and Angie Hill (Virginia Beach) 10. Longwood canned 20 of 26 free throws, led by Boska's 8-9, to key the victory.

Thursday in the Foxy Lady Tournament, Longwood beat Mount Olive 68-63 as Chambers totaled 14 points, 13 rebounds and nine steals and Forbes had 20 points and eight assists. The Lady Lancers rallied from a 34-30 halftime deficit to take the win.

Saturday, in the tourney semi-finals, Longwood faced host Francis Marion, 13-6 and a first round winner over Liberty 97-66. Led once again by Chambers and Forbes, the Lady Lancers played Francis Marion tough before bowing 83-78.

Chambers totaled 17 points and 18 rebounds while hitting nine of 12 free throws. Forbes added 25 points, five assists and four steals. Lisa Waldrop poured in 32 for the winners, who went on to claim the tournament title Sunday, beating Lander 80-76.

Longwood had a shot at third place, but played poorly Sunday while losing to Newberry 75-71. Boska had 13 points, Chambers 10 points and nine rebounds and Forbes 12 points.

"We went down there intending to win the tournament," said Longwood coach Shirley Duncan. "Originally, we were in the bracket opposite Francis Marion, but they had to change the format because of the weather. We had hoped to play Francis Marion in the championship game. I think we suffered a bit of a letdown after we lost to the host team in the semifinals."

Wrestling

By KIRK BARNES

Farmville, VA — The Longwood wrestling team completely dominated Ferrum 48-3 in a Wednesday night match on the road, but snow prevented the Lancers' participation in the Washington and Lee Invitational Friday and Saturday.

The Lancers lost only one match Wednesday as they rolled to victory over Ferrum. Longwood's dual match record now stands at 4-1. John Kelly, 190 lbs., and Jesus Strauss, unlimited, were responsible for the only two pins of the match. Kelly's match only lasted 30 seconds.

Tim Fitzgerald, 118 lbs., Tommy Gilbert, 142 lbs., Billy Howard, 167 lbs., and David Taylor, 177 lbs., completely dominated their opponents with scores of 22-7, 19-4, 16-1 and 21-5, respectively.

Other winners included Pete Whitman, 150 lbs., and David Parrish, 158 lbs., Ben Bartlett, 134 lbs., received a forfeit.

"We wrestled very well in spots, but looked a little sluggish in others," stated coach Steve Nelson. "Tommy and Billy wrestled very well.

"Because we dominated the match our wrestlers were able to take chances and perform moves they had not worked a great deal on," boasted the coach.

Longwood To Hold Tiger-Lancer Duals

By DAVE LARSON
Sports Editor

Longwood College will host the Tiger-Lancer Duals this Saturday January 30th in Lancer gym. The matches will start at 9 a.m. with the finals being held at 5 p.m. that evening. There will be a total of 11 matches with two mats running at the same time.

The tournament will feature a full day of fun pact exciting wrestling. Included in the line-up will be Pembroke State who is currently ranked number two in the South in Division II and is also ranked in the top 20 in the nation. Also teams from Ferrum College, Virginia State, Newport News Apprentice, Hampden-Sydney and of course Longwood.

Longwood's Coach Nelson is picking Pembroke State as a overwhelming favorite to win the tournament. Pembroke has two All Americans in their lineup, one being the brother of Longwood wrestler John Stokes. Coach Nelson believes that Longwood could come out with a 2nd or 3rd place finish depending on how his wrestlers perform.

Coach Nelson said that there will be some holes in his line-up, however, he does have some outstanding wrestlers that he expects will do well against the competition. Coach Nelson stated, "Tim Fitzgerald whose record is currently (13-1) should do very well in this tournament." Also John Stokes, who is currently at (13-2) should do well. Last year's regional champion Billy Howard is expected to do well. Peter Whitman who is moving down a weight class is also expected to do well. Dave Taylor is another grappler that should fare well. Incidentally Dave is coming off of his best year ever since his start at Longwood three years ago.

Coach Nelson and the entire Longwood team would like to see Lancer gym packed full of spectators. Everyone come out and support the Longwood grapplers as they host the first ever wrestling tournament to be held at Longwood.

Schedule of Matches

Lady Golfers Head For Mexico

The 1986-87 Longwood women's golf season has taken on a distinctly international flavor over the winter months. Coach Barbara Smith returned from the United States-Japan golf competition in Toyoko five weeks ago.

Early Wednesday morning Dr. Smith and her top five golfers departed for a junket to Guadalajara, Mexico and the Guadalajara Intercollegiate Tournament. The event, which is being hosted by Oklahoma State, includes 11 of the top Division I women's golf teams in the country, plus Longwood, one of the best golf squads in Division II.

Oklahoma State coach Ann Pitts, a member of the NCAA Women's Golf Committee along with Dr. Smith, extended the invitation to the Lady Lancers. That Longwood was able to participate is due to the generosity of two benefactors who are funding the excursion.

"It should be a great experience for the team in terms of golf and the educational experience of visiting another country," said Dr. Smith, who is recognized as one of the top coaches in America. "It's a great way to start our 'spring' season." Longwood's next tournament will be the North-South Classic March 12-14 in Ocala, Florida.

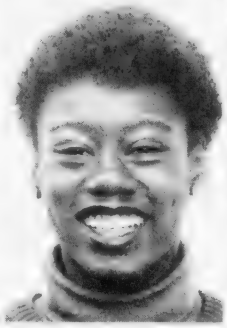
Making the journey will be juniors Tina Barrett, Marcia Melone, Gretchen Pugh, Leigh Russell and freshman Ashley Warren.

Longwood is coming off its best fall ever. The Lady Lancers compiled a stroke average of 318.8, won two tournaments and finished third in another.

The tournament field will include defending NCAA Women's Golf Champion Florida, which is ranked number one in the nation on the basis of its fall play. Others in the event (with national ranking indicated) are: San Jose State (5), Oklahoma State (7), Texas (11), Oklahoma (14), Georgia (16), Texas Christian (25), Minnesota (27), Lamar (29), UCLA (32), and Texas A&M (39).

Longwood is rated 43rd out of the top 100 schools who submitted scores for fall play.

"There's no question that the Guadalajara Tournament will include one of the toughest field of teams we've ever faced," said Dr. Smith.



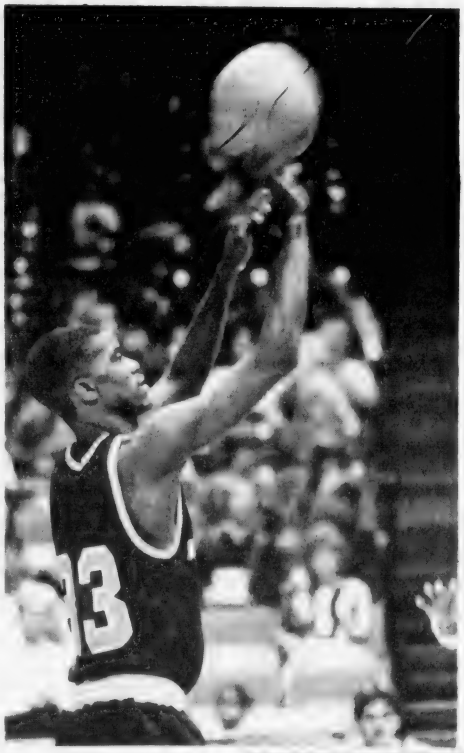
The Lady Lancers departed from Dulles International Airport early Wednesday morning and were scheduled to arrive in Guadalajara, the second largest city in Mexico, around 2:30 Wednesday afternoon. After a practice round Thursday the teams will play Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Player of the Week

Sophomore forward Kita Chambers turned in four strong performances for Longwood's women's basketball team last week and for her efforts, Chambers has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period January 18-25. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood Sports Information Office.

Chambers totaled 44 points, 44 rebounds and 17 steals as Longwood went 2-2 for the week. The 5-10 cager hit three key free throws at game's end to help Longwood beat Virginia State 72-68 Tuesday. She had 14 points, 13 rebounds and nine steals in a 68-63 win over Mount Olive Thursday in the Foxy Lady Tournament.

Saturday, in the tourney semifinals, Chambers collected 17 points, 18 rebounds and four steals in an 83-78 loss to tournament champ Francis Marion. She had 10 points and nine rebounds in Synday's 75-71 loss to Newberry. "Kita has played very well for us over the last four games," said Lady Lancer coach Shirley Duncan. "She turned in a super effort against Francis Marion. We were hoping she might make the All-Tournament team."



KITA CHAMBERS

A starter in 11 of Longwood's 14 games, Chambers is averaging 8.9 points, 8.4 rebounds and nearly three steals per game. She has been Longwood's top rebounder in its last three games.

Majoring in therapeutic recreation at Longwood, Chambers is a graduate of Bladensburg High School where she was an honor graduate. Coach Duncan credited her with being one of the most improved players on the team in preseason.

Up And Down Lancer Cagers Host Macow, Visit The Mount...

KEVIN JEFFERSON

After a win over Elon and a loss to Virginia State last week, Longwood's men's basketball team will host Randolph-Macon Wednesday night and visit nationally ranked Mount St. Mary's Saturday night in a rugged week of Mason-Dixon Conference action.

Current Mason-Dixon standings have The Mount on top at 3-0, Longwood 1-0, Randolph-Macon 2-1, Pittsburgh-Johnstown 1-2 and Liberty a surprising 0-4, after starting with four league games on the road.

Longwood, 9-7 overall, had a visit to Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday and a home date with Elon Monday, January 26 postponed by the snow. The games will be re-scheduled at a later date.

Longwood scoring leaders are Art Monroe (Baltimore, MD), 18.6 ppg., Kevin Jefferson (Petersburg), 15.4 ppg., and Darry Rutley (Richmond), 13.9 ppg. Quintin Kearney (Portsmouth) is the top rebounder at 7.6 per game while freshman Doug Poppe (Manassas Park) is second at 5.4 per contest.

Playmaker Kevin Ricks (Newport News) leads in assists (61) and steals (56).

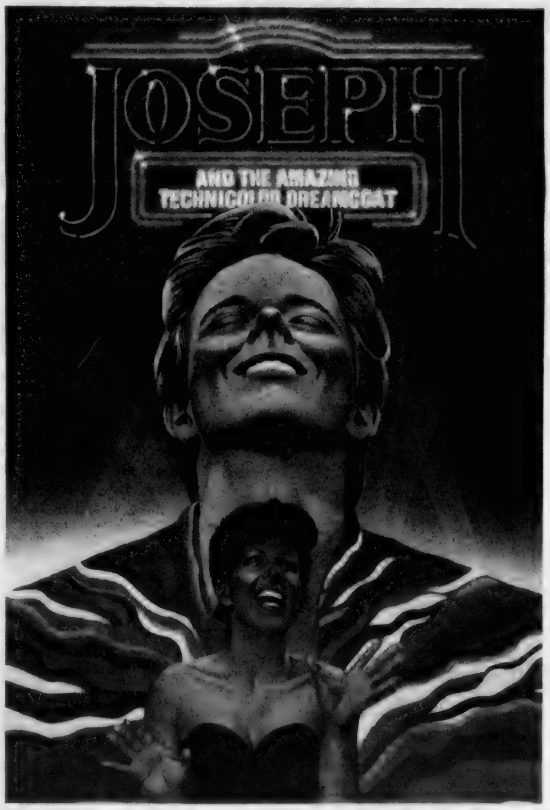
BONDAGE NOT FOR JOSEPH

Jacob, his 12 sons, their assorted wives, Egyptians, camels and Ishmaelites will move into Jarman Auditorium on Wednesday, February 4 at 8 p.m. This production is produced by Barksdale Theatre of Hanover, Virginia, just north of Richmond, and is being presented here by the Longwood Series of the Performing Arts.



The Tim Rice — Andrew Lloyd Webber musical tells the Old Testament story of Joseph, so favored by his doting father that his greeneyed brothers sell him into slavery. Joseph rises from a life in chains to become the Pharoah's deputy, and as in all lighthearted musicals, everyone lives happily ever after.

John Frenzer plays Joseph, and is an exceptionally talented young singer-actor who was discovered by Barksdale last summer when he was performing in the Italian Show at Busch Gardens in Williamsburg, VA. Sandee Hayes is the Narrator, a role she created for the original Barksdale production in Virginia, which became the longest running regional theatre production of this musical in the entire nation. Randy Strawderman and Barry J. Hayes, Barksdale's original director-choreographer and musical director respectively, have restaged the show for this National tour. Settings and costumes are by Jann Paxton, Lighting by William B. Allison, III.

Barksdale Theatre was founded in 1963 at an 18th century inn called Hanover Tavern, and productions there have received national attention from the New York Times, Richard Coe of the Washington Post, William Glover, AP Drama Writer, and others. The various dining rooms and kitchens of the old Tavern, where Patrick Henry once lived, lead naturally to the nation's first so-called dinner theatre, though at Barksdale the theatre and dining rooms are separate. "Joseph" broke all records for the state of Virginia as the longest running show ever and closed after 19 months of sold out houses. The current tours in the 1986-87 season cover over 20 states.

Longwood Expansion

The following article has been reprinted with the permission of the Richmond Times-Dispatch. It appeared Saturday, January 31, 1987.

By Overton McGehee
Times-Dispatch
State Staff

Longwood College agreed yesterday to hold talks with representatives of a group opposed to an expansion of the college into a residential neighborhood.

The decision came after Farmville attorney James E. Ghee asked the college's board of visitors to "hold in abeyance plans to move into our neighborhood" and to set up a way to involve residents in decisions that will affect their area.

Ghee, a former president of the Virginia unit of the National Association for the advancement of Colored People, is chairman of Citizens to Save Our Neighborhood, formed late last year to oppose Longwood's longrange plans for expansion and its immediate plans to buy land for parking in the neighborhood.

The college has acquired several lots and options on others in the block on the southwest corner of Main and Franklin streets and has approval from the state to buy some or all of the land on the block for a parking lot. The block is in an area that has for many years been part of the college's master plan for expansion.

The college also is awaiting state endorsement of an expanded master plan approved by the board in 1985 that calls for eventual expansion into an area that now contains more than 60 homes and businesses.

After a two-hour closed session with other board members, the business affairs committee of the board of visitors voted to ask members of the residents' organization to form a committee with college administrators and members of the board to discuss their concerns.

Rector Thomas Rust said the decision will mean that the college will at least delay its plan to buy more land for parking. The college will buy several lots on which it already has options, he added.

"This is going to be a bona fide effort on the part of the board to smooth things over," Rust said of the new committee.

Editorial

The visitation policy is still a matter that many students want changed. If the visitation policy is to be changed, then the students have to make this effort. For students to do this, they must work through the proper channels. The best way is to start from the bottom and end at the top to receive more results. The Student Government is willing to listen and help with this effort. Gradually, a proposal can be presented to the Board of Visitors.

Many students want a 24 hour or 23½ hour visitation policy. But, if this is to happen, then a few factors must be considered. More night hosts and desk aides will have to be hired. This will create more jobs for students. On the other hand, though, campus police will have to be reinforced with more manpower. This costs the school and students money.

If we have 24 hour visitation, this causes cohabitation, which is illegal in Virginia. If the visitation policy is up to the dorm, there will be a conflict. Someone might want a 24 hour visitation and someone else might not want any visitation. There are a lot of problems with the visitation policy. There are also a lot of problems with changing the visitation policy. It is up to the student to do something about it.

Showcasing at Longwood

Handmade paper works by Sandra Breil and raku works by Spencer Hayden are featured in the Showcase Gallery at Longwood College through February 14.

The Showcase Gallery is located in the first floor hallway of the Bedford Building. The exhibit program, sponsored by the Longwood Arts Council and the department of visual and performing arts, focuses on the work of students, alumni, and local artists.

Dr. Breil is associate professor of biology at Longwood and a resident of Rice. She has won prizes for her watercolors and drawings at shows in Farmville, Roanoke, Waynesboro, Colonial Beach, and Chase City.

In 1981, she began working with handmade paper and has since won awards at Roanoke's Festival in the Park, the Fall Foliage Festival in Waynesboro, and the Roanoke River Art Association show. In 1984, she received a Best in Show award at the Heart of Virginia Festival.

Her work is included in collections at the Fishburne Military Academy, the Seven Hills School, Waynesboro chapter of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, the Longwood Fine Arts Center, and in many private collections.

Hayden is a jeweler with Bowen Jewelry Company in Lynchburg where he designs, makes, and repairs fine and customized jewelry. He resides in Rice.

He is an honor graduate of the University of Northern Iowa. His major in studio arts included emphases in ceramics, sculpture, jewelry, and photography.

His work has won awards in exhibitions in Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Hampton, and in the Heart of Virginia Festival. He has taught jewelry and crafts classes and workshops at Longwood.

CHI

Better Dead Than Unwed

By MADONNA ORION

"Rather than live a single life, I would die young!" This is the stunning motto of Longwood's secret organization, CHI. Established on October 15, 1900, CHI is the longest lasting of the many secret groups that have been organized in Longwood's past. CHI's essential purpose is to promote and maintain a spirit of cooperation among students in every phase of college life. Furthermore, CHI is an organization that represents the entire student body and commits itself to recognizing the efforts of students, faculty, and organizations.

Although its major purpose is focused on college spirit and loyalty, CHI, to many, means long, plae-blue robes, walks at midnight emphasizing special events, blue ribbons and carnations, and signs on sidewalks. All of these tangible evidences of CHI's presence on campus ensure us that "The Spirit Lives" and will continue to do so — a spirit which always seeks the respect and support of past, present, and future Longwood students.

Your continued support is vital in aiding Longwood to maintain its respected position in the college world. All CHI can ask is that future graduating classes follow the example that has been set before them.

Snowball Murder

By MATT PETERMAN

A 47-year-old man is being charged with murder after he gunned down a 16-year-old boy. The boy, with some of his friends were throwing snowballs at the house of Edward Smith, who had threatened to use his gun in the past. The kids supposedly broke a window to provoke the attack last Friday night. Edward Smith is being held without bail until a hearing has taken place.

UNITED STATES SAVINGS BONDS

In the Middle East, three American hostages are scheduled to be murdered if Israel does not free some 400 Arab prisoners by the end of the week. In other related events, Iran is detaining a U.S. reporter for possibly spying for the Israeli government. Jerry Sibe, a Wall Street Week reporter, was picked up on Saturday. He is one of 50 Americans invited to Iran to cover the Iran-Iraq War.

A peaceful and orderly visit by 75 supporters of civil rights leader Rev. Horsea Williams took place Sunday in the racially pure county of Forsyth in Georgia. The supporters, black and white, went to church at the First Baptist in Cummings, Georgia. Rev. Williams has left specific demands with the county to alleviate some of the racial tension and says if they are not met another march will take place.

Longwood's New Sorority

By MATT PETERMAN

Longwood's newest sorority is Delta Sigma Theta Inc. and is coming to Longwood soon. It is a nonprofit organization whose purpose is to provide services and programs to promote the human welfare.

The sisterhood has about 125,000 predominantly black college-trained women and about 700 chapters nationwide and internationally.

The sorority advocates the following of a five-point program that includes educational development, physical and mental health, political awareness and involvement, plus international awareness and involvement.

The Delta Sigma Theta interest group will sponsor many fund raising activities during the semester, including the Couple's Game, a take from the Newly-wed game show. Other fund-raisers are to include selling carnations for Valentine's Day,

Weekends Reach All Time Low

By MATT PETERMAN

A record number of Longwood students could be found anywhere but Longwood this past week end. All the anxiety of being bottled up for weeks gave reason to the massive surge of students departing the campus.

The regular crowd that always leaves on the weekends made this one no exception as they dug their cars out of the snow and left for places unknown. Somehow they managed to make it back Sunday night as the atmosphere of Longwood was filled with blinking hazard lights.

A third of the rest of the remaining students were spotted at Hampden-Sydney where they partied well into the night with live bands, all at the expense of Hampden-Sydney, of course.

Another third sat around Friday and Saturday nights glued to the TV set, casually drinking beer trying to pass the time. Some poker games were rumored, but could not be independently confirmed by anyone on campus.

The last third could be found either at small closed parties or walking around looking for them. The main conversation of those walking was: "What a boring night," as they persisted in their quest for a good time.

Sources that wished not to be identified said the campus was virtually drug free due to bad weather that had hampered the supply lines. Could this be a possible reason for Longwood's abandonment?

The speculation of what exactly did happen to the 2000 students this past weekend probably will remain a mystery, however, The Rotunda staff will try hard to find the answer.

The Rings are coming

By PAM WERNER

Longwood's traditional Ring Premiere Party, which enables the sophomore class to preview different styles of class rings, is about to begin. Ring companies, Art Carved and Jostens will be in the Red, White and Green Rooms on Tuesday, February 3 from 7 to 9 p.m. to display their products. Free pizza and drinks will be served and music will be provided by TKE's.

In years past, a Class Ring Dance has been held to celebrate the receiving of the rings. Traditionally, those students ordering rings choose an underclassman to be their "Little brother or sister," who will in turn have the honor of presenting the ring to its owner at the dance.

Last year the Ring Dance was not held because the rings did not come in on time. If all goes as planned, this year's dance will be held in the spring, although a definite date will be announced later.

How About This Weather?

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

According to the 1987 Old Farmer's Almanac, weather for the middle Atlantic Coast (that's us) should be something like this: "A thaw at the end of January will bring an otherwise cold month up to normal while warm spells will predominate in February. Following a storm in early January, light precipitation is anticipated until late February..."

The forecast, "determined both by the use of a secret weather forecasting formula devised by the founder of the almanac (Robert B. Thomas) in 1792 and by the most modern scientific calculations based on solar activity", predicted rain, with snow in the mountains between January 19th and 21st; cloudy, seasonable weather from the 22nd to the 25th; sunny, mild weather from the 26th to the 28th; and clear, very warm weather between the 29th and 31st.

The forecast for the first two days of February calls for clear, very warm weather, while it will be cloudy and cold between the 3rd and 8th, turning sunny and warm for the 9th to the 11tth.

Of course, neither the almanac "nor anyone else has as yet gained sufficient insight into the mysteries of the universe to predict weather with anything resembling total accuracy".

Save your breath.

"PLATOON": The Real Side of Vietnam

By SKIP FREEBERG

For the past few years, Hollywood and the movie industry have been making millions on the Vietnam War, with movies like "Rambo," "Uncommon Valor", and "Apocalypse Now." They have made the war look glamorous and have capitalized on the conflict. Director Oliver Stone has changed that glamorous view with his movie "Platoon". The impact of this movie hits hard and hopefully will put to rest the Hollywood image the war has attained.

Stone, who himself served in Vietnam, is hoping to put to an end the misconceptions which many people have about the war. To do that, he picked 3 fine young actors: Charlie Sheen; son of Martin Sheen, plays Chris Taylor, a kid fresh from the states. This character plays the role of Stone. Willem Dafoe ("Streets of Fire," "To Live and Die in L. A.") plays Elias, a soldier on his 3rd tour of Vietnam, and Tom Berenger ("Eddie and the Cruisers", "The Big Chill"), plays the scarfaced Sgt. Barnes. The 3 actors give great performances, with the best coming from Berenger.

To bring reality into the story, Stone created brilliant special effects. Any war movie can have bombs and guns going off, but in "Platoon", you feel as though you are right there in the middle of a fire fight. In the heat of battle there are casualties, and the results are graphic in the movie. Stone hired a retired Marine Colonel as a technical consultant and to train the actors. They were put through an intensive jungle training course prior to filming to make the actors look tired and seasoned.

This movie has been well received by many Vietnam vets who have viewed it. The general consensus is that they hope that the movie will put to rest all of the uncertainty about the war, and show all of us the pain and struggle that they went through for their country's cause in Vietnam. Everyone who sees this movie will hopefully view the war differently and give the veterans the honor and respect that they deserve.

Take the Woodsy Owl Pledge.

Shorty–Walking Tall

Back to work, after 10 weeks, Shorty Giles has returned to us again. Shorty, a maintenance worker, recently suffered two serious strokes. His first one took place in his home on October 31 paralyzing his arm and shoulder. The second stroke occurred in the hospital a week later. After 10 long weeks of recovery, Shorty built up his stamina and he beat the odds of being disabled.

Shorty would like to thank students and faculty for their loving support while he was recovering. During his period of rehabilitation, Shorty recieved over 100 cards and letters expressing cheerful thoughts and kind wishes. He also received a $50.00 donation from first and second floors of Wheeler Dorm, a Thanksgiving turkey from Cox Dorm, many flowers, and gifts of inspiration. Shorty just cannot express all of his gratitude to everyone. He appreciates all of the kindness that was bestowed upon him.

These hours are limited to the Reading Rooms and the Gold Room and does not include the Recreation Area or the TV Lounge.

In an effort to continue its ongoing contribution to the Longwood community, Sigma Phi Epsilon contributed 25 men to eliminating hazards among the walkways of Longwood. Areas in which snow and ice were cleared included the stairs of Stubbs dormitory, as well as the entrance and stairs of the New Smoker. Sigma Phi Epsilon is leading the way among social fraternities in community service.

The following free student-faculty computing workshops will take place in the days to come. Intro to the IBM 4341 Mainframe, Thursday, Feb 5, 12:30-2 p.m. in Coyner 012. Intro to Easy Word Processing, Tuesday, Feb 3, 12:30-2 p.m.; Wednesday, Feb 4, 10-11:30 a.m.; in the writing center of Barlow.

The Longwood Inter Fraternal Council has elected its officers for spring and fall semester of 1987. They are as follows: President: Jeff Allgor (DELTA SIGMA PHI); Vice President: Jack Lynch (PI KAPPA PHI); Treasurer: Rob Liessem (DELTA SIGMA PHI); Secretary: Brian Kava (PI KAPPA PHI).

The Longwood College fraternal rush which started Tues. Jan 27 runs through to Friday Feb. 6.

The introduction to Africa program has been extended for another semester. All interested students are encouraged to attend the lectures on Tuesday nights from 5:30 to 6:20 p.m. For further information contact Dr. Jill Kelly (113 Grainger).

The Longwood Student Auxilary Police that supply student security in Lancer Hall want to keep the gymnasium as new as possible, but need student cooperation. They can no longer allow guests to accompany students into Lancer Hall. All students must have their I.D.'s—keys will not be accepted.

Jasper Johns Exhibition

Norma Jeffer (left) and Michelle Canada, two Longwood students, admire "The Dutch Wives," one of 29 works by artist Jasper Johns that are currently on display in Bedford Gallery. The exhibition — the first time this selection has been displayed in Virginia — will run through Feb. 20. It features lithographs and serigraphs dating from 1963 to 1977. Johns, a 56-year-old native of South Carolina, is a recipient of the gold medal for graphic art from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters. Art critics give him credit as "the inventor of Pop art, inspiration for Minimalism and forerunner of Conceptual art," according to the Richmond News Leader. In 1980, the Whitney Museum of American Art bought his 1958 painting "Three Flags" for $1 million — the highest price paid for a painting by a living artist up to that time. Last fall, Johns set another record for a living artist when his 1957 work "Green Target" sold at auction for $3.63 million.

Weyanoke Reawakens

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

The Hotel Weyanoke, located across from the Colonnades on High Street, is soon to be reopened as the Weyanoke Inn Retirement Home.

Following problems concerning his last tenant, the former owner put the Weyanoke up for sale early in 1986. An ad for it placed in the Richmond Times Dispatch caught the attention of Roger Wilcox, a licensed nursing home administrator with 17 years of experience in establishing homes for retired adults. Mr. Wilcox has turned a number of old hotels into adult living facilities, including one in Orange, Virginia.

"Old hotels are ideal to convert into retirement homes," Mr. Wilcox commented. "Many quaint little inns have fallen into disuse as main roads have become lined with big name hotels such as Holiday Inn."

The excellent workmanship and construction standards in older buildings make them just as sturdy today as they were the day they were built. The only work necessary in the Weyanoke to convert it was superficial decorating such as new paint, wallpaper and paneling, installation of modern fire safety equipment, and elevator automation. Built in 1924, the Weyanoke Building will probably be standing long after the high rises have crumbled (don't worry — it probably won't happen in our lifetime . . .)

At first, citizens of Farmville were a bit dismayed at the thoughts of the Weyanoke being anything but a hotel. Most of these people have practically grown up in the Hotel Weyanoke, having Sunday brunch in its dining room and wedding banquets, dinners and functions for their numerous organizations in its banquet rooms. Eventually Mr. Wilcox plans to have the banquet rooms available for public use again as they used to be (without the catering services the hotel provided), but for now most events are being staged at the Heritage House on Rt. 15. He hopes to preserve the same welcoming atmosphere the building has held in past years.

When filled to capacity, the Weyanoke Inn Retirement Home will employ 20 fulltime employees as well as a number of part-time employees. No nursing care is to be administered, but personal care and daily activities will be provided, as well as three meals a day, as part of the monthly fee paid by residents.

Mr. Wilcox feels it will be beneficial having the adult home next to a college campus. He hopes to develop a constant rapport between the students and various parts of Longwood's campus and the Weyanoke Retirement Home.

As the building will be occupied by residents gradually, the rooms on the fourth floor, rather than being left unoccupied these next few months, are being rented out to students this semester at rates starting at $75 a month. This includes all utilities, and cable hookup is available in each room.

For further information concerning job opportunities and room rentals, contact Roger Wilcox at 392-4161 any weekday.

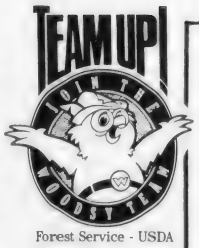
Farmville Fast Food Renovations

By JIM LONG and CATHY GAUGHRAN

The McDonald's fast food restaurant of Farmville's Main Street will begin to take on a new look shortly, as a series of improvements is set to begin. That announcement this week from restaurant manager, Tim Long. In a phone interview Saturday, Long said they were trying to speed up service at the restaurant by hiring new personnel and by retraining present employees.

He also said service would be increased through more management involvement in service techniques.



Long says that within the next three months they will begin a remodeling of the restaurant. This is being done in order to make the facility more up to date. Look for more contemporary woodwork, more loose seating, and bar stool seating once the renovations are completed. Long says the store would have to close down while the renovations were taking place, but specific details as to how long that would be are not available.

This announcement comes following news that the Hardee's restaurant in College Plaza is also looking to renovate. Plans for Hardee's renovations have been held up, and now they are not sure if they will renovate their present accommodations, or build a whole new store. Renovations would include complete redecoration inside and out, the addition of two greenhouse-style dining room wings, and complete remodeling of the kitchen area. Service time would be cut in half by the addition of another cash register, improved drive-through accommodations and the extra seating areas. This remodeling would take 6-8 weeks, during which time there would be no or very short loss of services.

If a new Hardee's is built, construction will take 2-3 months. The new store will still be located in College Plaza, but on a different site than the present one. The restaurant would only lose one or two days of business while they relocate equipment to the new building.

Store Manager Vicki Lee hopes to know which course of action will be taken by mid-February.

Best of all, no matter which plan is followed, prices will not be affected.

Who Slew The Dreamer?

"Who Slew the Dreamer?," a lecture-slide presentation on the assassination of Martin Luther King, is scheduled for Tuesday, February 3, at 8 p.m. in the Gold Room of Lankford Building, Longwood College.

The lecturer is Jeff Cohen, an attorney and writer who is considered one of the few experts on Dr. King's assassination, the search for his killer, and the investigation and trial of James Earl Ray.

He explores the many nagging questions about the killing: Where did the money come from to finance Ray's travels and activities before and after the assassination? Who was "Raoul"? Why does Ray continue to protect the man he claims was his accomplice?

Cohen has made numerous trips to Memphis and has worked with attorneys' and investigators connected with the case. In 1978, he was commentator for the national PBS telecasts of the congressional hearings on the King assassination.

His lecture is sponsored by Longwood's Student Union and is open to the public at no charge.

Who's Who? Elite Not Pica

The 1987 edition of WHO'S WHO AMONG STUDENTS IN AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES will include the names of 11 students from Longwood College who have been selected as national outstanding campus leaders.

Campus nominating committees and eidtors of the annual directory have included the names of these students based on their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success.

They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1;400 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934.

Lady Lancers Win Two of Three

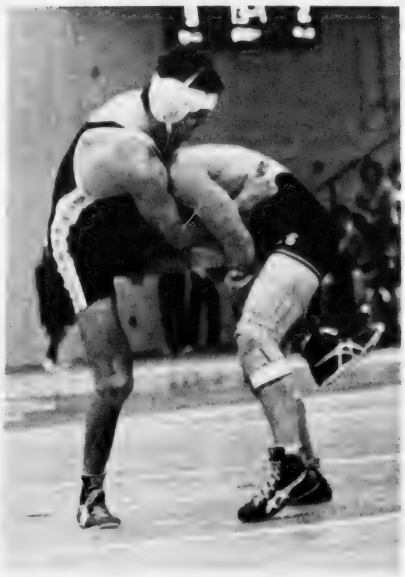
Longwood's Lady Lancer cagers won two of three games last week, including a 67-66 thriller over Liberty Thursday night, to move their overall record to 8-9.

Longwood, now 2-2 in the Mason-Dixon Conference, visits Division I William & Mary Wednesday night and league opponent Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday night in action this week.

Sunday afternoon, fourth ranked Mount St. Mary's ended Longwood's recent string of home court successes by a 90-67 count, after Thursday night had brought an exciting triumph over Mason-Dixon foe Liberty.

Longwood roared back from a 63-54 deficit in the final 3:41 to outscore Liberty 13-3 and take the win. A 3-point play by India Walton brought LC within striking distance and a layup by Kita Chambers with 20 seconds left provided the margin of victory, 67-66.

Earlier this season Longwood had benefitted from similar late-game heroics in wins over nationally ranked Hampton University (60-59) and Virginia State (72-68).



Caren Forbes scored 15 points to lead the win, while Chambers had 11 points, Karen Boska 10 points and 10 rebounds, Jill Everett 10 points, and Barbie Burton 10 points.

A bright spot Sunday was the scoring and rebounding of freshman Dee McDaniels. The 6-0 center scored 14 points and pulled down eight rebounds in only 10 minutes on the court. Chambers had 13 points and nine rebounds.

The Mount moved its record to 16-1 overall and 4-0 in the MDAC behind double figure scoring from five cagers. Jenny Brown was 6-6 from the field and the foul line for 18 points to lead the visitors.

Boska scored 26 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead Longwood to an 86-67 triumph at St. Paul's last Tuesday.

Player of the Week, Fitzgerald leads Lancers to 2nd place finish in Tiger-Lancer Duals

Senior wrestler Tim Fitzgerald recorded four one-sided victories in the Tiger-Lancer Duals Saturday, leading Longwood to a second place team finish. Fitzgerald has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period January 25-February 1. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Now 17-1 for the year, Fitzgerald appears to be a threat to return to the NCAA Division II Tournament where he competed as a sophomore.

Perhaps Longwood's top all-time wrestler, Fitzgerald has compiled a sparkling 76-35-1 record in four seasons. The senior holds the Longwood record for most career wins (76).

"Tim's performance was probably his best ever," said Longwood coach Steve Nelson. "He not only won his matches. He dominated his opponents."

Longwood's grapplers wrestled their way to an impressive second place finish in Saturday's Tiger-Lancer Duals held in Lancer Hall.

Longwood travels to Virginia Tech for a match with the Hokies Wednesday and will participate in the Virginia Collegiate Tournament Friday and Saturday in Newport News.

The final standings of Saturday's activities were: Pembroke 1st, Longwood 2nd, Newport News 3rd, Hampden-Sydney 4th, Virginia State 5th, and Ferrum 6th.

The grapplers lost to 16th ranked Pembroke in the finals 48-11, but the score does not reflect the performance.

"We never gave up," stated coach Steve Nelson. "We hustled until the very end."

Longwood defeated Newport News, Virginia State, and Hampden-Sydney by scores of 34-17, 38-13, and 48-4, respectively, to reach the finals. Longwood's dual match record now stands at 7-2.

Tim Fitzgerald, 118 lbs., was Longwood's most dominant wrestler of the day, destroying every opponent he faced. He went 4-0, boosting his season record to 17-1. John Stukes, 134 lbs., also wrestled very well going 3-0 to up his overall mark to 16-2.

Pete Whitman, 142 lbs., Billy Howard, 167 lbs., and Jesus Strauss, heavyweight, collected three wins each. Howard (15-5) and Strauss (11-7) accumulated two pins apiece. Whitman is now 13-6-2 on the season.

David Taylor, 177 lbs., Willie Gaines, 126 lbs., John Kelly, 190 lbs., and Shawn Washington, 158 lbs. each won two matches. Washington, a sophomore, rejoined the team after sitting out the first semester.

"This was the best team effort I have ever been associated with," explained Nelson. "We are wrestling well as evidenced by our dual meet record. The way our guys wrestled reminded me of the strong showing in the Newport News Tourney."

"This was probably the best Tim has ever wrestled and John wrestled very well considering he had been sick most of the week," boasted the coach. "All of our guys hustled."

Gymnastics Team falls to Georgia College in close meet

Longwood's gymnastics team suffered its second defeat of the season Friday night falling to Georgia College 164.85-164.25. The Lancers host Radford this Saturday at 2:00.

Coach Ruth Budd was only semi-pleased with the performance despite an improvement in the overall team score.

"We should have won it. I was very disappointed in the scores we received in floor exercise," Budd said, referring to the low scores given on seemingly flawless routines. The crowd booed the judges scores on several occasions. The only way she could justify the low scores was assuming the judges preferred difficulty over polish.

Budd felt her team was robbed on floor exercise but admitted they could have won it had they been more fluent on bars.

"Bars are definitely our trouble spot right now," explained the coach. The Lancers did manage to win vault and beam. On beam there were three impressive no-fall foutines out of six.

Leading the way for the Lancers were top all-around scorer Lynda Chenoweth, Kiersten Artese, and Kerri Hruby. Chenoweth was the all-around winner with a score of 33.95. Along with top score honors she set a personal best record on beam, scoring an 8.8 (second best in LC history).

Artese placed second in the all-around, compiling a 33.6. She tied for first in the vault with a score of 8.9. Hruby placed fourth overall attaining a 32.6. She did a very fine job on bars and in floor exercise.

All in all Longwood had a productive evening, placing two girls in the top three spots. Both Chenoweth and Artese improved their previous scores.

Men's Basketball

Seeking to reverse a four-game losing streak, Longwood's men's basketball team returns home this week for contests with Benedict Monday night and Mason-Bixon Conference foe Pittsburgh-Johnstown Friday night.

League losses to Randolph-Macon, 64-50 Wednesday, Pittsburgh-Johnstown, 86-76 Friday, and nationally ranked Mount St. Mary's, 81-66 Saturday, dropped Longwood to 9-10 overall and 1-3 in the Mason-Dixon. After getting off to a 7-2 start, the Lancers have gone 2-8 with six of those losses coming on the road.

One bright spot for Longwood last week was the inspired play of senior center Quintin Kearney. The 6-6 cager had two sterling performances after going scoreless against Randolph-Macon Wednesday.

Kearney totaled 21 points, 10 rebounds, six assists, four blocked shots and four dunks in the loss to Pittsburgh-Johnstown. He came back the next night against Mount St. Mary's to score 19 points and grab 12 rebounds. The Lancer center was credited with seven dunks in the two games.

Currently averaging 9.3 points and 7.9 rebounds, Kearney will be a key factor in the Lancers attempt to forge a late season winning streak.

Longwood Leaders Attend Conference

By KIM SETZER

The second annual leadership conference was held this past weekend at the Sheraton in Virginia Beach. Many of the organizations on campus were represented. The students and faculty left from the campus police about 2:30 p.m. on Friday afternoon. Dr. Ben Bissell was the guest speaker for that night's dinner. Dr. Bissell works with management in Richmond and spoke to the group about sharpening listening sills.

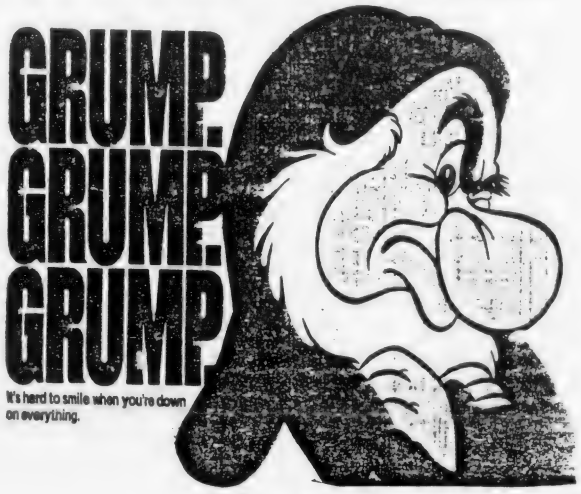
On Saturday morning JoJo Katz and Tina Reiners led a skit entitled "The Surfers Plan A Ski Trip," in which the surfers have a meeting to plan their trip as their leader attempts to motivate them. Next, Jim Brown and Paul Striffolino shared their thoughts with "Let's Stimulate Social Life." It was a working session to set up a student committee that will provide "said money" for student organizational groups. In an attempt to explore things that prevent a person from being creative, Ann Brownson and Robin Yarbrough present "Unlock Your Mind."

On Saturday afternoon, "Longwood's Involvement Project" was led by Karen Clifford, Niki Fallis, Phyllis Mable, Joe McGill, Judy Maloy and Sue Saunders. Longwood's student leaders became part of the Involvement Project and became its primary ambassadors. Later in the afternoon, Karen Clifford and Niki Fallis showed juniors and seniors how to "sell" their skills to potential employers in the job interview. For freshman and sophomores, Lisa Coviello, Jennifer Fender and Barbara McCormick showed them how to manage their time and get the most out of college.

Communication, an important part of college life, was discussed by Sue Sanders, Judy Meloy and Anne Smith. Mike Clements and Joe McGill gave a summary of techniques needed to carry out an effective meeting.

they thought should be changed about Longwood. Many groups crusaded for campus beautification. Other topics inabout Longwood. Many groups crusaded for campus beautifucation. Oter topis included teacher evaluations, traditions, motivating freshmen, extending library hours, the problem of noise pollution, safety, and temporary housing.

Some of the suggestions were to continue with the S.A.L.T. (Students Against Longwood's Trash). Noah Wood and Danny Hughes were asked to work together on making an event of keeping the campus clean as other colleges and universities do. Also, the need for more trashcans is prevalent. One group thought teacher evaluations should be taken more seriously and reviewed by a committee. Traditions is another important part of Longwood, pursued another group. Committee has been formed for this purpose.



Another group expressed motivating freshmen and helping them get involved with organizations on campus. The administration are pursuing these ideas to help better the life at Longwood.

Ricky Oley, president of SGA, and three alumni, Paula Clay, Theresa Alvis, and Benji Smith expressed what being a leader at Longwood has meant to them. They expressed how they applied the skills they learned to their current jobs — working in Alumni Relations, a teacher and working in the admissions office.

Anna Prow, representing the Series of Performing Arts, stated she had fun, learned a lot , and the people who put it together should be commended. These students will take what they learned back to each of their organizations to help improve it.

Editorial

There is only one word for this past weekend at the Leadership Conference in Virginia Beach, "INTENSE." Only about eighty students attended the conference, but I wish the whole school could have gone. Phyllis Mable said the goal of the weekend was "to meet new people, make new friends and help better Longwood." I think I reached all these goals. It is surprising how many organizations exist on this campus. There is something for everyone. Being involved at Longwood gave me the opportunity to go to this conference. Working hard at what I do and being involved gives me lots of benefits. This conference was just one.

Everyone at the conference learned skills that they can take back to their organization. Each of the ideas presented were prominent and made sense. It doesn't matter whether you are on the committee to clean up trash or whether you are on the committee to select a new Academic Vice President. It is all important. No cause is greater than another. A way to express this is to write editorials. Editorials can be published in the Rotunda or read over WLCX. Take pride in Longwood, because Longwood takes pride in you.

Kim Setzer, Editor-In-Chief

EDITORIALS ON THE AIR

Longwood's own radio station, WLCX, is now airing editorials during the regular newscast times of 5, 7, 9 and 11 p.m.

So now if you have a problem, question, gripe, complaint, or compliment for someone or something on campus, you now have two medias through which you can express your opinion. One, of course, is the weekly issue of the Rotunda. But now a new voice is ready to express your thoughts, WLCX 90.1 FM. All you have to do is submit your comments to Tim Sheridan, News Director WLCX, Box 1209. You will need to sign your editorial in order for it to be aired, although your name will not be announced over the air.

Editorials will usually run for two days unless demand is high which would result in daily editorial programming. WLCX does reserve the right to edit material if need be, but all entrees will receive air time as well as all rebuttals.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Student Union, I am writing in response to Danny Pate's letter published January 30. We would like to set the record straight. It seems that Mr. Pate is grossly misinformed (not by S-UN members) and is a poor judge of character.

First of all Paul Striffolino is a very open-minded person. He has done more for the students at Longwood in the two years that he's been here than anyone else I can think of. His main concern is with the students, he is interested in listening to the opinions of students; he can really understand things from our perspective.

Secondly, Paul's main responsibility when we book acts is to advise the committee members and to sign the contracts (since students are not allowed to). The actual negotiating and booking processes are handled by myself on the event committee chair. Paul is there only in an advisory capacity, not to make the decisions. Students spend S-UN money.

Next, I wrote the article which appeared in an earlier issue, not Paul. And, yes, I'm looking for someone to handle the refrigerator rentals. It may not sound like the most glamorous job in the world, but it could be good experience for anyone.

Finally, The Romantics were never booked; so how could they be cancelled? And we didn't say that we would never have the Voltage Brother again. But, if we put them in the LDH now, we would never make any money on them as we never have. That's because students are unwilling to pay $2 or $3 or $4 to see them or any other bands.

Open your eyes, Danny!! A survey was conducted last spring in selected classes. We also, advertise our open meetings and ask for student's opinions. The few of us die-hard S-UN loyalists have accomplished a great deal. But students don't seem to be aware of the changes which the organization is undergoing and the advancements that we have made. You can make the difference and help us bring the types of entertainment that students want to see!

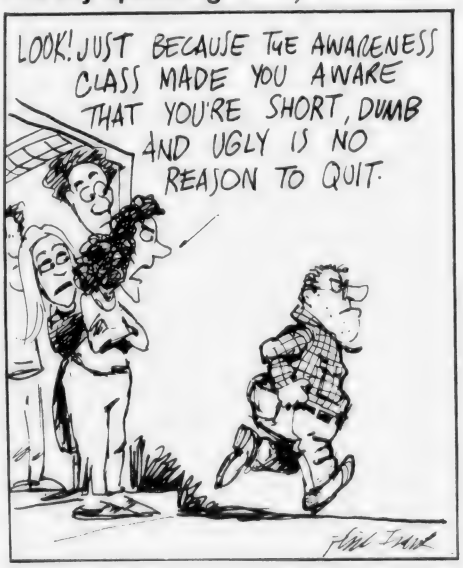
To The Editor:

Looking down at a desk in my American Lit class, a few words caught my eye, "Save a Longwood girl, shoot a Hampster." Now really, do we hate Hampden-Sydney men that much? Are we being a little jealous? Are they actually that bad? Well, I'm sure that the answer to all three of those questions could be yes, but, like in almost every case, there is always at least one exception, maybe more than we think. For once, let's try and take an objective look at Hampden-Sydney College.

First of all, the nickname, Hampster. Fair is only fair Longwood, what could they call us? "Woody," you say? Well, after many visits to H-SC, I can honestly say that I've never heard it used. There's also the popular belief among much of Longwood's male populous that the men from H-SC draw LC's women six miles down the road to their campus. Sure, there's something to be said for the social life at Hampden-Sydney on the weekends. Let's face it, Greek life at Longwood would be much more exciting if we could get the parties out of the hot, stuffy, chapter rooms, and into real houses. Longwood's women also need to be given a little more credit. Come on, a man, no matter where he goes to school, is still a man. Any girl who goes over there to find her, "million dollar man," will have to look hard to find him, and if it's just money she's after, do you think she's really worth it at all?



Now, I'm not saying that there's no money at H-SC. Yes, there are a handful of Porshe's, Mercedes', BMW's and other imports purchased by wealthy parents for their sons, roving the campus, but on the other hand, the vast majority of the 750 plus men drive around in the family's dependable spare car, or they worked hard just like some of us to buy their own. To go to H-SC is about twice the cost to attend Longwood; however, there's also financial aid at H-SC, don't kid yourself, plenty of the students are on it too. Now, some of you will argue that if Longwood were that expensive, you wouldn't be able to afford it, even with aid. What do you want me to say? This "battle between the schools" had been going on long before I came here, and I don't expect to stop it. Hopefully, everybody has reason for feeling the way they do about Hampden-Sydney.

The bottom line is, we're all college students. We all go through the same frustrations with grades, deal with the same trouble of dates, tolerate ARA, and drink the same beer. People fail out there, just as people do here. Maybe in the future, Hampden-Sydney and Longwood students should think a little bit about what they say before they say something about the other school. If we can't bury that sharp hatchet between the schools, why not just the blade.

HONOR BOARD HEARING RESULTS

Submitted here is an outlined compilation of all Honor Board hearings having taken place during the Fall Semester of 1986. Due to our commitment to confidentially, we are not able to make the pertinent facts which lead us to our decisions public knowledge. We do suggest in reviewing these cases, one take into consideration the extenuating circumstances which are often revealed during the course of a hearing and are considered during deliberation by the Board prior to all decisions.

It is the individual nature of each case that makes such a student run honor system necessary. We are confident each of our decisions are in the best interest of the academic integity of the student body. It is a policy of the Honor System sanctions to be educational, which in turn, is in the best interest of those responsible for violations.

We invite any suggestions, comments, or questions from the Longwood Community concerning the Honor System at Longwood. Comments should be directed to Michael Clements, chairman of the Honor Board, P. O. Box 1153 or Joseph C. McGill, Director of Student Services, Tabb Hall.

Sincerely submitted,
Longwood College Honor Board

Roaches Enjoy McDonald's

By PAMELA J. WERNER

For the past several months, the Farmville McDonald's has had more than just customers come through their doors. Roaches, which enjoy warm, humid climates, have come in out of the cold, set up camp and don't appear too eager to move.

OK Termite Control, a local pest control company, has been hired to try to curb the problem. An employee of OK Termite Control stated that McDonald's does indeed have a terrible problem with roaches. The fast food restaurant has been sprayed once and it will be several weeks before it can be sprayed again. Pyrid, a safe, low ordor chemical is being used to exterminate the pests. Unfortunately no improvement will be seen for several months.

So why wasn't anything done before now? According to one of the managers at McDonald's, they could not get a response from any other pest control company. One would think that when a customer's health is involved, a restaurant would try a little harder to stop a problem before it grows out of control.

Roaches feed on anything and everything. Their diets can consist of food, in any state of preparation, to garbage, to the dead remains of their companions. Wherever a roach steps, infection is spread.

Customers have spotted roaches running across tables and floors, over cup dispensers and even floating in their drinks. The management does not seem too concerned, however. They simply replace a customers' food or drink if there is a problem.

Mr. Harry McKissick from the Health Department, states that he was not aware of the severe roach problem at McDonald's. As far as inspections go, there is "no regular routine. McDonald's is probably lowest in priority on our list." Mr. McKissick guessed that the fast food restaurant was probably inspected four times a year. According to the Health Department records, the last time the Farmville McDonald's was inspected was October 28,1986.

One can only hope that with the upcoming renovation of McDonald's, the roaches will break camp and head elsewhere. In the meantime, if a cockroach decides to join you for lunch, either share your Big Mac or squash him. In any case, the results will be unappetizing.

Waitering Gains Efficiency

By MATT PETERMAN

The spring semester ushered in a new system of waitering that has proven effective and more efficient than in the past.

One of the biggest problems with waitering in the past, was the amount of time it took. This for the most part has been reduced to that of quick service. The trick to this semester is that the server takes the order before students go for drinks and or a salad. This reduces the hassle of staggering delays.

Most of the food and sometimes all of the food is on the table when the student returns. This is possible through the organization of the different foods in the kitchen. Instead of many disorganized stations, where lines were common, centralized stations were set-up, so that virtually all the food can be loaded up at one stop.

The portions that the student receives today are twice that of the past. Suprisingly, to most students, everyone at the table has a chance to take an adequate portion before the bowl needs refilling.

All of these small improvements have made a great difference in the quality of waitering to the point that waitering is becoming less frowned upon.

Much of this success can be attributed to the Director of Dining Services, Rick Johnson. His formula for the ever improving dining hall is simple. He talks with the students and gets their opinions. He welcomes comments and suggestions and does all he can to fix the problems.

This is not to say that the dining services are perfect, but they are improving. It is very difficult to please so many people at one time. Out of 1000 students who may eat dinner on a given night, it is possible for 50 or more to be displeased with some aspect of the dining hall system.

If the student and the dining hall work together much can be accomplished with respect to better quality. Such is the case of waitering which has taken a great leap foward from last semester because of student input and dining hall implementation.

Liberace Dies At 67

By MATT PETERMAN

Noted pianist, Liberace, died last Wednesday of anemia, emphysema, and heart disease. Reports that said he was dying of AIDS are still being denied.

His trademark when he played was his extravagent costumes and the candelabra that decorated his piano.

Though critics were harsh on him, he was still able to make many millions of dollars each season, breaking records of the highest paid pianist in the world.

He will long be remembered as a kind and generous man who gave his all in everything he did and attempted to do.

Dennis Connor, the first skipper to lose the America's Cup was the first to win it back after defeating the Australian's Kookabura III in his yacht Stars and Stripes. In a best out of seven series, Stars & Stripes sailed Dennis Connor to a 4-0 victory sweep over the Aussies.

The cup will return to America this week to the city of San Diego where Stars & Stripes will dock.

President Reagan congratulated Connor by saying: "your victory represents more than just another yachting triumph. It reflects the pinnacle of teamwork, competitiveness, hard work and American stick-to-it ingenuity. Your patience has paid off, and all America is proud."

Thousands of South Korean demonstrators gathered in the Capital of Seoul to protest the killing of a university student by police torture.

Police dispersed the rock and bottle throwing crowds with tear gas and riot gear. The crowds often regrouped and challenged police again.

The main rally was scheduled for 2 p.m. at Myungdong Cathedral, but police prevented all entry to the cathedral by blocking the streets in the area the night before.

Leaflets were distributed by the demonstrators denouncing South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan with slogans saying: "Drive out U.S. imperialists," "Down with the murderous regime . . .," "Down with dictatorship."

The government anticipating a large demonstration had 70,000 police officers keeping order in South Korean's major cities. Half of these could be found in Seoul. Much of the violence could be attributed to police who drove off demonstrators by beating them and using vast quantities of tear gas.

It was the police that interrogated Park Jungehul, a 21-year-old linguistics student subsequently causing his death by repeatily putting his head in a tub of water.

Longwood's New Pep Band

By JIM LONG

For the first time in six years, the Longwood Men's Basketball team has something besides a raucous crowd to cheer it on at home games. Under the direction of Longwood Director of Bands, Ralph Mohr, a new pep band has been put together with some of the members of the Longwood Concert band.

Mohr says the major reason there hadn't been a pep band in six years is that there were not enough people. It entered into what Mohr called "a vicious circle," meaning that a band couldn't be put together until students joined, and students wouldn't join until there was an actual band. Mohr, who has been an instructor at the college for the past two and half years, says the "circle" was broken when they made the band open to members of the community.

Expect more things from the band in the future. Mohr talks of potentially playing at every home game, and of traveling with the team for some away games. The pep band is not able to play before all home games currently because of various schedule conflicts with the band members.

The band now has a solid, twelve person core to build on. But for now, show your support for the Lancers, and jam with the pep band.

The Chain Is Broken

By KATILINA CABINDA

Recently, a chain letter hit Longwood College and as all chain letters, it was a hoax devised to bring people good luck. Those that are superstitous would never break the chain in fear that their lives would be adversely altered. The following is the chain letter as it was circulating the campus:

Bless someone you love when you get this letter; make magic. This letter has been sent to you for good luck. The original copy is in England. It has been around the world nine times. The luck has been sent to you — you will receive good luck in 4 days receiving this letter providing that you in turn send it back out. This is no joke, send out copies to people you think need luck. Do not send money because fate has no price. Do not keep this letter. It must leave your hands within 96 hours.

An RAF Officer received $70,000. Joe Elliot received $40,000 and lost it because he broke the chain. While in the Phillipines, Gene Welch lost his wife 6 days after receiving this letter. He had failed to circulate this letter. However, after circulating the letter he received $7,775. Please send 20 copies of this letter and see what happens in 4 days. The chain came from Venezuela and was written by Saul Anthony de Graft, a missionary, from South America. Since the letter must take a tour of the world, xerox 20 copies and send them to your friends and associates, after 4 days you will get a surprise. This is true even if you are not very lucky.

To note the following, constantine Rice received the chain letter and asked his secretary to make 20 copies and send them out. A few days later he received a lottery ticket for two million dollars; Amie Daddist, an office employee, received the letter and forgot it had to leave her hand within 96 hours. She lost her job. After Mr. Fairchilds, received the letter and not believing threw the letter away, nine days later he died. Remember, send no money and don't ignore this letter. It works!

If you should receive this letter, dispose of it. If you choose to keep it, mail it because Friday the 13th is just around the corner.

Respecting Our P.E. Majors

By KATIE PARSONS

Out of the majors on campus many receive the credit they're due; however, one major in particular is lacking sorely in the respect they deserve. To many people the physical education majors of the world are just a bunch of "dumb jocks." Well, many people are wrong. A student wouldn't stop to question a science majors classes. Let's face it, if you were stuck in the middle of a physical chemistry class you'd go into shock. Then why are the physical education majors looked down upon? Perhaps because of the number of activity classes they are required to take. As any physical education major will tell you, college activity classes are nothing like high school. You don't have to survive through the monotonous skills, you actually have to "Master" them. In addition to the activity classes and the everpresent general ed. requirements a physical education major has an assortment of "regular" classes that are required. Anatomy and Physiology, Motor Learning, and Kinesiology are a few that leave shivers down a physical education majors spine. These aren't easy classes. I've heard many a physical education major complain about the horrors of their 3 credit classes. I even know that some of their classes are repeated more than once. Physical education majors aren't "dumb jocks", they will help our children grow up health conscious. The next time you're tempted to put down a physical education major stop and think not only about how hard their classes really are, but about how dull your school days would have been without a physical workout that got your nose out of the books.

The Lankford student union has stretched its hours to accommodate students who wish to study outside their dorms:

The new hours are:
Mon-Thurs: 7:30 a.m. - 2:00 a.m.
Friday - 7:30 - 12:30 a.m.
Saturday - 2:00 p.m. - 12:30 a.m.
Sunday - 2:00 p.m. - 2:00 a.m.

These hours are limited to the Reading Rooms and the Gold Room and does not include the Recreation Area or the TV Lounge.

Have you ever felt like going to church, but you just didn't want to dress up? Well there is a group on campus that offers that opportunity. The group is Canterbury Young Adults. Canterbury Young Adults has services at Johns Memorial Church, across from Grainger, every Thursday at 5:30. The service is followed by dinner and a program or conversation.

Canterbury not only provides a place to worship without formalities, it provides many other opportunities. It's a place to make friends, to be yourself, to meet professors, faculty and staff at the college. Canterbury provides a place to explore beliefs, meet new people, relax from classes, enjoy some home cooking, and even some unique travel experiences. There is also a place to study, watch TV or listen to the radio that is open Monday-Friday during the day, and Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights until 10:30. So why not give up a Thursday evening and try something new?

The Longwood Jazz Ensemble will perform on Saturday, Feb. 21, at the Sixth Street Marketplace in Richmond.

The Ensemble, which is directed by Ralph Mohr, will play from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. outside the Blues Armory. The concert is part of the promotional activities by the merchants there.

"There are concerts at the Sixth Street Marketplace throughout the year, mostly by professional bands," said Mohr. "We consider ourselves honored to be invited."

The following free student-faculty computing workshop will take place in the days to come. Introduction To The Apple Writer II, Thursday, Feb 12, 12:30-2 p.m.; Monday, Feb 16, 10:30-Noon. Participants must bring one blank single-sided or double-sided, double density, soft sectored diskette.

The Inter-religious Council will meet Feb. 18th at 5:30 in the Episcopal in the Episcopal Campus ministry center across from the library.

class colors. An editorial in the same issue denied this was a tradition and pointed out the dangers of climbing up to the roof.

Safety considerations finally prompted the bell's removal, Dr. Heintz said.

A photo in a 1972 issue of The Rotunda shows the newly elected freshman class president climbing up on a scaffold to ring the bell. Apparently, it was a tradition for the officers of student organizations to ring the bell, said Dr. Jordan.

"College bells regulated the residential rather than the academic life of their institution and the spread of clocks and watches made most of this ringing obsolete," according to the book Bells and Man, By Percival Price.

A bell at Oxford University in England still rings 101 times (the one-time size of the student body) at 9 every evening, a 441-year-old custom that reminds students they have to be inside the campus walls, the book said. "Of course, nowadays nobody heeds it but everybody likes to hear it."

At the University of Georgia, where Dr. Jordan was once a graduate student, it was a tradition for freshmen to ring a campus bell all night long the evening before football games with rival Georgia Tech, he said.

The bell probably will be placed in the Rotunda, on the first floor of Ruffner, between the front door and the office of the vice president for Student Affairs. Its role will be that of a "museum artifact," Dr. Jordan said, adding that it would be inappropriate to return it to its former location.

Thoughts From The Shallow

If you are the usual Rotunda reader interested in vital information and top flight entertainment skip this article. This is a conglomeration, a potpourri if you will, of useless information and thoughtless comments of a typical college student.

Longwood's Weight Room Etiquette

Don't you just hate it when your lying on your back doing flys and someone drops a 35 lb weight on your groin? Me too. With the aid of Ray Leage and Andy Struhar (body builders of some fame and expertise in the Farmville area), I have come up with a few points of proper etiquette to ease the turmoil and confusion of the Lancer Spa (weight room).

1) DON'T CALL IT A GYM. Longwood has spent numerous funds on the decour of the Lancer spa (weight room). A gym smells like old socks, and is full of tattooed frat boys with names like Bam Bam, Tonto and Weezer. In contrast Lancer Spa is the ultimate in cleanliness and clientel. You will rarely see dirt on the floor or the spit of sexually frustrated dolts on the mirrors.

2) DRESS IN THE PROPER LOCKER ROOM. That means women in the one marked women, and men in the one marked men. There shouldn't be any trouble at Lancer Spa facilities, for our locker rooms are clearly marked (?).

3) DON'T PAW AT THE FEMALES IN THE SPA. Thats not what they are there for (?)., even though their leotards look like Playboy Bunny costumes, except they fit much tighter. Besides, the one your lurching towards may be Big Mike's girlfriend. Touch her, and he'll break your face.

4) WEAR PROPER ATTIRE IN WORKOUT AREA. Does this mean you have to go out and spend a hundred bucks on new exercise cloths?....Yes! Unlike a gym were basic gray sweats you wore in high school and torn street cloths from the gutters of Philadelphia are acceptable, Lancer Spa is very maticulous about it's clientels attire. No less than the latest European fitness styles will be accepted.

5) WAIT YOUR TURN ON THE EQUIPMENT. This doesn't mean you lean against the squat rack looking at your watch and rolling your eyes toward the ceiling while you wait for an open bench. You'll keep this in mind when you are lying on the bench with fallen weight on your chest, wondering if the pain in your gut is just a pain or an honest-to-God rupture.

6) DON'T DO CRUNCHES OR SIT-UPS AFTER EATING ARA FOOD. Lancer and Public health ordinances as well as common decency forbid this. (FLATUS LINGERS!)

7) REPLACE BARBELLS AND DUMBELLS ON THEIR PROPER RACKS. Unless you've found that you've ruptured yourself, in which case you are excused.

8) DON'T DROP YOUR DUMBELL ON OTHER SPA USERS. This is the worst thing you can do in terms of its severe negative effects it will ever have on your popularity. SCENARIO—your bringing your weights back to the rack, to turn to watch Susy Rottencrotch do a squat—then suddenly...HEY, watch it fella! Jeeze, now you've done it, look at the poor guy you just hit. He's got both fists stuffed between his legs and he's turning purple! Hey, If I was you I would apologize quick. Just bend over to where he's squirming on the ground and say "Sorry, Big Mike." On second thought, maybe it would be better to make a more formal apology by telegram.....from Mongolia.

JOSEPH WAS A SMASH

By JENNIFER FORD

February 4 the Longwood Series of Performing Arts brought us the musical "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat". It was presented by the Barksdale Theatre of Hanover, Virginia.

The play packed Jarman Auditorium. Students were admitted to the play free of charge with an I.D., and there were 500 tickets reserved for Longwood students, which had to be picked up that day at the Student Union office in Lankford. Needless to say, the theatre was filled to capacity. The show started a little behind schedule and the crowd was restless.

At first I found the show too hoaky for words. Then the laughs started rolling out and the entire audience simply enjoyed the silliness of the play.

The play was about the misfortune of Joseph, the favorite son of Jacob. Joseph's 11 jealous brothers sold him into slavery and told their father he had been killed. By the hand of fate, Joseph became a powerful man in the Egyptian government and by the end of the play he is reunited with his father and brothers. There is a happy ending.

The music varied from Michael Jackson takeoffs to Jamaican stylized music. All of the songs had a laugh in them. The dancing added to the humor of the play and to the high energy level that the play gave to the audience.

I feel sorry for those who chose not to see the play or couldn't get a ticket. I came into the auditorium feeling stressed and sick of the world. When I walked out of the doors I felt like I might just be able to make it through this next week of deadlines and tests.

The students of Longwood should encourage the arts program to bring in more acts like these.

FACULTY FOLLIES

"Parlor Entertainment," as it might have been before the invention of television and VCRs, will be featured in a scholarship-benefit program at Longwood College on Thursday, February 12, at 8 p.m. in the Gold Room, Lankford Building.

The entertainers are Patricia Lust, Rosemary Sprague, and Donald Stuart, of the Longwood faculty; and James Kidd, of the Hampden-Sydney faculty.

Dr. Kidd, pianist, will play "Nola" and "Narcissus." Dr. Lust will sing favorites like "My Grandfather's Clock," "Home, Sweet Home," "Whispering Hope," and songs by Cole Porter. Dr. Sprague and Dr. Stuart will present several readings and "poetry surprizes."

The program is sponsored by Longwood's music program and the Community Chorus.

Admission is $5 for adults, $2.50 for students. Proceeds will go to a music scholarship at Longwood.

For reservations, call Longwood's music office at 392-9368.

Post Office Pleas

Due to the ever-increasing amount of on-campus mail being handled by the Longwood College Post Office, we are asking that everyone please use the guidelines listed below when preparing mail to be delivered on campus. Failure to do so could result in delays of delivery and-or return to sender. Each piece must be:

No smaller than a Post Card (3½ X 5 in.)

No larger than an average envelope (4 X 9 in.)

All single page notices must be tri-folded

No candy or other articles attached to the outside of any envelope

All must have a complete name and correct box number

Mailings of over 20 pieces are asked to be placed in numerical order

Following these guidelines will help us to serve you better and insure a prompt delivery.

BAND MEMBERS ONE STEP BEYOND

That band is "made up of the best college players from all over the state," said Ralph Mohr, Longwood Band director and assistant professor of music. It will convene Feb. 12-15 at Old Dominion University, where there will be a reading session of new music submitted by composers throughout the United States. A winning composition will be selected.

The seven Longwood students chosen for the Virginia Intercollegiate Band are Anne Smith (clarinet) of Midlothian; Wendy Palmore (flute) of Kenbridge; Eddie Stallings (trumpet) of Sterling; Richard Huggins (trombone) of Roanoke; Paul Dembowski (baritone) of Baltimore, Md.; Lisa Loudermilk (tuba) of Lexington; and Danny Javaras (percussion) of Fredericksburg.

Music Dept. Gifted

Andrew W. Hull, former supervisor of music education for the Roanoke City public schools, has donated to Longwood College "a sizeable collection" of instruments and musical books and literature.

"Because of his generosity, we now have instruments that had been missing from our inventory," Mohr said. "He also has given us a collection of musical theory books and instrumental technique books which has allowed us to greatly expand our music holdings in those areas. Mr. Hull has been very supportive of the music program."

Among the instruments are two tubas, several saxophones, four Flugel horns, and a variety of percussion instruments and accessories, said Mohr.

Mr. Hull, a longtime Roanoke resident, is retired. Before becoming music supervisor for the Roanoke school system, he was bandmaster at Jefferson Senior High School and Monroe Junior High School for a total of 26 years, during which his bands won 15 national championships.

He served for 22 years as bandmaster of the Virginia Army National Guard 90th Army Band, a marching unit he helped organize in 1947.

Longwood's Landmark Bell

By KENT BOOTY
Of the Longwood
Public Affairs Office

The Longwood College bell, a landmark that governed the lives of students for perhaps as long as a century, may be put on permanent display during the college's 150th anniversary in 1989.

The bell — the object of late-night pranks by countless students — is expected to be restored and placed in the Rotunda. It has been stored in the basement of Graham Building since being taken down from the roof of Ruffner Hall in 1976, about 15 years after it was last rung officially by the college.

For generations of Longwood students, the bell awakened them in the morning, rang for classes and meals, and signaled the end of the day. It was enclosed in a cupola on the roof of South Ruffner, near its junction with East Ruffner.

"Some friends told me that people in town did their housekeeping by that bell," said Jane Andrews, a Longwood alumna who works in the alumni office. "They practically lived by that bell."

The bell measures 36 inches in diameter and probably weighs between 700 and 800 pounds.

Had it not been for the interest of a Longwood carpenter, the bell might never have seen the light of day again.

Jim Blake, a member of the physical plant staff, was concerned that the bell might eventually disappear if nothing was done. "Last July, he told me, 'I know you're interested in old things. There's an old bell I'd like to show you,'" recalled Dr. James Jordan, associate professor of anthropology. "A few days later, after looking at it, I got a notice about the Sesquicentennial celebration. It seemed like the perfect conjunction."

Dr. Jordan soon gave a proposal to Longwood President Janet Greenwood and discussed the bell with the Historical Reflections Committee, a subcommittee of the Sesquicentennial Steering Committee. Both Dr. Greenwood and the committee, to which Dr. Jordan belongs, liked the idea of putting the bell on display.

Dr. Jordan is hoping that someone from the Virginia Research Center for Archeology, many of whose staff members serve as consultants to Colonial Williamsburg, can inspect the bell, so that the college might better proceed with its restoration. Longwood is seeking private funds for the restoration.

The earliest reference to a bell that Dr. Jordan found is in an 1859 brochure for Longwood, then called the Farmville Female College. "One hour after the rising bell, the boarders assemble with the teachers in the parlor for family prayers," it said.

The 1902 issue of The Virginian, Longwood's yearbook, contains the passage, "When the big bell rings, the girls come trooping in..." In the college's financial records for 1903-04, there are four entries for "repairs and improvements to the school bell."

"Whether the 'rising bell', the 'big bell' and the 'school bell' are the same bell, we cannot be sure," said Dr. Jordan. "I'll bet money they're all the same, but we don't have any way to prove that."

Over the years, the bell proved irresistable to student pranksters.

"One night, a classmate and I tied the clapper with ironing board covers and towels so it wouldn't ring," said Dr. Nancy Andrews, a member of the Class of 1959 who is on the physical education faculty. "Everybody was late for classes the next day."

"The next night, after they said we couldn't do anything to prevent it from ringing, we went up there again. We tied fishing wire to the clapper and extended it until we got it into a (dorm) room. We rang the bell all night long. People in town were calling the college and saying, 'Stop ringing that darn bell.'"

Alumni director Nancy Shelton, a member of the Class of 1968, recalled that students would paint the bell red or green, depending on their class year. About half of the bell contains a fading coat of red paint.

"Sometimes students would tie the clapper with a rope and throw it over a roofline so they could ring it from their rooms, like in Tabb," Mrs. Shelton said. "I remember it ringing at 2 a.m. sometimes."

The college probably quit using the bell in 1960 or 1961. Dr. Andrews remembers it being used as late as 1959, and Dr. Mary Heintz, a retired administrator and faculty member, said it was no longer rung when she arrived in 1962.

In 1962, acting president Fred Wygal announced that painting the bell was prohibited. A letter to the editor in The Rotunda, the student newspaper, protested the revoking of the "cherished tradition" of painting it with

PETE WHITMAN

TIM FITZGERALD

Senior Tim Fitzgerald and junior Pete Whitman led the Longwood wrestlers to victory in the first Virginia College Division State Tournament over the weekend. Fitzgerald and Whitman have been named Longwood College Players of the Week for the period February 1-8. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Fitzgerald won the state title at 118 pounds with three impressive victories and was named Most Outstanfing Wrestler in the tournament. Whitman won the 142-pound class and was runner-up in the Most Outstanding voting.

Dominating his class, Fitzgerald won three technical falls by scores of 19-4, 26-11 and 20-4. He upped his record for this season to 22-3 and his career best mark is now 81-37-1.

Fitzgerald, who was also named Longwood College Player of the Week last week, is a graduate of Eastern Alamance High School.

Whitman won his matches by scores of 15-0 and 13-7 to capture the crown. He has an outstanding 16-6-2 record for the season and is 10-1-1 since the Christmas break. Also one of Longwood's all-time best, Whitman has a 61-34-2 overall record.

A business major, Whitman is a graduate of Neshaminy-Langhorne High School.

Gymnasts Fall to Radford

Saturday Longwood's gymnastics team was defeated by Division I Radford University 170.35-164.85. The Lancer record stands at 0-3. This weekend the Lancers take to the road for a date with Trenton State and Princeton University.

In the meet with Radford, Longwood again improved its overall team score. The scores in all events also improved with the exception of vaulting. The Lancers had four no-fall routines on the beam. The uneven bars, however, are still giving the team trouble.

Kim Booth competed in all four events for the first time this season. Although she has been bothered by a shoulder injury, she did well enough to be the Lancers' second high all-around scorer (33.1).

Lynda Chenoweth again was Longwood's leading scorer. With her 33.5 she was able to capture third place in the all-around competition. Kiersten Artese turned in a good performance, accumulating 32.4 points.

Longwood's next home meet will be February 28 when UMBC visits.

According to coach Ruth Budd, several gymnasts have been ill. Debbe Malin has had the flu and was only able to compete in the bars and the vault. She will still able to turn in LC's high score on the bars with an 8.6.

Longwood's Top Scorers

Vault — Kiersten Artese, 8.8; Lynda Chenoweth, 33.5 (3rd All-Around)

Bars — Debbe Malin, 8.6; Kim Booth, 33.1

Beam — Lynda Chenoweth, 8.55; Kiersten Artese, 32.4

Floor — Kim Booth, 8.65

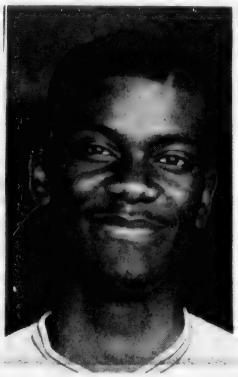
Lancers Rebound With Two 100 pt. Games

An up-and-down season took a pronounced up for the Longwood men's basketball team last week as freshman Kevin Jefferson led an effort that produced back-to-back 100-point outings for the first time in school history.

The Lancers, 11-10 overall, 2-3 in the Mason-Dixon-Conference, can stake a claim on third place in the MDAC and perhaps second if they can beat league members Liberty on the road Tuesday, and nationally ranked Mount St. Mary's in Lancer Hall Saturday night. Thursday, Longwood hosts NAIA member Elon at 6:30 in a game that was postponed earlier by a snowstorm. The game with Elon will be followed by the women's game between Longwood and St. Paul's at 8:30.

Longwood coach Cal Luther feels his team has turned things around after suffering through a 4-game losing streak at the end of January.

"I think our team has bounced back pretty well," said the coach. "I would like to think we are ready to make a real strong bid to finish in the first division of the conference."



MDAC teams are jockeying for position in the league tournament February 27-28 at Randolph-Macon. Conference records are as follows: Mount St. Mary's 4-0, Randolph-Macon 3-1, Longwood 2-3, Pitt-Johnstown 2-4, Liberty 1-4. The top three teams will have automatic spots in the tourney, but numbers four and five will have to play-off for the fourth spot in the tournament.

Freshman Kevin Jefferson, with a lot of help from his teammates, sparked Longwood to 120-87 and 100-61 victories over Benedict and Pittsburgh-Johnstown, respectively last week.

Jefferson collected 46 points, 14 rebounds, 13 assists and four dunks in the two games, which were played in Lancer Hall. The 6-4 forward canned 18 of 27 shots from the floor (66.7 per cent) and 10 of 12 free throws (83.3 per cent). He had a career high 25 points, 8 rebounds and 6 assists against Benedict and 21 points, 6 rebounds and 7 assists versus UPJ.

The 120 points Longwood scored against Benedict was the second highest total in school history. The Lancers beat Lancaster Bible 140-57 in the 1978-79 season. In all, seven players reached double figures against the Tigers from Columbia, South Carolina. Longwood shot 69 per cent from the floor.

Friday night the Lancers gained revenge for an 86-76 loss at UPJ the week before. Smothering man-to-man defense was the name of the game as Longwood bolted to a 36-22 halftime lead.

KEVIN JEFFERSON

"We played outstanding defense," said coach Luther. "We played as good on defense as we have all year in the first 20 minutes. The first time we played Pitt-Johnstown we had little time to prepare (the game was snowed out and re-scheduled on short notice). This time we were ready."

Junior Art Monroe tossed in 22 points, making 12 of 14 free throws to lead the victory. Monroe, who is averaging 17.6 ppg., had to fight through a triangle-and-two defense in the first half.

Longwood shot 66 per cent from the floor as Darry Rutley hit seven of 10 field goals for 14 points and Jefferson made 8-12.

Freshman Dale Shavers came off the bench to score 10 points against the Mountain Cats. The 6-3 guard had scored 14 points in the win over Benedict.

Shavers' playing time has increased rapidly over the past three weeks. He hit 12 of 14 field goals and added 8 assists, 8 rebounds and 2 steals in 35 minutes of action last week. He's now Longwood's top guard off-the-bench.

"He has learned what we are looking for," said Luther. "Dale is more confident now, and I'm real high on him. He's going to be an outstanding player for us."

Guard Kevin Ricks has moved into second place on Longwood's all-time list of leaders in assists and steals. The 6-3 co-captain has 327 assists and 231 steals in his career. He won't catch assist leader Joe Remar (531), but he has a shot at passing Jerome Kersey (251) in steals. Ricks has 82 assists and 71 steals this season and has averaged 6.0 points per game.

Ricks was the central figure in an unusual bit of coaching strategy Friday night against Pitt-Johnstown. UPJ played Longwood with a triangle-and-two, shadowing Ricks and Art Monroe man-to-man. Lancer coach Cal Luther foiled the strategy by asking Ricks to stand near midcourt away from the ball on offense. Operating four-on-four against a triangle-and-one, Longwood was able to shake free for high percentage shots.

Grapplers Capture State Title

By KIRK BARNES

A first place finish in the initial Virginia College Division State Tournament held in Newport News Friday and Saturday capped off an impressive week for the Longwood wrestling team. The Lancers had two second place finishers in the Virginia Tech Invitational last Sunday, and lost to Virginia Tech 28-15 in a dual match Wednesday in Blacksburg.

Longwood's next two matches will be at home this week. Washington & Lee visits Wednesday night at 7:30 and Livingstone, with Campbell, will participate in a tri-match Saturday in Lancer Hall starting at 12:00.

Longwood totaled 86 points to beat favored Liberty (79.25) for the state crown. Newport News Apprentice was third with 60, Virginia State had 42 and Ferrum 19.5.

"We're pretty excited," said Longwood coach Steve Nelson Saturday night. "We wrestled very, very well and we got some breaks too. A win like this shows that our team has come a long way. We proved we can compete and we have a 3-ft. high trophy to keep for a year."

Tim Fitzgerald, 118 lbs., was voted the Most Outstanding Wrestler in this weekend's competition. He destroyed his three opponents by scores of 19-4, 26-11, and 20-4 to win his weight class easily. His record is an impressive 22-3.

"Tim was head and shoulders above the other wrestlers in his weight class," said Nelson. "He completely dominated the competition."

Pete Whitman, 142 lbs., who finished second in the ballotting for Most Outstanding Wrestler, won his matches 15-0, and 13-7 to take first in his weight class.

"Pete has been wrestling well this semester," stated Nelson. "He is 10-1-1 since Christmas and 16-6-2 overall."

John Stukes, 134 lbs., completely dominated his opponents by scores of 18-2, and 16-1 to take first in his class. His record stands at 19-2.

Billy Howard also won his weight class impressively, ending his first match with a pin in 56 seconds and winning 10-7 in the finals. His record is 17-7.

David Taylor, 177 lbs., John Kelly, 190 lbs., and Jesus Strauss, hwt., each finished second while Willie Gaines, 126 lbs., finished third. Taylor upset Liberty's Steele 8-7 in the semifinals to give Longwood a boost.

"We were really rusty against Virginia Tech," complained Nelson about Wednesday's match. "I think fatigue was an important factor." The loss moves Longwood's dual match record to 7-3. Fitzgerald lost only his third match of the season. He wrestled, however, in the 126 pound weight class. Ben Bartlett, 118 lbs., Stukes, Whitman, and Strauss won their weight class.

Fitzgerald and Strauss finished second in Sunday's Virginia Tech Tourney, as both went 2-1.

"Overall we had a super week of wrestling," boasted Nelson. "We were a little flat Wednesday night, but we came back strong in the Virginia Collegiate Tournament. We are in good shape at this point in the season and we are wrestling well," added the coach.

Lady Lancer Basketball

ANGIE HILL

Longwood's women's basketball team, after some tough going on the road last week, will seek to bounce back with a trio of games starting with a Mason-Dixon matchup at Randolph-Macon Tuesday night. The Lady Lancers host St. Paul's Thursday and visit Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday.

Now 8-11 overall and 2-2 in the MDAC, Longwood fell at George Mason Saturday afternoon 65-59 after dropping a disappointing 68-55 decision at William & Mary Wednesday night.

"We had a good effort Saturday and a respectable performance," said Longwood coach Shirley Duncan. "Angie Hill played particularly well on defense. She guarded their top scorer Veronica Gilliard in our diamond and one defense."

Hill helped hold Gilliard to 12 points for the game and no field goals in the second half. The George Mason scoring leader was just 3-14 from the floor. In addition, Hill scored a team-high 14 points. Karen Boska added 12 points and 10 rebounds and Barbie Burton had 10 points and 6 rebounds.

"We played well for about 15 minutes and then ran out of gas," said the coach. Longwood held a 34-23 lead at the half, but William & Mary refused to quit and battled back to take the win as Boska, Burton and co-captain Caren Forbes fouled out. Forbes and Hill scored 16 points each to lead Longwood against the Tribe.

"We need a maximum effort from everyone on the team every second they are in the game to be successful," said Duncan.

Forbes, Longwood's top socrer with a 14.1 ppg. average, moved into second place on the women's basketball all-time scoring list. Forbes has 1,314 points and has moved past Florence Holmes (1,304). She'll have a tough time catching leader Sue Rama (1,471).

Boska has accumulated 973 points and is a good bet to become the College's eighth lady cager to score 1,000 or more points.

IAA Update

By ALLISON ARTHUR

The Intramural Activities Association got off to a fast start this semester with men's basketball which has already come to an end with "Showtime" taking the A-League tournament and "Fast Break" pulling through to win B-League.

In case you happen to get stranded here in Farmville for the weekend, check the Intramural Calendar-Handbook for weekend events. Entry blanks for weekend events are always due on the Thursday before the event is to take place.

If you don't have a calendar-handbook and would like to keep up with dates for the events, come by the IAA office in Iler and pick one up. Events are always publicized a week before entry blanks are due. There are always flyers up in Iler gym and on the IAA bulletin board in the New Smoker. Flyers are also sent to all residence halls, so check with your RA if you want more information.

There are several changes in the weekend events that are scheduled in the Handbook. For the weekend of February 14-15, there will be a regular 5-man Basketball Tournament. This is not coed but both men and women are encouraged to enter. On the weekend of Feb. 21-22, IAA will sponsor the Schick super loop tournament which is a national 3-on-3 Collegiate Intramural Basketball Tournament. The winner of the Schick tournament will have a chance to compete in the Regionals at George Washington University in March. Keep an eye out for more information.

In case of more snow, the Intramural program always goes as scheduled. Gyms will be open all day and scheduled games will not be cancelled.

Eat less saturated fats.

THE MASTER PLAN BECOMES REALITY

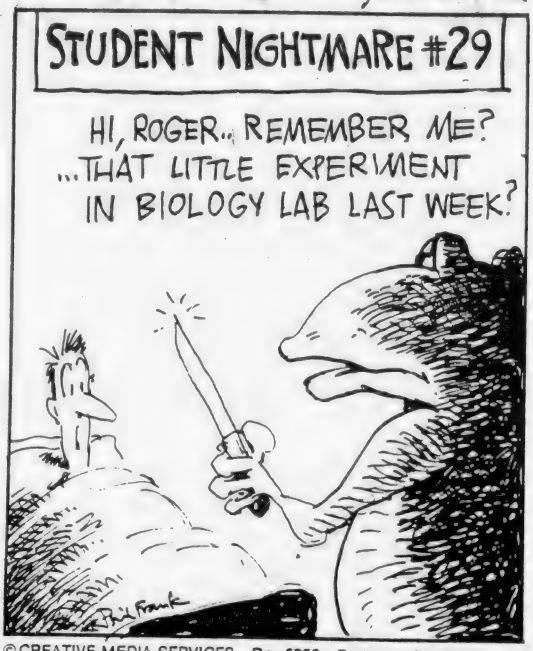
SITE SELECTION FACTORS

By MELISSA GIBBS

In its meeting on January 31st, The Board of Visitors decided to establish a committee to address the protests of Citizens to Save Our Neighborhood, a group of residents upset by their exclusion from the college's planned expansion into their neighborhood. The Master Plan currently on file with The Department of Engineering and Buildings, initially devised in 1976 and updated in 1978, calls for the acquisition of land south of Franklin Street to the intersection of South Main Street and Griffin Boulevard in addition to the two blocks south of Redford Street. Citizens to Save Our Neighborhood organized in fall 1985 after learning that The Board of Visitors had voted in July to submit the Master Plan to the Department of Engineering and Buildings. An article in The Farmville Herald on February 4th quoted spokesman for the citizens' group James Ghee as stating it was''' a slap in our face for Longwood to develop a Master Plan that drastically impacts on the black community and the black community not have any input into it, and to have a public hearing to show us the project completed, saying "this is it, we're going on with it." ' "

The Board of Visitors has put on hold further implementation of the plan pending the proposal of alternatives found by the newly appointed committee composed of the Longwood staff, and members of the Board of Visitors and the community. Meanwhile, the college will complete two land transactions already in progress. The transactions involve the acquisition of the Branch property at South Main and Hooper Streets and the Adkins property at South Main and Franklin Streets. Longwood students will welcome the parking area proposed to be built on the Adkins property. The present Master Plan also includes proposals for the construction of two dorms, a pedestrian mall, a new library, tennis courts, and additional parking areas.

Editorial



A special committee has been formed by Ricky Otey, SGA President, called the Academic Advisory Committee. This committee has about twenty-five members from the student body. Two subcommittees have been set up to undertake two problems: communication between the students and faculty and teacher evaluations. The communications subcommittee is headed by Holly Daughtery and the teacher evaluation subcommittee is headed by Noah Wood.

At the end of each semester, students are asked to fill out evaluations. After this is done, students never hear or see the results. These surveys are generic and ask questions that don't give an indepth sight into how the students feel about the teachers. The teacher may be the nicest person in the world, but may have the worst teaching methods. This cannot be shown on the surveys.

At U.VA., a book is available at their bookstore concerning teachers. This book is put together by students. It tells certain characteristics and teaching methods of the faculty. This can be a great help to students before registration. It can also be a form of constructive criticism for the teacher. Teachers should not feel defensive about this book. Ricky Otey will be sending out a letter to each faculty member about the meetings of the committee. This gives everyone an opportunity to voice opinions.

To the Editor:

I am writing a letter in defense of the Greeks. The Greek system is effective here at Longwood and I am extremely proud to be a part of it. One of the main problems, though, is the attitude towards the Greeks by faculty, administration, and non-Greek students. Greeks are thought to be massive partiers.. Yes, it is true that a large percentage of the Greeks do party, but there is much more to it than that. Sororities and Fraternities not only abide by the school's laws, but they also adhere to their national's rules.

Fraternities and Sororities strive for better scholarship as everyone does. Our grade average is virtually no different than other students. Sometimes, though, Greeks are singled out more because they wear letters. Faculty notices when Greeks skip. At D.T. Bradley's on Thursday nights, there are just as many Greeks as non-Greeks drinking. NON-GREEKS PARTY, TOO!!

Greeks are not only involved in their own organizations, but extend themselves into other areas. There are Greeks in Ambassadors, S. G. A., on the honor and judicial board, WLCX, and the Rotunda among many. We are not trying to monopolize this campus. Everyone has an opportunity to do things, run for offices, and to vote. The fact is that Greeks like being involved.

You don't buy friends when you join a Sorority or Fraternity. You meet new people and share a common bond, values and morals. The Greek system must be going strong because there was a very successful informal rush last week. Many of the faculty and administrators were Greek, including Dr. Janet Greenwood.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

My room smells like a laundromat right now. It does every time I do my laundry because the dryers on this campus are relics from the dawn of man. I put my last fifty cents into the dryer, left, came back forty minutes later to take my clothes out only to find them just as wet as they were when I put them in.

I had to roam around my hall and beg for someone to give me two quarters for my assorted dimes, nickels, and pennies. I am a poor college student. My budget doesn't allow for three dollars just to dry four pair of jeans, socks and some T-shirts.

I have got better things to do with my money and my time than to fight with our worn out Stone Age dryers. I am from Richmond and it is cheaper for me to road trip home on Sundays to do my laundry than to do it here. One reason Longwood may be a Suitecase college is that the student body can't afford to do their laundry here and they aren't about to walk around in last week's clothes that has beer, food or God knows what else on it. Do you want to get near a jock who is wearing the same sweats that he wore last week to lift in? I know I don't.

Longwood is getting alot of money to build a new library. I think that the one we've got is adequete. Why can't we get something we really need, LIKE CLOTHES DRYERS THAT DO WHAT THEY ARE MEANT TO DO??????

It is so embarrassing to have all of your underwear hanging from your chair and clothes rack when someone that you've been scamming on all semester drops by.

My room smells like Fab and looks like all of my drawers exploded. I am sick of it and I am sure that I am not alone.

JENNIFER FORD

To the editor:

After reviewing the Substance Abuse Task Force Committee report, we feel that it is essential that SGA take a position that will express the needs and concerns of the students.

We support Longwood's effort to adhere to state laws. A lot of colleges around the state, Longwood included, are dealing with the problem of substance abuse. As an institution of higher learning, it is of the utmost importance that we educate these individuals. After carefully studying the issue, we make the following recommendations:

Education:

1) Substance Abuse should be studied more in Health Courses.

2) The "Drugs, Alcohol and Tobacco" course now being offered should be stressed more by the advisors, for freshmen.

Alternative Programs

1) We will encourage campus clubs to use the Rotunda and WLCX to advertise events.

2) We will encourage students to be more active in Student Union activities.

3) We will set up a meeting between student leaders and the local ABC agent to reach a common ground in hopes of bringing back the "Longwood Mixer."

Standard and Enforcement

1) We will encourage the Judicial Board to give tougher sanctions to offenders of alcohol policy. We trust that the administration will support this action.

We want the laws of this state to be enforced. We don't, however, want to impede those who do drink legally and responsibly.

The recommendations we've made may seem small. But it is our belief that the same student body that received the Governor's award for its work during Alcohol Awareness Week, can and will take control of this problem.

The Student Government Association eagerly awaits the opportunity to work with the administration on this issue and many others. Longwood is a leader in this state, and will continue to be, as long as we work together.

Sincerely,
Ricky L. Otey
SGA President

Project Democracy Circumvented Congress

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ According to the Tower Commission, appointed by President Reagan to investigate the Iran Arms Deal, a covert foreign policy operation was run from the White House through the National Security Council. The project, called Project Democracy was in place for four years headed by fired White House aide, Oliver North.

This secret policy branch of the government had its own communications systems, ships, airplanes, bank accounts, and corporations that it used to achieve its goals.

Apparently, Project Democracy is the secret arm of a public organization Reagan supported many years ago. The National Endowment for Democracy was established to openly give federal money to Democratic institutions around the world.

It was clearly a way The White House used to circumvent Congress and other governmental organizations. Project Democracy was well in place when the Iran-Contra affair was in its planning stages. Many congressmen believe it is illegal and will further investigate the project.

The big question remains: How much did President Reagan know about the actions of an organization that he created.

☐ Police said that four gunmen walked into a restaurant in Queens, N. Y. and opened fire on the people inside. No motive could be related to the shootings that wounded five people, two of them critically.

The incident occurred at 1:30 a.m. Saturday morning at an Asian restaurant. The four gunmen were Asians themselves and remain at large.

Speculation that gang war might be flaring up in the city doesn't seem apparent, but could be one possible motive.

Bunting Resigns From H-SC

By MICHAEL GEOLY

Josiah Bunting III, President of Hampden-Sydney, will be leaving the college after ten years at his position on July 1, 1987. Bunting's departure is no surprise to the college, for his resignation was submitted in December of 1985. Reason for his resignation was was the Head Master position at Lawrenceville School, a prestigious boarding school in New Jersey which is just turning co-ed from all male.

Bunting's position is being filled by James R. Leutze, chairman of the Curriculum in Peace, War, and Defense at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. He was named President of Hampden-Sydney College in a special convocation on February fifth. Leutze's accolades include the Bernath Prize for publication in the area of American foreign policy in 1978, and the John Lyman Book Award in U. S. Naval History in 1981.

The new president is bringing about both anxiety and speculation among H-SC students because of Leutze's lack of administrative experience; however, the Selection Committee which chose Leutze feels that their decision was a good one.

Toilet Paper After Two

By MATT PETERMAN

During Longwood's game this past Saturday against Randolph-Macon, over 20 rolls of toilet paper were tossed onto the court delaying the game for several minutes. The toilet paper was tossed onto the court after Longwood's first basket was scored, filling the air with a display of streamers similiar to that of a grand parade.

In an attempt to eliminate the growing fear that someone may be injured from toilet paper and other objects thrown from the stands, the NCAA dictates that a technical foul will be given to the team whose fans throw objects onto the court. The technical foul can be given without warning, but usually a warning is issued.

A warning was issued by the announcer at the Longwood game that said that any successive rolls would be rewarded with a technical foul against the home team. No other incident of toilet paper flying onto the court occurred as the fans continued to cheer the Lancers for the remainder of the game.

The throwing of toilet paper and other objects is a problem that any basketball league faces. A technical foul is most commonly assigned after such an event has taken place.

The fear that fans may begin throwing other objects like ice could result if the throwing of toilet paper is not handled with severity. The safety of the players and officials on the court as well as those on the bench has prompted the use of the technical foul.

Home Sweet Home

By TERRESA BUELOW

As a former resident of South Cunningham, I was very interested in knowing where all the people were moved to, and how many former roommates were able to stay together. So off I went to get the information from Mr. Rick Wyble.

According to Mr. Wybel, the female residents had it lucky. The majority of the former roommates were able to stay together. The seniors were even luckier by being able to stay in the Cunninghams. The rest were moved to different locations on campus.

For the guys, it was another story. The seniors pretty much had it made and stayed with former roommates and also in the Cunninghams. As did the juniors who moved to other locations too.

On the night of room selection for the sophomores and freshmen, there were only three vacant rooms. So Mr. Wybel put off choosing for another two days in a attempt to open more rooms.

Here's what resulted: Eight rooms were opened on all female halls (that is, whole suites and triples in Frazer and Curry) the apartment in Cox was opened, and finally, four students moved off campus.

The moving went smoothly, except for the week delay due to the snow. Also, Mr. Lemish made arrangements with Centel for former residents to have their phones connected in the new rooms free of charge.

I am sure that I am speaking in behalf of all the former residents of South Cunningham when I thank Mr. Wybel and all the others who put so much effort into an almost impossible task.

Rotunda Write-In Poll No. 3

How many pairs of shoes do you own? _____

Dorm building you reside in _____

This poll is being printed in an effort to keep the students of Longwood College informed as to what fellow campus-dwellers are up to, while at the same time offering still another opportunity for involvement in campus events.

Next week, we hope to print the total number of shoes on campus. This can only be made possible if you return this poll to the Rotunda by midnight, Sunday, February 22.

As an incentive for those of you who may be a bit wary of polls, the Rotunda will buy a whole Domino's pizza for the dorm containing the most shoes.

Please, please, please complete this poll, as the accuracy of its results depends on the participation of everyone on campus. Hurry! Thank you!

Place completed ballot in the Features Envelope on the Publications Office door, or send it to The Rotunda, Box 1133.

Concerning last week's Rotunda Write-In Poll:

Last week's poll was a poll on polls. Thank you to the eleven of you who returned your ballots.

The first poll (two weeks ago) was an attention-getter to kick off the soon-to-be long-upheld tradition of the Rotunda Write-In Poll.

It got the attention of a whole big two of you uninvolved hypocrites.

Everybody around here has something to say about this or that on campus, but hardly anyone takes the initiative to change any of the things they find to complain about. Helping bring about reform does not necessarily entail heaps of petitions or hours and hours of rallying.

A simple letter to the editor could start the ball rolling in the right direction. Yet we're lucky if the newspaper receives one letter a week.

Another way to voice your opinions on conditions of things around you is by filling out polls and surveys circulated on campus. But 5 out of the 11 that answered last week's "poll" poll said they had never before returned a school survey. That's 45 percent — almost half of the students represented had never taken the two or three minutes it takes to fill out a single survey.

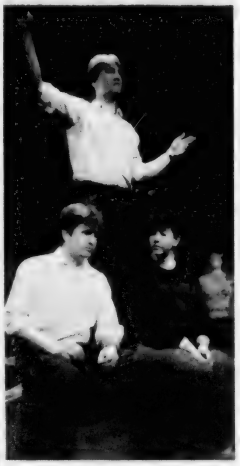
Let's hope those eleven people did not represent a realistic cross-section of the school — if they do, we're in big trouble . . .

S-UN Poll

By GWEN WALKER

The possibility of future concerts at Longwood depends on you — the student body. And the best way that you can help is by filling out the Rotunda-S-UN Concert Poll and returning it to either the Rotunda or Lankford offices as soon as possible.

The future of concerts is in jeopardy because there are inadequate funds to support major or minor productions. A band like the Bangles or Survivor charge a flat fee of $10,000-15,000. Then the cost of sound and lighting ($5,000), hospitality, advertising, security, staging, and agency fees could sum up to another $10,000 to 15,000. The total cost of the production could be anywhere from $20,000 to 40,000.



S-UN's budget for the 1986-87 year was $42,000. This money funds ALL of the activities which S-UN sponsors. Unless we can increase our current budget, we will be lucky to produce one major concert a year. It is too big of a risk to produce a concert that could wipe-out all of our funds unless we are sure that we have students' support to attend these events.

PLEASE, begin to show your support for these activities by filling out the Poll. The more input that you give, the more you really are helping us bring better entertainment.

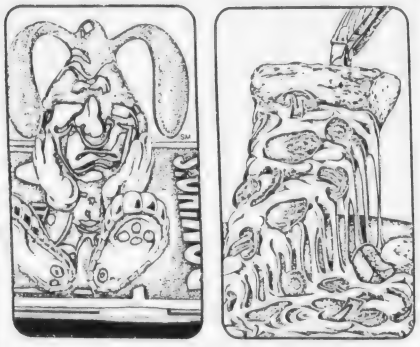
Rotunda-S-UN
Concert Poll

Please fill in this survey and return it to the Rotunda or the Student Union office. Address envelopes to Lankford, S-UN.

1. Would you like to have more concerts on campus?
   YES NO
2. Would you be willing to pay more student activities fees if the money went specifically to fund more concerts?
   YES NO
3. How much of an increase would you be willing to pay? (The current fee is $30.)
   $5 $10 $15 $20
4. What ticket price would you be willing to pay for a small concert?
   $3 $5 $8
5. What ticket price would you be willing to pay for a large concert production in Lancer?
   $8 $10 $12 $15

The Visit

By KIM TALLEY



The Longwood Players and the Speech and Theatre Program will present Friedrich Durrenmatt's The Visit of the Old Lady February 25th through February 28th at 8:00 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium. There will be a Special Matinee performance at 10 a.m. on February 27th.

Durrenmatt's compelling tragi-comedy is set in a small improverished German town called Guellen. The play opens to a town full of hopeful, expectant citizens awaiting the arrival of Clair Zachanassin. They are hoping that Clair, a previous inhabitant of the town, will save them from poverty. By the end of the play, she is the savior. The town does, indeed, gain wealth. However, the town will never be the same for when they gained wealth, they lost something even more valuable: their souls! . . .

Our talented cast and crew are working very hard to bring Diirrenmatt's fateful story to life. Between Dr. Patton Lockwood's artistic direction and Moffat Evan's technical designs, the play is sure to be a success!

Make Way For Mud

By PAMELA SOUTHERLAND

On Spring Weekend, the Longwood Ambassadors will host its first Oozeball Tournament. The dates are Friday, April 10th and Sunday, April 12th. Oozeball is a 6-person volleyball team played on a court with a 6 to 8-inch mud base. The tournament is held to determine College Champions and win trophies by winning single elimination tournaments.

Fraternities, sororities, independent groups, residence halls are encouraged to enter teams. Any college organization may enter as many teams as it desires. Entry fees are $25 per team. Each team may have a maximum of 7 members (6 players and one substitute). Co-ed teams must include 3 females.

Trophies will be awarded to finalists in each division. Regular volleyball rules will be observed with minor modifications. Winning score for preliminary matches will be 10 points. Winning score for the championship games will be 15 points. The only games which will require a winning margin of 2 points or more will be the championship game in each division. Tournament pairings will be drawn and announced on Wednesday, April 8th.

Entry blanks for the Oozeball Tournament are available from members of the Longwood Ambassadors or in the Office of Institutional Advancement, Second Floor of East Ruffner. All entries and fees must be turned in by Friday, March 27th.

Oozeball is sponsored by the Longwood Ambassadors.

Powerline Hits College

By SONNY MERCHANT

From 3:30 p.m. to 4 p.m., the nationally syndicated Powerline Top 40 can be heard every Sunday on Longwood's own WLCX 90.1 FM. Andre Freimann will be your host for this half-hour of the most popular tunes of the day as presented by Brother John of the Radio and TV Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention.

This program is made possible by the work of WLCX Music Director Cindy Good, who, since taking office at the beginning of the Fall Semester 1986, has acquired many free record services for WLCX.

Cindy, along with members of the radio staff, hope to attain more types of programs to place on the air in the future. Cindy is currently working on compiling play lists from all the DJ's to be sent to record companies such as RCA, Columbia and CBS. In doing this, the station hopes to begin receiving record service from these companies soon and build up its library. This is to better offer the Longwood College community an expanded variety of music and programming.

Infotrac II Here To Help

By MARNA BUNGER

Students who specialize in procrastination will be happy to hear about the latest addition to the library. Infotrac II is an electronic addition to the Magazine Index Plus. It has more than a ½ million articles from business, technical, general interest magazines, and the New York Times. The best news of all is no training is required to operate the machine. It uses color coded function keys.

One can search for a topic using the author, title, subject, and corporate and personal names. Under individual subject headings, the references are further organized by various subheadings or a display of related subjects. One unusual feature that is new is the Infotrac II can print the selected references to create bibliographies.

According to Mr. Stwodah, "Infotrac II is the most updated index a library could have." The index goes back five years and is updated each month. This new technology, which is fast and easy, should be welcome relief to students who want current information quickly.

Rugby Is Back

By DAVE LARSON

Longwood Rugby is back. It's time for the Rugby team to begin their spring season. This season should be full of fun and excitement. Longwood is hosting 3 home games this season and participating in two tournaments. After their very successful season last semester, they're looking to do fairly well.

The team is losing a few key players which might hurt them, however, there are a few key players coming back. Both Tim Seymour and Dave Grant the player coaches are returning, which should help a great deal. There are about 15 returners from both the A side and B side. There are going to be quite a few changes in the lineup anticipated.

The team started practice on Monday the 9th of Feb. They were forced to start a week late because of the massive amounts of snow that covered the field. For those of you interested in playing don't hesitate to come out to practice which is held Mon. - Thur., 4:30 to 6:00. Don't think you need experience because it isn't necessary.

We don't anticipate on having a great semester like last semester. With the support from all of our fans such as the tailgaters and the entire student body we should do very well. There is nothing like sitting back in the sun on a Saturday afternoon and watching a good Longwood Rugby game. Last year our fans were great and we would like to extend our gratitude to all of them for their support. Just don't stop supporting us.

We open our season Saturday Feb. 21 at home against William and Mary. The following week we travel to Va. Tech for another real tough match. These two games are going to be very difficult ones. Come out and support the state champion team.

I asked one of the coaches, Tim Seymour, how he thought the team would do this year, he replied, "We should do rather good, We're not as strong as last semester but all the guys out have the desire to do good. A lot will depend on how much support we get from our spectators."

Remember the first game of the season will be Feb. 21st at home. Everyone, students, faculty and administrators are urged to come out and support the Rugby team. This is the Longwood football team that everyone is looking for.

Player of the Week

Senior guard Caren Forbes scored 65 points in three games last week and has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period February 8-15. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Longwood's top scorer this season with a 15.1 ppg. average, Forbes hit 25 of 54 field goals, 15 of 18 free throws, and collected 12 rebounds, 22 assists and 13 steals as the Lady Lancers won two of three games.

Forbes, who scored 23 points Saturday against Pittsburgh-Johnstown, is now within range of Longwood's all-time leading scorer Sue Rama (1,471 points, 1974-78). The 5-6 guard has 1,379 points with at least five games left to play. She needs 92 points the rest of the way to tie Rama.

Already Longwood's all-time leader in assists, Forbes has dished out 126 scoring passes this season and has 497 career assists.

A graduate of Middle Township High School, Forbes is a senior co-captain with the Lady Lancer basketball team. This is the second Longwood Player of the Week honor for the New Jersey native this season.

Lady's Rugby

For all you females who are interested in playing Rugby there is a girls' Rugby team this semester. The practices are Mon-Thur. 3:30 to 4:30 at the President's field. If you would like to find out more information about the team see John Audi or John Hunt on ground floor Cox.

Gymnastics

Led by senior Kerri Hruby, Longwood's women's gymnastics team recorded two wins Saturday afternoon, scoring a 163.65 to best Trenton State 163.60 and Princeton 140.70. The Lancer gymnasts will take a 2-3 record into Saturday's Towson State Invitational in Towson, Maryland.

Hruby had the finest performance of her career Saturday scoring a 33.15 all-around to place third in the overall meet. She also scored a first in beam with an 8.25 and was second in floor with an 8.70.

"Kerri did especially well Saturday," said coach Ruth Budd. "It was one of the highest meets she has had.

Other top performers for Longwood included Lynda Chenoweth 8.65 in floor (tied for second), Kiersten Artese second in vaulting with an 8.5, Kim Booth third in floor with an 8.55 and Debbe Malin first in bars with an 8.75 and tied for fourth in vaulting with an 8.4.

Men's Basketball

Longwood's men's basketball team, 12-12 overall and 3-4 in the Mason-Dixon Conference, will be looking to nail down a winning season this week with three games on tap. The Lancers, after visiting NAIA power Atlantic Christian Monday night, visit MDAC foe Randolph-Macon Wednesday night and host Ferrum Saturday in what will be the final home appearance for seniors Eric Pittman, Kevin Ricks and Quintin Kearney.

Longwood is virtually assured of at least a tie for third place in the Mason-Dixon Conference regular season race The teams which finish fourth and fifth will have to play-off for the fourth spot in the league tournament February 27-28 at Randolph-Macon.

Lady Cagers

Sparked by the play of senior Caren Forbes, Longwood's Lady Lancer basketball team won two of three games last week, and senior center Karen Boska went over the 1,000 point mark in career scoring.

Longwood, 10-12 overall and 3-3 in the Mason-Dixon Conference, has three games on tap this week, before hosting District of Columbia next Tuesday in its home finale. In MDAC action Longwood visits Liberty Tuesday and fourth ranked Mount St. Mary's Saturday. Thursday night Division I Maryland Baltimore County visits Lancer Hall for a 7:30 contest which will feature Domino's Dollar Grab Contest at halftime. Three lucky ticket holders will have the chance to pick as many of 50 one dollar bills as possible in 15 seconds.

Grapplers Still Going Strong

Longwood's grapplers had an outstanding stretch of wrestling last week prior to Saturday's regional tournament in Lancer Hall.

The Lancers downed Washington & Lee (29-18) for the first time in their nine-year history Wednesday night. In Saturday's tri-match Longwood defeated Campbell College (26-24), but lost a tough match to Livingstone (24-23) to end the regular season 9-4, the best dual meet record Longwood has ever posted.

Saturday, Longwood will host the Southern Regional NCAA Division II Wrestling Championship. Semifinal action begins at 10:00 and the finals start at 2:00 Saturday afternoon. Competing along with the Lancers will be nationally ranked Liberty University and Pembroke State.

At stake in the regional tournament are berths in the NCAA Division II National Championships March 5-7 at Edwardsville, Illinois. One of Longwood's top grapplers, Pete Whitman won't have a chance to compete for a spot in nationals.

Whitman, 142 lbs., dislocated his elbow Saturday against Livingstone and had to default to an opponent he probably could have beaten. Whitman, 17-8-1, is expected to be out for the remainder of the season with the injury. According to coach Steve Nelson, he has been one of Longwood's most consistent wrestlers in the latter half of the season.

Tommy Gilbert, 150 lbs., and Billy Howard, 158 lbs., 20-7 for the season, won their matches against Livingstone 9-7, and 16-4, respectively, but were only inches away from pinning their opponents. With Longwood winning 23-21, Jesus Strauss, heavyweight, lost a hard fought match 3-0. Tim Fitzgerald, 118 lbs., now 25-3, pinned his man, while John Stukes, 134 lbs., 21-2-1, dominated his match 15-0.

In the first match Saturday afternoon against Campbell Strauss pinned his man boosting the Lancers to victory 26-24. Fitzgerald also pinned his opponent. Other winners were: Willie Gaines, 126 lbs., Howard, and John Kelly, 190 lbs. "Jesus really came through for us," stated Nelson. "He really put in a clutch performance and we wrestled well."

Perhaps the sweetest victory last week was Wednesday's win over Washington & Lee. Coach Nelson, however, was not overwhelmed with the victory. "We looked a little tired, but we wrestled well enough to win." Winning for the Lancers were: Fitzgerald (forfeit), Stukes (13-4), Whitman (4-3), Gilbert (16-6), Howard (pin, and Strauss (pin).

Miss Longwood Pageant Coming

Ten young women have been chosen as finalists for the 1987 Miss Longwood Scholarship Pageant.

They include a former Miss Teen of Virginia, a former district champion in Scottish dancing, the president of the Longwood Company of Dancers, three members of the Camerata Singers, and the president of the drill team. Four are finalists from last year's pageant — including the top two runners-up — and four are on academic scholarships.

The Pageant, on Saturday, March 21, is a Miss America preliminary, with the winner competing in the Miss Virginia Pageant. Approximately $3,000 in scholarships will be awarded.

The finalists were chosen from 30 contestants in preliminary competition last December. They are:

— Elizabeth Cho, a sophomore art major from Virginia Beach.

— Sandra Clayton, a sophomore theatre major from Richmond.

— Melissa Little, a junior foreign language major from Smithfield.

— Carla Lockhart, a sophomore English major from Chesapeake.

— Anita Washington, a sophomore elementary education major from Glen Allen.

Miss Lockhart, last year's first runnerup, was the 1985-86 Miss Teen of Virginia. Miss Ragan, the second runnerup, was the Southeastern District champion in Scottish dancing in 1983. Miss Washington and Miss Wood also were finalists in last year's pageant.

Miss Shannon is president of the Longwood Company of Dancers, and Miss Turner is president of the recently formed drill team, known as the Lancer Line.

Miss Lockhart, Miss Ragan, Miss Turner and Miss Venters are recipients of merit-based scholarships.

Spring Break: Around The Corner

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Many of the winter-weary college students who head for Florida this March will be breaking away from more than classes — many will also break the beach routine for a day or two at Walt Disney World.

The Vacation Kingdom's Disney Break '87 is a great way to enjoy all the one-of-a-kind attractions in the Magic Kingdom and Epcot Center at special prices. Students who present a valid college ID card when purchasing tickets for a day at either the Magic Kingdom or Epcot Center between March 1 and March 31 pay only $18 — an $8 savings compared to the regular one-day admission cost.

The savings get even bigger when a college student decides to spend one day at both parks and purchases the special Disney Break '87 two-day ticket for $28 — just $2 more than the normal cost of a one-day admission. This offer is also good March 1-31 when used with a valid college student ID.

A special 15th Birthday Parade winds through the Magic Kingdom daily; and "15 Years of Magic," a musical show which has the famous Disney characters appearing out of thin air — and disappearing just as mysteriously — plays the stage in front of Cinderella Castle several times each day.

Newest of the world-class wonders at Epcot Center is "Captain EO," the fabulous new Michael Jackson 3-D musical space adventure produced by George Lucas and directed by Francis Coppola. Exciting music, action and special effects fill every frame of this movie, which can only be seen at Walt Disney World or Disneyland.

Disney Break '87 offers college students these and the other attractions which please millions of guests every year — at special once-a-year prices.

COSMIC CONGA — Michael Jackson is star of "Captain EO," the new 3-D musical-narrative space film which opens in September in Kodak's Journey into Imagination at Walt Disney World Epcot Center. He wrote the music for the film — which was directed by Francis Coppola and produced by George Lucas — that can be seen at Walt Disney World and California's Disneyland...and nowhere else in the universe. In the past, there has been many attempts to change visitation. However, due to a lack of student participation this has failed to occur. The Student Government Association is making a last ditch effort to change the visitation policy, but to do so, your support is needed.

The Administration is under the impression that the students are uncertain as to what they want, so it is up to us to let them know exactly where we stand. We want to change the visitation policy to a maximum of 23 hours and no less than 12 hours (the present policy). However, as stated before, this will never come into being unless more participation, on the parts of the student body, occurs.

Last semester during the S.G.A. elections, only 741 students expressed their feelings through voting for or against a change in the policy. Out of the number that voted the following data was compiled:

84 percent of the students felt that the visitation policy should be changed.

36 percent of the students felt that the change should be only for upperclassmen.

60 percent of the students felt that both weekend and weekly visitation hours should be the same.

40 percent of the students felt that each dorm should be able to set its own policy.

Although the number of participating students was somewhat high, it was not a sufficient response. If the present policy is to change, we need at least one thousand (1,000) students to respond to the newly formed survey. The survey will be passed out by your R.A. (Resident Assistant) this week. Please fill it out and return to your R.A. no later than 12:00 p.m. Monday.

The results will be tallied and publicized in The Rotunda. We will then let you know what will happen next. Together we can pull this off, but only with your support. Remember, fill out the survey and return to your R.A. as soon as possible.

I'm writing a letter in defense of any involved student at Longwood. What is the big deal with Greeks? Why do you feel discriminated against? Do you realize after you pay dues that you really are no different from other students?

Fraternities and sororities are social organizations as opposed to groups like APO and Delta Sigma Pi, which are service and professional organizations. Maybe because you are a social organization, you are considered a partying organization.

Some students are involved in many organizations. They have common bonds, values and morals also. Just because you wear letters doesn't mean you're singled out. People with red hair, short bodies and weird clothes are singled out too.

I guess after every rush week new Greeks will try to assess why they are different. The funny thing is Greeks are no different. A student is a student is a student.

I would like to make a comment on the parking situation here on campus. Once the library is built the day student parking lot will be eliminated, therefore there will be even less parking for students. During the week the teachers have over half the parking. The students do not like to take their cars out to go to the store for fear of "cruising for an hour" looking for a parking place.

Granted there are proposed plans for more parking, but how long is it going to take to get those plans started. What I would like to know is if the school plans to do the proposed parking before or after the library is built. If it is after, where do you suppose people will park while the school gets the parking lots complete?

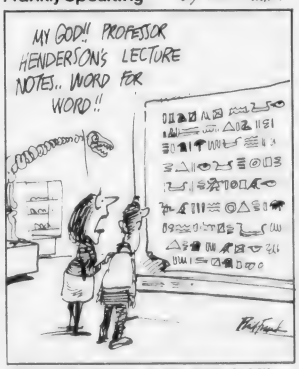
To the Editor

First of all, we'd like to thank you for the favorable write up of the Dining Hall and its improvements in the last edition of The Rotunda. However, we feel appropriate recognition was not given to all the parties involved in the improvement.

Miss Doris Carey should be recognized and be given the full credit due her. At times, she has been the single driving force behind family-style dining. She has made family-style work out, in the worst and best of times. While there has been a decrease of students willing to work in the Dining Hall, those who have stayed feel a great sense of loyalty to Miss Carey.

In addition to Miss Carey, we feel that we have one of the greatest bunch of student employees ever — and they work hard to make it all come together.

In closing, we'd like to express our appreciation to both Miss Carey and all the student employees for all their efforts.



Sincerely,
The Student Supervisors

Greek Row, what's on a lot of people's mind, especially those in fraternities and sororities. I am all for Greek Row. It will individualize the sororities and fraternities from one another. Upon putting in a Greek Row, dorm space will open up for students. Stubbs will open up completely as well as floors in Curry and Frazer. I do understand that not every single person will be able to live in their specific house, but some will be able to. For those who do not live in the house, they can live on campus as some do now. I realize it is going to be awhile before any of these plans come through, but when they do the extra housing will help tremedously.

The Spirit Of CHI Lives

Through the dark of night
The spirit of CHI walks on.
Bearing blue and white
The spirit of CHI walks on.
Throughout the days of Longwood,
Strong ties of blue.
Although the years may pass by
CHI will be there too.
Clad in robes of blue
The secret of CHI is kept.
Hold the torch of spirit long,
Keep it strong.
Down the Collonades
And on the campus too, we
Bind the blue and white
The spirit of CHI walks on.

CHI is you, the students of Longwood. CHI represents enthusiasm, pride, honor, loyalty and character. Through you, CHI works to promote spirit by binding together all the different elements that comprise Longwood. The spirit of CHI challenges you to reach your fullest potential. CHI, and Longwood spirit would not exist without campus support, because CHI IS YOU.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

In a recent letter to the editor in The Chronicle of Higher Education (February 4, 1987), a political science professor referred to you, today's college students, as "uncaring, insipid, and drab... a disgrace....either sponges or clones...Their ability to think seemingly abandoned them at birth..." You get the general idea, right? Not a very flattering portrayal, to say the least—but it's an attitude that I would suggest is on the minds, if not the lips, of many educators today. While this indictment is no doubt intentionally overstated, there is enough truth in it to be taken seriously.

Be honest—what have YOU done lately to demonstrate that this image of college students is anything but right on target? I've worked with Longwood students in a variety of roles in my time here—as a coach, as a classroom teacher, as an advisor, as a researcher—and while I would say that most of you are not an unthinking "disgrace," there are some areas of concern which you need to confront, in yourself and with your peers:

passivity—I don't see many Longwood students engaging in an active way in their education, especially in the classroom setting. Many times it seems like you're not thinking because you don't voice your opinions, preferring to sit back passively and let someone else take the risk. You let the teacher do most, if not all, the talking, and don't ask questions even if you're confused or uncertain about something. More broadly, you drift into college because your parents think it's a good idea and you don't have anything better to do, and you drift through four (or more) years collecting course credits with little or no sense of what any of it really means or how it connects to life in the "real world."

powerlessness—It seems like the issue of passivity and being unengaged is in part a function of feeling helpless, as if nothing you could do or say would matter anyway. Lacking a real sense of hope, without a feeling that even if you can't change society in a dramatic fashion, you can at least control your own life and educational experience, I can see how one's philosophy of life might sink to "fight for your right to party"!!

narrow vocationalism—I personally see nothing wrong with being career-oriented, but too many students are oriented not to their careers, but to their first job only, being concerned about having a guarantee that they'll get that dream job right out of college and make mega-bucks. The reality is that in the work world of the present and future, if you want to be truly career-oriented you'd develop the best writing, communicating, and thinking skills you could develop and then be prepared to be as adaptable as possible in approaching your career.

Now, don't you feel better—instead of being "uncaring, insipid, and drab," you're passive, helpless, and narrow! Believe it or not, this shift is an improvement, because I think you can do something about the picture I presented to you. It's well within your capacity and your control to become more involved with your education in college, to actively engage in the opportunities around you so can achieve success at Longwood and in life. You'll have to make the effort, though, to go beyond sitting quietly in class, beyond the din of D.T.'s, beyond the beery haze of the frat party—to ask questions, to take a positive role in student or hall government, to find leadership roles on campus that will allow you to develop critical life skills while making a contribution to the campus environment. Joining a student organization is one way to accomplish these goals, but I also think you need to engage your brain in and out of the classroom, and do something about concerns you have rather than just bitching. If you don't like the way your classes are taught, find a constructive way to voice those concerns (a student-run faculty evaluation system was proposed this past weekend, which might be a real good idea). If you don't like the housing situation, get involved in your hall council or in the residence life committees currently meeting to make suggestions about improvements. If you honestly feel that "there's nothing to do around here," work through S-UN or other campus groups (perhaps a joint effort among several campus groups) to sponsor additional activities. Of course, you may not get everything you want—but you won't know that until you try, and besides, the process will be worthwhile either way. Then again, perhaps it's easier to drift along, marking time waiting to be handed a diploma, mumbling complaints under your breath—just don't be surprised when someone calls you "a disgrace."

Bill Moore,
Student Development Educator

To the Editor,

Another snowfall of more than a foot hit Farmville this past week, bringing the total of big snowfalls in the past month up to three. This, of course, caused the usual assortment of "inconveniences" to the students and employees of the college; slippery sidewalks, snow bound cars, and wet feet. However, the students were also beset by another inconvenience following the storms; the inconvenience of not knowing if classes were cancelled.

The first snow came in late January, dumping 13 inches of snow on the ground and subsequently cancelling classes the following day. It was the next night that the confusion started. Nobody knew what to expect, as the administration delayed its decision until the following morning. With the snow having stopped earlier that afternoon, and with road crews working on the streets, it should have been easy enough to decide about classes by ten o'clock that evening.

Last week's snow was no different. Farmville got pounded with 14 inches of new snow the night of February 16. And, as it was with the two previous snows, the administration delayed its decision whether or not to close school until the next morning. This despite the fact that everything was already covered with 6 inches of snow by 11:00 p.m. that night.

What I'm leading up to with this is one simple fact: these decision delays distract the students. Generally, we either have classes, or we don't. That hasn't been the case lately. The sense of doubt that lingered following the storms has caused much of the student body to behave rather strangely. Last Monday night, many students merely sat around and watched the snow fall. Whereas, on Tuesday night, with the evidence pointing towards the college being open on Wednesday, students packed the Lancer Cafe so full there wasn't room to walk. Such is the case when the administration delays

Such is the case when the administration delays deciding.

Longwood, I suggest you set up some sort of standardized system, whereby we would know whether to get up early or not. If it looks perfectly obvious, as was the case on the 16th, tell us before we go to bed—say, at 11:00 p.m. If it's not that obvious, or if something happens after midnight, then tell us the following morning. This should make things a little easier for all of us.

ROTC Enrollment Up

By SONNY MERCHANT and SCOTT ESTES

The Reserve Officers Training Corps here at Longwood has gotten off to a strong start this semester with enrollment at its highest in three years. Both cadets and cadre feel a great deal of optimism for the future of the ROTC program at Longwood.

The senior cadets (MS IV's) have good reason to be excited because the majority of branch assignments have been made. Six cadets were selected for active duty. These cadets and their branch assignments are: Bobby Arnold-Quartermaster, Billy Howard-Ordnance, Kimbra Patterson-Aviation, Kate Scanlon-Transportation, Don Strickland-Ordnance, and John Wright-Medical Service. Cadets Patterson, Scanlon, Strickland, and Wright also received the honor of Distinguished Military Graduate.

In addition, the following cadets were placed on reserve duty; Fred Grant-Military Police, Randy Hart-Armor, and Ted Treece-Quartermaster.

Two cadets have been recognized for their excellence in other college activities as well. Miss Patterson was recently selected to "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities." Also, Miss Scanlon was recognized for academic excellence last semester by her placement on the Dean's List. Congratulations are also in order to Kevin Wilkins who was just recently commissioned as a second lieutenant.

The Reserve Officers Training Corps has many events planned for this semester. For details on these events, or if you have any questions about ROTC or the military, just ask any cadet or come by the ROTC department located on third floor East Ruffner.

Etheridge Publishes Second Book

By CINDY PRESSON

Dr. Elizabeth W. Etheridge, Professor of History here at Longwood College, has published her second book: The Neighborhood: Dahloncgo in the Age of Jackson. The book was coauthored by Sylvia S. Head.

This is a social history of Dahloncgo, Georgia during the antebellum period. It sheds light on conditions resulting from the discovery of gold in north Georgia in the late 1820's.

This is Dr. Etheridge's second book. Her first was The Butterfly Caste: A Social History of Pellegra in the South which won her national attention. Partly as a result of her work in medical history for this first book, Dr. Etheridge was recently invited by the National Center of Disease Control to begin research for a history of that institution. She has been granted a leave-of-absence for Spring of 1987 and the 1987-1988 academic year to pursue this opportunity.

During the 1985-1986 academic year, Dr. Etheridge researched the origins and development of vacations in America. She will be submitting this study for publication in the future.

Longwood To Host Science Fair

By MELISSA GIBBS

Longwood will host the second annual Southside Regional Science Fair on Friday, March 13 and Saturday, March 14. One of 330 regional science fairs throughout the U.S. affiliated with the International Science and Engineering Fair, the Southside Regional Science Fair expects to bring 150 high school students to Longwood from nine school systems. The students, who will compete for $1,000 in prize money and the opportunity to compete in the international fair, represent the school divisions of Amelia, Buckingham, Cumberland, Dinwiddie, Goochland, Halifax, Nottoway, Powhatan, and Prince Edward Counties.

Dr. Marvin Scott, head of Longwood's natural sciences department, and director of the regional fair expects more and better entries than last year's fair. Said Dr. Scott, "There have been more local high school science fairs, and the participants have a better idea of the comptition." The students will set up their exhibits on March 13 and 14th to be on display from 1:15-2:30 p.m. on the 14th. Earlier on the 14th, Dr. Donald Merkle, biology professor at Longwood, will discuss his research on "Amphibians and Reptiles."

At 3:00 p.m. on Saturday, March 14th students will receive national recognition and special awards presented by Eastman Kodak, NASA, the armed forces, and a number of engineering societies. Two winners from the biological sciences category and one winner from the physical science category will go to San Juan, Puerto Rico in May for the 38th International Science and Engineering Fair, while some of the other winners will compete in the Virginia Junior Academy at Old Dominion University.

Beyond Longwood

North Shredded Documents

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ White House assistant Oliver North apparently shredded crucial document, relating to Iran hours before his files were seized according to his secretary who was granted immunity.

According to the Tower Commission and other investigations, a cover-up seems to be revealing itself.

Donald Regan who may have had a hand in the cover-up continues to be pressured from all circles to resign. Many lawmakers expect him to resign this week.

Attorney General, Edmond Meese III is being criticized for delaying news of an Iran-Contra connections.

Obstruction of justice charges are being looked into for many officials connected in the Iran scheme. It is punishable by jail terms.

☐ Syria entered Lebanon on Sunday to quell a week of factional fighting in Beirut. The troops have orders to show no mercy in their imposition of a cease fire as they moved into strategic locations of the city.

The fighting between the three factions in Beirut is the most intense in 3-years.

☐ Contemparary artist, Andy Warhol died after he went into cardiac arrest following a gall-bladder operation the day before, according to hospital officials.

He was involved in Pop and Comercial art which made him famous. He was 58 years old.

☐ President Reagan unveiled his catastrophic health insurance plan last week that would give the elderly a chance to remain financially solvent should a catastrophic illness hit their family.

The plan calls for a $4.92 monthly premium to be paid by those elderly persons interested in the plan. The plan would start assistance after an elderly person has spent $2000 on a particular illness.

"This pay-as-you-go program that requires no tax dollars," Reagan said in his weekly radio address. "What it all comes down to is peace of mind and I think you'll agree it's worth it."

The democrats believe that the bill does not go far enough and is guessed that the bill that will pass, will include nursing home costs in which the present bill does not mention.

Barrier Against AIDS

By MELISSA GIBBS

"The condom can save your life," said Mr. Alan Sofalvia of the Physical Education, Health, and Recreation Department, borrowing from Mr. Richard Bradley's February 18th lecture about Aquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS). Mr. Bradley, of the AIDS Activity Program of the Virginia Department of Health, emphasized the fatality of AIDS and suggested condoms as the best means of reducing the risk of contracting the virus, short of abstinence from sexual activity.

According to Bradley, Center for Disease Control statistics reveal that an estimated 690 to 2,000 people in Central Virginia, excluding the Richmond area, carry the AIDS virus. Though many of the victims show no symptoms and remain unaware that they have contracted the virus, they retain the potential for spreading the AIDS virus. Bradley named sexual activity, both heterosexual and homosexual, and needle sharing by intravenous drug users as the primary ways of transmitting AIDS.

Mr. Bradley works as an epidemiologist for the Virginia Department of Health and specializes in the surveillance of AIDS cases. The Physical Education, Health, and Recreation Department brought Mr. Bradley to Longwood as part of its 1986-1987 Health Lecture Series.

The Health Lecture Series has scheduled presentations on some of the important health topics currently facing college students. Two presentations remain in the series. Tonight, Monday, February 23 at 7:00 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium, Mr. Jack Jones, a survivor of testicular cancer, will discuss his experience with the rarely talked about form of cancer which threatens college age men. On April 2 at 12:30 p.m. in Wygal, Ms. Paula Ciaverella of the Virginia Department of Health will explore the effects of being overweight on a person's physical and psychological health.

3rd Snowstorm Sobers Campus

COMMENTARY

By MATT PETERMAN

Farmville seemed left out Monday as reports of snow all around her filled the airwaves. Students began to wonder if precipitation would come at all when all of the sudden, the noon bell began to ring and that's when the x!..! hit the fan.

Rain mixed with sleet pelted the surprised Farmvillian college with haste and brutality as sidewalks became sheets of ice making students cautious and on alert.

By 2 p.m., raging ice became mixed with strides of light snow bringing memories of Longwood's Winter Wonderland back to mind. Students anxiously awaited updated weather reports on radio stations, WFLO and later WLCX. Longwood was being hit with a snowstorm of epic proportions.

The clouds grew darker and darker shedding some light on what neighboring towns must have been going through. Flakes of snow becoming increasingly clustered and heavy continued to drop so that all visibility dropped to near zero. The temperature also fell and the wind blew with a stunning briskness allowing the windchill factor to drop below zero.

Students walking outside began to get lost in an array of whiteness as they struggled to recognize any scant trace of a landmark that may give them a clue to just where the hell they were. Some were bravely rescued on the out-skirts of Iler Fields while others could not be found. The phones at campus police rang off the hook as worried friends called about missing loved ones.

The sun finally fell and darkness shrouded the campus as still more fluffly snow hurried to the Earth.

Before the night was over, six inches of purely driven snow had fallen generously and as the sun began to rise in the east, the snow began to taper off.

Longwood students awakened to the sounds of tractors moving snow. Sounds that resembled the Snow Cat in Steven King's The Shining. Students drifting back to sleep dreamed of Jack Nicholos saying, "Here's Johnny," as he put the ax through the bathroom door.

Classes were cancelled much to the relief of many students fearing quizzes and due dates. The plowing continued into the day making certain that classes would be held on Wednesday, and they were.

There were those who were glad to see that the line of controlled substances were not severed due to the snow, assuring that the weekends would not hit an all time low.

Rain and sunshine is predicted for this week.

ABS Off To A Good Start

By KIMBERLY JONES

Association of Black Students better known as ABS is an organization open to all members of the student body of Longwood. The purpose of ABS as its constitution states is "to insure the general welfare of the black student body, to promote the cultural intellectual, and personal development of the black students and to strengthen unity and to foster black awareness and understanding in all aspects of college life."

Lisa Redding, president of ABS, says "this organization is a channel or way for students to interact with each other and to voice opinions and ideas". Lisa also stated that ABS is just like any other organization whereas what you get out is the result from what you put in. Lisa became president because she felt as though she could accomplish and improve a lot of things within the group.

One of her biggest goals is to improve the Big Brother-Sister program already initiated by ABS. Through this program freshmen have upperclassmen to show them the ropes of life at Longwood. Lisa believes this is a pyramidal program that can be built upon to shape lasting relationships among the students. Lisa also hopes that ABS will be able to sponsor trips that are educational and fun for the students. The trips would also be informative for job contacts as well.

While ABS remains to be an active part of Longwood, many students fail to participate in a number of their activities. ABS is not a bias organization. Mainly it wants to further the growth of black awareness on the campus. ABS is a good starting place for students to get involved. Some students believe ABS does nothing, but the majority of students who believe this fail to come to the meetings. In all likeliness, if one wanted to see action and involvement among an organization they must also be there to partake in it.

ABS is continually expanding and to make this process happen are some important people. Mr. Satchell, the new minority facilitator, has offered his assistance and guidance to ABS. Besides the president's involvement, there are others as well: Vice President — Ricky Otey, Treasurer— Lynnette Jones, Secretary— Tamara Brown, Parlimenatarian— Veronica Tyler and Freshman representative— Lisa Jones.

Black History Month is here once again and to make it a memorable experience is ABS. They have scheduled several events during the month pertaining to black history. They are also sponsoring a semi-formal dance on the 21st. The cost is $3. Lisa Redding encourages everyone to come out and participate. And addition to these events, ABS has its meetings every Monday in the N.P. Miller room at 9 p.m.

Oozeball Mania

When: Spring Weekend: Friday, April 10 & Sunday, April 12

Where: Old High School Building

Who: Group Teams in Men's, Ladies, and Co-Ed Divisions

Why: To Determine College Champions and Win Trophies

How: By Winning Single Elimination Tournament

What: OOZEBALL is 6-person volleyball played on a court with a 6 to 8-inch mud base.

Fraternities, sororities, independent groups, residence halls are encouraged to enter teams. Any college organization may enter as many teams as it desires. Entry fees are $25 per team. Each team may have a maximum of 7 members (6 players and one substitute). Co-Ed teams must include 3 females.

Trophies will be awarded to finalists in each division. Regular volleyball rules will be observed with minor modifications. Winning score for preliminary matches will be 10 points. Winning score for the championship games will be 15 points. The only games which will require a winning margin of 2 points or more will be the championship game in each division. Tournament pairings will be drawn and announced on Wednesday, April 8.

Entry blanks for the OOZEBALL Tournament are available from members of the Longwood Ambassadors or in the Office of Institutional Advancement, Second Floor of East Ruffner.

OOZEBALL is sponsored by the Longwood Ambassadors.

Change For Orientation

Are you tired of the same old dull routine? Well there's something new and innovative at Longwood to take note of — "Preview '87," this summer's orientation program. The orientation program has been revised; it is now held in the summer and not in the fall. The dates of the upcoming sessions are July 1 and 2, July 6 and 7, and July 9 and 10. During these two-day sessions upcoming freshmen have a good chance to see Longwood and will also be able to sign up for fall classes. Parents are being encouraged to attend with the students because according to Karen Clifford, Student Department Educator in charge of orientation, "parents are becoming more involved and are showing more interest in their child's education." For this summer orientation there is 200 students and one and a half parents are anticipated to attend each two-day session.

According to Karen Clifford, "There was a long lag time from a student being accepted and coming to school only a week before school actually began. This two-day session will give the new students a chance to feel at home at Longwood."

Thirty orientation leaders will be chosen for "Preview 87" and they will be here from Sunday, June 28, to Friday, July 10, with the exception of July 4 weekend. Any questions concerning "Preview 87" contact Mrs. Clifford, Student Department Educator.

Concert Band Performs

The Longwood Concert Band will present a concert on Sunday, March 1, at 7:30 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium on the Longwood campus.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for non-Longwood students and senior citizens. The concert is free for Longwood faculty, staff and students.

The Band will perform Toccata, a Baroque piece by Girolamo Frescobaldi; So Pure The Star, a chorale prelude for band by Vicent Persichetti; March and Chorale by Robert Washburn; The Lincoln Portrait by Aaron Copland; highlights from "A Chorus Line — The Movie", by Marvin Hamlisch and Edward Kleban; and Zacatecas, a traditional Mexican march.

For The Lincoln Portrait, Thomas Williams, associate professor of music, will read a series of excerpts from Abraham Lincoln's best speeches. "This is considered one of Copland's most important pieces," said Ralph Mohr, the band director.

This is the Band's winter concert and is one of four concerts it will present this year. Last year, the Band performed six concerts.

The Band is composed of students and people from the community. It has about 50 pieces.

FARMVILLE FEEDBAG

Macados

9 a.m. - 1 a.m. Sun-Thurs.
9 a.m. - 2 a.m. Fri-Sat.

By MARNA BUNGER

This new year brought a pleasant addition to the Farmville restaurant scene. Macado's, which is located on 200 Third Street, brings us a delightful selection of bagels, entrees, subs, sandwiches and salads.

The majority of the menu consists of sandwiches served on various kinds of breads. I tried the "Babe Ruth" which is bacon, turkey, muenster, and tomato served on a hot buttered croissant. "Babe" left me very satisfied. Coleen Mone, a sophomore at Longwood, sampled the food with me. She had the "Carpetbagger" and said, "it was wicked good. I love it." My roommate sampled the "Titanic," which is a roastbeef french dip. She, like many other customers, had to ask for a doggie bag. My friends and I still had room to try the sundaes.

The dining room is separated by many catacombs of stained glass and wood walls which offer a lot of privacy. I did notice that if you sit at a booth, you have to be either anorexic or smaller than a 36 B. There aren't many tables that can accommodate parties larger than six.

The prices on food are reasonable. Mixed drinks run a little high, but the majority of drinks come with a complementary glass. I figure by the time I graduate I should have enough glasses to start my own bar.

Macado's has something for everyone. It leaves you wanting to look at the menu before you leave so you know what to try the next time.

SORORITIES HOST 33 NEW PLEDGES

By KATE RILEY and RENEE SMITH

This year's informal rush has once again come to a climatic end. After nine "Open House" parties and many "50 minute" theme parties, 33 women choose to "Go Greek" on Longwood's campus. Longwood's sororities are proud to announce their new sisters.

Teacher Studies Learning Disabilities

Hair from the heads of 100 Virginia schoolchildren may help determine what causes learning disabilities, thanks to pioneering research by a Longwood College education professor.

Dr. R. Lee Banton is looking for a biophysical link between particular elements and learning disabilities. A nuclear reactor at the University of Virginia will identify and help analyze 14 elements in hair samples submitted by 50 learning disabled and 50 average students.

"This is the first time a nuclear reactor has ever been used to assist in diagnosing learning disabilities," Dr. Banton said recently. "This research is the first of its type and may prove to be a significant breakthrough in determining a specific cause for learning disability."

The research involves hair samples donated voluntarily by students in grades five through 12 from Buckingham, Amelia, Nottoway, Lunenburg, Surry and York counties and the city of Norton. The samples soon will undergo a procedure called "neutron activation analysis" at U. Va.'s Nuclear Research Facility.

The hair will be bombarded with neutrons that will cause elements in the samples to become radioactive, said Dr. Banton. Officials then will be able to use a radiation detector to identify the substances that are present and in what amount.

"I'm looking for significant differences from normal amounts in both learning disabled and non-LD students," Dr. Banton said. "I'll also be looking at combinations of various elements. This research is a can't-lose proposition — either I'll be able to rule out certain elements or rule them in."

Learning disabilities — a term first used in 1963 — are legally divided into six major categories, said Dr. Banton. Among the characteristics are reading words backwards, hyperactivity, physical awkwardness and spending an excessive amount of time on one task. About 4½ to 10 percent of students have a learning disability, and some estimate the figure approaches 15 percent, he said.

Dr. Banton's research, which was begun in October 1985, was prompted by a lack of data on the causes of learning disabilities and by news articles linking illnesses with certain substances.

"None of the textbooks mention a cause," he said. "They all say what a learning disability does, but I'm concerned about what a learning disability is, in terms of a causal definition. I want to determine if there's a biophysical reason for learning disabilities."

"We know now, for example, that lead causes mental retardation or death; Parkinson's disease has been traced to manganese; and zinc has something to do with the processing of certain vitamins. A pediatrician in Sarasota, Florida, found that babies who were on a certain formula were not developing sufficiently and in some cases were learning disabled. He contacted the National Institutes of Health, and it was discovered that that particular formula was too low in sodium."

Dr. Banton said he is "suspicious" of acid rain, which gets into the reservoirs from which drinking water is drawn. "Those elements can damage our delicate central nervous system tissues."

The research began when Dr. Banton called the state pathology lab, at the Medical College of Virginia, which referred him to U. Va.'s physical chemistry department. "I dealt with them for three weeks, then they suggested there was a better facility to work with — the university's nuclear reactor. When I discussed the project with Paul Benneche, the reactor supervisor, he became excited."

The reactor is one of about 50 nuclear research reactors in the United States, about half of which are at universities, said Benneche. Only three university reactors have more power than the one in Charlottesville, which produces two million watts of heat.

The reactor core is a small aluminum chamber — two feet long, two feet wide and three feet high — near the bottom of an 80,000-gallon concrete tank of water, known as a "swimming pool." The pool is 28 feet deep. When in use, the reactor emits a glowing blue light.

Each of the hair samples, which are in vials, will be tested individually in the reactor about three times, Dr. Banton said. A radiation detector, in conjunction with a sophisticated computer, "will tell us what's there and in what parts per million," he said.

"This detection process has been around only since the mid-1970s, when there was a quantum leap in neutron activation analysis," said Benneche. "The computer analyzes the data. A spectrum of each sample will appear on the terminal screen."

Dr. Banton will be analyzing the presence of aluminum, cadmium, calcium, chromium, cobalt, copper, iron, magnesium, manganese, mercury, potassium, sodium, vanadium and zinc. He will look at these elements both singly and in various combinations.

The FBI uses hair analysis to identify suspects. "Your hair is like a fingerprint — no two people have hair that contains the same elements in the same amounts," said Dr. Banton.

After the tests, it will take Benneche six to seven weeks to determine which elements are present and their density. Then Dr. Banton will begin analyzing the data on an Apple IIe computer in the Wynne Building. "That will take at least a month," he said.

Jean Nazzaro, an official with the Council for Exceptional Children, said the research is worthwhile. "Any kind of physiological correlation that can be found for any disorder is worth exploring. We would never have known about the problems with lead causing mental retardation if somebody hadn't looked."

Dr. Banton's research has attracted widespread publicity. Stories about it have appeared in at least 18 newspapers, including the Washington Post, and have aired on a Washington television station and the Cox Broadcasting Company, which has TV stations in eight major cities and radio stations in four cities.

"I have received letters from people all over the country who are enthusiastic about my research. And I have received unsolicited letters, along with hair samples, from parents of learning disabled and autistic children, begging me to do research."

After this project is over, he plans to do similar research involving hair samples from emotionally disturbed and autistic children. Little is to know about what causes autism — a mental state marked by disregard of external reality — or emotional disturbances. "Paul Benneche has agreed to co-author the project," said Dr. Banton.

The current research is being funded by the U.S. Department of Energy, the University of Virginia, and Longwood.

Some famous people — Albert Einstein, Thomas Edison, Woodrow Wilson and Nelson Rockefeller — have been learning disabled, Dr. Banton pointed out. "They overcame their learning disabilities by finding ways to learn that are are unconventional." More and more is becoming known about how to teach these students, but the causes of learning disability remain a mystery, he said.

Dr. Banton first came across a learning disabled student in a classroom 24 years ago. "I didn't know what to do with him." If he wants information on current cases, he need only consult his wife, Carolyn, who is a learning disability resource teacher at Dillwyn Elementary.

He is philosophical about his research. "So much research is devoted to looking at stars. We need to lower our eyes, lower our sights, and start looking at one another."

Any Longwood College registered organization wishing to apply for student activity fees must pick a request form in the Student Affairs Office.

Forms must be returned to Ricky Otey by March 1, 1987.

Organization president must attend meeting at 4:30 Thurs. in VA. Room.

Delta Sigma Pi, Longwood's business fraternity, would like to congratulate the following new pledges who were pinned in a ceremony held February 10th: Trent Hudson, Tracy Morrison, Toni Taylor, Julia Tickner, Tuwanda Holmes, Cynthia Perry, Barbara Bass, Kristine Nystrom, Todd Faison, Charles Wood, David Wood and faculty pledge, Mrs. Sally Gilfillan.

Around the first of Febraury every year, the Longwood College Alumni Phonathon begins. One of the duties of the Longwood College Ambassadors is to staff this annual phonathon, and so far, they've done a super job! After only one week of calling, the Ambassadors have raised $33,176 in pledges from alumni all over the state of Virginia. Longwood currently ranks second in the nation among public institutions and first in the state for its relatively high percentage of alumni donations. With as many as eight to nine weeks of calling to go, the Longwood Ambassadors expect to reach a record high.

The American Heart Association's Jump Rope for Heart will be held Wednesday, February 18th in Lancer gym from 5:30-9:00 p.m. The goal hoped to be obtained is $2,000 plus, but without the help of participants this goal may not be reached. Jump Rope for Heart needs your help. To find out more about what is required pick up a sponsor sheet and pamphlet in the Lancer office. If you can't participate please sponsor someone who can. Mrs. Huffman and Wendi Winstead spent a lot of time organizing this event. Please don't let them or the American Heart Association down. Come and spend some time jumping rope or sponsor someone who is. They need your help.

Do you feel that you deserve a reward for your accomplishments here at Longwood?

GEIST is offering a scholarship to visiting sophomores and juniors on the bases of involvement, GPA and need. If you are an active freshman or sophomore, don't hesitate to pick up a scholarship application in the information office.

Deadline 2 March.

Amie Oliver recently had her work exhibited in the Bienville Gallery in New Orleans. A graduate of Bowling Green University, Ms. Oliver now instructs art at Longwood College and also practices art. On display from January 3-31, her art work included 21 drawings and mixed media works.

Oliver states that her best art "works on several different levels." Not only does her work operate on a visual level, but it also plays psychological games. Roger Green, an art critic of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, states, "Oliver builds unusually busy compositions out of juxtaposed images, passages of decorative patterning and nondescript markings, executed in various medias." She incorporates game images with autobiographical information to create mysterious works.

Olivers states that, now that her works have been exhibited, she not only feels a "sense of achievement," but also of definite completion of those works.

The Weight Room Waits Even More

By MATT PETERMAN

In the near future the weight room is due to receive new equipment in order to make it a more complete facility. The question of when cannot be answered, but the fact that the equipment is coming is reality. Hopefully, it will arrive by the end of this semester so it will be ready for the upcoming semester.

Different companies are now bidding for the right to supply and install the equipment. The ultimate control lies in Richmond where the funds will be dispersed to the company that can supply quality equipment at the right price.

Some of the main pieces of equipment that will be installed are new free weights, dumbells, leg machines, incline-decline benches, and a three step squat rack. Other equipment will also be supplied to make the Longwood weight room more modern.

The present Longwood weight room is adequate, but it must be noted that many high schools have better facilities in comparison. The expected new equipment should rid Longwood of that phenomenon.

The weight room is an essential part of physical education and with upgrading the facility, more can be done to improve the lives of students. The weight room is open to all students and faculty with its hours posted outside the door.

STUDENTS:

Submit to Broadsides this semester. It will be running two more issues. Submission deadlines are March 6th and April 17th, respectively.

What are we looking for? A variety of things: short research papers (5-page maximum), essays (the classic 500-word paper, and on up), journals, poems. The emphasis, though, is on expository prose.

Remember——your submission need not be an "English Paper." We're looking for efforts from other classes. So if you do well on an assignment, please consider Broadsides. One requirement: we request typed, proofed copy. Send your submission(s) to Dr. Craig Challender (109 Grainger), or to the English, Philosophy and Modern Languages department office (107 Grainger). Thanks.

Gymnasts Host UMBC This Sat. Feb. 28

By RICK RIVERA

Longwood's gymnastics team spent its Saturday afternoon at the Towson invitational gymnastics meet, finishing seventeen out of the nine team field. This Saturday the Lancers will host Maryland Baltimore County at 2:00 in what will be the last home meet of the season.

Coach Ruth Budd was displeased with the overall performance of the team. Again, bars was the Lancers' trouble spot and may have cost the team two notches in the win column. According to Budd, the inexperience of competing in front of big crowds may have hampered the gymnasts' concentration. Although the floor exercises went well the Lancers did not score as high as they should have.

All was not bad for Longwood as Lynda Chenoweth again was consistent enough to earn a 33.1 all-around score. Chenoweth had a very good meet attaining scores above 8 in all categories and had a no-fall meet. Budd says Chenoweth's ability to remain cool and calm is her strong point and keeps her up there in the thick of things.

Another bright spot for the Lancers was the improvement of senior Kerri Hrubi. Hrubi is coming on strong and had another no-fall routine on beam.

Men's Basketball

Longwood will be a decided underdog in the semi-final round of the Mason-Dixon Tournament Friday against Randolph-Macon in Ashland.

The Lancers, who walloped Ferrum 98-76 Saturday night in the regular season finale, will take a 13-13 overall record and a 3-5 mark in the MDAC into the 7:00 clash against the Yellow Jackets. Randolph-Macon, second in the league at 5-3, beat Longwood 71-61 on its homecourt Wednesday.

Fourth seeded Liberty (3-5) will host fifth seed Pittsburgh-Johnstown (2-6) Tuesday night in the tournament opener. The winner will face league champ Mount St. Mary's (7-1) at 9:00 Friday night in the other semi-final clash. Friday's winners will meet for the tourney crown at 7:30 Saturday night.

"It will certainly be a challenge for us," said Lancer coach Cal Luther of Friday's game against Macon. "We're pleased to have several days to prepare for a game like this. Having a tournament title to shoot for should give us extra incentive."

Art Monroe tossed in 20 points and Quintin Kearney had 11 points, 5 blocked shots and 7 rebounds. Kearney has now blocked 44 shots this season, breaking the school record of 42 set by Portland Trailblazer Jerome Kersey in 1982-83 and 1983-84.

Senior Kevin Ricks had 8 points, 8 assists and 4 steals - against the Panthers. Ricks has 113 assists and 81 steals for the year to lead Longwood in both categories.

Lancer forward Darry Rutley is Longwood's lone representative on the All-Mason Dixon Conference squad, picked by league coaches. Rutley, 6-4, is averaging 14.5 points and 4.4 rebounds. He scored 24 points in Wednesday's loss to R-MC and 23 in Saturday night's win over Ferrum.

Jefferson Doubtful For Tournament

Longwood freshman Kevin Jefferson is listed as very doubtful for Friday's contest. He suffered a badly sprained ankle at Macon last Wednesday. The 6-4 forward averages 15.1 ppg. His place in the starting lineup will be filled by 6-3 freshman Dale Shavers. Shavers, who has been playing well lately, scored 17 points in the win over Ferrum to backup Rutley.

Rugby Team Plays Div. II State Champion Va. Tech This Weekend

Lady Cagers

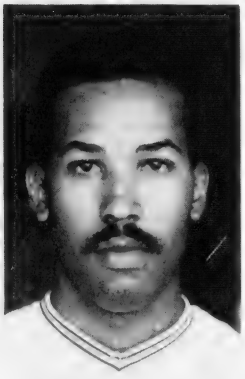
Longwood's women's basketball team won two of three games last week, including a 94-82 victory over Liberty Sunday, to move its record to 12-13 overall and 4-4 in the Mason-Dixon Conference.

Longwood has one regular season game remaining before the Mason-Dixon Tournament Thursday through Saturday at Mount St. Mary's. Longwood hosts District of Columbia Tuesday at 7:30 in what will be the final home appearance for seniors Caren Forbes and Karen Boska. Parent-Senior Night will be observed Tuesday.

The senior duo were named second team All-Mason Dixon Conference as voted by the league coaches and released Sunday. Forbes is a repeat selection on the squad.

The Lady Lancers will play second place Pittsburgh-Johnstown Friday night at 6:00 in the semi-final round of the tournament. Liberty is slated to meet Randolph-Macon Thursday night at 7:00 in the tournament opener. The winner of that game will play Mount St. Mary's at 8:00 Friday night. The finals are Saturday night at 7:30.

Forbes, a Lancer co-captain, will be continuing her assault on the College's all-time career scoring record. Forbes has 1,131 points with at least two games remaining. The 5-6 guard needs 40 points to reach 1,471 and tie the career leader Sue Rama. Forbes is averaging 15.4 p. and 5.8 assists.



She had 12 assists and 17 points in Sunday's win and has now broken her own Longwood standard for assists in a season. Forbes has 152 assists this year, topping the 140 she handed out in 1984-85. She has a record 523 for her career.

Boska, also a senior co-captain, is scoring 12.3 ppg. and pulling down 9 rebounds per contest. Longwood beat Maryland Baltimore County 75-74 in overtime Thursday night as Boska had 21 points and 16 rebounds. She also scored the winning bucket on a feed from Forbes. Saturday, Longwood dropped an 89-67 decision to league leader Mount St. Mary's on the road.

Longwood finished in third place in the MDAC regular season race, beating both Liberty and Randolph-Macon twice. Freshman Dee McDaniels had a starring role in Sunday's win over Liberty with a career high 18 points and 9 rebounds.

Six players scored in double figures for Longwood. Kita Chambers had 12 points, Boska and Angee Middleton 11 and Angie Hill 10. The game with Liberty had been scheduled for last Tuesday, but was postponed by snow.

Player of the Week

Sophomore forward Darryl Rutley scored 47 points in two games for Longwood's men's basketball team last week and for his performance the 6-4 cager has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period February 15-22. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Rutley tossed in 24 points in Longwood's 71-61 loss to Randolph-Macon Wednesday and came back with a team-high 23 points in Saturday's 98-76 victory over Ferrum. Rutley hit 18 off 33 shots from the floor and 11 of 11 free throws in the two games. He also had 11 rebounds in the two games.

Named second team All-Mason Dixon Conference this week, Rutley is averaging 14.5 points and 4.4 rebounds while leading Longwood in field goal percentage at .551. The Trinity Episcopal graduate ranks among the league leaders in scoring and field goal percentage.

Rutley transferred to Longwood from Monmouth College last year. After sitting out the 1985-86 season, he has come back strong in his first year with the Lancers.

Longwood Baseball

If "Old Man Winter" obliges, the Longwood baseball team will begin its 10th season next week with a six-day, 10-game road trip to North and South Carolina.

The Lancers of coach Buddy Bolding (208-94-2, 8 years) will be gunning for their fourth straight 30-win season. Bolding's club ended up 30-16-1 a year ago and has been ranked 18th in a preseason Division II baseball poll conducted by Collegiate Baseball.

Longwood is slated to open its 53-game schedule Wednesday with a twinbill at St. Andrews in Laurinburg, North Carolina.

Games to follow are at Francis Marion Thursday (1), at Morris Friday (2), at USC-Aiken Saturday (1), at Allen Sunday (2), and at Newberry Monday (2).

The Lancers will open play in Virginia Wednesday, March 4 at neighboring Hampden-Sydney and have their first home date March 6 against West Virginia Tech.

Pitching should be the name of the game for the 1987 Lancer squad which boasts six veteran hurlers and two impressive freshmen. Bolding expects his mound staff to have the best depth and balance since the 1982 team which advanced to the Division II World Series. The coach can choose between three lefthanders and five righthanders.

Heading up the staff are seniors Tony Browning, 19 career wins, and Scott Mills, 18 career wins. Browning was the top pitcher on last year's tema with a 6-5 mark. Mills returns to action after a year's absence. He was 7-4 in 1985.

Other veteran hurlers are senior Rob Furth, who will also start in rightfield, junior Tony Beverley and sophomores Steve Gedro and E.J. Bryant. Furth was 3-4 in '86 while Beverley was 5-1, Gedro 3-1 and Bryant 4-1.

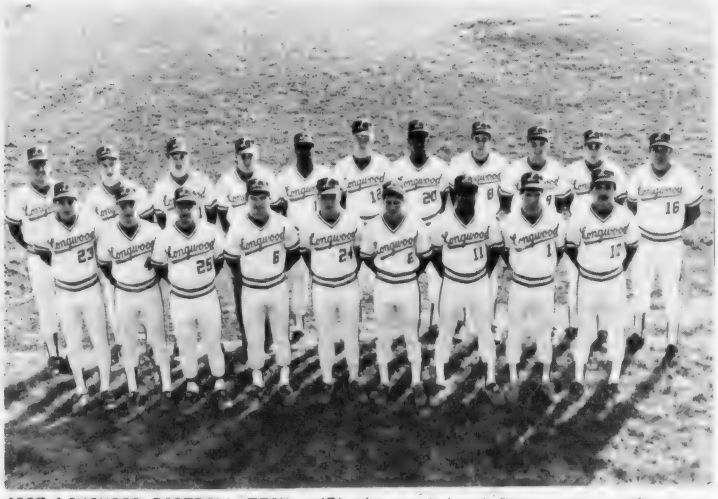
Freshmen of note include Frankie Watson, a lefthander who may play outfield also, and righthander Bobby Johnson.

Rohm, Davis, Mayone To Lead Hitters

Longwood has gained a reputation as one of the top hitting teams in Division II and 1987 should be no exception. Returning from last year's record-setting squad (.353 batting average, 42 homers, 8.8 runs per game) are three hitters who combined for 29 homers and 134 runs-batted-in.

Seniors Jeff Rohm and Jeff Mayone, and junior Kelvin Davis are expected to be the leaders of the Longwood hitting attack. Rohm and Mayone are tri-captains along with Browning.

Rohm, who has been switched from catcher to third base, batted .452 (11th in Division II), drove in 52 runs and ripped nine homers and 14 doubles. His average of RBI's per game (1.3) was 14th in Division II and he was named College Division Player of the third was brought on when veteran Marty Ford withdrew from school in the fall.



Longwood's career leader in homers (28) and RBI's (137), Mayone clouted nine roundtrippers last season while .351 and driving in 38 runs. The senior is also a solid fielder at first base.

Davis has been the Lancer shortstop since his freshman season. He tied the school record for homers in a season a year ago with 11 while hitting .385 and driving in 44 runs. He was named first team All-South Atlantic Region.

Another returning starter is sophomore catcher Roger Baber who has also put in time at designated hitter. Baber, who hits from the left side, batted .311 with 19 RBI's last season. He will be the Lancers starting catcher.

Other veteran players are speedy junior Robert Jackson, who will play outfield and third, and sophomores Greylin Rice, a catcher, and Eric Killinger, who will play outfield and designated hitter.

Wrestlers Wrap Up Season

By Kirk Barnes

Longwood's grapplers finished their season hosting the NCAA Southern Regional Wrestling Championship Saturday. Liberty and Pembroke State were the other competitors.

Ten berths were given to the NCAA Division II National Championships March 5-7 at Edwardsville, Illinois. Three alternates, including two Longwood wrestlers, were also chosen.

The team scores were: Liberty 90, Pembroke State 84.5, and Longwood 44.

The individual champions were: 118 lbs. - Loren Baum, - Liberty, 126 - Joe Stukes, Pembroke State, 134 - Gary Sibey, Liberty, 142 - Chad Hawks, Pembroke State, 150 - Tim Morriss, Liberty, 158 - Kevin Frame, Liberty, 167 - Willie Mayes, Pembroke State, 177 - Kip Fennelly, Liberty, 190 - Antonio Kilpatrick, Pembroke State, and HWT - Mike Hatch, Liberty.

The three alternates chosen were Billy Howard, Longwood, 158 lbs., Tim Fitzgerald, Longwood, 118 lbs., and Warren Dumas, Pembroke State, 134 lbs.

Willie Gaines, also received a bye to the finals, but was overpowered by Stukes 17-4 in the 126 championship. Tommy Gilbert was also a beneficiary of a bye, but could not stop Hawks of Pembroke State and lost 10-5 in the 142 pound weight class.

Tim Ruggles, lost in the first round of the 150 pound weight class 11-0. Howard lost a very hard fought match in the finals to Kevin Frame of Liberty 4-3 in the 158 championship.

At 177, David Taylor lost in the first round 10-6. John Kelly was pinned in the first round of the 190 championship by the eventual champion. At heavyweight, Jesus Strauss was pinned by All-American Mike Hatch of Liberty in the first round.

"Pembroke and Liberty are very tough teams, stated Longwood coach Steve Nelson. "Our guys were beaten on their feet."

"We have had a sensational year of wrestling, but we have had our share of tough breaks too," explained Nelson. "It will be tough to top this season.

Longwood finished with its best record ever in dual matches 9-4 and tied the school mark for most wins in a season (9).

Longwood Student Studies In Land Of Kilts

By Betty Bryant

Joyce Lamond, a Longwood College sophomore from Staunton, will continue her education next semester in the land of kilts and bagpipes.

From January 6 to April 6, Lamond will study at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland. She is the first Longwood student to participate in a study-abroad opportunity sponsored by the American Universities International Program (AUIP).

Lamond, who is majoring in therapeutic recreation, saw a poster advertising the AUIP program on a bulletin board in Longwood's department of physical education, health, and recreation.

"This program is especially for students in recreation, parks, and leisure studies," Lamond said. "That's important, but the thing that really caught my attention was its location in Scotland. My great-great-great grandfather came to this country from Scotland."

According to family tradition, Lamond's ancestor was among a group of Scottish immigrants that included Andrew Carnegie.

Lamond contacted the American coordinator of the AUIP program, Dr. George Lowrey at the University of Illinois. With the cooperation of several Longwood officials — Dr. Robert Bartos, dean of the School of Education and Human Services; Dr. Judy Johnson, head of the physical education, health, and recreation department; and Janet Merling, director of the therapeutic recreation program — arrangements were made for Lamond's participation in the program and for the transfer of academic credit earned at Edinburgh to Longwood.

The program's primary purpose is to provide a "cross-cultural experience" for students. Lamond's studies at Edinburgh will include comparisons of leisure systems, land use and planning, and approaches to criminology and delinquency in the U.S. and Great Britain.

She also is enrolled in a course titled "Historical Interpretation in the Scottish Context" and is looking forward to a required course called "Outdoor Pursuits."

Among those pursuits are kayaking, cross-country and downhill skiing, mountain walking, sailing, cycling, and, of course, golf. (The game of golf originated in Scotland almost four centuries ago.)

"I understand we also will have the option of pony-trekking, whatever that is," Lamond said.

"I want to see and do everything," Lamond said. Her class schedule will be reasonable to permit time for seeing the country and getting to know other students.

"If I meet somebody from London who invites me home with them, I want to be able to go," she said.

Housing for Lamond and the 11 other American students in the AUIP program will be in bed-and-breakfast guest houses near the university campus.

"I understand these houses are similar to the old boarding houses in this country," Lamond said. "The landlady is like a house mother. That will be a new experience for me — I thought house mothers went out of existence a while back."

She will have to change some of her personal habits. "I won't be taking a morning shower over there." Lamond said. "Showers are really frowned upon in Scotland because it's very expensive to heat water."

"And breakfast is served so early — about six o'clock," she added.

She will be packing lots of jeans and sweaters. "Students there dress like we do here — at least, I hope they do," she said. "Warmth is the important thing. I understand there's a lot of cold rain. Even spring weather is unpredictable, but when it's nice it is really beautiful."

Scotland has been a part of Great Britain for three centuries but still maintains a unique national character. Many historic sites are located in or near the city of Edinburgh, including Abbotsford, home of Sir Walter Scott; Linlithgow including Abbotsford, home of Sir Walter Scott; Linlithgow Palace, birthplace of Mary, Queen of Scots; and Edinburgh castle which houses the Scottish crown, Scottish crown, scepter, sword of state, and other ancient regalia. More than 473,000 people live in Edinburgh.

The University of Edinburgh was founded in 1583. It has more than 10,000 students.

Lamond admits that she is "a little scared" about going alone to a strange campus, city, and country. "But mostly I'm excited," she said. "The excitement is overpowering the nervousness."

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Bruce Lamond, of Staunton, have some misgivings, too. "But they want me to have this opportunity," she said. She hopes that her parents and several of her five brothers and sisters can visit her in Edinburgh.

New Longwood Scholarship

By NOBY LINE

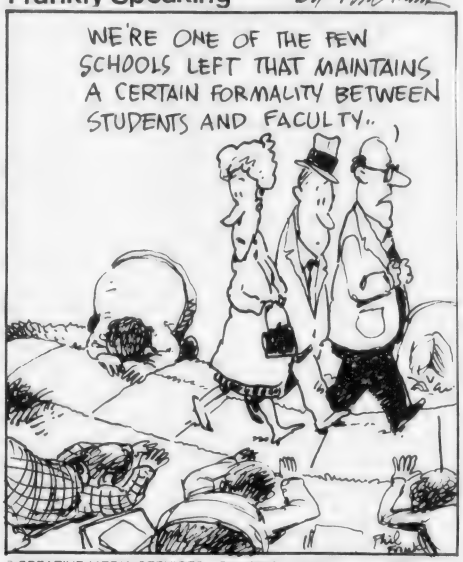
Longwood College will award the first Verna Mae Barr Scholarship, in the amount of $2,500, to a rising junior or senior for the 1987-88 academic year.

To be considered for the scholarship, students must be residents of the southwest Virginia counties of Wise, Lee, Scott, Dickenson, Buchanan, or Washington.

The scholarship was established in honor of the late Verna Mae Barr by alumni of Wise High School and J.J. Kelly High School. It is the largest single scholarship at Longwood supported by a private gift endowment.

"We are deeply grateful to Ms. Sarah Fugate, of Abingdon, for her leadership in establishing the Verna Mae Barr Scholarship," said Donald Lemish, Longwood's vice president for institutional advancement. "Many other persons have provided gift support to establish the endowment, and we appreciate all of these gifts."

Rising juniors and seniors at Longwood who wish to be considered for the scholarship should contact the college's Financial Aid Office as soon as possible.



Announcement of the first recipient of the scholarship will be made in April.

Miss Barr was a teacher and librarian in Wise County from 1931 to 1977, one of the longest tenures of service in that school system.

After graduating from Wise High School in 1929, Miss Barr attended Longwood for two years and obtained her teacher's certificate. In 1941, after attending summer sessions at Longwood, she received her bachelor of science degree.

She began her teaching career at Pound, then transferred to Esserville. In 1934, she began teaching third grade in Wise. She later taught high school English and served as librarian until her retirement.

Archeological Dig Now In Third Year

By MELISSA GIBBS

Ever want to try a day in the life of a pre-historic Virginia Indian? Students enrolled in the 1987 Longwood Summer Field School in Archeology will have that opportunity.

Under the supervision of Dr. James W. Jordan, Director of the Archeology Field School and Associate Professor of Anthropology at Longwood, the budding archeologists will excavate a pre-historic Indian site, the Morris Field Site, 44BK212, in Buckingham County. In addition to digging for artifacts students will learn about the native Americans' life through related projects such as building a sweat lodge and constructing a dam designed to trap fish.

The students will begin their days at 7:20 AM with a 25 mile commute to the site. Upon arriving at the site, the students will have 40 to 45 minutes of study and lecture followed by several hours of digging. One night each week, the participants will camp at the site.

This will mark the SummerField School's third year at the current site, a farm owned by the Morris family along the Appomattox River. How did Dr. Jordan discover the Morris Field Site? After reading a newspaper article about the Longwood Summer Field School in Archeology program, Mr. Morris alerted Dr. Jordan to some objects of interest which he had found while working on his farm.

This summer the students will also work on several other sites. At Locust Grove Plantation home of Revolutionary War hero, Peter Francisco, students will be involved in historic archeology.

Dr. Jordan described the best method for locating a potential dig site—"to hang around farmers." He said farmers and men in other occupations which bring them close to the land often come across artifacts in their work.

Previous dig sites for the Longwood program have included a slave shack behind the president's home at Hampden-Sydney College and a cave in Willis Mountain. Following its organization in 1980, the Longwood Summer Field School's first project featured an Indian camp in Cumberland County. Dr. Jordan named the site Anna's Ridge after his then two year old daughter.

Two courses compose the Summer Field School in Archeology, Anthropology 495 and Anthropology 595. The undergraduate level course, Anthropology 495-Field Methods in Archeology, teaches the techniques of excavation, mapping, soil analysis, the washing and analysis of prehistoric stone tools, and the interpretation of stratigraphy. Anthropology 595 — The Organization and Execution of Archeological Fieldwork, the graduate level course, provides advanced students the chance to learn the skills necessary to organize and supervise an excavation by serving as assistants to the Director of an ongoing excavation. Both courses are offered in the Interim Session, as well as in the two other sessions of summer school.

Because of the nature of the course, which is sanctioned by the American Anthropology Association, the class is limited to twenty students in each session. Though many students have already signed up for this summer and the course appears filled to capacity for all three sessions, Dr. Jordan encourages interested students to see him for more information. His office is in Hiner 212.

Besides coordinating the Summer Field School in Archeology Dr. Jordan has arranged for Longwood Anthropology Majors to study archeology abroad. Denise Rast spent last summer at the Institute of Archeology at the University of London while Betsy Chalfant and Keith Russell worked at excavations in Petra, Jordan.

Dr. Jordan departs March 4th for England, the Syrian Arab Republic, and the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan where he plans to arrange for more Longwood students to study. In London, Dr. Jordan will visit the Institute of Archeology at the University of London and according to his itinerary, will "state the Longwood case as an institution where English students could experience field training in North American archeological techniques." He also hopes to "explore the possibility of placing Longwood students in summer internship programs focusing on Seventeenth Century migration of farmers from Suffolk, England to New Kent County, Virginia."

En route to the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan, Dr. Jordan will stop at Damascus, Syria to visit officials at the Syrian Ministry of Antiquities, view archeological collections at the Syrian National Museum, and travel to archeological sites in the vicinity of the village of Bourjesa Fita.

After arriving in the Jordanian city of Amman, Dr. Jordan will meet with officers of the Jordanian Department of Antiquities and visit the archeological collections at the Natural History Museum of Jordan. Next, Dr. Jordan will drive to the archeological site of Petra, 90 miles south of Amman to observe the layout of the Petra excavations. Dr. Jordan will return to the United States March 18th.

Dr. Jordan measures artifacts dug up at Morris Field Archeological site.

Editorial

During registration many students are clueless about the classes that they are taking for next semester. Students take classes because of their advisor's and friend's advice and because they have no choice in the matter. Many students, though, realize that certain classes are not for them. They may not realize this until after the drop period.

The drop period should definitely be extended. It is very hard for a student to judge how he or she is performing in a class until the first test. Many of the first tests are not until midterm exams. Then, it is too late to drop the class.

There are many reasons why a student would want to drop a class. It may be conflicts with a teacher, with time or with other classes. Maybe in a future semester, a student may have less credits and more time for the class. They need, though, to have a longer drop period to decide this.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

I would like to address a "letter to the editor" I read in last week's Rotunda by Bill Moore, Student Development Educator. I am a Junior and have experienced many different types of teachers as well as students in my two and a half years here at Longwood. I would like to give you all an involved student's view on the situation.

Passivity? Almost every student I know is involved in some college activity other than just classes. I myself run two different organizations on campus, one of which is directly related to my chosen field and may end up being damn near the only practical education I'll get in my field. I'm practically educating myself: how's that for engaging in an active way in my education?!

I think you need a little insight into the mind of the college student today, particularly at Longwood. First, let me say that you are very correct in your description of a portion of Longwood students, I see them too, everyday. But most of us do not drift into or through college for our parents, we're here to try to get ahead, build a career, and do something for ourselves. There may be a certain percentage of freshman or sophomores who are not sure what they want out of college but then that's what they're here to find out, and it is partly your job to help them.

In your letter you wrote, "Many times it seems like you're not thinking because you don't voice your opinions, prefering to sit back passively and let someone else take the risk." That's just it, they let someone else take the risk because they think there is a risk, and too many times there is. What I refer to are some things I unfortunetly have experienced first hand. Let's put our naive beliefs aside for a minute and look at the facts. There are some professors out there who will shoot you down for giving a wrong answer, will not like you for your hair style, your clothes, your sex, and worst of all, for your opinion. The nice thing is there are a few of these professors who will tell you these things the first day you walk into class. So maybe you can dress for success, or re-define your opinions ahead of time to better your chances of getting the grade you deserve in the first place. The worst part is that most of these type of professors don't tell you, instead you find out when it's too late to do anything about it. Again let me state that this stuff really goes on, I've experienced it first hand. I have also heard many other similar horror stories to support this statement.

The analogy you used, "fight for your right to party", was pretty much on target, but it needs to be expanded to include, "be active, progressive, and yourself," as well as "party". As I mentioned before I head up two organizations on campus and both want to be more actively involved yet both are held back, not by students, (the students are there and they care) but by the administration! And as for the "real world", the real world parties too, with alcohol, so why shouldn't we. Also, when you say college students have the attitude that one person can't make a difference, take a look at the attitude of the society they grew up in.

Yes, to have a realistic view of the work world today and of the future is a must if we are to succeed, but just remember that to stop dreaming and striving for that "dream job" is a good way not to get it. If you stop dreaming you stop living; you have no goals.

You say if I don't like the way my classes are taught, I should voice those concerns. Well I have on a couple of occasions, to no avail. You see I discovered this little loophole called tenure, which seems to mean, around here, that any professor having tenure can do as he-she damn well pleases to their students and get away with it. And to top it off we the students pay these people's salaries: now if that isn't injustice I don't know what is. As for housing, I don't even want to begin to get into that B.S.

In closing I would like to restate that my comments are not directed toward all faculty or all students. The reason I wrote this editorial was to point out some facts that obviously needed to be brought to your attention. And also to say that those of us who want to do something to improve Longwood are getting sick and tired of trying with little or no administrative help and too damn much administrative bitching!! And if you want to call me "a disgrace" all I have to say is, go ahead: make my day!

—An active student leader

To the Editor,

The new Rotunda Market is a vast improvement over the old lower dining hall with its new look and better food. The upper dining hall leaves a lot to be desired, however. Instead of spending money on plants, how about spending it on good food or at least cooked bad food. Sunday nights have to be the worst. On the 22nd it was worse than usual. The turkey was ice cold, you could drink the creamed potatoes out of a cup (there were not skins in it this time), and the macaroni and cheese was a mystery. Top it off, there was no milk for Cap'n Crunch.

The upper dining hall should at least have a sandwich bar on the weekends for dinner. Instead of trying to be fancy, the ARA should concentrate on cooking something good. I won't even comment on the new family style service . . .

Stop hurting the trees you love.

Think before you strike.

The heat is on.

This summer may be your last chance to graduate from college with a degree and an officer's commission. Sign up for ROTC's six-week Basic Camp now. See your Professor of Military Science for details. But hurry. The time is short. The space is limited. The heat is on. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Stop by the Department of Military Science on the 3d floor of East Ruffner Hall or call Captain Don Campbell at 392-9348 for more information.

Beyond Longwood

Baker Replaces Regan

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ Former White House Chief-of-Staff, Donald Regan, was forced to resign after a successor was chosen without his knowledge, late Friday afternoon.

According to White House officials, Regan responded furiously after finding out himself from T.V. He quickly sent Reagan a terse one line resignation.

Donald Regan was constantly being criticized from many circles in Washington as failing the President with regards to Iran. His critics included the First Lady, Nancy Reagan, who has disagreed with him on a wide range of issues.

His successor, Former Senator from Tennessee and '88 presidential hopeful started yesterday to organize the damaged White House and prepare for Reagan's address to the country on Wednesday.

Howard Baker, as new Chief-of-Staff, has received great bi-partison praise and brings with him almost instant credibility to the White House.

☐ A deadly tornado struck Laural, Mississippi in Jones County on Saturday killing 7 people and leaving hundreds homeless, according to Red Cross officials.

The estimated time for clean-up is more than three months. The storm that struck suddenly, may have caused more than 20 million dollars of damage.

Residents, who were sifting throught the rubble that once were their houses, say they will rebuild. The town's Elementary school was totally destroyed meaning no school for weeks for 500 children.

Laural, which is in south-east, Mississippi was the only town struck by Mississippi's deadliest tornado on record.

☐ Soviet leader, Mickail Gorbachev, has proposed a new arms control plan that will be introduced to the negotiating table in Geneva. The eastern European countries has called the proposal a step in the right direction, according to Soviet news agency, Tass.

The proposal cuts the connection of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) from the withdrawal of all medium range missiles based on foreign soil within 5 years. Each country would be allowed to keep 500 on their own territory.

President Reagan, according to White House officials, believes that the proposal is promising because it does not limit research on SDI. The allies, Britian, France, Italy, and others have not commented on the proposal until they have more time to look it over.

Soviet ground forces in Europe greatly outnumber those of U.S. allies, giving the Soviets a strategic advantage should the proposal go all the way. Gorbachev also wants to spend less on the military and more on civilian plans.

Stuntz's Photos On Exhibit

By NOBY LINE

A Diary of Interpretations, a collection of 38 photographs by Jinger Simkins Stuntz, of Clemson, SC, is on exhibit in the Bedford Gallery at Longwood College through March 27.

Ms. Stuntz describes her photographs as "a new reality... of observation coupled with emotion and imagination" and "a spontaneous visual diary of the solitary and fleeting moments that are faintly etched into our hearts and minds."

The photographs are two parallel series, Ms. Stuntz says. She calls them "active still lifes" and "Diana landscapes."

The Diana works are "soft focus images that evoke the ephemeral qualities of memory." The still lifes are sharply focussed, with surface detail, visual texture, and intense clarity.

All of the photographs are platinum silver prints, with selenium toning for protection and visual enhancement. To achieve the hazy effect in the distorted focus photographs, Ms. Stuntz first used a Diana camera that sells for $1.98. The plastic lens of this camera "projected a simple but often elegant, softly focused image disappearing into darkly vignetted corners," she said.

Ms. Stuntz later designed and built her own 4 x 5 view camera with a single lens element that "exaggerated the image distortion while providing a range of apertures for exposure control."

She also has experimented with enlargement ratios and fine-grain film to achieve the sharp focus of the still life series.

Most of the photographs have titles, like "Kiss Me Before December," "Where Do You Keep Your Love?," "Loud Noises in Quiet Places," and "Listless Nights at the Villa Roma."

The titles are "integral partners with the visual," Ms. Stuntz says. "They provide small clues about my personal relationship with the work without sacrificing the viewer's imagination and perception."

Ms. Stuntz is a member of the art faculty at Anderson College in

Sally Lowe Exhibiting

By KRIS MEYER

Sally Lowe is now exhibiting in the Showcase Gallery in Bedford. She graduated Longwood with a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science and has since received a Bachelor of Fine Arts at Virginia Commonwealth University. She has participated in shows since 1984.

The exhibit in Bedford contains a variety of Serigraph-Lithographs. These works contain figures in various poses with shadows of different figures in the background. The poses and expressions on the faces deliver powerful emotions and a feeling of movement. The apparent purposeful stockiness of the figures emphasizes their muscular build and strength.

These figures virtually jump off of the paper and come alive because of the unique backgrounds. Almost in Seurot's pointalistic technique, the slashes and dots are exciting and bold. They contrast with the solid colors of the figures and shadows.

At first glance, the show might appear repetitious because each work contains the same compositional elements: a figure, a shadow, and slashed-dotted background. But each work draws the viewer to it. This show closes March 20th.

The first March Art Show is being held from March 3-31st. It is a chance for freshman and sophomore art majors and minors to show their work. All matted pieces, with the acceptance of the Art Club, are being presented. These art works are showing in the Lancaster Library for Longwood students and outsiders alike to view. This is the first of such biannual shows.

Here We Come, Sun!

Well, Maybe Not . . .

By MICHAEL GEOLY

With Spring Break coming closer and closer, the school has been divided in half. There are two classes, those who have the luck of being able to go to the sunshine of the south, and those who aren't quite so lucky.

If you do happen to be one of the lucky bunch, we know what you're going through. Let's start off with the bathing suit. Unless you've been blessed with perfection, the hours of suit shopping could be the most traumatizing of your year. Every winter, you'll plan early for the spring, more diet and exercise, and less Domino's and beer. But once again, it didn't quite work. The five or ten extra pounds that have been comfortably hiding under the sweats will suddenly be exposed and distributed in all the wrong places.

Your next "problem" will be finding clothes. If by chance you happen to meet up with someone you met last year, heaven forbid you'd be wearing the same thing. You've got to stay in fashion, and never admit that anything is new, keep your cool. Whatever you decide to do, make sure everything you buy is indestructable — who knows what might be spilled, smeared or dumped on you.

Perhaps your worst dilemma, after getting your bathing suit and clothes situation cleared up, will be your white body going into them. We all know that it's against the rules to walk on a beach with a tan; you'll stick out like a polar bear. First of all, try and get two or three sessions in a tanning salon. If you can't imagine that, maybe you should consider secluding yourself for the first day or two, wherever you go, to at least build up a base. It may sound boring, but you'll have to make these sacrifices if you want to comply with sunbathing etiquette. Before you go, don't get too excited that you forget things. You'll need dark sunglasses for scamming (watch the eye movement); lots of suntan lotion, you don't know who might come by to rub lotion on that spot you just can't reach; (you might bring some solarcaine, just in case you don't meet the someone for that spot) and a blanket. The blanket has two purposes, one, obviously for sitting on, the other is to shake it out upwind of the dweebs who are settling in next to you.

For the rest of you, don't let those "sun bums" get you down. If you really want a tan that badly, just wait a few weeks and the dorm roofs will open up. If it bothers you to watch the "darkies" on campus showing off their tan lines, here's something to think about, they're just one week closer to wrinkles and skin cancer than you. Remember, there's always next year....

GREEK OF THE WEEK

By RENEE SMITH

Kimbra Patterson, a member of Alpha Sigma Tau Sorority, has been elected Greek of the Week by the Longwood College Panhellenic Council.

A senior Mathematics major from Northern Virginia, Kimbra has been elected Greek of the Week for her active participation in Greek and non-Greek activities. As a freshman, Kimbra came to Longwood on a golf scholarship and played on the Women's Golf Team for two years. Presently, she is studying on a ROTC scholarship, has been inducted as a ROTC Ranger, and is the acting Commander on both the Longwood and Hampden-Sydney campuses. During the past summer, Kimbra attended Airborne School at Fort Brag in North Carolina and is now qualified Airborne. After her graduation in May, Kimbra will enter the United States Army as a Second Lieutenant assigned to the Aviation branch of the service. As a member of Alpha Sigma Tau sorority, Kimbra has held the offices of Treasurer and President and now acts as the sorority's Historian and Social Service Director.

In an effort to promote Panhellenic spirit on campus, the Panhellenic Council will elect one sorority member each week as the Greek of the Week.

FARMVILLE FEEDBAG

PERINI'S

By MARNA BUNGER

As we all know, all good things are destined to change. Perini's decided to change on us over Christmas.

One of the first noticeable changes is the decor. One can no longer find cigarette butts and popcorn on the floor from the Greek sponsored nights. There is new carpeting, lights and plants. The dance floor has been taken over by new booths.

The menu has changed also. Perini's still offers pizza, subs, salads and spaghetti. The newest additions to the menu are Rib Eye Steak, deep dish pizza, manicotti, tuna and reubens.

For $4.28 you can't beat the manicotti and a drink. It is a large serving for lunch and it comes with a salad and garlic bread. The only drawback is that it was obviously frozen. I still think the best thing Perini's has going for it is the pizza. It's inexpensive and good. As for the other selections on the menu, they are standard and can be good, but I've had better.

One thing you have to commend Perini's for is the "clean up." You can no longer hear the whistles of red-neck mating calls and the loud music. Though no longer a college hang-out, Perini's family style atmosphere is a change for the better in Farmville.

Skeebo,
Thanks! for what? for finally being my friend. We had our first conversation w-o your asking "Why" once. Maybe we'll be able to have pizza in public one day. Butch and the kids say hello.
Friends Forever,
Poochie

Kim, Lisa, & Vicki,
Remember Freshman Hall dormies that I still think about you even though I don't get around there much.
The other family member

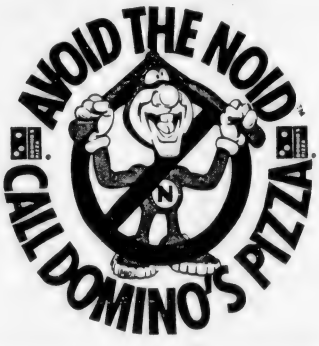
I'm SEARCHING for a tall, Longwood junior. Dark brown hair, beautiful eyes and a heartwarming smile. I've seen you often in the Rotunda Market, however, last Tuesday you ate upstairs (you were wearing a red shirt). The only other thing I know about you is that you used to date someone named Sarah . . . Are you single now? If interested in developing a new friendship, respond here in the Personals.

To the BAHAMA BOYS on 8th floor Curry — Have a great trip — take lots of pictures! We'll miss ya'.
Love, your buddies from 9th floor

Trolls,
If you can't buy me cards and presents — what kind of friendship do we have? — One that'll last forever.
Love,
Linda lovelace

Louise,
Sorry we don't say thank you often enough. Please know that we love you.
Your Sisters

Gus Nicole and Gus Debbie:
Thanks for all your love and support and for showing me how to "Take a Walk on the Wild Side."
Luv, Gus DeAnn



To Count:
Who is Kim? What's she like? What (or who) does she look like?

Congrats to our new Delta Zeta pledges — Sandy Bishop, Angie Dandy, and Anissa Reed — We love you.
Sisters of Delta Zeta

Arthur Drew,
The roses were very special to us and so are you!
Love you lots
— Delta Zeta

Laurie M.,
The search is still on — N.Y. is definitely added to the list; maybe I should look in Fla. during break? I could just go from Fla. to Ga. to N.Y. — June, July, and August, respectively.
Love,
Mrs. Gary Schulwolf (Dr.)

Sandra,
Thank you for being a very close friend. I'll always be there for you.

Miss Longwood Judges Named

By NOBY LINE

Five judges who together have a half century of services to the Miss America program will judge the Miss Longwood Pageant on March 21.

They include the executive director of the Miss North Carolina Pageant and the official chaperone to Miss Virginia.

The Miss Longwood Pageant, a Miss America preliminary, has built a reputation as one of the top local pageants in Virginia. Thirty contestants tried out for the pageant last December, and 10 were selected for the competition. Special guest performers of national stature will be announced shortly.

The pageant will be held Saturday, March 21, at 8:00 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium. Tickets will be available at the door.

The judges are:

— Stephen K. Zaytoun of Raleigh, NC, executive director of the Miss North Carolina Pageant. He has been associated with that pageant since 1979 and has been instrumental in increasing its scholarship programs by more than 30 percent. He owns an insurance brokerage house and is active in civic and professional organizations.

— Jean Smith of Roanoke, who has been the official chaperone for Miss Virginia to Atlantic City since 1964. She also is the associate staging director of the state pageant and the chairman of staging hostesses. She has judged numerous state pageants.

— Stuart Drummond of Virginia Beach, who was for many years in the construction business in the Tidewater area and in Palm Beach, Fla. He is judges chairman for the Miss Virginia Beach Pageant. He is a member of Circus Saints and Sinners of America, a group that contributes to the development of community and charitable organizations throughout the United States.

— Alta Drummond, a model and singer from Virginia Beach. She is associated with the Miss Virginia Beach Pageant and has hosted several reigning Miss Americas who have appeared at the pageant.

— And David Brent Wright of Elizabeth City, NC. He has been a pageant judge in Virginia and North Carolina for the past six years. He is a partner in the Jerry S. Wright independent insurance agency in Elizabeth City and a member of the board of directors of Peoples Bank and Trust Company, the Rotary Club, and the Boys' Club.

— Spring weekend they will be selling T-Shirts, posters, and drink huggers.

NO POLLS

Ok, ok: the shoe poll. We even gave you an extra week in which to reply: 8 ballots were turned in — half of them had to be disqualified due to answers like "more than 20", "less than Amelda Marcos", and "less than Janet Greenwood." Since the whole thing was a totally inaccurate survey due to 99.7 percent or so of the student body failing to reply, let's just call it a draw. We won't bug you with any more polls, either — how's that?

Player Of The Week

Senior co-captain Caren Forbes became the all-time leading scorer in Longwood women's basketball history last week when she scored 15 points against Pittsburgh-Johnstown, and for her performance Forbes has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period February 22 through March 1. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Also Longwood's all-time assist leader, Forbes scored 1,480 points in her career to beat the record of 1,471 set by Sue Rama 1974-78. She also scored a career high 34 points in her final appearance in Lancer Hall, sparking the Lady Lancers to an 82-68 win over District of Columbia last Tuesday.

Forbes has now been named Longwood Player of the Week three times, Mason-Dixon Conference Player of the Week once and National Division II Player of the Week once.

A second team All-Mason Dixon Conference pick two years in a row, Forbes helped Longwood compile a 13-14 record during the past season.

Longwood Riders

Six Longwood riders won ribbons in an intercollegiate horseshow hosted by Sweet Briar Friday. Leading the way was Kim DeShazo who took a first place in novice over fences and a fourth place in novice on the flat.

Other Longwood competitors were: Mike Carey, 6th intermediate over fences; Robin McGowan, 2nd advanced walk-trot; Wendy Weaver, 2nd novice over fences, 3rd novice on the flat; Ann Lawson 6th novice over fences and Robin Walker, 6th advanced walk-trot-canter.

The Lancer riders next show is April 5 when will Longwood will serve as the host college.

Baseball Team Wins 3

Longwood, with a pre-season ranking of 18th in Division II, got its 1987 baseball season off to a 3-0 start last week, before rain washed out five of 11 contests on a six-day road trip to North and South Carolina.

Boosted by nine hits in 12 at-bats from All-America candidate Jeff Rohm, the Lancers took care of St. Andrews 6-1 and 4-2 Wednesday and Francis Marion 3-1 Thursday. Two games at Morris Friday, a game at USC-Aiken Saturday and a twinbill at Allen Sunday were canceled by foul weather.

Coach Buddy Bolding indicated Sunday that his squad would likely play a doubleheader slated for Monday at Newberry College.

In action this week closer to home Longwood is scheduled to visit Hampden-Sydney Wednesday at 3 p.m. and host West Virginia Tech Friday for two games and Division I Lafayette for two Sunday.

Men's Basketball

A season which began with great promise ended on a losing note last Friday as second seeded Randolph-Macon rallied to hand Longwood a 67-62 defeat in the semifinals of the Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament in Ashland, Virginia.

That the Yellow Jackets went on to upset top seed Mount St. Mary's in the tournament finals was of little consolation to the Lancers, who ended their season 13-14. Longwood put forth one of its best efforts of the season against R-MC, but it wasn't enough.

The Lancers held their final lead at 60-59 with 1:45 left after Doug Poppe scored inside. A 3-pointer by Charlie Boyd gave Macon the lead for good at 62-60. The Jackets cashed in five of six free throws the rest of the way after Lancer Darryl Rutley missed a 3-pointer from way outside with 46 seconds remaining.

For the game Longwood got 20 points from Rutley, 14 from Art Monroe and 8 from Poppe, Quintin Kearney and Dale Shavers. The Lancers outrebounded R-MC 33-17 as Kearney grabbed a game-high 9 rebounds, and hit 53 per cent of their shots, scoring 27 field goals to the Jackets' 23.

Lady Cagers End Their Season

Pittsburgh-Johnstown ended Longwood's women's basketball season Friday night with an 88-77 victory in the semifinals of the Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament at Mount St. Mary's, but senior guard Caren Forbes became Lady Lancers' all-time career scoring leader.

Forbes scored 15 to end her career with 1,480 points, nine more than the previous record of 1,471 compiled by Sue Rama 1974-78. The senior co-captain played only 25 minutes because of foul problems and scored just 6 points in the first half, tying the record. Forbes came back with 9 points in the second half to break the mark.

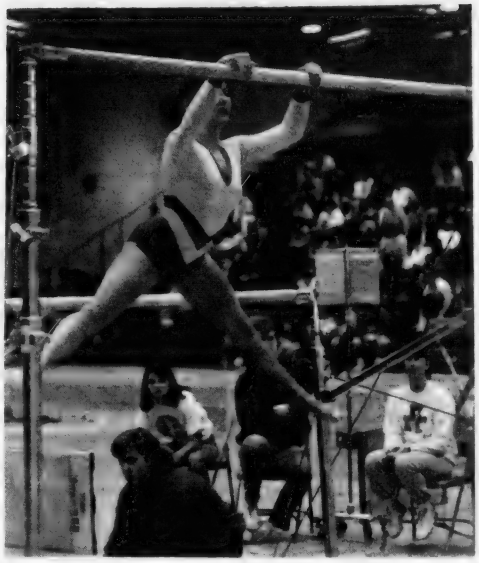
Longwood, which had lost to UPJ by wide margins twice during the season, gave the Lady Cats all they could handle Friday night.

"We played our hearts out," said coach Shirley Duncan. "It was a very strong performance for us."

The Lady Lancers trailed by just three at the half, 41-38, but turnovers mounted after Forbes picked up her fourth foul and went back to the bench. Longwood turned the ball over 34 times in the contest.

Sophomore forward Kita Chambers played perhaps the finest game of her career, finishing with 19 points and 11 rebounds. She converted 8 of 13 field goal attempts and was named to the MDAC All-Tournament team Saturday night. Mount St. Mary's won the tourney and advanced to post-season play in the NCAA II South Atlantic Region.

Senior center Karen Boska closed out her career with another strong game, scoring 14 points and grabbing 10 rebounds. Angee Middleton added 13 points.



"We accomplished a great deal as a team and as individuals," said coach Duncan of her squad's 13-14 season. I'm very proud of what we were able to do and the kids are too."

After losing last year's leading rebounder and scorer Melanie Lee to an academic internship before the season began, Longwood finished third in the Mason-Dixon regular season race and beat four of the top five teams in the South Atlantic Region. LC had an outstanding 10-4 record on its home court.

The Lady Lancers will return eight squad members next season, but Forbes and Boska will be difficult to replace.

"I don't like to think about playing without those two," said Duncan. "They provided us with excellent leadership as well as points, assists and rebounds.

Gymnasts Defeat UMBC

By Rick Rivera

The Longwood gymnastics team concluded its home schedule Saturday with a win over Maryland Baltimore County 168.9-168.5. Following spring break the Lancers will travel to James Madison March 20 in their next action. The win boosted the Lancers record to 4-9.

For senior Debbe Malin it was a most joyous farewell to Lancer Hall. Malin finished third overall enroute to the highest score of her collegiate career (34.2). Another senior contributing to the win was Kerri Hruby. Both Hruby and Malin tied for third on bars with an 8.35.

Coach Ruth Budd was very excited about the win. Budd thought her team might have lost it after a disappointing floor exercise.

"Somehow we managed to pull it out," said Budd. "This victory says a lot about the character of the team."

Speaking of character, Kim Booth competed in three of the four events despite a possible season-ending foot fracture. According to Budd she "went beyond the call of duty and really saved the meet for us!" Booth did not compete in floor exercise which ordinarily may have hurt the Lancers drastically. However, Teresa Robey came on strong with a fine performance to help preserve the win.

The ever consistent Lynda Chenoweth was again just that in earning her highest score of the year with a 34.15.

With spring break coming up and a great psychological lift from the win, Longwood is pushing toward a regional berth. Lancer bars performances have improved tremendously and with more hard work coach Budd is very optimistic about the upcoming meets.

SIXTY-SIXTH YEAR TUESDAY, MARCH 17, [illegible] NINETEEN

Miss Longwood Pageant This Saturday

The First Runnerup to Miss America (the reigning Miss Virginia) will be among special performers at the Miss Longwood Pageant Saturday, March 21, at 8:00 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium.

As First Runnerup to Miss America, and as a Swimsuit Preliminary Winner, Julianne Smith won a $19,500 scholarship. In the Miss Virginia Pageant, she was a Talent Winner and recipient of a $2,000 scholarship and other gifts. With one exception, she fared better than any other Miss Virginia in the history of the Miss America Pageant. The exception was Kylene Barker, who won the national title in 1978.

Julianne, 22, a former U.S.O. and Busch Gardens entertainer, is currently touring the United States as a member of the Miss America Troupe, a group of six Miss America contestants.

Other special performers at the Miss Longwood Pageant include the Held-Over Sisters, a widely acclaimed musical variety act that "stole the show" at last year's Miss Longwood pageant; the Karen Sherrill Dance Arts Troupe of North Carolina, which consists of 13 pageant winners and others; and Holly Jereme Wright, Miss Virginia of 1980, who will serve as emcee. Ms. Wright has been featured at the state pageant for each of the past six years.

"Held Over," a Richmond group, consists of three sisters, ages 15, 13 and 12. They have performed their singing, dancing, and comedy act before audiences of all ages along the east coast. Two of the girls have had theater experience as Von Trapp children in "The Sound of Music." One appeared nationally on a "PM Magazine" television feature on mannequin modeling and on a WXEX-TV production on break dancing.

The Karen Sherrill Dance Arts Troupe has won over 50 first place awards at talent competitions throughout the east. They have performed extensively for more than 100 pageants and special events. Most of the dancers are college students, and 13 of the 15 currently hold or have held pageant titles. They are choreographing numbers especially for the Miss Longwood Pageant, including the theme opener, "Catch a Wave," from the Beach Boys.

Emcee Holly Jereme Wright, Miss Virginia 1980, is regarded as one of the most versatile and talented women to ever win the state title. She is a dancer, singer, actress, and comedian. In addition to her annual appearances at the Miss Virginia Pageant, she performs at the Miss North Carolina Pageant, the Miss Wheelchair America Pageant, and the Miss Wheelchair Virginia Pageant. She currently owns and operates the Elizabeth City School of Dance in North Carolina. She is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in dance and drama.

The Miss Longwood Pageant has built a reputation as one of the outstanding local pageants in Virginia. And according to Pageant Director H. Donald Winkler, "we're doing everything we can to maintain that reputation." This year's show, he said, "should be one of the best ever."

Ten contestants, chosen from 30 in preliminaries held last November, will compete for the Miss Longwood crown. The winner will receive a $1,000 scholarship, a $500 cash award to assist with wardrobe expenses for the Miss Virginia Pageant in July, and an official Miss America crown. Golden Corral Family Restaurant of Farmville is providing the scholarship and cash award.

Other scholarships to be awarded include $700 for the Second Runnerup (primarily from Carmine Foods), $300 for the Third Runnerup (from the Pageant Director Don Winkler), and $100 for the Fourth Runnerup. A talent winner and Miss Congeniality also will be announced.

Students can buy tickets in advance for $2.00 or at the door for $3.00. Sororities will be selling tickets at the discount price during the week of the pageant.

Editorial

Once you cut through all the bureaucratic red tape around here, you can get some things accomplished. The editorial in last week's Rotunda dealt with the issue of changing the drop policy. It asked that the drop period be changed from three weeks to seven weeks. Some teachers voiced their opinions and said this would never be changed. It was claimed to be a "cop out" by the students. But other arguments stated that this will help freshmen to adjust better (there are problems with academic advising as we all know.) Students are going to have to take the required courses before they graduate or they simply will not graduate.

The Thursday before Spring Break, the faculty meeting was held. This issue was discussed. Students who are members of the academic advisory committee were present to state views. Ricky Otey, president of SGA spoke to the faculty. After much debate and analogies (one professor stated that it is better to dive headfirst into a course than to drift until the seventh week, but another professor stated that he himself liked to wade in, or put his big toe in to test the waters, that would be all he lost to the pirahnas), the seven week drop period is now reality. Ricky Otey and open-minded professors are to be thanked for this.

The next issue that the Rotunda would like to persue is the issue of safety on this campus. In the last two weeks, one student from Virginia State and two from U.Va. have died. This hits close to home. There should be a work-study escort service here on campus to provide safety to anyone in need of assistance. This should range out to H-SC. Students who are too drunk to drive home should have a number to call if they need it. People who study late in the library, Grainger or S-UN should be able to have someone to escort them home if need be. We need to have a service like this available, even if it is not utilized to a great extent. Prevention is what stops problems. We should not have to learn by our mistakes, especially if it is an irreverable one, like the loss of a life.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Rotunda:

I was very pleased to hear that my article about students' involvement in college and learning prompted a fair amount of reaction, which was my intention — I only hope it was thoughtful reaction and reflection, not knee-jerk defensiveness. Unfortunately, while I was glad that someone took the time to write a response as well, I feel a number of the comments suggested that kind of defensiveness and misinterpreted my original ideas, I feel compelled to respond, if only for the sake of clairty. I would respond privately, but since this person bravely chose to remain anonymous, I'll use the Rotunda again editor permitting.

First of all, I was confused by the degree to which this person got upset and took my thoughts as a personal attack on him-her or on Longwood students, involved or otherwise. I explicitly said that in my experience most Longwood students do not fit the characterization I quoted from the Chronicle; in particular, if you read the article carefully you'll see that I did not call anyone "a disgrace." My point was that I did see three major areas of concern — passivity, powerlessness, and narrow vocationalism — that students at least needed to consider in their own lives and their peers. "If the shoe fits, wear it," as the old saying goes — I really just wanted students who actually read these pages to decide for themselves if and how well the "shoe fits."

More specifically, with respect to passivity, the only argument presented was to say that there are mean faculty out there who can hurt you and therefore why should students take risks? Regardless of the legitimacy of this claim, it supports, rather than refutes, my point. Further, the paranoia and fear of risk-taking around here is also suggested by this person's unwillingness to sign the letter. I have no doubt that there are individual faculty (and administrators, and business executives, and politicians, and anyone with power) who abuse their position and their power. I also happen to agree, by the way, that the tenure system is antiquated and part of the problem, not the solution. It seems to me, however, that your choices are simple: you learn how to go along to get along, how to manuever around those people, whatever, or you find constructive ways to address the problem, like the student-run faculty evaluation system I mentioned before, or getting a student petition to present to the Dean, etc. Will the world change every time you're unhappy about something? No — but there will be less of the passive — aggressive bitching and paralysis that seems endemic here.

Naturally, the administration also takes its shots in this person's response — but as usual, there are no specifics to support the complaint. I'm no automatic fan of "The administration," but my question is, what specifically is the problem? And who is "the administration," exactly? I happen to believe that there is a certain rigidity and inflexibility in the systems around here that "holds students back" — perhaps that is what is meant by "the administration." True, there are some administrators at Longwood, myself included, who believe that students here are frequently treated like children, not adults — but that is a complex chicken-or-egg question given the behavior of some students, and besides, the letter did not clarify the point. How can I respond to such generalities, except to say that most of the individual administrators here do not see their life's work as "holding students back," and are open to dialogue and debate about the System. On the other hand, I believe that administrators are educators just like faculty; there are lessons about living that are essential aspects of a college education. and those lessons may not always make students happy. While I'm on the subject of "lessons," I can't resist making the comment that while the "real world" may indeed "party with alcohol," the "real world" rarely displays the antisocial behavior — e.g., vandalism — associated with alcohol use-abuse among college students, and when it does, it's liable for the consequences. So the "big bad administration" attempts to enforce state laws and hold students responsible for their behavior — is this called "holding students back"? In any case, I would challenge this student, or anyone, to present specific instances of "little or no administrative help," of "too damn much administrative bitching" — let's evaluate specific circumstances and see what the problem really is.

The irony in this exchange is that I think there is basic agreement about Longwood involvement issues — perhaps the disagreement is on the emphasis and extent of the concerns. I see progress, to be sure; with Rickey Otey's leadership, the SGA has addressed successfully the drop period problem with faculty and is in the process of addressing the visitation policy with the Board. However, as the mystery respondent suggested, it's partly my job to help all students somehow, so I'd like to ask about the 2600 or so who comprise the Longwood student body: how many of them are getting all that they want or can get (two different issues, I realize) from their Longwood education? My central point, now as before, is that there are many of them who, due to certain attitudes and perspectives, are not getting the most out of their investment of time and money — and we, the institution, have an educational responsibility to address this issue, even at the risk of making some indiviudals unhappy.

To the Editor:

As a Senior at this fine institution, I feel like the time has come for me to stand up and voice my opinion. Like many freshmen, when I came to college, I had no idea what was going on. I had never even stepped foot on a college campus before. One of the first things I did was to meet my advisor, who handed me my schedule, which consisted of two Sciences, English, Sociology, and Algebra-Trig. Now, this is an awful large load for a first semester freshman no matter what his major is. But I trusted my all-knowing Advisor because I didn't know I had a choice not to. I remember asking Dr. Merkle couldn't I change that Math because I thought I couldn't handle it. Of course I couldn't, my schedule was made according to my Math scores. I got a D in Algebra-Trig that semester. The next semester, Dr. Holman had me retake my Sociology because I got a C- in it.

Okay, maybe I was a little slow catching on but so are alot of people. We trust our advisors and they nail us to the wall. My question is, if a student is really awful in say, History, Why throw two History courses at him his freshman year? Why not let him stick to safer ground while he's getting his feet wet? Longwood only loses students which could have been real assets to the college by treating us so unmercifully.

One other point, someone needs to explain to students about applications for degree, minors, transferring credits, retaking classes, and such before they are Juniors. I never had an advisor to sit down and explain any of this to me until I changed my major to English and Dr. Frank became my Advisor. Perhaps, the faculty needs to learn how to advise students. This would end alot of confusion and waste of abilities.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

Vandalism, in so many words, is the destruction of property. It is against the law as well as unpleasant to look at.

What I don't understand is why students or anybody insists on destructing property. A good example is the desks in all the classrooms. Students seem to insist on writing or carving their names, boyfriend or girlfriend's name, and sorority or fraternity they are in. Another good example would be the vending machine in the lobby of the Cunningham Dorm. A rumor has it that somebody pured water into the change slot, therefore ruining the machine. Due to someone's negligence, the privilege of having a vending machine is now gone.

The cost of replacing or fixing the destructed furniture or machines is undoubtly thousands of dollars. Money, in my opinion, the school should not have to lay out to pay for damage students have done out of disrespect. I understand that since the school does not have any idea who has done the vandalizing we all have to pay.

Physical Education majors always seem to be the object of ridicule. Most people think P.E. classes are simple one credit classes where you play around, shoot a few baskets, and leave early to head to the salad bar. Maybe some classes are like that, but most you run your butt off and write research papers; especially in second level activity courses, which are preparing students to teach. All this for one measley credit. Being a P.E. major is like being on the ten-year plan.

Three credit courses like Foundations of Sport and Kinesiology compete with any in difficulty. I told someone that I was planning to take Motor Learning. He asked me why I was taking a shop class. People need to wake up and see that being a P.E. major is no piece of cake; well, maybe a piece of lettuce....

To the Editor,

"Farmville" is so laughable. Instead of worrying about whether or not to change Longwood College to Longwood University, we should be more concerned with the name of the town in which it is located. After all, some of the same reasons for changing "Longwood College" overlap into altering the name "Farmville".

Imagine the reaction of a prospective employer to a degree from a college in Farmville, Virginia. He-She would envision a country boy-girl, fresh from the farm, who knows extensively about milking cows and butchering chickens, but little else. Why would they take a chance on a person from Farmville, when other equally qualified people from New York and D.C. are available? It sounds ridiculous. People should base employee choices on credentials, but think of the first time you heard "Farmville."

"Farmville" connotes a town stuck in the middle of nowhere. Nobody knows, or cares, where Farmville is. There are strong reasons to discriminate against somebody from such a town. Areas separated from some city life are handicapped in certain ways. Yes, small towns do get television and newspapers, but it is not the same as living in upbeat America. You have to have lived in or near a big city to appreciate the difference in life style and experiences. Small towns, in general, are more conservative than urban areas. They exist in different degrees of time warps. In small towns, the pace is much slower. They do not seem as aggressive and progress-oriented. These sentences are all stereotypes. Progress has taken place in small towns. But the fact is that some of these generalizations are true, and even more are widely believed.

People tend not to make the distinction between Farmville and Longwood College. If a student states that he-she attends Longwood College, the following question is usually, "Where is that?" The fact that Farmville may be conservative does not necessitate that Longwood College students are. But this differentiation is seldom made. Maybe people figure that, even if students are from big towns, they must belong in the setting in which they choose to be educated in. Many employees seek creative, liberal workers who have the potential to raise the company to new, exciting heights. They do not want the conservative, safe person.

More immediate hazards of "Farmville" than hurting job chances are the effects on incoming mail and various "funny" comments. How many people fail to write back because they must send the letter to Farmville? Many letters even come with comments like, "Where is Farmville?" on them. The status of the name of "Farmville" is not high. My sister's friend was looking through college lists and, upon seeing Longwood College asked if anyone could imagine going to school in a place called Farmville. My sister said, "My sister does!"

As has been shown, not only does "Longwood College" make certain impressions, but so too does "Farmville." The name "Farmville" is a joke to many. Students and non-students alike laugh about the name. But this joke may also have harmful effects.

College Screw-Ups

By KATIE PARSONS

When it comes to perfection Longwood is far from the top of the list; however, being students, we tend to be able to overlook the minor problems. There is one problem that I have a little trouble forgetting about. It might not be that big of a problem except that I see this defect everyday. You see I have this thing about bathing regularly. This "minor" problem that I have is that the ceiling in my bathroom shower is falling in. In fact the problem is extensive enough that everyone in my suite is able to pull chunks off the floor and replace them into the gap that has formed when the paint came loose from the plaster. Now, I can forgive the college its food, lack of lighting and noisy reconstruction, but when it comes to having my ceiling fall in on me in the middle of my daily shower it's a different story. I can just see myself crushed by whatever horrors lie above me in the shower above. The Rotunda headline might read: "Girl found in Stubbs bathroom, crushed by bathing greek above, and still grasping her washcloth, begs for the hot water to be turned off before someone flushes." What a way to go.

I have a friend who has to worry about the wall being squishy when she takes a shower. No big deal right? Wrong, it's the wall to the hallway. Next headline: "Girl found wett, nude and badly bruised by the entire Delta fraternity in Cox dormitory." I admit that these situations would make wonderful stories for my journalism class, but to reap the rewards of the story my friend would have to endure the payments for breaking the wall. The funny part is I'll probably end up paying for a rotten paint job in my bathroom.

Well, enough of my complaining about the showering areas of Longwood campus. If you have a problem with your dorm or another Campus Screwup leave your name and number in the features box on the Rotunda door. I will be more than happy to write about your problem and you will be helping me express some things that need to be taken care of on the campus.

'The Old Lady' Gets The Once-Over

By JENNIFER FORD

The Visit of the Old Lady"; wierd but good. The play is about a small European town, G'Dung, and the return of a former citizen Claire Zachanassian. Claire fled from G'Dung 45 years ago in sheme because she was pregnant and the father, Alfred Ill, had taken her to court and used two bribed boys to say that they too had slept with her. As a result of being driven away from G'Dung she became a prostitute and her child died after a year. Claire had a series of marriages by which she became the richest woman in the world. With her wealth she returned to G'Dung to seek justice from Alfred Ill. G'Dung was on the verge of economic collapse and Claire offered one billion marks to the town if someone would kill Alfred. Everyone in the town assumes that someone else will kill Alfred so they all go on a shopping spree by using credit. Now they are all in debt and Alfred is still alive. In the end Alfred does die and the town gets its money and Claire gets her revenge.

The play was very funny. In parts at times I felt guilty for laughing. A lot of the laughs were visual. For instance everyone bought yellow shoes on the shopping spree that they went on. The Policeman wore lift shoes with about a two inch heel on it. There was an hysterical part in the play in which Scott Koenigsberg, who played the Teacher, made a drunken fool of himself. The play had a lot of very odd parts in it. Claire surrounded herself with men that all had names ending in oby, like Toby, Roby, and Boby. During the play itself she had three different marriages, all three were played by the same actor, Mike Hart. Claire thought of herself as unkillable, even though her body was falling apart: She had an ivory hand and a fake leg.

The set itself was unusual. You moved from one place to another simply by picking up a bench or hanging up a picture. It was all made believable. The most fascinating scene was the drive through the country . . . The car consisted of two benches and a steering wheel. I hear a lot of the audience laugh through this scene and all I could think was what do they expect? They cannot exactly bring out a car and drive it around.

The "Visit" is a funny play with some serious messages in it about what justice is and how far will a town go to satisfy its greed. I like the play, my roommate thought it was "hysterical". I am not so sure that you could call it a comedy at all or a serious play. It is just something that you have to see for yourself so that you can decide what it is and what it is saying.

Series Of Performing Arts Past, Present And Future

By PAMELA J. WERNER

The auditorium lights dim, the curtain opens and a hush falls over the audience. The crowd settles back into their seats and another performance, sponsored by the Longwood Series of Performing Arts, begins. Actually that is only partially true. While the show has just started for the viewers, it has been going on for several months for the members of the Performing Arts.

Says junior Anna Prow, chair for the Series, "In the beginning we look at our budget and figure out what type of programs we want to have during the season."

This past season hosted Dizzie Gillespie, the Richmond Ballet, the National Boy Choir and Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. The final performance of the 86-87 season will be Angel Street, to be held on April 4. "The response to this past season has been really good," says Anna.

The 87-88 season will include: the Richmond Ballet, a Christmas Carol, The musical Purlie, the New York chamber soloists to perform Vivaldi's 4 Seasons and Opera Buffa. There is a possibility that one more performance may be added to next season's schedule.

A lot of hard work and dedication goes into planning a successful season. Often times people seem to think that the Series is a part of the Longwood Players of the Performing Arts Department as a whole. In actuality they are just a small group of students working together to bring traditional music, drama and dance programs to the school. (As opposed to the Student Union which provides contemporary entertainment such as Dan Peek and the Bangles).

Sophomore Patrice Landers, secretary for the Series keeps the members informed about meetings and show dates and helps "greatly in the process of presenting a show," says Anna.

Publicity also plays a major role in any show. Sophomore Anne Smith, Publicity Manager, is in charge of distributing flyers, hanging posters and letting the public know when and where a show is, as well as how much it costs.

Sophomore Jeff Dingeldein, Vice Chair for the Series heads the Community Advisory Committee. He talks with the season ticket holders in the community and gets their input on the programming for the season. Occasionally dinners are held for the season ticket holders (at an extra cost) before the performances. Says Anna, "The dinner is a social way for the community to become involved in Longwood."

The day of a performance, or possibly the evening before, Series members assist technical crews in any way possible. They help prepare scenery, fix lighting and work with any special effects needed for a show.

While this is going on, senior Donzella Walker, treasurer for the Series, is working at the box office. A few of her many tasks include having the tickets printed and ready to sell, having enough change at the box office and, at the end of a show, paying the performers.

After a show, the audience is invited to a reception in Jarman's lobby. Freshman Kim Clanton is responsible for catering the party. As Reception Chair, she helps give the public a chance to interact with the performers. According to Anna, people seem to think the performers aren't regular people.

"When I met Dizzie Gillespie I thought he was untouchable. After his performance I joked around with him and suggested we party and he was ready to boogie down."

At the end of an evening, when the crowd is gone and the show has long since been over, the Series members disassemble the sets and scenery and help the technicians pack their gear. As the members of the Series say their goodbyes to the performers, they congratulate each other on a job well done and then begin to get psyched for the next show. Ladies and Gentlemen, that's entertainment.

Blackwell's 'Mystery' Revealed

By MICHAEL GEOLY

How many times have you been in the dining hall, late in the shift, and had a clean table? A good bet is that it can't be over three or four times. Now, don't blame it on the dining hall workers, blame it on "Mystery Student." We all know who he is, he's the one who runs off to class in the morning with your other sock, and drank the last Coke you were saving for after Tennis class. Try not to get down on Mystery, for he has all the best intentions, he's not very intelligent, actually, the only reason he got into Longwood was because he came from a very well known, large, poor family. He has hundreds, maybe thousands of relatives, and each school in the country gives one of his siblings a scholarship, to perhaps better educate them.

Mystery only fits his classes around the peak hours of the dining hall. He feels that since he is such a nonentity, that there is the only place he can make himself known. Although he is not "book smart," he has quite a creative mind. Mystery finds food intriguing, not only as a source of nourishment, but as an art form.

Some of Mystery's favorite dining hall subjects are: ice cream cones, plates, glasses, mashed potatoes, peas, plants, and napkins. He displays all of his works on two canvas mediums. One, known as the simple blue or white tablecloth, and the other known as the tray cart. Maybe you've seen some of his masterpieces. One I'm sure you've all seen is the one he is most famous for, "Stack of Porcelain." Mystery works hours to achieve this gravity defying, abstract, pile of plates with an assortment of vegetables and meats oozing from the sides. He likes to center his works so students may still eat, but unfortunately, we contribute, and spoil the symmetry of his creation, which makes that often difficult. When he is feeling rather mischevious, Mystery turns to the tray carts. He allows us to contribute, and begin his work of art, then takes the liberty to complete it. He first holds captive all the dining hall workers, then balances glasses, silverware, plates and bowls on to the fringes of the trays. He then proceeds to have just pulled out the key spoon holding the piece together. In a split second they were showered with the concoction of milk, macoroni and cheese, and yogurt he carefully balanced on top of it all.

Let's give the guy a helping hand, and not let him go unnoticed. Maybe we can get him to go to a few more classes, and not let him get so carried away with his hobby. We can all help him in this stage of insecurity in his life, by giving him some Longwood Love. He may be a littly nerdy, but isn't there a littly Mystery in all of us?

Spring Break Blues

By KATIE PARSONS

The week before Spring Break is always a hectic one. It seems as if all the teachers who haven't given a test before decide to make the first one the mid-term. I don't understand how they can do this with a clear conscience, but they seem to take great pleasure in watching the students sweat it out. There is a good point to all of this though. If you end up with a bad grade at mid-term you can always say that it was your first test and that you'll do better on the next one. However bad it seems there is always that glimmer of hope that you'll live through the week and be able to relax at home.

Home. That place that you go to when you need space, right? Wrong. When you come home for break your parents assume that you've been on a joy ride for the past two months. They immediately start giving you things to do so that "you won't get bored". My break usually starts out with me washing the dogs. It seems that I'm the only one who can get them to behave. Right. How many people do you know that can't hold a beagle down for a good soaking? Next your Mom wakes you up at odd hours that aren't supposed to exist during break (you know, 11 a.m.) for a "decent" breakfast. This occurs only once at my house. Training parents is kind of like training a puppy, you yell a couple of times and they get the drift.

If your Spring Breaks consist of activities like those I've described above I hope that you have learned to cope. To cope the college student likes to escape to places that are more peaceful. Places like Florida. Florida is the place to be if you don't want parental types during your break. During the Spring Break period parents avoid Florida like the plague. People who live in Florida leave.

Another way to escape your "home" during break is to never be home. Parents expect this from their children. If you're home all the time they wonder if you have any friends. Spend a few nights at a friend's house that is at least 45 minutes from your own. This ensures that they won't call to check up on you because the call would be long distance. If your parents do call and ask what your plans are tell them that you're going out. Out is a vague term but it seems to satisfy most parents.

For some students it is a relief to come back to school after break. Nobody expects you to do much at school and your roommate knows better than to wake you up in the morning. The food isn't great, but at least they serve it to you whenever you want to eat. All in all it is good to be "home" even if you do have to go to classes in the morning.

President Defends Cabinet

By MATT PETERMAN

President Reagan defended cabinet members, George P. Shultz, secretary of State, and Casper W. Weinberger, Secretary of Defense after they were singled out in the Tower Commission report for being too passive in the Iran Affir.

In Reagans weekly radio address, he said that they "were right and I was wrong" in their advice to stay away from trading arms for hostages. The cabinet members were depicted as trying to distance themselves from the President about the entire Iran-Contra Affair.

This public apology was against the wishes of his top aides who thought it contradicted the tower report.

In the Democratic response, House Majority Whip, Tony Coehlo, (D-Calif) said, "I'm glad the see-no-evil, hear-no-evil twins have been embraced by their speak-no-evil president. I wish Reagan would spend as much time solving the budget crises as he does throwing kisses to his cabinet secretaries."

According to Coast Guard officials, 37 Soviet sailers were rescued off the coast of New Jersey in the Atlantic Ocean. The Soviet Freighter was carrying flour to Cuba, when it was caught in a major storm which tossed it in 25 foot waves and gale force winds, finally pushing it on its side. The Soviets as of Sunday had not attempted to rescue the vessel because of the weather and the vessel subsequently sank on Monday.

Iran has captured more Iraqi territory in the North of that country. Iranian assault forces overrun Iraqi defenders in the snowy mountainous territory. This military victory could threaten Iraqi's northern transportation routes and vital oil fields. The immediate strategic value is not much but is important territory for controlling the valleys below.

Spring Fun

By MELISSA GIBBS

Remember what those first hints of spring meant to you as a kid? Warm weather and longer days allowed you more hours of playing outside, and you didn't have to wear a coat. Why not try a return to your younger days to vent your school-induced frustrations?

Bring back the rites of childhood. Grab a few friends and play hide 'n' seek or tag. The passageway beside the sunken garden beneath the collonades walkway makes an excellent hide-out.

For the more adventurous sort, go exploring, preferably at dusk. Check out the old schoolhouse or one of those big old abandoned houses in town, but don't get caught! And don't let the Boogie Man get you!

Fly a kite in the March wind, or ride your bike along the back roads. Get down on your hands and knees in search of a four leaf clover. Roll down a hill, never mind the grass stain.

Pick wildflowers. Make mud pies. Childhood creativity has no limits, and nothing provides the same kind of release as a little silliness now and then.

New Video Encyclopedia

By MARNA BUNGER

There is a new excitement in the air at Lancaster Library over a new reference form. The Video Encyclopedia of the 20th Century has come to Longwood College.

The lazerdisc encyclopedia brings to the library and classroom the original sights and sounds recorded on film during the past 93 years. There is no added background music or commentary. Each film clip contains the original sights and sounds as recorded by the camera.

The basic set of the Video Encyclopedia is contained on 38 lazerdiscs and includes 2,217 units of primary source material or 75 hours. Lancaster is updated through 1985. Annual Updates of the preceding year will be available each fall.

In addition to 75 hours of video material, the Video Encyclopedia has a comprehensive Alphabetical and Daily Index, as well as a supporting four-volume Reference Set, that provides background information for each of the 2,217 units.

The list of topics covered on film are unlimited. There is everything from the arts to history, but there are accidental omissions. The Video Encyclopedia is compiling these omissions into additional units called "Enrichment Supplements."

The Video Encyclopedia has taken over 23 years to create, and is distributed by CEL Educational Resources, a division of CEL communications. It is housed behind the Reserve Desk, and is available for use and exploration during the hours of library operation. Rebecca Laine or the Reference Librarian on duty will be more than happy to demonstrate to students and faculty the uses of the Video Encyclopedia.

Students Clamor To Help 'Govern' Campuses

The issue seemed to fade in the late seventies, however, and stayed in the background until this school year.

At Harvard, one student observer attributed the revival to the campus anti-apartheid movement, which led some students to question how investment and other campuswide decisions were made.

"Students are analyzing their roles much more and want to be part of the decisionmaking on their campuses," Wilsey says. "They think the colleges are there to serve them, so they should have a major role."

Currently, 32 states and the District of Columbia let students sit on least one education governing board, up from about 26 states in 1981. A few have voting privileges.

But the issue remains unsettled at some schools.

Ohio students are engaged in a 14-year battle in the state legislature to win voting rights for student trustees.

Student leaders at South Dakota's state schools have formed a federation to lobby the legislature for student regent

The student "governance" movement seems to be reviving.

At Harvard, all Ohio public colleges, Alabama State and other campuses, students in recent months have renewed efforts — some lapsed for more than a decade — to gain seats on the governing boards of their schools.

The reason seems to be money. As college costs escalate, students feel they should have a say in how their educations are offered to them.

"Individual campus groups and state student associations are working to get student trustees on governing boards, especially if they're elected by students and not appointed by governors," explains Shelly Wilsey of the United States Student Association (USSA), a national lobbying group for student government associations.

During the sixties, many students won seats on their college boards of regents or trustees. While few had voting rights, most could present student opinions on isues often influencing the decisions of board members.

The heat is on.

This summer may be your last chance to graduate from college with a degree and an officer's commission. Sign up for ROTC's six-week Basic Camp now. See your Professor of Military Science for details. But hurry. The time is short. The space is limited. The heat is on. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Stop by the Department of Military Science on the 3d floor of East Ruffner Hall or call Captain Don Campbell at 392-9348 for more information.

Delta Sigs Strive

By PAMELA J. WERNER

"Delta Sigma Pi is unique because of the brotherhood. We strive for a strong closeness. By being all business majors it helps a lot because we strive for one common goal," says sophomore, Tim Tabler, president of the Kappa Nu Chapter at Longwood. Longwood.

This strong bond between the brothers helped them to receive the honor of being proclaimed the best chapter in the United States, ranking number one out of two hundred eleven chapters. The business fraternity's central office, located in Oxford, Ohio, keeps a running total of Chapter Efficiency Index (C.E.I.) Points. These points can be accumulated through professional activities, community service and pledge membership.

Currently the Delta Sigs have forty members, twelve faculty members and twelve pledges. Becoming involved in the community has played an important role in the lives of the brothers. Some of their accomplishments have included working as huggers at the Special Olympics, throwing a Halloween party for underpriviledged kids, making Easter baskets and taking them to children in the hospital and collecting food and toys for the needy at Christmas.

Community service is not the Chapter's only forte. Professional activities also fill their schedules. Tours at such companies as Reynolds, Westinghouse, Rich Foods and Phillip Morris," provide opportunities to learn about business as a whole," says Tom Maroney, a sophomore member of Delts Sigma Pi.

Speakers from all over the state of Virginia, including some of Longwood's faculty, have discussed topics ranging from entry level sales to top management positions.

Last year Delta Sigma Pi won the title of Most Improved Chapter in the nation. This year they are striving for Most Outstanding Chapter. With the apparent determination and effort of the brothers, the common goal of success can be achieved.

voting rights.

And in January, after a two-month student government boycott of all administration-sponsored events, Alabama State President Leon Howard finally agreed to back the students' efforts to get a student seat on the board of trustees.

"We're quite pleased with his decision," says Alabama State student treasurer Hassan Walker. "Now we're waiting for the opportunity to sit down with the president and iron out some of the wrinkles in the plan. But appointment of a student trustee will have to come from the governor."

While the idea of student representation seems prudent and necessary to most students and campus leaders, governing board members and state legislators have mixed emotions.

USSA's Wilsey claims most boards "don't want to have to give up any decision making power."

And some administrators say a student on a governing board, with or without voting rights, presents a conflict of interest, says Linda Henderson of the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges. "They have to learn to view things in the best interest of the school as a whole and not just in the interest of the students.

"And to be effective, a student representative needs experience. Most get on the boards going into their senior year, and that's not enough time to learn how the board works."

Some boards and legislatures, however, encourage student participation, especially in student affairs issues.

"Even non-voting students can have a voice in decision making and often can influence the vote on an issue," Henderson adds.

But winning representation often takes time and means winning over stubborn legislators.

In Ohio, Democratic Representative Mike Stinziano has spent 14 years pushing for student representation on the Ohio Board of Trustees. In 1985, his bill passed the House but died in a Senate committee.

"Right now, legislators are concerned about what's going on with the Ohio economy," says Rebecca Mitchells, executive director of the Kent State Student Senate. "Higher education was totally forgotten in the past few years, and it's only now that it's getting some attention."

"Student representation has been a priority here for a long time, but it's beginning to get discouraging," she notes.

South Dakota students also hope new faces in the new legislature will boost their chances of winning voting privileges for a student regent.

"Last time they voted, it was 50-50, a tie vote, but no majority so it failed," says Paul Knecht, president of South Dakota State University's student association at Brookings.

"There also was high turnover on the regents this election, and the new group could be more open to student imput. But even with no voting privileges, a student on the board often can turn the tide in close regent votes."

And the students who sit on governing boards take that responsibility — and their other duties — seriously, often more so than non-student members.

"There are very few occasions when we can refute a student board member, whether voting or non-voting," admits the AGB's Henderson.

"They take this very seriously and do their homework on the issues," she adds. "Every student trustee I've ever talked to has been very responsible. They do their homework better than the regular members."

Lockhart Named Miss Longwood 1987

By MELISSA GIBBS

And the winner is . . . Carla Lee Lockhart. Following the 1987 Miss Longwood Pageant's theme, "Catch a Wave", Miss Lockhart - rode the wave to success Saturday by being named Miss Longwood 1987.

As the winner of the Miss Longwood Pageant, a Miss America preliminary, Miss Lockhart will present Longwood in the Miss Virginia Pageant. In addition she will receive $1,000 in scholarships and $500 in cash provided by the Golden Corral Family Steak House of Farmville.

Miss Lockhart didn't come by the title of Miss Longwood easily, however, as the nine other finalists made stiff competition, especially in the area of talent. Susan Kimberly Ragan, First Runner Up did a Scottish Dance to an Irish Jig that would outshine any kilt clad man, while Second Runner Up Anita Jo Washington captivated the audience with her rendition of "Being Alive." Third runner Up Sandra Gail Clayton's rendition of the title song from "The Sound of Music" won the accolades of the judges, who named her the winner of the talent competition.

In addition to the contestants' talents, outside talent brought entertainment to the pageant in the form of the Karen Sherrill Dance Arts Troupe, The Held Over Sisters, Holly Jereme Wright, Miss Virginia 1980, and the current Miss Virginia Julianne Smith. After the audience greeted her with a standing ovation Miss Smith called the Miss Longwood Pageant "the best local pageant I've been in."

Carla Lee Lockhart, a Sophomore from Chesapeake

Anita Jo Washington, a Sophomore from Richmond

Kelly Jean Shannon, a Junior from Virginia Beach

Elizabeth E. Cho, a Sophomore from Virginia Beach

Deborah Elizabeth Wood, a Sophomore from Chesterfield

Bonita Michel Turner, a Junior from Caroline County

Sonja Lynn Venters, a Junior from Portsmouth.

The ten finalists in the Miss Longwood Pageant appeared in front of a packed Jarman Auditorium to compete in the areas of swimsuit, talent, and evening gown.

Writer To Visit Longwood

Eric Kraft, author of the critically acclaimed serial novel The Personal History, Adventures, Experiences & Observations of Peter Leroy, will visit Longwood College April 7-8 to give a reading and to discuss the novel with students, who are reading it this semester in freshman English classes.

The novel, of which eight installments have been published since 1983, is a whimsical account of a boy growing up in the fictional seaside town of Babbington during the 1950s. It is the featured long novel currently being studied in all sections of English 101.

Kraft will answer questions at an open session in Bedford Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 7. The next night, again at 7:30 in Bedford, he will give a reading. He also will be visiting classes.

Both evening programs are open to the public.

Kraft, a former English teacher who lives in Boston, was awarded a writing fellowship by the National Endowment for the Arts in 1986. His fiction has been compared to that of Mark Twain, Marcel Proust and Garrison Keillor, author of the best-seller Lake Woebegon Days.

"Peter Leroy's world shines through just like childhood itself: both tiny and enormous, full of mystery and wonder, but with terror lurking all around the edges," according to the New York Times Book Review.

"These books," said the Christian Science Monitor, "are about the past; how we transform it, how we alter it to fit our wishes, dreams and current situation."

The Washington Post said the novel "blends gentle nostalgia with a series of experiments in fiction writing," and the Boston Globe praised its "simple prose and good-spirited whimsy."

The books are based on Kraft's childhood in Babylon, New York, a town on Long Island. "He first encountered Peter Leroy in a dream, while he was dozing over a German lesson during his sophomore year at Harvard," according to a biographical sketch.

While teaching secondary-school English, Kraft "began spending early-morning and late-evening hours building a world around Peter Leroy — jotting notes, inventing conversations, mapping the imaginary town of Babbington. For several years, he worked as a writer and editor of textbooks, but much of his spare time was still spent wandering the streets of Babbington."

Peter Leroy first appeared in print in a newsletter published in irregular installments for six years. The books were published originally by Apple-wood Books, a small publisher in Cambridge, Mass., and they gained Kraft a cult-like following in the Boston area. They are being distributed nationally now by Warner Books.

The books are available in the Longwood bookstore.

Kraft has written parts of what will be two future installments and has signed a contract to write a "biography" of Peter Leroy's maternal grandparents, to be called Herb n' Lorna, said Dr. Michael Lund, associate professor of English at Longwood. Dr. Lund is coordinating Kraft's visit.

Peter Leroy is the fourth long novel that Longwood freshmen have studied in English 101 since the college received a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The $28,000 grant helped Longwood to build upon a pilot program in which freshmen were required to read and become familiar with a long novel.

David Copperfield and Bleak House, both by Charles Dickens, and Nostromo, by Joseph Conrad, were studied previously.

editorial

Last Thursday, Sue Saunders and Joe McGill spoke at the S.G.A. meeting on the issue of alcohol. The argument was presented that there will be no kegs in the residence hall living areas (i.e. rooms and suites). Kegs, though, would be allowed in rooms such as lounges, common rooms and chapter rooms. Only 25 percent of the student body will be able to drink next year. This action would comply to the state regulations. Also, Longwood is the only institution of its kind that still allows kegs in the residence hall living areas.

This sanction would help reduce the amount of excessive drinking by those legally old enough and also reduce the amount of illegal drinking by those not old enough. What will be the results of this proposal. Longwood is already known as a suitcase college, will this make more students leave on the weekends? Will the mixers come back? Will there be less problems in trying to register parties? Will sororities and fraternities not lose their social privileges as much?

This is a valid proposal, but is the administration going to give the student body something in return?

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the results of the Miss Longwood Pageant. All along everyone has been stressing the fact that it was not a "beauty" pageant, but rather a "scholarship" pageant. This fact was definitely proven on that Saturday night.

I am not downing the results or the pageant entirely. I thoroughly enjoyed myself and have in the past. The only difference between this year's and the past is that everyone who has won in the past, deserved to win. Now, don't get me wrong. I sincerely believe that the winner deserved the title of Miss Longwood, 1987. She carried herself very well, unlike others and was very natural, unlike others. I am pleased by the fact that she will be representing us wherever she may venture. Carla was the only winner of the right that should have won. The other three, in my opinion, should have stayed on the back line.

Like already stated, the judges helped kill the hypothesis that the Miss Longwood Pageant was a beauty pageant. It is now a talent show. Why not change the name to the Miss Longwood Variety Show? I believe that would be quite appropriate. Granted, one of the runners-up really did sound like Julie Andrews, but let's not kid ourselves; she could not even walk in high-heeled shoes! I've seen some guys walk more gracefully when they've worn girlfriend's shoes. Another runner-up's dance was unusual, but the way she walked! It was like someone had stuck two big logs under each of her arms.

Are these the type of girls you see in the bigger pageants? Hell no! It is sad, I know. The Miss Virginia, Miss America, Miss U.S.A., etc. Pageants are full of women who know how to properly carry themselves as well as have the looks and talent to make it.

I have not intended to hurt people's feelings — just to give some constructive criticism. I have meant only to state the facts. Maybe next year's pageant will be a pageant instead of a talent show.

Congratulations Carla, and much success in the Miss Virginia Pageant. I'll be behind you all the way!

— A very concerned upperclassman

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on a subject touched upon in a letter to the editor published in the last Rotunda.

Although there is room for improvement in the advising system here at Longwood, the fault cannot be placed wholly on the advisors.

As a student, if you have a problem with classes or scheduling, it is your job to work this predicament out: your advisor cannot be expected to pick up on all problems and have them ironed out for you before you have to deal with them.

There are lots of goofy little things that an advisee should be aware of in course offerings, such as classes that are only offered every other year, etc. If you wait until spring semester of your senior year to worry about catches like this, it's your own fault not your advisor's. By the time you are a sophomore (if not a freshman) in college, you should be big enough and ugly enough to take care of things like this yourself — get them taken care of before it's too late.

"How are we supposed to find out about all these schedule glitches?" you ask. Listen to people around you griping about their experiences and take heed. Ask your advisor; don't wait to be told. Read the course-offering catalog. Talk with the head of the department you're majoring in, or head of the department you're having problems in. You'll be surprised at how much you find out just by taking the initiative to ask around about little things.

I am a sophomore at the moment, and have had my share of advisor troubles: I am not unaware of what some people are going through: You have to help yourself, though. You cannot leave everything up to an advisor.

As an English major, I know that the English department has this neat little ditto you can use to keep track of what you have taken and still need to take to meet all your graduation requirements in that field. If the department of your major has these, go get one. If they don't, talk to someone about typing one up. I have my schedule all worked out when I go to see my advisor — all she has to do is look it over and sign on the dotted line. Actually, I have a good idea of what I'll be doing every semester until I graduate, thanks to that "self-advising" ditto.

I see advisors as serving to fill a long-term purpose, rather than as people we can ask which P. E. course has the cutest guys in it, or whose American History course has the easiest tests and the biggest curves on the grades.

As far as being stuck with a bum schedule as an incoming freshman goes, there is no reason why those schedules cannot be changed if the student is not comfortable with it. When I enrolled for my first semester freshman yar I was asked to fill out a form asking what classes I had obtained a background for in high school, what level I had gotten up to in different subjects, what specific general education courses I might like to take, and so forth and so on. I was assigned to classes that either picked up where my high school education had left off, or led me in the direction I wanted to go in. I am sure not everybody is an fortunate as that, but there is no reason why you could not have tried to make your schedule suit your tastes (even though education is not a matter of "tastes"; we won't get into that now . . .).

Once again, most advising problems begin with lazy advisees. Get up and go find out what you need to know on your own volition — don't sit around crying about your advisor.

Cathy Gaughran

Dear Editor:

College students are directly affected by many issues arising both in Virginia and nationally; unfortunately, both sides of an issue are not always presented. One issue that affects students directly is financial aid. Under the current Administration, the federal government has cut student grants from $78.4 million in 1981 to an estimated amount of $30.4 million in 1986; put bluntly, federal financial aid grants have been cut by more than 50 percent in the past 5 years.

College students should be extremely concerned with findings such as the one listed above. Many students may realize student aid has been cut, but may not realize the extent to which it has been. Joining an organization such as the Young Democrats provides one the opportunity to study issues directly relating to college-age students; most importantly, the organization gives young people the opportunity to change situations such as those described above.

Students of Longwood College are in the process of forming a Young Democrats club. The club will present an "alternative" opinion to current events, and will provide a forum through which differing opinions may be aired.

Sign ups for this club will be held Friday, March 20, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., in front of the cafeteria. Please stop by the table that day to find out more information on the Virginia Young Democrats and on the ways Longwood students can have an impact on policies.

Thank you for your time.

Very sincerely,
Mary Alice Heretick

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I would like to express my concern towards a very serious matter that has recently come to my attention. At 5:30 p.m. on the evening of January 24, 1987, I and four of my friends were in Blackwell Dining Hall eating dinner. If you don't remember, that day, we were in the midst of one of the very heavy snowstorms on this campus. The snow was at least a foot if not more, and very hard to get through.

Anyway, one of my friends, Tim Tabler, was cutting some bread at the bread bar, and sliced his thumb wide open with the knife. It was bleeding continuously, and we couldn't get it to stop by pressure. So, thanks to the help and concern of Sherri Nunn, we used the phone to call campus police. Well, much to our amazement there was no answer. They could've been out on a call, right? So we tried to call the Infirmary. No one was there either. Meanwhile we were losing time, and Tim was losing blood.

It was apparent that he needed to have stitches and, we had to get him to the hospital. One of us ran over to campus police, and there was no one in sight. So we had to dig Tim's car out of a foot of snow, (because none of us others had a car) and drive on the very slippery, icy and dangerous roads up to Southside Hospital. Fortunately, Tim was okay. He had a couple stitches and part of his nail had to be removed, but it wasn't a fatal accident. Yet had it been more serious or life threatening, what could we have done? I was infuriated that there was no help anywhere and Campus Police could not be located.

I found out later that if no one answered at Campus Police, that the call was supposed to be transferred to the Farmville Police Station. Not so in our case. I would just like to know (if any one can tell me) what are we supposed to do if an emergency arises? Aren't we paying this school so that they can provide such services as these if we need them? Somebody enlighten me . . . PLEASE!

Gail Starling

Letter to the Editor:

In response to the "Farmville is so laughable" letter:

Farmville's name should not be changed. Farmville was here long before Longwood came to be what it is. Longwood should concentrate on its reputation and school pride rather than changing the name of this city.

First of all farming is not laughable. Farmers work longer, harder hours than most big city people and receive very little thanks or money. It's those big city people who tend to forget that the food they eat every day was grown by farmers like the ones in Farmville. Farming entails much more than "milking cows and butchering chickens." Vegetables don't just come from the grocery stores in those little cans and frozen dinners, a farmer has to grow them first. The bacon and sausage you eat for brakfast doesn't just come from the butcher shop, a farmer had to raise those hogs. I come from a farming ity and you have to have lived in one to appreciate its way of life and experiences, but not to appreciate its contribution to society. I am very proud of my hometown of Suffolk, Virginia and wouldn't change my background even if I could. The people of Farmville have the same kind of pride in their city and if all the students at Longwood had pride in their school maybe our reputation would be better.

Certainly there are some advantages in going to a big city school but there are also some advantages we have here at Longwood that bigger urban schools don't have. We have a beautiful campus which gives us plenty of room for outdoor activities. We can walk across our campus without fear of getting mugged. We have classes that are small enough for us to get to know more than just the person sitting in front of us. We can go to the professors for help and they will know our names. And there are many other advantages we have at Longwood. If an employee refuses to hire a Longwood graduate because he went to a college located in Farmville, that employer is fairly narrow minded. I wouldn't work for someone who put ;my college down anyway. Anyone who is embarrassed to hold a degree from a college located in Farmville should not even attend this school. In order to raise our reputation, and we students are the college reputation, we need to have students who are proud to be at this school. Farmville is not joke, and it's a shame that some students can't look beyond the name of this city and see that Longwood offers quality education.

To the Editor

As an active member in two of the more accessible on-campus organizations, I often find myself faced with a question that confronts all campus organizations—how involved should that group's faculty advisor be in its operations?

The advisor's first priority is to advise, as the title suggests. This entails helping the executives of the student organization in the event there is any trouble. And if there is anything that requires outside help; say, from another organization or faculty member, then the advisor could, but not necessarily, be the one who takes care of that. Basically, what I'm saying is that the advisor intervenes when he or she is needed. Or, as one of my advisors says, he should serve as a backup in case anything goes wrong.

But what if everything is running smoothly? Should the advisor by able to interject at any given time? I think not, unless it is absolutely necessary. These are student groups, run by students for the benefit of the college community. The problem I have is that the advisor for the organization I am most involved with appears to want to take over the whole operation. Sure, assistance in paperwork is nice, but he wants all bills, mail, and papers to be channeled through him, before it gets to the elected executives of the group. This can prove to be very awkward to normal operations, especially when there is a conflict of interests between advisor and board, as exists here. In fact, the advisor is asking for more credit than is due him, which he feels he deserves for work done toward the group. A clear case of overstepping one's bounds.

The organizational advisor acts to assist the organization when it's needed, and serves as a liason to the administration. That is it. I think it's time the boundaries between advising and dictating be made clearer for everybody.

Is "Farmville" really laughable? I was very upset when I read the negative comments about the town name.

If a prospective employer allows a town name to greatly influence his decision in choosing an employee, then I would think one would be a bit wary of the company.

Another point mentioned was the fact that Farmville is not "upbeat." Granted there are no subways or skyscrapers but there are shopping malls and movie theatres.

Most students chose to go here. If a little thing like a town name seems to bother someone, then either their priorities are not straight or they are at the wrong school.

—P.J. Werner

To the Editor

This is in response to Kris Meyer's letter concerning Farmville. I strongly disagree with her views, for one thing not only is Farmville being cut down, but small towns in general. There are many colleges in towns just like Farmville, take Randolph-Macon, Sweetbriar, Radford and Va. Tech just to name a few, as well as our neighbor Hampden-Sydney. All of these colleges began in small, southern, rural communities and all have produced graduates that have gone on to become successfull businessmen and women in larger cities such as New York. For instance, my uncle was raised in a small, rural community and went to a small college. Now he is the chairman of the board of American Electric Power Co. I know that Longwood doesn't have a reputation that parallels that of Randolph-Macon or some others, but that has nothing to do with where we are located. As far as hurting job chances; most employees who have any knowledge concerning business practice at all could care less if an applicant graduated from a college in Alaska. Whether a person gets a job or not depends on his credentials, grades and experience not on the size or name of the town he went to college in. Actually, Farmville as a name gives credit to a group of people who have been stepped on far too much— the farmers. Yes, the very same people who started our country. I am very proud of it.

As of yet, I have met no one who is ashamed to send mail to Farmville. If someone is it is due to their stupidity and close-mindedness, not our name.

In closing, all I have left to say is that if Farmville is such a "joke" to you; why are you here in the first place?

SMS Fashion Show

By KIMBERLY JONES

Gold room setting, a candlelit flower arrangement, and a host of flower decor set the stage for the annual SMS Bridal Fashion Show. The home economics club once again created a beautiful allusion of a spring wedding. Tiffany's of Petersburg with their spokes woman, Ms. Angel, made the fashion show a reality with new wedding attire.

Lace, satin, sequins, bows, and ruffles were in popular demand for this year's show. Shorter veils and longer trains were also on the popularity list. Elegant to exquisite can describe the new line of wedding gowns. The styles of the gowns ranged from a depicted "Gone With the Wind" scene to a contemporary "On The Town" look. Bridesmaid's dresses ranged from hot pink, long gowns to emerald green tea-length dresses. Along with models from the home ec club, nutritionist, Sheri Nunn was on hand to show how the wedding gowns and the bridesmaids dresses should be worn.

Niki Fallis and Mary Woodburn were excellent models as they showed off the mothers dresses in the fashion show. Male models used as escorts completed the full picture of a wedding. During intermission the owners of Carters Flower Shop, Anne Nase and Helen Stimpson, spoke on appropriate flowers for weddings and wedding gowns.

The SMS organization should be commended on a job well done. We look forward to seeing next year's bridal show.

Dos Passos Prize Presented Tonight

Longwood College will award the 1986 John Dos Passos Prize for Literature to novelist John Edward Wideman, the first black author to receive the prestigious award.

He will accept the prize in ceremonies at Longwood on Tuesday, March 31, at 8 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium. The occasion also will be the seventh anniversary of the Dos Passos Prize, which includes a medal and a cash award of $1,000.

JOHN EDWARD WIDEMAN

Wideman is perhaps best known for his collection of fiction titled The Homewood Trilogy, which depicts the largely black section of Pittsburgh where he grew up. The final volume of the trilogy, Sent For You Yesterday, won the PEN-Faulkner Award for Fiction in 1984.

His autobiographical work, Brothers and Keepers, was nominated for the National Book Critics Circle Award and was listed in the New York Times' 15 Best Books of 1984.

A native of Philadelphia, Wideman was a basketball star at the University of Pennsylvania. He was inducted into the Big Five Basketball Hall of Fame, but turned down a chance at a professional career in favor of a Rhodes scholarship.

He studied literature at Oxford University and, in 1967, went to the Iowa Writers' Workshop. His first novel was published that year.

Wideman also is the author of short fiction, critical articles, essays, reviews, and a television script. He taught for 12 years at the University of Wyoming and is now professor of English at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst.

The John Dos Passos Prize for Literature commemorates one of the greatest of 20th century American authors by honoring other writers in his name. The prize has been given to writers as diverse as Tom Wolfe, Robert Stone, and Doris Betts.

The winner is chosen by an independent jury appointed by the college each year. The 1986 jury included Martha E. Cook, associate professor of English at Longwood and chair of the prize committee, and novelists George Garrett and Russell Banks, the prize winner for 1985.

In introducing Wideman's work to the readers of Esquire last summer, Banks wrote that the novelist writes "the kind of fiction that might get us out of this century and into the next without losing our souls along the way . . . (He is) at the leading edge of what I think of as the New World Writers, most of them men and women in their forties now and just beginning to give loud and clear voice to a powerful belief in fiction's essential role in the creation of a moral history of the hemisphere."

Dr. Cook To Teach In New Zealand

By MATT PETERMAN

When Dr. Martha Cook, an Associate Professor of English, received the news that she had been awarded a Fulbright grant last semester, she was quick to tell all. "I was very excited" she said, of being chosen over many other applicants to teach American Literature in New Zealand and come June she will begin her odyssey in the southern hemisphere.

About 1300 teachers and students are awarded Fulbright grants each year, and Dr. Cook will join the ranks of only two other Longwood scholars who have received the grants. Another Longwood scholar is under consideration as well as a Foreign Language student for the grant.

The Fulbright program began in 1948 with legislation established by Senator William Fulbright in order to establish mutual understanding between the U.S. and other countries. The program was originally funded by the sale of excess war equipment in the U.S. arsenal after World War II. Today, the U.S. has Fulbright agreements with over 120 countries allowing many foriegn scholars to enter the U.S. to teach—each country with its own cost-sharing agreement with the U.S.

The Fulbright Program is administered by the United States Information Agency (USIA) and by the Presidentially appointed Guidelines Board of Foreign Scholarships. The other details including the processing of the applications are worked out by the Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CINES).

In June, Dr. Cook will board a plane and say good-bye to Virginia for about six months. Upon leaving the United States from Los Angeles she will head to Papeete, Tahiti for a short visit allowing herself to adjust to the over 12 hour time difference she will incur.

She will then fly to Aukland, New Zealand and after a short southeast drive, she will find herself in Hamilton, the city where the University of Waikato is located and the new home away from home for Dr. Cook.

"I will be teaching Southern United States Literature on Northern Island," she jests. The students will be returning from their summer breaks when she begins teaching the winter and spring sessions at Waikato. The difference of the seasons can simply be explained: as the northern hemisphere comes closer to summer, the southern hemisphere approaches winter causing Dr. Cook to endure yet another winter.

Dr. Cook speaking to The Department of English and Modern Languages said that students in New Zealand do not like much assistance or what is comparable to the help many professors give their students. In general she said, "students seem interested in learning American Literature" and ". . .are very receptive," according to her research on New Zealand. "I was just fortunate enough to get a country where they speak English" she says, referring to other countries she had applied.

Some sights around Hamilton she will encounter are the Rotorua, which consists of magnificent bubbling mud and many hot springs. The Agrodome, where big agricultural shows take place and Waitomo, a place where the glow worms live. Dr. Cook also plans"...to take a helicopter ride for some fightseeing..." as it is called in New Zealand, to see the vast countryside and mountains.

Dr. Cook will also travel to Australia on her break between sessions at Waikato to practice the art of tourism.

She will return back to the U.S. in the first quarter of next year and return to Longwood in the fall of 1988, at which time she will present her experiences in New Zealand to the interested students and faculty of Longwood.

Intro To Africa

Afro-French Lit. And Life Pro To Speak Tonight

Dr. Beatrice Stith Clark, an authority on Afro-French literature and culture, will speak at Longwood about French West Africa on Tuesday, March 31.

Dr. Clark will show two slide presentations — "The Senegalese Family" and "An African Short Story: Bouki's Bull" — at 5:30 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium. The program is open to all students and the community.

The slide presentations are based on photographic research she did in Togo, Senegal and the Ivory Coast. They have been produced in a filmstrip version by the International Film Bureau for foreign language classes.

Dr. Clark is currently a program officer in the Division of Fellowships and Seminars for the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH). She is on leave from Hampton University, where she is a French professor.

She developed and directed five foreign language projects funded by the NEH, at Hampton, from 1978 to 1985 In those projects, she developed print and visual curriculum materials in French and Spanish, based on the cultures of French- and Spanish-speaking peoples of the African diaspora and continental Africa.

Her lecture is in conjunction with the Introduction to Africa class, which is a part of Longwood's International Studies Program.

Students — Win $100!

Longwood will celebrate its 150th Sesquicentennial anniversary during the 1988-89 academic year. To plan the celebration, a committee was established and named the "Sesquicentennial Steering Committee." One of the sub-committees was charged with the responsibility of recommending a campus beautification project.

The project recommended by the sub-committee is the "Mall Project." The "Mall" is the courtyard area between the outside entrance to the new Smoker Area and Pine Street. Probably every student on campus walks through this area on his-her way to the dining hall. Presently, his area is bordered by the wall of the dining hall, the hedges along Pine Street, the service road next to Hiner and the back of Grainger.

The ultimate goal is to change this area, including the streets, into a space for student outdoor activities such as mini concerts, informal meetings, socials, conversation spaces and general student use. This will be a student area and a student project. To begin this project, a design is needed. A contest for the best design submitted by a student is now officiallly open. There are three major requirements for the designers to consider: 1) The area must be realtively maintenance-free; 2) The holly tree must remain (all other plantings, sidrwalks, and objects can be changed); and 3) the area must be attractive to student use.

The design winner will have his or her name and class inscribed on the dedication of plaque and will receive an award of $100.00. Entries are due by noon, Friday, April 17, at the office of Mr. Rick Hurley, Vice President for Business Affairs in South Ruffner. The judges will be: Dr. Greenwood, Homer Springer, Phyllis Mable, David Breil, Rickey Otey, and several other students who have not yet indicated they would be willing to serve as judges. The award for the design will be announced and presented in the Main Dining Hall, Blackwell Dining Hall, on Thursday, April 30, at 6:00 p.m. This is an opportunity for all Longwood students to use their imaginations and design whatever they believe Longwood's campus can be.

End The Arms Race Lobby This Week In D.C.

On April 2, college students from across the country will take action to help stop the nuclear arms race. The students will participate in the fourth annual University Lobby to End the Arms Race sponsored by United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War (UCAM). The lobby day is a chance for students and faculty nationwide to urge Congress to pass legislation calling for a Comprehensive Test Ban treaty (CTB).

The Mutual Nuclear Warhead Testing Moratorium bill (H. R. 12), now in the House of Representatives, was introduced by Reps. Patricia Schroeder (D-CO) and Richard Gephardt (D-MO). With a vote likely in early April, the April 2 Lobby Day can make a real difference.

UCAM, the only organization devoted to building a campus movement to end the arms race, holds the annual event to teach students effective citizen skills for a lifetime of use.

Wendy James, a Furman University student who attended last year said, "It's great to see how many people are concerned and willing to act. I felt empowered by the experience and plan to continue working to stop the arms race."

Lobby Day is more than an opportunity to lobby for an end to the arms race. The event includes briefings with national arms control lobbyists, a march to the Capitol followed by a rally on the Capitol East Side to ban nuclear tests, and appointments with participants' Congresspersons.

The students who travel to Washington for Lobby Day do make an impression on their Congresspersons. Representative Claudine Schneider (R-RI), a past Lobby Day speaker, says, "College students are one of the greatest untapped resources of the peace movement. It's their futures we're talking about—so it's heartening to see them show their concern by participating in a project such as this."

This year, for the first time, UCAM is offering a Leadership Development Program on the day following Lobby Day. The April 3 workshops will train students in such skills as organizing educational events, working with the media, fundraising, and getting nuclear war curricula on campus. Participants will also receive additional information on the skills taught in the form of a training packet.

The cost of participating in the events is $10. Housing will be arranged by the national office for a nominal fee. The registration fee includes a one year membership to UCAM and a subscription to the monthly Network News.

New York Dancer Stepping Out On Campus

Cindy Reynolds, principal dancer with the Erick Hawkins Dance Company in New York City, will conduct three days of classes and give a performance at Longwood College on Monday through Thursday, March 30 — April 2.

The special classes are open to Longwood students, area residents, and students from other colleges. Space is limited in the classes and for the performance, however, so those who would like to participate are asked to contact Dr. Nelson Neal, director of Longwood's dance program, telephone 392-9266.

The class sessions and the performance will be held in the Dance Studio in Lancer Hall.

The class schedule on Monday and Wednesday is: Beginning Modern Dance, 11 — 11:50 a.m. and 1:30 — 2:45 p.m.; and Advanced Modern Dance, 3:30 — 5 p.m. Tuesday's schedule is: Beginning Modern Dance, 9:25 — 10:40 a.m.; and Advanced Modern Dance, 3:30 — 5 p.m.

Ms. Reynolds' performance is scheduled for Thursday, April 2, at 7:30 p.m. Seating in the Dance Studio will be on a first come, first served basis. Isaiah Johnson, pianist from the University of Maryland, will accompany Ms. Reynolds and also will play several solos as part of the concert.

Erick Hawkins, one of the best known contemporary choreographers, has developed a quality of dance movement known as "free flow" that is based on natural human movement. The technique is quite different from that of ballet and other styles of modern dance.

Hawkins and his company performed at Longwood in 1981 as part of the Series of the Performing Arts.

Ms. Reynolds' visit to Longwood is sponsored by the Longwood Arts Council, the Department of Physical Education, Health and Recreation, and the Longwood Company of Dancers.

GREEK OF THE WEEK

By RENEE SMITH

Carole Metz, a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, has been chosen as Greek of the Week by the Longwood College Panhellenic Council.

Carole, a senior Sociology major from Richmond, Virginia, has recently completed an article that will be published in the October 1988 issue of Sociological Inquiry. Co-written with Dr. Kennith Perkins, assistant professor of sociology, the article entitled "Note on Commitment and Community Among Volunteer Firefighters" concerns information on volunteer firefighters in Central and Southside Virginia. Carole's work on the project has been the feature of an article in The Farmville Herald and mentioned in The Richmond Times Dispatch.

On campus, Carole has served on Longwood's Judicial Board, worked on Production Design for the 1986 Rotunda staff, and presently works as manager of the Lancer Cafe. As a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, Carole has held the office of Rush Chairman and President and has traveled to Ohio State University to attend Alpha Gamma Delta's National Convention.

In an effort to promote Panhellenic Spirit on Longwood's campus, the Panhellenic Council will elect one Greek of the Week each week. If you have any nominations for this honor, please contact your Panhellenic representative.

Sun It Up!

By TERRESA L. BUELOW

Spring Break ended and all those lucky ones who got to go to Florida where the sun was shining, while it snowed here, came back with those fantastic tans. How the ones who couldn't go envied them. Then they thought, "well it'll fade then they'll be as white as me and get wrinkles sooner. Right? Wrong. These tanned bodied people keep getting darker and darker. How do they do it? The answer is the tanning salon. For a sum of money anyone can go and get an imitation tan. Many people went before the break to get a base tan, so once in Florida they wouldn't come back looking like a lobster.

In Farmville we have two sun places, Sun Touch and Forever Tan. Right now at Sun Touch you can get a hundred minutes for $15 plus your first time is free.

To start off, one usually is only allowed 10-15 minutes in a bed. On the next day you may stay 5 more minutes extra. Skip a day, and then stay in from 20-25 minutes. Most tanning salons will not allow you to stay in for more than thirty minutes at the most.

You may become a little pink the first day, but it takes at least 6-7 visits to get a semi-dark tan. The next time you see someone with a great tan, ask them where they've been. They more than likely will say, "The tanning salon."

PAGEANT REVIEWED

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

Like a large number of you did last Saturday night, I went to see the Miss Longwood Beauty Pageant. I was impressed by the size of the crowd gathered for the occasion: I got to Jarman at 7:45, and ended up sitting in the back row of the balcony. I figured, "Hmm! Just might be worth the money I paid for the ticket if this many people showed up!" Was I misled? I don't know — first of all, I couldn't see the contestants through the glare of the sequins on the majority of their outfits. And maybe, just maybe, the acoustics are really bad that high up. Perhaps not.

The theme song of the evening was "Catch a Wave." I kind of wish some of the contestants had caught a wave — preferably a monsoon wave headed for the Japanese coastline at breakneck speeds . . .

Actually, I shouldn't criticize; after all, I'm no beauty queen and I've never tried to be one. Aside from my face and my body in general being big strikes against me, I know I don't have the talent it takes to be in a pageant. Everybody in those things performs to faggy inspirational songs; the lyrical equivalences of "I Can Fly, I Can Fly, I Can Fly" from the Peter Pan score. I could never bring myself to stoop so low. If I were ever in a pageant, I think I'd probably like to play "Killing Floor" a la Jimi Hendrix. Presently I cannot play electric guitar, but from what I've seen that won't pose a problem.

I have a friend who would love to be in a pageant, but the only true talent she has is an awesome ambidextrous ability to crochet. That, aside from her years of practice at verb conjugation in three different languages, is the only gift she has to offer the world — alas and alack!

While contestants stuffed and unstuffed themselves from one piece of attire to another, the audience was entertained by two ex-beauty queens who took full advantage of the opportunity to wear 3 or 4 of their old gowns, and a host of child prodigy acts. Phyllis Mable even helped fill a time gap by "catching a wave" and stage-surfing for us — where was Janet Greenwood? Let's just assume that Phyllis is a better surfer than Jan, and Ms. Greenwood didn't want to be put to shame by Ms. Mable's awesome abilities.

As I left the auditorium, with a sore tush and ears (not to mention the nosebleed I acquired in my seat), I wondered, "What now for Miss Longwood 1987?" Will she be in class this week? Will she hit the lecture circuit? Will she cut her gown into 1-inch squares and paste them to index cards to sell as souvenirs?

The public awa it s answers to these, as well as to questions such as "Did Niki Fallis really tell some of you girls to rent falsies for the evening?" Maybe my chances aren't as bad as I thought — maybe she'd tell me it was o.k. if I wore a face mask. Heck, maybe I could just ask my best-looking friend to go up on stage for me. . .

In general, this pageant had the same effect on me as any other beauty contest I've ever seen or heard about: they always make me think of Atlantic City. That's in New Jersey.

Enough said.

To all interested seniors graduating in December 1987:

If you are a December graduate and you are interested in participating in a fall graduation ceremony, please send your name and box number to:

Doc Moss, Box 947, or Stephanie Brown, Box 163

Please respond quickly so that plans for a ceremony can begin. Lack of interest means that we cannot have this ceremony. There will be a meeting on Wednesday, April 1, at 6:00 p.m. in the Gold Room. The success of this project depends on you!

By CINDY PRESSON

Picture a typical dressing room with bright lights, mirrors, and dresses and costumes hanging in every available spot. This was backstage at the Miss Longwood Pageant. Each of the 10 girls had her own stool in front of the mirrors, her own array of cosmetics, accessories, and other various beauty items placed in front of her. Now picture 10 more girls each hovering over a contestant trying to be helpful. Now you've got the real picture.

Every socket was plugged with hot rollers, a curling iron, or a fan. Every space in that little room was being utilized. Now I expect that you think I'm going to say you could cut the tension with a knife — not true! For the most part, the girls were joking around and cheering each other on. They borrowed each others make-up, lent a hand where it was needed and gave words of encouragement to each other.

It's amazing that most of them were not friends before they began that long 3 months from preliminaries to the Pageant. They held hands, hugged, gossiped, and joked just like old friends. There was competition there, but it was friendly competition with none of the back-stabbing, snide, pettiness one would imagine.

Even after the pageant was over and some had lost and some had won, they were still friends. The girls congratulated each other, encouraged one another to do more pageants and promised to get together. As a matter of fact, the contestants plan to go out and treat themselves to all-you-can-eat spaghetti sometime in the near future. Whether or not they do get together, the contestants of the 1987 Miss Longwood Pageant are friends.

Sports

Forbes Named To Kodak Women's Team

Longwood senior Caren Forbes is one of six players named to the Kodak-Women's Basketball Coaches Association All-District III team for NCAA Division II women's basketball.

Forbes, Longwood's career scoring and assist leader, is the first Lady Lancer cager to be named to the Kodak-WBCA All-District team since Valerie Turner was picked in 1984.

A co-captain at Longwood, Forbes accumulated 1,480 points and 532 assists in four seasons. She also set records for field goals (667), field goal attempts (1614), most assists in a season (161) and a game (13).

She had earlier been named second team All-Mason-Dixon Conference for the second year in a row, after averaging 16 points and six assists for the Lady Lancers.

The Kodak-WBCA All-District III team was voted by WBCA member coaches in District III.

Gymnastics Team Takes 2nd In Regional Meet

Longwood's gymnastics team logged its best regional finish since 1980 Saturday night at the United States Gymnastics Federation Division II Southeast Regional Meet at Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

While host IUP won the regional crown with a 175.80, Longwood beat out four other teams for second place with a 163.75. West Chester (162.90) was third, Trenton State (161.85) fourth, Navy (157.80) fifth and East Stroudsburg (155.65) sixth.

Leading Longwood at regionals were Lynda Chenoweth, Kiersten Artese and Debbe Malin Chenoweth placed third on beam with an 8.65 and registered the ninth best all-around score in the meet — 33.5.

Artese had a 33.3 all-around for 10th place and led Longwood in vaulting (8.85 — tie for 9th) and floor (8.45 — 16th). Malin, 11th all-around with a 33.1, led the Lancers on bars with an 8.35 for 7th place. Kerri Hruby had an 8.75 in vaulting for 10th place.

Hruby received some unfair judging in both bars and floor, which prevented her from scoring higher, according to Longwood coach Ruth Budd.

"We did well," said Budd. "We were hoping to take second place, particularly after we had been seeded third by a narrow margin. Bars and beam were probably our two best events, despite the fact that we were inconsistent in those two areas during the season."

Longwood last finished as high as second in a regional meet in 1980 when the Lancers placed second in the AIAW Regional behind William & Mary. Two LC gymnasts, Sharon Pillow and Kathy Idelson, qualified for nationals that year.

Budd was skeptical of Longwood's chances of qualifying for Division II Nationals this year, despite the second place finish.

"I'm not sure our scores were high enough to be considered," said Budd.

Division II Longwood will be an underdog to Division I's William & Mary, Radford and James Madison in the Virginia State Meet at Radford Saturday afternoon. Action begins at 2:00. The Lancers were second in last year's State Meet which was held in Farmville.

Men's Golf

After three sub-par performances, Ty Bordner and the Longwood men's golf team began to live up to their pre-season billing last week.

Sparked by Bordner's medalist 76, Longwood beat Radford, VMI and Washington & Lee in a four-team match in Lexington, Friday. The Lancers, however, have no time to rest on their laurels. Next up is the Southeastern Collegiate Tournament in Valdosta, Georgia Sunday through Tuesday.

The Southeastern tourney will feature the top Division II golf teams in the south. If the Lancers hope to qualify for the NCAA Division II Golf Tournament they must play well in Valdosta. Coach Steve Nelson is hopeful his team has begun moving in the right direction.

"We practiced hard last week, and I think it paid off Friday, at Lexington Country Club," said Nelson. "We have something to shoot for with the Southeastern Tournament coming up."

Bordner shot a 76 to lead three Lancer golfers in the 70's Friday. Longwood's 314 bested Radford (320), VMI (322) and Washington & Lee (334). Tony Good carded a 78 to finish second in the medalist chase while Richard Hardy added a 79.

Mark Marshall shot 81, Andrew Hudson 82, and Kevin Haskins 84. Ron Hatch, playing as an individual, carded an 81.

Longwood finished a disappointing 17th out of 24 teams in the Elon College Invitational last Monday and Tuesday at Alamance Country Club in Burlington, North Carolina.

While Guilford won the tournament with a 296-301-597, the Lancers carded a 338-328-666. Longwood scores included: Marshall 85-80-165, Hardy 86-80-166, Bordner 83-85-168, Hobson 84-86-170 and Hatch 90-83-173.

Volleyball On Its Way Out

By KRIS MEYER

Longwood College may have seen its last women's intercollegiate volleyball match for a while. On Thursday, March 5th, the Intercollegiate Athletic Council recommended to the college president that Longwood's volleyball program be deleted. Council member and athletic director Dr. Hodges said that after evaluating the whole program, it "did not seem feasible" to put more money into the volleyball program. All that is required now to terminate the team is the approval of the President.

Another problem created in volleyball was the resignation of Coach Elliott. Dr. Hodges commented, "We were very fortunate to have had Linda Elliott as a part time coach. It would be difficult to find a part time coach that would have the expertise that we need."

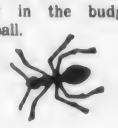
Coach Elliott worked with the Longwood Volleyball Team for two years. She resigned in January, 1987, because she said, "I didn't feel I was getting the commitment I needed to achieve excellence in volleyball." She fought to keep volleyball at Longwood but it appears as if she did not win.

The volleyball team was officially notified of the probable cancellation on March 18th. For some members, the news confirmed rumors, while for others, the news was a complete shock. In either case, the players were not pleased. Setter Staci Dillon commented that, "I'm really disappointed because they're just getting a group of devoted people." Others went past sadness to anger. Sarita Thurman, a leftside hitter, revealed. "I was very mad. Volleyball is a fun sport; it was real competition."

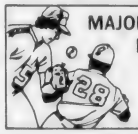
Many of these young women feel that they have been treated badly. As Ms. Dillon stated, "I don't think they've treated us with the respect we deserve." The team's members are upset because as a group, they had improved drastically this year. They had the best season in roughly seven years. Half of the team and half of the starters were freshmen. Several of these freshman had high standings on their high school teams, including a few Most Valuable Players. Considering these facts, it is no surprise that the team had a hopeful future.

Now, if the members want to continue in intercollegiate volleyball, they must transfer. For the juniors, it is too late for that. The younger members can transfer, but with a loss of friends, faculty relationships, and even credits. Because of the late notice, many of the schools with good teams have already given out their scholarships and many application deadlines have passed. But the significance of cancelling volleyball seems to go beyond the bad treatment of the players.

"We're supposed to have such a great physical education department, and now they've cut one of our most enjoyed, competitive sports," Ms. Thurman added. Volleyball is increasing in popularity, but most people do not realize the extent of tis growth. As the fastest growing and second most popular participation sport in America, 24 million Americans play volleyball. World-wide, volleyball is played in more countries than any other sport.



Evidence of new trends often appear in the business world. Volleyball is now big business. Sporting Good, a group of sporting goods manufacturers, indicates that volleyball in the '80's is where golf and tennis were in the '70's. Furthermore, Volleyball Magazine had an 80 percent subscription increase this last year. They are projecting at least that much of an increase next year.



Not only are businesses concentrating on volleyball, but so too are high schools.

The third most popular sport for girls in high school is volleyball, topped only by basketball and track and field. 73.5 percent of high schools had volleyball teams in 1984. It has been growing since then. These facts indicate that many girls involved in volleyball will be looking to continue playing in college. It is clear that Longwood will not be able to offer these girls what they are looking for. Many colleges recognize the increasing need for strong volleyball programs.

One college ready to adapt to change is Stanford University. It was a four time national champion in field hockey, and discontinued its field hockey program. They let their volleyball team grow. Soon, 4000 people were attending volleyball matches, and sell outs were a common occurrence.

Coach Elliott presented the previous volleyball facts to the IAC, but they still recommend volleyball cancellation. Elliott asked them, "Do (you) take the leadership or do (you) follow?" Dr. Hodges answered that question by saying that she is "not happy about the decision," but it had to be done. There is no money in the budget for volleyball.

Player Of The Week

After driving in 11 runs in two games for the Lancer baseball team, Rohm has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period March 22-29. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Longwood's top hitter with a .435 average heading into Sunday's games at North Carolina A & T, Rohm ripped a double and a homer and drove in four runs in a 16-6 loss at Virginia Tech Thursday. Sunday in Greensboro, North Carolina, the Western Albemarle High graduate went 4-5 with a record-tying seven RBI's as the Lancers rolled to a 22-4 victory in five innings.

Rohm tied the school mark for RBI's in a game which he set last year with seven against Coppin State. The tri-captain has been a key factor in Longwood's 15-5 start. He has been named Player of the Week twice.

Baseball Team Breaks Losing Streak

Stung by four straight losses, Longwood's baseball team bounced back Sunday in resounding fashion, sweeping a twinbill at North Carolina A&T, 22-4 and 8-0. Both games were five inning affairs.

The 15-5 Lancers have eight games scheduled this week. After visiting Liberty Wednesday and hosting Hampden-Sydney Thursday at 3:00. LC has twinbills at Coppin State Friday, at home against Shaw Saturday and at Christopher-Newport Sunday. The CNC doubleheader was rained out last Saturday.

After falling to VCU 11-4 Tuesday, Bridgewater 9-5 Wednesday, and Virginia Tech 16-6 Thursday, Longwood got back on the winning track Sunday in Greensboro, North Carolina.

Senior third baseman Jeff Rohm (North Garden) led a 15-hit assault in the opener with four hits in five trips to the plate and a record-tying seven RBI. Rohm tied the record for RBI in a game he set last year against Coppin State.

Second baseman Pete Criscione (Dunkirk, NY) went 5-6 with five RBI for the two games, while Greylin Rice (Hurt) had a homer and three RBI in the opener. Steve Gedro (West Point) moved his record to 4-0 after picking up the win in game number one. Gedro relieved starter Tony Beverley (Lexington) in the third inning. Longwood erupted for 12 runs in the fourth and eight more in the fifth to put an end to the opening contest.

Senior Tony Browning (Charlottesville) recorded the shutout in the nightcap, tossing a two-hitter. He struck out eight and walked one in five innings. Criscione's three RBI's and one from Robert Smith (Orange) gave Browning 4-3, all the support he needed.

Tech Clouts Four Homers

Rohm went 2-4 with a double, a homer, and drove in four runs in Thursday's loss at Virginia Tech. The Lancers also got a pair of hits from outfielder Eric Killinger (Falmouth), but were unable to overcome four Hokie homers.

Freshman pitcher Franklin Watson (Chase City) was saddled with the loss. The lefthander held VPI at bay in the early innings before running into trouble. He was touched for 10 runs and eight hits in six innings.

Virginia Commonwealth and Bridgewater shot down Longwood Tuesday and Wednesday as the Lancers absorbed 11-4 and 9-5 defeats on their home field. Longwood forged early leads in both games but was unable to hold on. The Lancers were ineffective on the mound and made nine errors in the two games.

Tuesday, Beverley blanked VCU over the first four innings while Longwood assumed a 2-0 lead. Watson drove in the runs with a single and an infield out.

The Rams, 11-10, broke through for four runs in the fifth on four hits. After Longwood scored once in the bottom of the inning, VCU came back with four more runs in the sixth. Two scored on bases-loaded walks by reliever Rob Furth (W. Denville, NJ).

For the game both teams had 10 hits, but the Lancers were able to bunch no more than two in a single inning. Watson, Criscione, Jeff Mayone (Denville Township, NJ), Furth and Smith had two hits each for Longwood. Only one, however, a double by Criscione, went for extra bases.

Longwood's usually reliable offensive attack had a breakdown Wednesday as the Lancers managed just one hit against three Bridgewater pitchers and squandered a 5-0 lead.

Benefitting from nine walks issued by Eagle starter Jim Estep, Longwood scored three runs in the first and two in the third for the early lead. Shoddy base-running in both innings figured in a pair of double plays, preventing the Lancers from scoring more runs. A pair of walks, an infield out and a single by furth enabled LC to add two runs in the third.

The Eagles, who were ranked 30th in a pre-season Division III poll, pounded eight hits and scored six runs over the final three innings to take the win.

Intramural Update

By DAVE LARSON

There has been a lot of exciting things going on within the Intramural association. To start off Longwood's 3-on-3 Intramural Basketball team won their division of the Schick Super Hooper II basketball tournament at George Washington University. The team played Maryland Eastern Shore Campus, who won their bracket, at the Capital Centre during the Washington Bullets- Dallas Mavericks basketball game. The team did very well against the Maryland team. The game went into overtime after the Bullets game and despite a great performance Longwood lost by two points.

Longwood sent two teams to the tournament which consisted of 50 teams all together. A special thanks goes out to both the teams:

Longwood's number 2 team: Donny Celata, Brian Diggs, Tim Morris, Gerry Hasty

By participating both teams received tickets to the Bullets-Maverick's game.

In other news the Intramural office would like to congratulate Brian Crawford of AXP on winning the recent "Intramural charges" T-shirt design contest. The new design will go on next years intramural winner's T-shirt.

Softball is in full force now with games just about everyday of the week. Come out and watch and support your favorite team.

Softball

Coach Loretta Coughlin will be looking for improved play from the Longwood softball team this week as the Lady Lancers prepare for a home twinbill with James Madison Tuesday and a visit to the Methodist (NC) College Tournament Saturday.

Longwood, now 2-5-1, hosts James Madison at 2:00 Tuesday on the Farmville Armory Field. The Lady Lancers will be one of eight teams competing in the Methodist Tournament. LC was second in last year's event.

Lacrosse

By JON WATERS

Longwood's women's lacrosse team came up short against tough opposition last week, dropping three games. The Lady Lancers began the week with tough losses to Randolph-Macon and Randolph-Macon Woman's College before being outclassed by Division I University of Maryland Baltimore County.

This week Longwood, now 1-3, faces away contests with Sweet Briar Wednesday at 4:00 and Bridgewater at 2:00.

Men's Tennis

By KIRK BARNES

Longwood's men's tennis team opened up its season last week with three matches. Coach Rich Posipanko's squad split two in the road, beating Greensboro Thursday 6-3 and losing to Virginia Wesleyan Friday, 7-2. Longwood lost to King's College in its home opener Saturday 7-2.

In Saturday's action, the Lancer netters lost some close matches in the third set. Freshman Mark Lambert grabbed Longwood's only singles win at no. 3, while Chuck Fagan and J.D. Almond, won their doubles match.

Freshman Bert Foreman easily won his match against Virginia Wesleyan at no. 2, and teamed up with Fagan to take Longwood's only doubles win. "Bert is playing well," stated Posipanko.

Against Greensboro, Foreman, Lambert, Almond, and Shawn Marshall all collected singles victories. Fagan-Foreman and Almond-Rusty Heavener won their doubles matches.

"We are beginning to play well," stated the coach. "We should be getting some good play from our freshman."

Longwood's next matches will be at home against Salisbury Monday at 3:30, Hampden-Sydney Tuesday at 4:00 and Roanoke at 3:30.

Lady Netters At 2-2

A win and a loss last week left Longwood's women's tennis team with a 2-2 record heading into the third week of the season. The Lady netters blanked Southern Seminary 9-0 Thursday after dropping a 7-2 decision at Sweet Briar Tuesday.

This week coach Bill Moore's team is scheduled to play at Lynchburg Tuesday, at home against Christopher-Newport Thursday (3:30) and at Elon Saturday.

Lady Lancer Carla Boggs notched a win at no. 5 singles and Elizabeth Cho and Susan Miller were victorious at no. 3 doubles against Sweet Briar.

To the Editor

Like Cindy Presson, I'm a Senior who has been through advising roulette. I was in the freshman class that waited six hours to register (Fall '83). That, of course, was after I had to wait in line to see my advisor. My advisor wasn't in my concentration, but who cares. Take this class, take that class— it's all for General Education. "Oh nooo— not Miss Ethridge for history— you're gonna die." you're gonna die."

You were lucky that year if you could find a business professor who knew the new catalog numbers and knew what classes substituted for others. In the process, my advisor changed to Dr. Minks. He, like many other advisors, will not see you unless you have a good idea of what you have to take. That is a little hard when the catalog you come in on says one thing and your advisor says another.

To complicate my situation further, I decided to change my major to English. The English department was sympathetic to my problem. Dr. Stuart, the head of the department, took me on as an advisee and let me know what I still needed to take. I knew this was too good to be true. The next semester my advisor was changed to Mr. Douglas. At this point, I knew what was left to take. Mr. Douglas would sign my registration forms and I would write in the classes to take. Self-advising, no problem.

They say there's a problem with retention at Longwood. I wonder why? Many faculty have close to 60 people to advise. Can you really get quality out of that deal? Does a professor who has been here only a semster or two really know how to advise? Maybe when the administration gets a clue, more people will stay at Longwood. The current system is enough to make anyone flee for safety. Thank God I'm graduating.

—Marna Bunger, Self Advisor

I'm writing this to express some opinions that I could not state elsewhere. In the article I wrote about the cancellation of volleyball, I had to write the facts, and give no opinions. But I want to tell my views on the subject. There are many questions that remain unanswered. If the council thinks they're just affecting ten young women attending Longwood and roughly a dozen would-be recruits, they're seriously mistaken. Coach Elliott presented many facts that prove the growth and strength of volleyball now and in the future. Why did the board members simply ignore the facts? Do they have no foresight?

Field hockey and other such traditional sports are dying all over the country. Whether it is good or bad, change happens. If Longwood is going to cling to their useless tradition, they will be stuck in the past and, even more importantly, left behind by the fast-moving, active world. It is detrimental to Longwood itself to stubbornly ignore change.

Sarita Thurman said it the best when she remarked, "I think they're making a big mistake." Longwood had the chance to become a leader in Eastern power volleyball. They had a coach with excellent experience and talent. But they ignored the possibilities. Why?

It's interesting that a major reason for discontinuing volleyball is that there is no coach available like Coach Elliott. But the reason she quit is because Longwood refused to make a commitment to volleyball. So they caused the lack of a coach, and turned around and used that as an excuse to cancel volleyball. It makes no sense. This situation makes me wonder what other blunders in reasoning go on behind closed council doors all over campus. It is unfortunate that Longwood doesn't realize the opportunity they've missed with Coach Elliott and interested players.

If, in future years, the council realizes its mistake and finally changes, they will have significant catching up to do. I suggest serious consideration to the real effects of a cancellation of such program to the future of Longwood.

To The Editor:

Only a few more weeks until room sign up begins. Lottery numbers will be chosen and depending on your luck and class ranking, you'll try to get the room you want in the dorm you want. But you had better be careful because this is the time of the year when the infamous Housing Director seems to be out to make everyone's registration as painful a process as humanly possible.

Having transferred from another school and visited many others, I can say that Longwood is unique if for no other reason than for the trouble this one person seems to cause. Of course, the position of housing officer by its very existance is prone to come under criticism and scrutiny. Let's face it, no one can please everybody all of the time.

However, our current director seems to ammassed quite a cult following of disapprovers. He is almost a household name with most upper class students, who have either had past dealings with the director or have had friends who have for one reason or another been "skrewed over." If history repeats itself and it usually does, Longwood's freshmen, soon to be sophomore class, will soon come to know the pains and sorrows of room registration.

KLCW
Petitions To Circulate

By MATT PETERMAN
and LEE FORD

Do you want partying to disappear from Longwood College? According to the most recent poll, if you are with the majority of Longwood students you surely don't. KEEP LONGWOOD COLLEGE WET (KLCW) is a newly formed student organization to keep Longwood College from going dry. This group recognizes that the absense of alcohol at mixers, fraternity parties, the cafe, or anywhere on campus will destroy the already ailing social life at Longwood College.

KEEP LONGWOOD COLLEGE WET

"Longwood is yet another College trapped in a domino effect which is sweeping the state of Virginia trying to make all campuses dry," said Steve Evans, a member of KLCW. KLCW is fighting for all students who will eventually come of age while attending Longwood and who wish to drink if they want to. Taking this away from those 21, who are basically Juniors and Seniors, will be depriving them of a major social situation that past generations have enjoyed. It wishes to stop this domino effect which is increasingly appearing to be a trend of the 80's and the nation's march towards conservatism. "They want to preserve a wet campus because sooner or later the trend will reverse," commented Bob Woods, a Longwood student.

A panel discussion on the pros and cons of Colleges having a dry campus will take place tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Lancer Hall, room 207-208. The panel consists of Sue Saunders, Dean of Students; Joe McGill, Director of Student Services; and Ricky Otey, President, SGA. This is your chance to air your views on a policy that one student called: "A policy that will ruin a tradition that has existed for many decades." All questions will be addressed and all concerned are asked to attend. Those unable to attend are asked to sign the petition that will circulate.

KLCW will be circulating a petition April 13 and April 14 throughout campus dorms soliciting your support. The petition will be presented to the Board of Directors and Longwood College President Janet Greenwood upon completion. A minimum goal of 2000 signatures is hoped for in order for a strong case.

Should the campus go dry against the wishes of Longwood students, what will life be like at Longwood: 1) Long walks to local bars every time you desire to party, 2) No parties on campus, 3) Long drives to HSC, 4) No drinking at the cafe, 5) More people leaving on the weekends, and 6) Basically, not much Longwood.

This petition will give SGA President, Ricky Otey, a clear mandate to argue for a wet campus should the votes become reality, thereby representing the student body for which he serves.

Any questions or comments should be sent through campus mail to Box 826, or contact one of the following officers of KLCW: Chairman, Lee Ford; President, Matt Peterman; Vice President, Keith Darrah; Treasurer, Tim Oliva; Secretary, Jason Craft.

Beer, Chili And Rock-And-Roll!

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

YAY! Spring Weekend '87 is quickly approaching. If the area is spared any and all forms of precipitation from the 10th to the 12th, a good time will be had by all.

The fun will get an early kick-off with this year's newest Spring Weedend attraction, Oozeball, sponsored by the LC Ambassadors. Preliminary matches will begin on Lankford Mall at 3 p.m. on Friday afternoon.

If you have too good a time Friday night, you'll be awakened (probably quite rudely, depending on just how hard you party) at 10 a.m. on Saturday by the sounds of one of Longwood's best amateur DJ's supplying pre-festivity tunes for everybody stirring their chili pots along Stubbs Mall in preparation for the Chili Cook-Off. The cook-off starts at noon and will be judged by 10 students, with winners announced at 1 p.m.

The Chili Cook-Off is brunch-lunch for the day; for a new twist, one that will not be found in your local ARA dining hall anytime soon, you can wash your meal down with a nice cold beer in the Beer Garden, open from noon to 4 p.m. (and open again at 8 p.m.). You can enjoy this meal to the Top-40-Dance tunes of Mainstream, who will be performing on Lankford Mall from 12 to 4 p.m.

Eat quick so you can watch the continuation of the Oozeball preliminaries, which start up at 1:30. (If the weather's crummy, this might be the only event of the weekend to go off without a hitch — while chili gets soggy in the rain, and most people have an awfully hard time holding an umbrella while playing guitar, mud just gets gooshier on inclement days...)

There will be a short pause in the fun to allow us to eat dinner back at Blackwell's Saturday night, but things will pick up again at 8 p.m. with the Waxing Poetics, who will be cranking out progressive rock ditties for us on Lankford Mall late into the evening.

Sunday will be a day of OOOZEBALL Finals, "dining on the mall", and recovering from the previous day's fun.

This is the last issue of the Rotunda for this semester. The newspaper staff would like to wish everyone a very successful semester and good luck on exams. We hope that Longwood's administration, faculty, students and organizations will continue to support the paper. We look forward to putting out the paper next semester.

Note: I personally would like to thank my wonderful staff for making a great paper this semester! Thanks Cathey, Matt, Dave, Danny and your staff, John, Marna, Melissa, Bill Woods, Bill Moore, and Phyllis Mable. I also want to wish the new editor great success. I will be there to support you all the way!

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

April tends to bring in warm temps, sun, and new life. For students at Longwood College, April brings registration and room draw — their favorite time of year. We all know about registration, so that is not our topic of discussion. Room draw, on the other hand, is an entirely different matter.

We decided, in this article, to point out a few things about housing. We firmly believe the motto for this year's room selection was "make the most people as miserable as possible." Favoritism was displayed during the selection process by the housing department. For example, one of the fiercest competitions for rooms was in French dormitory. No matter what lies students tell administrators, the real reason to get into French is the fact that those rooms are the nicest and the largest on campus.

People who live in the Colonnades know it's a way of life, not just another dorm. We tend to be a lot closer, as a group, than many other dorms and we certainly don't like outsiders invading our home. Well, an invasion has taken place and we are not happy! It's not so much the people that invaded that is the problem, but how the invasion took place and the administrative decisions that went along with it.

On Wednesday, April 1, people who wanted to stay in the Colonnades went to the informational meeting to find out that the entire 3rd floor French was "saved" upperclass women, 2nd floor French was "special interest" social awareness upperclassmen, 3rd floor Tabb was "saved" upperclass women, South Tabb was Business special interest and the rest went to freshmen. Everyone was very happy! Well, it turns out that the information we received must have been Rick Weibl's April Fool's joke. Sometime after (or before) that meeting it had been decided that another Special Interest Group would get parts of 2nd and 3rd Floor French.

Did anyone ask how the residents of these floors felt? No. Did anyone notify us? No. Well, we were notified by a few members of the SAFE Special Interest Group. A member of 3rd floor French received a phone call which said, "you may have your floor, but we have your room." The SAFE Special Interest Group was not split up between two floors. The SAFE Special Interest Group (APO) was offered 3rd floor North Cunningham. The current residents of that floor went and found other places to live. Well the SAFE Special Interest Group (APO) turned down 3rd floor North Cunningham, so consequently the administration turned it into a coed Freshmen floor, and stuck the "Group" into French.

We doubt that the administration had planned to mention it to the residents of 2nd and 3rd floor French until it was too late. Some of the future residents of those two floors went to see Sue Saunders, the Dean of Students, and she explained that they (the administration) were trying to accommodate the majority. Disrupting the lines of people on three halls to accommodate one group is not, in our opinion, right. We were told that it was too late to change the decision, which it seemed to us had been changed literally overnight. We hope that this does not happen to any more residents on campus.

We had to compromise, and the administration may think that everyone is happy and some people may be; many of us are not.

Dissenters

To the editor:

As a member of the student body here at Longwood College, I feel it to be imperative that "Congratulations" be extended to Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity for their production of "Faculty Follies" this year. I think that I can speak for just about everyone who attended this event in saying that a good time was had by all!

One of the things that I missed the most when coming to Longwood was the school spirit at my high school. Ever since I've been here, I've thought that school spirit was something of the past. Last week's "Faculty Follies" changed my thoughts on this subject. Never at Longwood have I seen and experienced the spirit that was so abundant throughout this show. The audience participation was great!

I think Chi would have been proud of you! I would also like to congratulate those faculty members that participated in this event. I think it says a lot about how much they care about their students and about Longwood in general. Finally, a lot of students saw another side of the faculty and administration. We saw a humanistic side of them that we sometimes forget exists. Yes, they do have a sense of humor!

Again, I would like to congratulate everyone involved in this event. From the "heat" brought on by those sexy "Pointless Sisters" to the touching moment brought on by "Talking Hands", the show was a success in every respect. (I believe all proceeds went to the American Diabetes Association). Keep up the good work APO! Looking forward to seeing it again next year!

A very impressed student

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the "concerned upperclassman" who was so concerned that she (I say 'she' because I'm sure the author is a female) did not sign her name.

First of all I would like to point out that the Miss Longwood Pageant is a beauty pageant as well as a talent pageant, a scholarship pageant, and an intellect pageant. What it is not is a contest to see who can motivate the best in 4-inch heels.

Next, I would like to state my opinion of the upperclassman's comments. They were not constructive criticisms, but instead nothing less than cruel slander; untrue, uncalled for, and in extremely bad taste.

Is the authoress of the fraudulent sarcasm aware of the fact that the Miss Longwood Pageant involves a personal interview with the judges, which is second in importance only to the talent competition (which is 50 percent of the total scoring)? Also, does she know that the pageant is judged by official Miss America judges, who are totally unbiased and are experienced enough to know what they are doing?

I think not.

Finally, if this upperclassman has ever seen a guy walking around in his girlfriends high heel shoes, I wish she'd give me his address; its a sight I'd like to see.

UPPERCLASSMAN, the next time you feel it is your duty to criticize anything, get the facts. Research, Baby, that's the ticket.

Sincerely

Miss Sandra Clayton

To the Editor:

I would like to express my concern towards the letter about the incident on January 24, 1987, in which a student, Tim Tabler, was cutting some bread at the bread bar and sliced his thumb open with the knife. I was there at the time of the accident. I was sitting at the same table as Tim and his other friends, whom I know as well. And Tim told me the next day "the doctor asked me if I thought I needed a stich, and I told him that he was the doctor so he gave me one stitch." Even though his finger was bleeding, it was not a life or death situation. Everyone knows that if you hold your finger down the bleeding will not stop even with pressure, in which he was doing.

In relation to the campus police, I work for them and know there is a phone outside of their office with a number to contact the sheriffs office one word down town. Then they call campus police, and the sheriffs office does answer the phone or you can call the information office, in which they can contact campus police by radio. I work with campus police and know for a fact they have a back up available. They are even improving their situation by getting a new system in which the campus police officers can answer the phone from the cars.

Anthropologist To Speak

Dr. Laverle Berry, a research anthropologist whose specialty is Africa, will speak on the topic "Algeria: Past and Present" at Longwood on Tuesday, April 7.

Dr. Berry will give the lecture at 5:30 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium to the Introduction to Africa class. All students and the public are invited.

Dr. Berry will discuss Algeria's prehistoric and historic past, and modern-day life and problems, including the struggle against French rule in the 1950s. Specifically, he will talk about the Sahara during the Neolithic age; the Roman occupation; a mountain village where Berbers live; and Algiers, the capitol city. Slides will be shown.

This presentation is based upon a trip he made to Algeria in 1983 to study desert rock paintings.

Dr. Berry, who lives in Alexandria, is currently a research analyst for the Library of Congress's federal research division.

He also has been a research anthropologist for American University, a consultant for the Foreign Service Institute, an editorial researcher for the National Geographic Society and for Time-Life Books, and a history lecturer at Boston University.

From 1964-66, Dr. Berry was a Peace Corps volunteer in Ethiopia, where he taught high school English and history. He was a Fulbright-Hays Fellow in 1971-73, during which he conducted research on kingship in Ethiopia.

New Members Of Geist

Ten juniors at Longwood were selected to the Geist honorary leadership society recently.

Geist recognizes students for leadership, scholarship and service. Membership is limited to juniors and seniors.

The new members are: Donna Armento, a physical education major from Kings Park, N.Y.; Brian Blakemore, a chemistry major from Staunton; Teresa Bryant, a biology-chemistry major from Roanoke; Michael Estes, a business administration major from Richmond; Kathy Hedden, also a business administration major from Richmond; Barbara Herman, an elementary education major from Clarksville; Jo Jo Katz, a social work major from Poquoson; Pixie Kinzie, a business administration major from Hampton; Anna Prow, an English major from Yorktown; Sonja Venters, a music education major from Portsmouth; Gwen Walker, an English major from Powhatan; and Jean Yancey, a mathematics major from New Kent.

Businessman Visits Longwood As Wilson Fellow

Peter J. Elliman, a businessman and former General Motors executive, visited Longwood College as a Woodrow Wilson Fellow recently.

Elliman, who lives in Greenville, S.C., is vice president and general manager of Lucas CAV in the United States and Brazil. Lucas CAV, a division of Lucas Industries Inc., makes fuel-injection equipment.

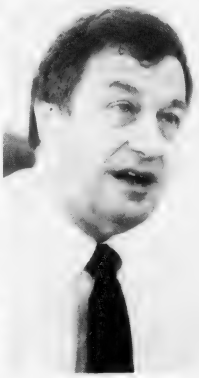
He also owns a chain of 24 sporting-goods stores in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

"I like business," said Elliman, who was on campus March 22-26. "I do it for more than just the money. Business and marketing are my hobby. I like a challenge."

Elliman, a 48-year-old native of London, spoke to several business classes, to a government class and to members of Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity. The Wilson Fellows program brings experts from various fields onto college campuses for short visits, enabling them to interact informally with students and faculty.

"I've been telling the students that there's a lot of opportunity, but it isn't going to be handed to them. The competition is very, very fierce. Unfortunately, a lot of students don't think about what they're going to do after they graduate."

Elliman started work for General Motors as an apprentice at the age of 16 in England. While working at GM plants for the next five years, he earned a bachelors degree in mechanical engineering at the University of London.



He was awarded a GM Overseas Scholarship in 1959 and worked at GM plants in the United States for two years. He also earned a bachelors degree in industrial engineering at the General Motors Institute, a cooperative program in which students are hired by GM and other auto makers as soon as they start the program.

Elliman, who has lived in the U.S. permanently since 1964, held several senior positions in the Pontiac Motor Division before becoming director of industrial engineering.

After leaving GM, he was general manager of a stamping company that supplies parts to the auto industry, and late was manager of industrial consulting for Ernst & Ernst, a public accounting firm. From 1974 to 1978, he had an interesting job on the side — business adviser to the Navaho Indian Nation.

"The Navahos are in four states and they had $180 million in the bank, primarily from oil and gas. They wanted to buy companies and do business in Detroit, so they were looking for someone with business expertise. They're very suspicious of outsiders. Along with my wife and kids, I once lived on a Navaho reservation for Window Rock, Arizona, for several weeks."

Elliman has worked at GM plants in the U.S., England and West Germany, and has observed plants in several other countries. "The highest quality GM cars are produced in Brazil. The workers there do what they're told."

PETER ELLIMAN

He has worked for Lucas CAV since 1978. Lucas Industries, which began in England in the mid-19th century, now owns about 380 companies around the world. It is the largest aerospace contractor in Europe and accounts for one-third of the world's fuel-injection market.

Elliman, who has a masters in business administration from Michigan State University, serves on the executive board of Lucas Industries - North America, and on the board of directors of the General Motors Institute.

V-President SGA — J. Paul Hurt. Letters concerning the Elections for SGA will be sent organization Presidents, faculty, advisors and RA's to ask for participation from students in SGA elections. The Election committee will be Class V-Presidents, Somer Sloan, and Kim Deaner led by J. Paul Hurt. Petitions will be available April 8.

SGA Honors Award — Nominated organizations were Longwood Ambassadors and IAA, voted on by the Senate and passed.

Alcohol Policy — Longwood College state funding may be influenced by the decision of the college to comply with current state law concerning the Alcohol Policy and the new drinking age of 21. A letter will be brought before the SGA Senate for approval April 9 and will state the stipulations and concerns of the SGA about the removal of kegs from the room, suite area of the dorms.

Budget for SGA was presented to Phylis Mable and approved.

Dr. Greenwood will be delivering her State of the College Address on Friday, April 10, at 9:00.

Faculty Follies: Full Of Fun

By KEVIN HUNT

Janet Greenwood and Phyllis Mable stole the show, so to speak, at the Faculty Follies Monday, March 30 at Jarman auditorium. Jerris Hill as Dr. Greenwood and Robin Yarbrough as Phyllis Mable set the stage for a night of great entertainment with their wild antics.

Other highlights of the Alpha Phi Omega sponsored Faculty Follies included Brenda Ferguson, Paula Clay, and Barbara Stonikinis at the "Pointless Sisters," lip synching Janet Jackson.

The most wild performance goes to Kevin Spencer, Tim Sheridan, and Chris Andrews as the "Beastie Boys." Bedlam broke out as they performed "Fight For Your Right to Party."

The most touching performance was by Joe McGill, Sharon Austin, and Pam Carson as they did "Somewhere out There" in sign language. Other performers included Dr. Helms, Tom Richard, Dr. Silveira and Frank Brooks, Margie Terzin, Ric Weibl, Sue Saunders, and Shirley Everett. The show was emceed by the sharp dressed, fast talking Don Lemish.

This is the second year in a row Alpha Phi Omega has sponsored this event. The proceeds from the show go to the American Diabetes Association. Alpha Phi Omega Vice-President, Colleen Vaughan, and all the members of APO and those who performed and helped with Faculty Follies should be commended for their time and effort.

Game Show Mania

By MICHAEL GEOLY

The Jeopardy-Wheel of Fortune "Power Hour," it catches all of us, every evening, during the week. From seven to eight o'clock, we're glued to the screen by Pat and Vanna's pearly whites, and Alex Trebek, with his dapper wardrobe by "Mr. Guy." Why are we so attached to these game shows? Why do we drop everything for this hour? Forget your two tests tomorrow, put the research paper on hold, because Roger, the five time champ on Jeopardy is going for $100,000.

Since we are all engrossed with obtaining knowledge, we must tune in for strictly educational purposes. After all, where else would we be able to enrich our minds with catchie proverbs such as, "It takes two to Tango," or "A watched pot never boils." I for one, idolize Vanna for her capability to be able to walk across stage in half a dress and reveal the letters. I recall once reading an article which had Vanna boasting the fact that she "hadn't missed one yet." Awesome. Let's face it, "The Wheel" isn't the most intellectual program, but it does serve the purpose of appetizer to the main course of "Jeopardy."

Yes, while "The Wheel" is on, it is acceptable to leave the room; only after you've solved the puzzle before one of the contestants. But with Jeopardy, it is a sin to leave the room, unless you are just saving yourself from embarassment due to your lack of trivia knowledge. From the Single Jeopardy round, right down to the Final Jeopardy round, questions and answers are being spewed out, many of which none of us know. When a category comes up that you have no clue about, that is the time to leave the room. For me, that would be sports, religion, or "the 20's" One of the most humiliating moments on Jeopardy is when a category pertaining to your major here at Longwood comes up, and you can't answer a question from the entire category. For some reason, these two game shows have been integrated into many students' routines. Be it a study break, or pre-study brain "stimulation," The Wheel of Fortune and Jeopardy serve as an educational, fun hour of television.

To Choose Or Not To Choose. . .

By TERRESA L. BUELOW

It is almost that time of the year again. What time do you ask? The time to decide if you can live with your former roommate, and if not, choosing the one for you Has your last weeks of this semester been one full of continuous fights with with your roomie? Then next semester it may be time for a change. But who to live with is another question.

Here's a few tips to help in choosing one:

— make sure that it is not your best friend. Wasn't that who your former roomie was before you lived together?

—make sure you have something in common such as music. If one of you loves country and the other New Wave there could be a huge problem.

— find someone who wears the same size as you with a great wardrobe. Then your's doubles.

— if you're a late sleeper, make sure he or she does not rise with the sun.

—if you have a problem with studying, find one who studies more than you and maybe it'll rub off.

— find one whose parents are always sending goodies to eat, then you'll never be hungry.

— make sure he or she likes to party as much as you, if not more than you. That way when you come stumbling in at 3 a.m. you won't wake up to the bitching.

Hopefully, these tips will come in handy if you are in the situation of finding a new roomie this semester. If not you may need them next semester.

ARTI-CHOKE MONTH

NEED AN EXCUSE FOR MISSING CLASS?

Here's a few!

1. Too hungover
2. Still drunk
3. Didn't do the assignments for that day
4. It was too much fun in the Dining Hall to leave
5. Not in the mood (rain, snow, sunny)
6. It's your birthday
7. It's somebody's birthday
8. It's a holiday (i.e.: Ground Hog's Day)
9. Too tangled in your bed sheets to move
10. Your Horoscope said not to leave your room today. Look what happened to Pee-Wee Herman.
11. When you went to breakfast the toaster was broken and you just can't think without that first bagel of the morning
12. Had to work on your tan
13. Cannot bear to miss your soap because something earth shattering is going to happen that you just can't miss
14. "FORGOT" to set your alarm clock
15. It's Friday
16. It's Monday
17. Didn't want to wake your roommate who is skipping too.
18. When you opened your door to go to class you noticed the janitor has just mopped the floor and you don't want to be rude and put footprints on that nice clean floor
19. No clean clothes
20. Too exhausted from last night's . . . . .

SPECIAL NOTES

Registration Appointments: Apointments will be assigned for all students who are continuing undergraduates. Registration forms are distributed through academic advisors. Students who change majors after the forms are printed will need to pick up their forms from the former advisor before going to the new advisor.

Delinquent Accounts: All library fines, parking fines, unpaid damage deposits, or other delinquent student accounts must be cleared before the student can preregister. This includes degree applications for those students who have accumulated 90 or more credits, including transfer credits.

Academic Probation-Suspension: This policy provides for automatic (immediate) suspension for those students whose cumulative averages (at the end of any grading period) fall below certain required averages, which increase according to the total number of hours attempted (including transfer work). The complete table of required averages may be found on pages 32-33 of the 1986-87 Longwood College Catalog (available in the Admissions Office).

PREREGISTRATION PROCEDURES

1. No student should cut classes to preregister. The Registrar's Office will honor a student's registration appointment at any time during preregistration hours (on or after the printed appointment time) through the end of the preregistration period.
2. To preregister, each student must bring a preprinted registration form signed by the academic advisor, showing sufficient alternate courses to allow the student to obtain a complete schedule (signed by the department head to enable enrollment in a course that has already closed) and receipts showing payment of any charges for registration stop codes.
3. The advising process is an integral part of preregistration. Allow sufficient time to meet with your academic advisor and discuss degree requirements, as well as academic difficulties. If you are in academic difficulty, the fastest way to improve your GPA is by repeating courses. Think of C as the break-even point. For every grade below C, you need a comparable one above C to balance it. For every D, you need a B in a course of the same or higher credit value; for every F, you need an A or two B's in courses of the same or higher credit value.
4. Each student is expected to complete the preregistration process in one transaction. Plan alternate courses ahead of time! A list of closed courses will be posted beside the Registrar's office and distributed to department heads daily. Students who must return for additional processing may do so on Fridays.
5. Preregistration is limited to 1-5 p.m., Monday-Friday, so that the office staff can continue routine office work and prepare enrollment reports to facilitate the process.
6. Alphabetical master lists of registration appointment times are posted in convenient locations across campus.
7. Undergraduate students who fail to preregister must register on Monday, August 24, 1987. Schedule changes may not be made until add/drop begins on Tuesday, August 25, 1987.

Frank T. — (Tabb)
I thought you were cute with hair and I still think you're cute without it! By the way, I love your tan!

Always,
D.T.

Winkie, Becky, and Stephanie,
Thanks for being my friend. Be sure and drop by my room next year. I know I've missed out on a lot of fun, but everyone makes mistakes.

Love, me

Steven G (Cox 209),
It seems I'm not the only one who likes what they see! Only I've liked it all year!

Always,
E.S.

My roommate is engaged!! Congratulations, Maggie (and Archie)

I Love you,
Dawn

D.H.L. (Mr — into-everything),
Your friendship means a lot to me. I hope things haven't changed. (what about that bet?)

love,
Dawn

Maggie,
You've had a great season. It's probably been one of the toughest, but I would say its ended on a high note! I'm proud of you!

love,
your secret pal

Call the doctor, call the nurse, Colleen,

Gamma Delta

STEPH,
You are a great little brother and a great person in general. Looking forward to your initiation into brotherhood.

BIG BRO James

Noah,
Thanks for being there when I needed to talk. Your support and friendship these past couple of weeks has meant a lot.

A thankful "GAMMA"

John, Anne, Laura and Shirley,
Do you really want to play questions or would you rather buy a Duck? "J"
P.S. Is it Laura or Laurie???

Gorgeous Mark Higgins:
Do you even know that I exist? Lately, I've been watching you, and what I see truly turns me on! Won't you please be my "knight in shining armor?" Remember that whatever you wish, is my deepest desire—

Lustfully yours,
"The Horny Princess"

Judd-Jack:
You're too wild, child. Let's party. 379 N. Cunn. —

H-SC Bands

By MICHAEL GEOLY

Spring Weekend, it's almost here. The rumors of Bruce Hornsby or the Beastie Boys playing came and went. So what big name band did we get? The Waxing Poetics. Some of us are rather familiar with the Poetics, for they've played many a fraternity house at H-SC in the past year. Some of us; however, aren't so quick to recognize the name. The group is relatively new: they've recently come out with their first album, and who knows, someday they may be really big in the music industry. Just think, ten years from now you might be able to say, "I remember when..." to your children and spouse about the band.

For those of you who frequent the Hampden-Sydney circuit, you should be happy to hear that the school will have seventeen bands between Thursday and Saturday for their annual "Greek Week" festivities. This will give students from both schools opportunity to campus hop from school to school. The H-SC bands will be "Beat Rodeo" and "The Smithereens," on Thursday night, and "The Neighborhoods," on Friday night Saturday evening, each fraternity will host a band, the list goes as follows: Fiji- The Black Jacks and Dirty Secrets, Pi Kappa Alpha- Charlie, Chi Phi- The Good Guys, Kappa Alpha- Non Logic and See You, Sigma Alpha Epsilon- The Prematons and Steel Drum, Theta Chi- Duck Clark and the Hotnuts and The Skull Tones, Sigma Nu- Locals Only, Lambda Chi- Other Bright Colors, and Sigma Chi- The Mentals, and The Change.

Whatever you do this weekend, wherever you go, you'll certainly have no trouble finding some live entertainment. Go out, have fun, and relax. Exams are coming, and this may be your last chance to kick back. Everybody have a fun, safe, weekend.

A Tribute To Our Advisor

By MARNA BUNGER

Many professors can't brag that they're "having fun." Mr. William Woods can. He makes every class an exploration into thought. These thoughts may not necessarily be what you were assigned to read, but they stimulate you and make you search for more reasons.

I am a veteran of Woods. There is not a boring moment in any of his classes. This semester I decided to caputre his moments on paper. The result is an interesting, funny, and thought provoking list of outrageous quotes:

— "Were you around for Watergate? Do you remember?"

— "Would Faulkner write about these things?"

— "Let's not kid ourselves!"

— "If you were this novel, what liquor would you drink?"

— "There are people that will go into a bookstore and buy a book and read it for pleasure. Really!"

— "This is unusual. They're all gonna fail it. I can't wait."

— "There's no available fun for you."

— "That makes me forget what I was trying to remember."

— "That's the whole point of novels. You get to read about people you don't want to hang out with in real life."

— "Enough of my problems."

— "Everyone is here except those who aren't."

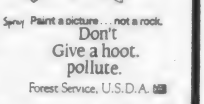
— "No one can experience anything anymore because no one is innocent."

— "Looking for that someone special?"

— "AIDS — A nightmare beyond measure."

— "I'll just have to write a new book and I'm doing that and boy is it good."

— "I felt a sense of fun running through me."



— "And then we'll be having fun."

— "Why am I telling you this?"

He told us lots of interesting things and we did have fun. Woods is what Longwood has instead of happy childhoods.

Capital Raffle Is Success

By REGGIE THOMPSON

The Concerned Young Adults of Prince Edward County (CYAPEC) and the Omicron Rho Chapter of the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity Incorporated recently co-sponsored a trip for disadvantaged kids in the area to go see a professional basketball game in Landover, Md.

The two groups raffled off tickets which were $1, to sponsor this March 14 trip to the Capital Center. Anyone purchasing a raffle ticket had the opportunity to win 2 free tickets and transportation to the game. The kids, who were selected at random, really enjoyed the trip and they will be talking about it for some time to come.

The winner of the raffle, Quintin Morton, said that not only did he enjoy the game but that he enjoyed the looks on faces of each kid that went on the trip.

The CYAPEC organization and the Sigmas would like to extend their appreciation to everyone that bought a ticket or made a donation.

By the way, the Washington Bullets beat the Chicago Bulls 106-105 in overtime.

Artist Of The Month

By KRIS MEYER

The last artist of the month contest for the 1986-87 school year is now being held. Any artwork done after August 1986 is acceptable. This month, only one entry per artist is allowed. This rule was created after a problem in voting.

The first place work wins fifty dollars. Fifteen dollars is awarded to the second place winner and ten dollars to the third place winner. The last Artist of the Month entries for this school year are due at 4 p.m. in the Bedford office on March 30.

EASTER EGG HUNT

Longwood College is sponsoring the Sixth Annual Easter Egg Hunt for preschool through fourth grade children on Wednesday, April 15, from 4:15 to 5:00 p.m. at Longwood Estate. Refreshments and a visit from the Easter Bunny will highlight this event. Be sure to bring a basket or bag for your eggs.

In case of rain, the Easter Egg Hunt will be held on Thursday April 16.

We wish to thank the Longwood Panhellenic Council for their assistance, and College Plaza Shopping Center for providing the Easter Bunny.

Colangelo To Georgetown

John Colangelo, a junior at Longwood, is one of about 100 college students from across the country selected to participate in the Institute on Comparative Political and Economic Systems this summer.

The Institute will be held at Georgetown University from June 5 to July 19. It is sponsored by the Fund for American Studies, a non-profit educational foundation affiliated with Georgetown.

Participants in the program attend two classes each morning — one in government and one in economics. In the afternoon, they do an internship with a Congressman, U.S. Senator, law firm or government agency. A lecture series in the evenings features Senators and Congressmen.

Colangelo, of Springfield, is majoring in business administration, with a concentration in economics. He is a graduate of West Springfield High School.

Last year, he was president of the Student Government Association. He is currently president of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

After graduating from Longwood, he plans to go into business or attend law school.

The criteria for selection to the Institute include academic excellence and leadership qualities. Colangelo, who will receive six academic credits for the two classes, will live on the Georgetown campus during the program.

Phi Beta Lamba Wins Awards

By MARNA BUNGER

Phi Beta Lamda, Longwood's business organization, won several awards at a state conference held March 27 - 28 in Staunton, Virginia.

Ten students from Longwood attended and competed at the conference, but three students will go on to the National Competition for Phi Beta Lamda, which will be held at Anaheim, CA in July.

Kim Highes placed first in the state in the business communications event. John Burden also placed first in data processing II. Leroy Marshall placed second in information management, and also is eligible for nationals.

Other students who placed from Longwood are as follows: Andrew Hudson, second place for impromptu speaking and Vickie Perdue, third place for the job interview.

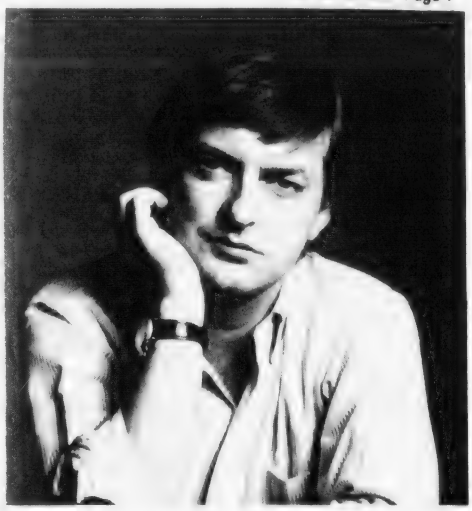
There are 700 members in PBL in Virginia. Over 300 attended the convention. It was a competitive couple of days, but there were no casualties. A good time was had by all who attended, making the other 400 members in the state wish they had gone too.

ROTC In The Field

By SCOTT ESTES

Last weekend the Reserve Officers Training Corps here at Longwood went "to the field" for the first practical exercise of the semester.

Training began Friday afternoon with a Land Navigation course which led cadets over widely varying terrain. As the sun went down the cadets were once again challenged by the course which had become somewhat more difficult — it was now dark and visibility was greatly limited in the woods. Nevertheless, all cadets successfully navigated both courses.



Saturday morning was marked by sunny skies as the second phase of training began. Moving out in two patrols, the cadets conducted both reconnaissance and combat missions — the two most common types of patrols.

At the conclusion of this training the cadets and cadre packed up and left to return to Longwood. The training the cadets received this weekend should serve them well next weekend as they travel to Fort Pickett to train with cadets from the University of Richmond and Virginia Commonwealth University at the Spring Field Leadership Exercise.

The Student Union will sponsor a lecture by Dave Marsh, entitled "Rock & Roll Confidential," tonight (April 7) at 8 o'clock in the Gold Room, Lankford.

Marsh is the author of 10 books, including the bestselling Born to Run: The Bruce Springsteen Story. He is editor of the Rolling Stone Record Guide.

His presentation will include the stories behind U.S.A. for Africa, Live Aid, and Farm Aid, plus comments on the links between rock music and society, censorship, and "Rock's corporate vampires."

There is no admission charge for the lecture.

Artist Of The Month

Christine Schup, a junior art major from Manassas, has been named Artist of the Month at Longwood College.

Her winning work is a Prismacolor drawing titled "Madonna." The drawing was done as a class assignment — to create "a portrait in the style of - Andy Warhol," Ms. Schup said. "I chose Madonna as the subject of the portrait because her flashy personality lends itself to this type of color craziness."

Ms. Schup received a $50 cash award, and her drawing is on exhibit in the Bedford Building at Longwood.

She is working toward the bachelor of fine arts degree, with a concentration in drawing and printmaking. She hopes to pursue a career in advertising or illustration.

Ms. Schup is a three-year starter on Longwood's lacrosse team, which was nationally ranked third in Division II last year.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Schup, of Manassas.

Player Of The Week

Longwood catcher Chris LeBel welded a hot bat for the Lady Lancer softball team last week, and for her performance, LeBel has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period March 29 through April 5. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

LeBel collected 11 hits, drove in nine runs and added two doubles and a homer to lead Longwood to three wins in five games last week.

Coach Loretta Coughlin also credited her with a "super job" on defense.

"Chris played very well last week," said coach Coughlin. "She was a leader both at the plate and in the field."

LeBel is a junior and a graduate of Oakton High School.

Riding Team To Host Horseshow

Longwood was set to host an intercollegiate horseshow Sunday, but the show has been postponed to Thursday at 2:00 because of inclement weather. The show will be held at Long Lance Farm.

Lacrosse

Longwood's women's lacrosse team, which did not play last week, has three games on tap Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday of this week. The Lady Lancers visit Roanoke Wednesday at 4:00, host Virginia Tech Saturday at 2:00 and Georgetown Sunday at 3:00.

Women's Golf

Led by a strong showing from All-American Tina Barrett, Longwood finished a respectable eighth out of 15 teams in the Duke University Invitational women's golf tournament Friday through Sunday in Durham, North Carolina. This week Longwood travels to Wilmington, North Carolina for the Azalea-Seahawk Tournament Friday through Sunday.

While Alabama won the title with a 311-311-300-922, Longwood recovered from a slow start to post a 340-328-321-989. The Lady Lancers bested six Division I teams and Division II Troy State, which could be a top contender for the National Small College crown May 4-6.

Barrett notched a tie for eighth place out of more than 80 competitors with an 83-76-75-234. Also competing for Longwood were Marcia Melone 86-80-79-245, Ashley Warren 83-85-83-251, Tammy Lohren 91-87-84-262 and Leigh Russell 88-89-86-263.

Playing as individuals, Longwood's Leslie Oscovitch shot 92-96-89-277 and Kim Poirier 87-93-88-268.

Longwood notched a third place finish out of 10 teams last Tuesday in the rain-shortened Peggy Kirk Bell Tournament at Orlando, Florida. Indiana won the event with a 319, UNCW was second with a 333 and the LC was third with a 334.

Originally scheduled for 54 holes, the torunament was shortened to one round because of heavy rain in the Orlando area Sunday and Monday.

Tops for Longwood was Melone, who carded an 81 to tie for fourth place in the individual race. Gretchen Pugh shot an 82, Barrett 85, Warren 86 and Russell 88. Lehren, playing as an individual carded an 87.

Gymnasts Take 4th

Longwood's gymnastics team closed out its 1986-87 season Saturday with a fourth place finish in the Virginia State Meet at Radford. Longwood scored a respectable 164.15, but was unable to keep pace with Division I's William & Mary (176.70), Radford (174.90) and James Madison (170.55).

Sophomore Lynda Chenoweth led Longwood in all-around, bars and beam. Chenoweth scored a 34.1 all-around for eighth place. She was 10th in beam with an 8.55 and 12th in bars with an 8.4.

Kiersten Artese had an 8.9 on floor to tie for ninth. Debbe Malin and Tammy Zeller scored 8.65 in vaulting to tie for 12th place. Malin had a 32.3 all-around score while Kerri Hruby had a 32.1.

Longwood had scored a 163.45 to place second in the Division II regional March 28.

"We did okay in the State Meet," said coach Ruth Budd. "Beam hurt us, but we scored higher overall than the week before in regionals."

Budd's team finished with a 5-10 regular season record, but Budd was not dipleased with the season. Since January Longwood has had five gymnasts drop off the team for various reasons.

"Considering the number of gymnasts we lost to injuries and grades, we had a pretty good season. The team's spirit was high for the most part. We kept working hard.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

Rugby Rolls On

By TIM SEYMOUR

This year, the Longwood College Rugby Club has been quite successful. During the fall semester they've compiled an 11-2 record including victories that merit their status as reigning Division III state champions! In addition, they organized, competed, and won their first annual Oktoberfest-ARA Tournament! The wheels are already in motion for a 6-team tournament next Oktoberfest.

This spring, Longwood has won their first three games and competed in the 26th annual Commonwealth Cup.

Following are a few details surrounding their season, respectively:

Longwood vs. VCU 28-0

On February 28, Longwood traveled to Richmond to compete against VCU! In the first half, Tim Seymour started the scoring with a 65 yard run down the sideline. Following, both Dave Larson and Eric Nelson capitalized on the game to give LC 2 more tries. In the second half, Matt Wlisk bursted into the endzone in a Thor-like fashion to bring LC 4 more points. Last, LCRFC drove VCU into their own endzone and John Hunt touched the ball for a try. With Tim Seymour's 4 out of 5 conversion kicks, Longwood defeated VCU 28-0!

L vs. E.H. 13-4

In their first home match of the spring season, Longwood took it to the men of E&H College. As they posed some physical opposition, their game was not as skillful as Longwood. Scoring for Longwood was Tim Seymour, Dave Larson, and Ernestine Harris.

Longwood vs. Lynchburg 4-3

For the third time in 3 years, Longwood has beaten Lynchburg Men's Club. However, this has been the toughest! At ½ time the score was 0-0. Early in the 2nd half though, Lynchburg scored with a drop kick! In a knock-down, drag out game, Longwood scored with a sideline run by Dave Rackley, assisted by Brad Pace, with 5 minutes left. With numerous attempts to come back in Longwood stood strong in the last few minutes and came out victorious.

26th Annual Commonwealth Cup

For the first time Longwood competed in the Commonwealth Cup. The first two matches, against Washington RFC and the Washington Irish, Longwood lost, and the third they received a forfeit against JMU. It was a very tough weekend, as they had to battle some of the best teams on the east coast. Other teams in the tournament were, Harvard, Yale, UVA and Nova. All in all Longwood competed very well against such experienced opponents with scoring from Dave Rackly (1) and Tim Seymour (2).

So far, the Rugby Club has done very well, especially because of the fact that they are a player-coach team. The club would like to extend a special thank you to Rick Johnson, their advisor, and all the fans that support them every weekend.

Intramural Update

An intramural basketball team at Longwood won one of two divisions in a 50-team regional tournament recently and competed in the championship game, losing in overtime.

The team participated in the Schick Super Hoops II tournament at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., which freatured three-on-three basketball. The teams were divided into two 25-team brackets.

The Longwood team won its bracket and then lost in the title game to the University of Maryland-Eastern Shore, which had won its division. The game was played March 28 during halftime of the Washington Bullets-Dallas Mavericks game at the Capital Centre.

The team consisted of James Taylor, Alfonso Woodson and Charles Gregory.

Colleges and universities from Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Maryland competed.

One other Longwood team participated in the tournament. Its members were Donny Celata, Bryan Diggs, Tim Morris and Gerry Hasty.

Baseball Team Stands At 17-5

Longwood was able to play just two of eight scheduled baseball games last week, but two impressive wins and the return of pitcher Scott Mills gave Lancer coach Buddy Bolding something to smile about.

Bolding's 17-5 squad, ranked 19th in the most recent Collegiate Baseball Division II poll, took care of Liberty Wednesday 6-3 and Hampden-Sydney Thursday 7-0. A twinbill at Coppin State Friday was postponed to April 17 because of rain.

The Lancers missed out on two games Saturday when Shaw failed to show up for a twinbill in Farmville and two more Sunday when rain prevented LC from playing at Christopher-Newport.

This week, Longwood is slated to visit Bowie State Tuesday for two, Virginia Military Wednesday for one, and host St. Augustine's Saturday for two games.

Mills rejoined the Lancers Tuesday after receiving notification that he was academicaly eligible. He pitched Thursday for the first time in nearly two years, throwing four shutout innings against Hampden-Sydney. He struck out four and walked four without giving up a hit.

Mills, who has 18 career wins, was ruled ineligible for the 1986 season and had not pitched for the Lancers since April, 1985. His addition gives Longwood's pitching staff considerable depth.

Thursday's starting pitcher Franklin Watson did nearly as well, giving up just two hits in five innings while walking two and striking out five. Watson moved his record to 2-1 with the victory.

Aided by 13 free passes from two Tiger pitchers, Longwood struck for five runs in the third, one in the fifth and one in the sixth. Centerfielder Robert Jackson plated three runs with a double and single and also stole two bases. Pete Criscione and Greylin Rice also drove in runs for Longwood.

Shortstop Kelvin Davis ripped a three-run homer in the eighth inning to spark a five-run Longwood rally and the Lancers went on to post a 6-3 triumph over Liberty Wednesday afternoon in Lynchburg. It was the Lancers' first win ever over the Division I Flames in baseball.

Trailing 3-1 heading into the eighth, Longwood finally got to Liberty lefthander Randy Tomlin. Singles by Criscione and Jeff Mayone a hit batsman and a fielder's choice brought home one run.

Davis, who was troubled by a sprained ankle earlier in the season, blasted a 390-foot homer over the fence in center field, bringing home Mayone and Jeff Rohm ahead of him. Longwood wasn't through yet. With two outs, Jackson ripped a triple and came home on a Liberty error.

Senior pitcher Tony Browning came on to work the final two innings and earn his second save of the season. He allowed just one hit and retired the final three batters on infield ground balls. Rob Furth, who relieved starter E. J. Bryant in the seventh, picked up the win for a 2-0 record.

Bryant battled a sore back while limiting the Flames to four hits and three runs over six innings. The sophomore righthander pitched well. The Flames scored twice in the fifth, aided by a Lancer error, and once in the sixth.

Rohm got Longwood on the board in the sixth with a homer to left. It was his third horner of the season and gives him a team-high 24 runs-batted-in. The senior third baseman is hitting .436.

With its pitching, hitting and defense clicking, Longwood turned one of its top performances of the season Wednesday.

Softball Team Wins 3 Of 5

Longwood's softball team won three of five games last week, taking two from James Madison's club team and winning one of three in the Methodist College Tournament Saturday.

This week the Lady Lancers host North Carolina Wesleyan for two Wednesday at 3:00 and play in the University of North Carolina Greensboro Tournament Friday and Saturday.

Longwood beat James Madison 9-8 and 11-3 Thursday at Farmville Armory Field with a total of 35 hits for the two games. Mary Dailey had seven hits with three doubles, and Chris LeBel six hits with a homer and three runs-batted-in against the outclassed Duchesses.

Tina Hall went 3-4 and Bobbi Shuler had a double and a triple in the opener. Jill Everett had a homer and a double in the nightcap.

Freshman Anne Douglas Miller pitched the opening game win while sophomore Stacey Thompson tossed a two-hitter in the second contest.

In the Methodist Tournament Saturday, NC Wesleyan rallied for three runs in the bottom of the sixth to take a 4-2 victory over the Lady Lancers. Penny Gough had two hits to lead LC.

Longwood bounced back to beat North Carolina Wilmington 3-1 behind the pitching of Cheryl Scharr and runs-batted-in from Hall, LeBel and Susette Stone.

Methodist eliminated Longwood Saturday afternoon by a 9-7 count. LeBel went 4-4 with two doubles and three RBI's and Shuler added three hits with a double and two RBI's. The Lady Lancers had 15 hits to the host team's five.

Men's And Women's Tennis

Longwood's men's and women's tennis teams met defeat Tuesday afternoon as the Lancers lost to Hampden-Sydney 6-3 at home and the Lady Lancers fell to Lynchburg 8-1 on the road. The lady netters bonced back to edge Christopher Newport 5-4 Thursday on the Lancer Hall courts.

Winning matches Tuesday for the Lancer netters, now 1-3, were Mark Lambert at no. 3 singles and Lambert and Jeff Lewis at No. 2 doubles. Longwood's match with Roanoke Friday was canceled.

Susan Miller logged the Lady Lancers' lone win at Lynchburg, taking her no. 6 singles match 6-1, 6-4. Longwood moved to 3-3 with its 5-4 win over Christopher-Newport Thursday but a match at Elon Saturday was canceled.

Men's Golf Fairing Well In Georgia

A trip to Valdosta, Georgia for the Southeastern Collegiate Tournament began the week for Longwood's men's golf team, but coming up Saturday through Sunday is the Virginia Collegiate Championship at Hot Springs.

Longwood shot a first round 329 in Valdosta Sunday to rank 14th out of 17 teams. Florida Southern leads with a 297. The tournament continues Monday and Tuesday. Richard Hardy carded a 77, Ty Bordner an 84, Ron Hatch 81, Mark Marshall 87 and Tony Good 88.

Literary Week

By RENEE SMITH

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

Last week was, among other things, Literary Week here at Longwood.

The principal ceremony of the week was to be the presentation of the seventh John Dos Passos Prize for Literature to John Edgar Wideman. Unfortunately, Mr. Wideman was detained in New England by a snowstorm and could not be here for the ceremony on Tuesday, March 31, forcing the presentation to be postponed. The English Dept. hopes to be able to reschedule the event for sometime later this month.

Mr. Wideman, the first black author to receive the prestigious Dos Passos Prize, which includes a cash award of $1,000, is also the recipient of the 1984 PEN-Faulkner Award for Fiction, among other honors in the literary field.

The first event of the Gyre Literary Week was a reading by author Fred Chappell on Wednesday, April 1 in Wygal Auditorium. Originally from a small town in North Carolina and educated at Duke University, Fred Chappell is the author of five novels and eleven books of poetry. Chappell read a number of his poems: "Southwind", "Grandmother Washes Her Feet", "Recovery of Sexual Desire After a Bad Cold", and "Rib". His first two poems were dedicated to a grandmotherly figure and life in a small rural town. Beautifully descriptive, one can almost hear the voice of Chappell's Aunt Tildy, or feel the cool refreshing breeze in the poem "Southwind". Chappell's poetry employs local color and a regional dialect to tell the stories of simple people, a family history, and its black sheep ancestors, the "shadow cousins" The highlight of the evening was a reading from one of Chappell's prose works, "Uncle Gerton's Beard". The story deals with the visit of the infamous Uncle Gerton and his legendary whiskers. The tale of his insatiable appetite and ultimately unruly beard won Uncle Gerton a huge round of applause and was a pleasant conclusion to an evening with author Fred Chappell.

Ms. Priscilla A. Ord, who joined the English faculty here in 1986, gave a lecture on Thursday, April 2 on "Evidence of the Folklore of Children in the 'Little House' books of Laura Ingalls Wilder", a topic she is presently doing extensive research on.

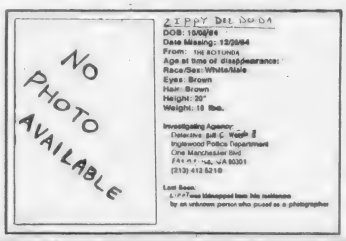
Miss Ord's presentation revealed many interesting forms of folklore in the everyday life of the Ingalls family as they travelled from western Wisconsisn through Iowa, Minnesota, and South Dakota. This lore includes the games the children played, rhymes and stories sung or told to them by Ma and Pa, and snowy day occupations of all sorts.

The lecture brought all those who attended through the years from 1867 to 1889, the years of Laura Ingalls Wilder's life included in her 9 book series.

The English Department would like to thank all those who attended the events the week had to offer, and will make the 'snowdate' of the Dos Passos Award ceremony available as soon as possible.

Crimes Of The Heart

By LAURA TRALA



The Longwood Players will present Beth Henley's Crimes of the Heart on Wednesday through Thursday evenings, April 22-25 in Jarman Auditorium. Curtain time each evening is 8 o'clock. Longwood students will be admitted free with college I.D.

The play is about three zany southern sisters: Lenny, Meg, and Babe (played by Melanie Moore, Sandra Clayton, and Cheri Stuckney) having a "real bad day." The real crimes are that they are unable to show love, and have betrayed themselves by protecting their own hearts, and in doing so breaking others hearts.

The causes of their heart aches range from their mother's suicide, to their overbearing grandfather and to the nonsense and meddling of their cousin Chick (played by Kim Talley). Doc Porter is played by Irwin Kroot and Barnette Lloyd is played by Glenn Gilmer.

Jane Armitage of New York is the guest director. She is known throughout the United States for her outstanding contributions to professional and amateur theatre. She is currently the Training Director at the Riverside Shakespeare Company in New York and this summer she will manage the training programs of the National Theatre of Great Britain at Cornell University and in London. As well as directing Crimes of the Heart, she is teaching acting classes in the Speech and Theatre Program.

Please be sure to mark your calendar for Crimes of the Heart, a humorous and heart-warming play about communication, courage, endurance, but most of all, about love.
